The horseman, looking over a string of thoroughbreds, will pick out the one or two best horses of the lot.

They are able to do this because they know the standards by which to judge a diamond and a horse.

The same is true of motor cars. We ask you to compare Chalmers cars carefully with others. We give here a few standards which may help you to get an unusual dollar's worth of value for every dollar you put into your motor car.

Simplicity of design is the good standard. The Chalmers "30" has cylinders cast en bloc. Motor, clutch and transmission cast in a unit. Working parts thoroughly protected from dust and yet easily accessible. The Chalmers "30" was the first American car to have all of these features. There is no other car with these features which is so thoroughly tried and proved as the Chalmers. Many cars that looked all right in design failed in use. Whatever you do, buy a proved car.

Good Looks is another standard. The Chalmers "30" has good looks. It has beautiful lines and it has fine finish. Those who are most competent to judge, say there is no more beautiful car at any price.

As for finish, you positively cannot find a car to equal the Chalmers "30" except at nearly double the price. For attention to details, compare this car with those costing twice and three times as much. Only in that way can you appreciate how all of the "little things"—that seem so big when neglected—have been provided in the Chalmers "30."

Ease of control and comfort for both driver and passengers is one of the best standards. The Chalmers "30" is easy to control because it has one pedal for brake and clutch; because the control levers are just where you would naturally reach for them; because of a big steering wheel and good steering connections. It is no trick to learn to drive a Chalmers. We guarantee to teach every buyer without additional expense how to drive and care for his car.

CHALMERS-MOTOR-CO. Detroit, Mich. U.S.A.

This monogram on the radiator stands for all you can ask in a motor car

This car has a 115 inch wheel base. The body is swung well between the axles. The seats are tilted and have good springs in them The upholstery is luxurious. The rear springs are long, three-quarter elliptic and of finest steel for the purpose. The majority of automobile engineers have voted this type of spring the best.

Without fear of contradiction, we say there is no car in the world which is more comfortable under all conditions than the Chalmers "30." Yet the price of this car is only $1600 including Bosch Magneto, gas lamps, Prest-o-lite tank.

Weight is another standard.

The Chalmers "30" motor is lighter per horse power than any other motor. The complete car is from 200 to 600 pounds lighter than any competing car of the same size and roominess. The "30" has all the weight that comfort and efficiency demand yet no useless weight to consume gasoline and wear out tires.

The Factors of Safety are a standard which you should have in mind at all times. The four main factors of safety in any motor car are Frame, Wheels, Brakes, Steering Connections.

The Chalmers "30" has the heaviest, strongest frame in proportion to total weight of any car in its class. Relatively this frame is as strong as in any car at any price. These "30" frames are built of special heat-treated steel. They are strong enough to sustain many times the weight they are called upon to carry. They are staunch and heavy enough to give a feeling of solidarity, without which no car is comfortable.

The wheels of the Chalmers "30" are made under the same specifications and of the same material as those on the highest priced cars.

The Chalmers "30" has bigger, stronger, quicker-acting brakes than any other car in its class.

The design, material and construction of the steering connections are no better on any car—no matter what the price—than on the Chalmers "30." It would be possible to make the steering apparatus of the "30" more costly by putting more expensive wood in the steering wheel. But this would not make it any better in any particular. All steering connections on the Chalmers "30" are protected, and the cross steering rod is back of the front axle, out of danger from shocks of the road.

Have you ever noticed the difference in the riding qualities of an ordinary railroad coach and a Pullman chair car? The day coach is light. It shakes and rattles. It transmits every inequality of the road-bed or the rails straight to the passengers, giving them a succession of jars and vibrations.

The Pullman coach is compact and solid. It goes smoothly at any speed. It is comfortable. It gives a sense of security.

There is just the same difference between riding in the cheaper cars and in the Chalmers. Cars that have light wheels and frames cannot be comfortable or safe.

You are buying a car to ride in. You will often be in it hours at a stretch. Insist that it give the utmost comfort.

You trust your own life and the life of your family to it. Insist, therefore, that the factors of safety be of the best design, finest materials and workmanship.

We have made strong claims in this advertisement—the strongest that could be made for a car. Because we have stated that according to certain important standards, the Chalmers "30" is preferable to any other car selling at anywhere near the same price. And in some respects, the equal at least—if not the superior—of any car made at any price.

We have made these statements advisedly. We know that they are right.

We could not make them unless we had the car to back them up. The car does back them up. It is the best automobile value today. Study it for yourself. Compare it for yourself with others.

If you don't agree with us after you have studied the situation, why, of course, we cannot hope to sell you a car.

But at the same time, we believe that if you do study this automobile question carefully, with the right standards in your mind, you will decide the Chalmers "30" is the most you can buy in an automobile for $1600. And that, relatively, it is more than you can buy in any other car, regardless of the price.

Come and see these cars as soon as you can. Let us arrange a demonstration at your convenience.

Y.W.C.A. AS HOST

Visitors From Foreign Countries Inspects Association's Local Branch.

LUNCHEON AT MRS. STEWART'S.

Tea This Afternoon at the Institution Attended by Prominent Workers—Delegates From France England and India Present.

Foreign representatives of the Y. W. C. A. and other workers in the organization who are known the world over, are in Plainfield today for the purpose of meeting the leaders in the local association and inspecting its home on East Front street. Those from abroad have been spending a few days in New York previous to attending the national Y. W. C. A. convention at Indianapolis, Ind., April 17-20 inclusive. Their visit to this city was brought about through the reputation the branch enjoys of being one of the most influential and progressive associations in the east.

A majority of the visitors reached the city at noon and were taken to the home of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, on West Eighth street, where a luncheon was served at 1:30. Covers were laid for eighteen. Those present included Miss Tritton, president of world's committee Y. W. C. A.; Miss Stevenson, corresponding secretary, and Miss Tottenham, member of the world's committee, all of London, England; Mlle. Bidgeran, of Paris, general secretary for France. Miss Mary Bushnell, of the national Y. W. C. A., and Mrs. Ewing, president of the Yonkers association. There were also a number of the local workers present.

Following the luncheon, a reception and tea was held at the association rooms to enable committee workers and board members to meet the visitors. This was conducted by Mrs. Lewis R. Williams and Mrs. James R. Joy. Beside those mentioned at the luncheon the guests included Miss Caroline B. Pow, head of the Y. W. C. A. national training school, Grammercy Park, New York. Miss Elizabeth Dodge, chairman Northeastern Territorial committee; Miss Mary B. Hill, general secretary Lahore, India, who is supported by the New Jessey city associations of which Plainfield is one.

FINED HIM FOR USING STREET AS A GARAGE.

For permitting his automobile to stand in front of business houses on East Front street at night, without lighted lamps, Philip Mechanick, a bicycle dealer, was fined this morning by Judge DeMeza in the city court. His fine amounted to $15, $10 for blocking traffic and $5 for arriving in court late.

According to the police complaints had been made of Mechanick's carelessness and it was said that when requested to move his car from in front of another store he, it is alleged by the police, had obstinately refused to do so. He was warned by the police that it was against the law but they say he paid no attention to the warning.

ITALIAN YOUTH HURT BY FALL FROM CAR.

John Annetty, an Italian youth, fell off a main line trolley car at East Second street and Johnson avenue, early this morning and injured his head. He was picked up by the crew and brought to the trolley station at Fourth and Watchung and taken thence to Muhlenberg hospital, where his wounds were dressed and he was discharged.

The police were notified of the accident by Charles Meyer, a grocery clerk, and the man was taken to the hospital in the patrol wagon.

Wants Part of Union County.

Assemblyman McLaughlin objected strenuously in the House at Trenton yesterday to the bill introduced by Assemblyman McGowan, whose bill would take from Union county and annex to Essex county Union township. A spirited debate between the two Assemblymen followed which ended in Mr. McGowan's measure being laid over for consideration at today's session, after McLaughlin announced practically that he had a bill to annex Newark to Elizabeth.

Acquitted of Murder Charge.

Mary Sutphen, alias Mary Bray, on trial before Justice James J. Bergen in Elizabeth, for the murder of Michael Burros, a Pole, in her home at Linden, December 26, 1910, was acquitted this afternoon by the jury. Fred Happle, of Fanwood, was one of the jurymen.

EIGHT HUNDRED IN FIRST BAPTIST FLOCK

L. V. F. Randolph and Oliver B. Leonard, whose terms as trustees expired, were re-elected for a full term of three years at the annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church, last night, when the financial statement for the year was presented. The meeting was not largely attended, as usual, and it required less than an hour to transact the business.

The report of the church treasurer, John G. MacLaughlin, showed that the receipts from general church sources were $7,288.86, and that amount less $298.80 a balance, was expended for salary, music, repairs, light, heat, etc. The statistics of the church membership reveal a somewhat peculiar condition. There are about 800 members of the church, of which 516 are women and the majority of the men are about twenty-five years of age or under. During the past year there have been thirteen or fourteen deaths, all older members of the church, and the loss has been a heavy one for the church. On Easter Sunday morning about thirty yeoung people will receive the right-hand-of-fellowship, and seven or more will be received by letter.

GOOD FRIDAY SERVICES AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH

The Good Friday services inaugurated at the Church of the Holy Cross five years ago and continued each year, have drawn a large number of people with succeeding Lenten seasons. The impressive character of the services, the deep devotional spirit, the emphasizing of the lessons from the Cross has served to attract Christians generally without reference to creed or denominational differences. This year the church chancel and sanctuary will be dressed in sombre black; all vases and altar furnishings being removed, except the Cross. The choir, who sing at the children's service at the three hour devotion, and at the evening service appear unsurpliced and garbed simply in black cassocks.

The services provide for all classes of the congregation and the general public, who desire to attend.

On Good Friday, at 9 a. m. the first service will be morning prayer and ante-communion. At 10:15 the young people and children's service; the choir present to lead in the singing and a talk to the young people on the story of the Crucifixion, by the rector.

At 12 noon will begin the three hour service, continuing until 3 p. m. This service provides a leaflet for each worshipper, containing hymns, prayers and helps to devotion. A short introductory address is made, followed at intervals by short addresses on the Seven Last Words, these by the rector. The service is so arranged that people may come and go at will, staying as long or short a time as they may choose. Only it is requested that people preserve quiet so far as possible, entering or retiring during the singing of the hymns.

The evening service is arranged for the men, who find it impossible because of business to be in church during the day. There will be a musical service appropriate to the day and a sermon by the rector. The service is at 7:45 p. m.

MISS MILLER BRIDESMAID AT TANAQUA, PA. WEDDING.

Miss Irene Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, of Washington avenue, will be a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Helen Haefeker, of Tamaqua, Pa., and John Hablett, of Jamestown, N. Y., which will take place on April 19, in the Episcopal church, Tamaqua, Pa., and which will be a notable society function. The bridesmaids, five in all, were students at Baldwin School, where the bride was also a student. Among the bridesmaids will be Miss Fanny Pitcairn, of Harrisburg, Pa., and Miss Helen Blose, of Urban, Ohio, who will visit Miss Miller after the wedding.

Miss Haefeker is well known here, having visited Miss Miller many times. She is popular in society at Tamaqua and a large number of invitations have been issued for the wedding. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents.

Brightside Circle to Meet.

The members of Brightside Circle, King's Daughters, will meet at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank W. Jones, 16 Mountain avenue. A full attendance is desired.

Lyman Abbott to Speak Here.

Lyman Abbott, the editor of The Outlook, has been secured by the Board of Education, as the speaker for the commencement exercises in June.

FRED H. FIRSTBROOK OPENS UP-TOWN STORE

Fred H. Firstbrook, who has been engaged in the grocery business on Liberty street for the past fifteen years, opened his new store at 116 West Front street, near Somerset, this morning. The premises have been thoroughly renovated and equipped with new fixtures, making it one of the most attractive stands of the kind in the city. The location is in the heart of the business district and convenient for shopping.

During his long stay on Liberty street, Mr. Firstbrook established a reputation for handling goods only of standard quality and this will be maintained in his up-town location. The stock is entirely new and the proprietor's experience in buying will revert to the benefit of patrons. Fair dealing will characterize all transactions. Mr. Firstbrook invites all customers, old and new to inspect the store.

The stand just vacated by Mr. Firstbrook is one of the oldest in the West End. It was occupied for many years by Frederick Westphal, now of Newark, and also at one time as a bakery. In moving to Front street, Mr. Firstbrook will serve the needs of his patrons in the residential section by an absolutely reliable telephone and wagon delivery service.

HOSPITAL GOVERNOR RECEIVED REPORTS

The governors of Muhlenberg Hospital at their monthly meeting received the medical report for March, showed an unusually active month, there having been 93 patients admitted t othe wards and private rooms, in addition to 33 remaining at the beginning of the month. Sixty-three were discharged cured; 16 improved; 2 unimproved, and 7 died. The report also showed a total of 77 operations, a very large number for a single month.

In the dispensary, 72 patients were admitted in March, there being a total of 173 dispensary visits or an average of 6 a day. There were 33 ambulance calls. The total number of patients treated in all departments was 226, exclusive of the tuberculosis pavilion from which 2 were discharged, leaving 6. The treasurer reported 71,712 received from Hospital Sunday, which it is expected will be brought up to $2,000 another year.

In response to the recent appeal for additional subscribers, a substantial amount has been raised by the Hebrews, including many who have expressed a desire to be regarded as regular subscribers. The Board was gratified at this expression of interest in the work of the Hospital, which as all know, is so largely charitable.

Formal reports were presented by several of the standing committees, and a special committee was appointed to undertake a much needed revision of the by-laws.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE ON WAWAYANDA CAMP

Camp life at Lake Wawayanda, the "Jersey Boys' Camp," was the subject of a lecture last night by Chas. R. Scott, State Secretary of Boys' Work of the association, in addition to being the leader of the camp. His talk was illustrated by a hundred views of camp life all of which drew murmurs of approbation from the hundred boys present. The lecture was given in the boys' room of the Y. M. C. A.

At the close of the lecture Mr. Bingaman announced that he was planning to accompany the Plainfield delegation for the month of July. He woul like to see as many boys enroll for that month as possible. If they cannot stay for the whole month then he wants them to enroll for at least two weeks. Applications for enrollment will be received on Thursday and sent in on Saturday. Applications received after Thursday are in danger of being placed on the waiting list or returned because of crowding.

Ursinus College Glee Club.

Next Monday night the Ursinus College combined glee and mandolin clubs will give a concert in Y. M. C. A. hall. As this concert comes at the time when the college glee clubs make their annual descent on New York city it has been possible to make a very low charge for an evening of good music and rollicking fun.

NEW DAY NURSERY

City Union of the King's Daughters Buys No 502 West Front Street.

TO TRANSFER HEADQUARTERS.

Mrs Edgerton's Bequest Makes Change Possible—To Take Possession of Property on May 15.

The City Union of The King's Daughters today closed the deal whereby it secures the residential property at 502 West Front street, owned by George J. Tobin, for its Day Nursery, in exchange for its property on West Third street, which it has occupied for the past five years The deal was made by Charles H. Lyman. The old property was offered in exchange for the West Front street property, which represents a cost of about $7,000. The difference between the allowance for the old and new properties will be paid for out of the bequest of $10,000 left to the organization by Mrs. M. E. Edgerton.

The West Front street property has a frontage of 71½ feet and a depth of 200 feet, on which is a large and commodious house which will meet the growing demands of the nursery. The old quarters on West Third street have been too small for the work for several years and the officers of the organization have been planning to secure another property that would give the extra desired room. The limit of age of children cared for at The Day Nursery is eight years for the girls and seven years for the boys. They are only kept during the day time, while their mothers are at work.

When the new property is taken possession of on May 15, a number of repairs will be necessary to put the house in shape for the work to be carried on there. It is also proposed to build a large porch on the rear of the dwelling where the children can play during stormy weather.

KNOCKED DOWN BY AUTO IN NEW YORK

Miss May Randolph, of East Front street, was struck and knocked down by an automobile on Fifth avenue, New York, Monday night, receiving a scalp wound and other injuries about the body. She was assisted to the home of a nurse nearby, where she was temporarily treated. Later she was taken to the home of her brother in Newark, returning to Plainfield, last night.

At present Miss Randolph is stopping at the home of her brother, L. W. Randolph, on Myrtle avenue, while the family is removing from East Second street to East Front street. Her injuries are not considered serious, but she will be detained at home for some little time.

Court Gives Advice.

Henry Dupont and his wife Dagnicount, of Bound Brook, came to town yesterday to collect an alleged debt from a contractor on Watchung aveune. Evidently the contractor failed to meet the demands made upon him and the couple was making such a distrubance that they were arrested and haled before Judge DeMeza, who dismissed the couple, sympathising with them in their trouble. They said they were in great financial trouble and needed the money that Mr. Dupont had earned. Judge DeMeza advised Mr. Dupont to begin civil proceedings to recover the money.

COCHRAN TO SPEAK AT MT.ST.MARY BENEFIT

Announcement was made this morning that W. Bourke Cockran, the noted lecturer had been secured for the benefit to be given at Proctor's theatre, Elizabeth on Sunday, April 23, in aid of the Sisters of Mercy of Mount St. Mary college. The benefit has been arranged under the auspices of a committee of citizens of Elizabeth, of which Lawrence O'Donnell is chairman.

The Elizabeth Association for the Relief of Mt. St. Mary College was organized shortly after the disaster of March 2 had become known and a thoroughly organized effort has since been made to arrange the coming lecture-benefit.

Among the features of the evening's entertainment will be singing by the choir of St. James' church, of Newark. Some first class soloists from New York and other cities have volunteered their services and those who attend are assured of a specially good time and inspiring entertainment. The services of Mr. Cochran have been secured gratis and as is well known, his lectures are always of a character to hold the attention of his listeners. His subject on the evening in Elizabeth will be "Charity."

LEWIS CHIEF RANGER OF COURT UNION, I.O.F

Court Union, Independent Order Foresters, was instituted in Stillman Hall, last evening, with a charter membership of fifty, many of whom were members of Courts Plainfield and Watchung, which have been in existence here for many years. The new court was instituted by District Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger William T. Bingham, of Elizabeth, assisted by High Secretary F. A. Mackenzie, Past High Councilor R. H. Mulford and Past High Chief Ranger Lewis T. Titsworth. The number for the court will be announced later. The meetings will be on the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

After the institution of the court, the following officers, which had been chosen, were installed by the high court representatives:

Court Deputy, Florence S. McCarthy; junior past chief ranger, Chas. Hayes; chief ranger, John M. Lewis; vice-chief ranger, Dr. David G. Atwood, recording secretary, C. W. Griffin; financial secretary, E. F. Champlin; treasurer, Harry Hicks; orator, Harry Pennoyer; organist, Leslie N. Leland; senior beadle, Frederick Schomp; junior beadle, Walter Vail; trustees, F. T. Dickerson, Fred Dayton; financial committee, Lewis Skillman and Edward Hellstrom; apothecaries, Dudley S. Miller and E. F. Champlin; court physician, Dr. Marcus L. Clawson.

The charter list will be kept open until July 1. A special committee was also appointed to draft by-laws for the court and a report will be made at the next meeing.

NEW PASTOR'S FATHER AND 5 BRO'S MINISTERS

Rev. J. J. Allen, who has been acting pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church, accepted a call as regular pastor and will continue the work after being graduated from the Crozier Theological Seminary in June. He will be married within a short time and already the church is planning to provide a parsonage for the minister and his wife.

Mr. Allen has been doing a good work at South Plainfield and the church has decided to increase his salary from $600 to $1,000 as a regular pastor. During the past year the membership has increased as has also the interest in all departments of work.

Mr. Allen is a member of a family of ministers, his father being established as pastor of a large Baptist church at Easton, Pa., while he has five brothers in the ministry and another, aged nineteen years, a student at Hamilton College, in preparation for the ministry. One brother, who has been pastor of the Metuchen Baptist church has been called to a church of the same denomination at Wissahickon, Philadelphia.

Mrs. VanHoesen to Speak.

Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, the local special agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has been invited to speak at the S. P. C. A. conference which will be held in Elizabeth, on May 2, in the parish house of Trinity church. Judge James McCarthy, president of the Hudson County S. P. C. A. will be the principal speaker.

IMPORTANT RULING IN SUPREME COURT

An important point in practice has just been decided by Judge Charles W. Parker, of the Supreme Court, upholding the position taken by Counsellor W. S. Angleman, of this city, who contended that the practice of entering judgement on the award of an arbitrator, which had been followed in the Supreme Court Clerk's office for fifteen years, and which was based on an unreported decision of Judge Lippincott, who was then a member of the Supreme Court, was wrong.

Col. Nelson Y. Dungan, who has recently been appointed a Circuit Court judge by Gov. Wilson, was Mr. Angleman's opponent, and made a motion last summer to enter judgment in the case of Hoffman vs. Westlecraft on an award made by an arbitrator. Mr. Angleman was called in as counsel to resist the entry of judgment, and an oral argument was made at Jersey City before Judge Parker and briefs submitted on both sides. After full consideration, Judge Parker upheld Mr. Angleman's contention, and the Supreme Court Clerk's office will herefater not be allowed to enter judgments on the awards of an arbitrator.

MORALLER RETURNS FROM ST.PETERSBURG

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Moraller and their eleven months old daughter, arrived in New York las night, on the Steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II, from St. Petersburg, where Mr. Moraller has been engaged for the past five year in Y. M. C. A. work. They will remain in Plainfield for a few days and will then go to New Castle, Ind., where Mr. and Mrs. Moraller will visit friends at DuPaw University, where he was a student and later was in charge of the athletics. His wife will also visit in her home town, where she was a school teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. Moraller will return here in a couple of weeks, to remain for an indefinite time, later going back to St. Petersburg, where Mr. Moraller will again resume his work in the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Moraller, who was especially active in Y.M.C.A. work here and the athletic department of the association, has met with unusual success in St. Petersburg, and has been well received by the young men of that city. During the five years he has been located in the Russian city, he has had an exceptional opportunity to study conditions and he is so much interested in the work that he has decided to continue it for an indefinite time. When questioned about his work, Mr. Moraller said that the field offers unlimited opportunities for Christian work.

Mrs. Moraller in speaking of her daughter, an exceptionlly bright little Miss, declared that although she was born in St. Petersburg, she is an American and is being brought up according to American ideas, which has on more than one occasion startled the natives. This is especially true of the rule that Mrs Moraller has adopted to always leave a window open in her bedroom at night to get fresh air. This is directly contrary to native custom and has caused considerable comment among the people. The result, however, is that the baby is a bright, healthy and perfectly normal child.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS OF TRINITY CHURCH ACTIVE

The Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church at a business meeting, last night, received a report from the special committee on raising money for the building fund that $25 had been subscribed. This amount will be turned over to the church treasurer.

It was stated that the county Christian Endeavor Union plans to establish a fresh air camp for boys during the summer and would like to have each society contribute $25 towark the work. The society at Trinity Reformed church has not decided just what it will give toward the work, but its own needs are so great that it is likely that the amount asked for will be reduced somewhat. The matter was referred to the social committee to be reported on later.

Final Lecture on Current Events.

The final lecture by Miss Janet Richards on current events took place at the Hartridge auditorium yesterday afternoon. Miss Richards devoted her remarks to the famous case of Senator Lorimer, of Illinois, the synopsis of which will appear in tomorrow's issue of The Daily Press.

WELCOME PASTOR

Reception for Rev. Dr. and Mrs Anderson Given by First M. E. Flock.

MEMBERS PROVIDED PROGRAM.

Rev. Dr. Anderson Makes a Happy Speech and Remarks Are Also Made by Rev. Mr. Kemble.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles M. Anderson were given a reception in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church the occasion being a welcome to the pastor and his wife upon his return from the conference for another year. The affair was arranged by the Ladies' Aid Society and it was largely attended by members of the church and congregation. Henry A. McGee had charge of the program, which delighted everyone.

The numbers included a violin solo, "Humoresque," Dvorak; "Killarney," and "And you," by Mrs. Theo White Jacoby. Mrs. Nelson A. Miller accompanied Mrs. Jacoby on the piano. Interspersing the musical numbers Dr. James R. Joy read selections from "Canzoni," by T. A. Daly, being a collection of fine stories in the Italian dialect.

Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis, soprano, then sang "Love's Coronation," and "Should I Forget," for an encore, with the violin obligato by Mrs. Theo White Jacoby and Mrs. Nelson A. Miller at the piano. These numbers were rendered in a delightful manner and won much applause. The violin selections by Mrs. White were also features of the affair.

After the program, Mr. McGee made a short address in which he extended to Dr. and Mrs. Anderson a hearty welcome back to the church for another year, commenting upon the excellent work performed in the past year by the pastor, assisted by by his wife, and of the excellent condition of the church, financially and spiritually.

Dr. Anderson made a happy response in which he said that with the co-operation of his people and the help of God he looked for a more prosperous year than ever. Dr. Anderson said that he had never served a church as pastor since entering the ministry that he did not love his people and he felt that his people loved him, and although several times during his ministry his well-laid plans had upset, he could now look back and see that all was for the best. He said that he and Mrs. Anderson wanted to serve the people and would always be willing and ready to render any service possible and would be pleased if their people would call on them for any assistance.

Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, also responded with a welcome to Dr. and Mrs. Anderson, adding that it was a happy condition, especially as pastor and people are united and are working in harmony for the upbuilding of God's kingdom. He said that he had heard that the pastor's salary was to be raised and he hoped the report was true. Mr. Kimble said that on conference Sunday he went to New York to hear two $12,000 preachers, Dr. Asked and Dr. Jowett, to see if he could discover the difference between them and an ordinary preacher. He learned that even the high salaried ministers had their peculiarities. In conclusion he congratulated both pastor and people and hoped the coming year would be better than ever.

The balance of the evening was given up to sociability, during which refreshments were served by members of the Ladies' Aid Society, under the direction of Mrs. L. M. French, president.

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Stocks closed lower in New York yesterday.

French officials in Morocco reported that conditions had greatly improved.

A diver inspected the Princess Irene, and the owners estimated the loss to date at more than $80,000.

The justices of the Supreme Court demanded better protection of the County Courts Building against fire.

Chinese residents of Liverpool, sued for libel the editor of a magazine, which made charges of evil practices.

Mayor Gaynor ascribed abuse of the Police and Fire departments to men who had lost millions in graft through his reforms.

Richard St. Maur, Liberal member of the House of Commons for Exeter, was unseated, his Unionist opponent being declared elected by one vote.

Haberdashers held a meeting in New York, to organize for protection against what they called systematic stealing of their wares for "pirate shops."

The Erie Railroad was not represented at a meeting of railroad interests called to readjust the immigrant pool, which is threatened with disruption.

A British Board of Trade report comparing conditions of the working class in England and America, shows that a higher standard of comfort pervails here.

Serious rioting occurred in the Department of Marine, following the French Senate's decision to suppress all territorial delimitations regarding champagne.

Giacomo Ascrittore again asserted his belief that De Angelis and Amedeo had a part in the Cuoccolo murders; the trial has been adjourned until after Easter.

President Williams, of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, is said to have given assurance of his company's readiness to amend its subway offer to the satisfaction of the city.

Congress.—The Senate was not in session. House: The committees were elected for the first time in history; the Republican assignments made by Mr. Mann, in which the insurgents received good places, were ratified.

Max Blank and Isaac Harris, owners of the Triangle Shirtwaist Company, of New York, were indicted for the manslaughter of two of the 146 victims of the Asch Building fire, whose death, it was testified, were due to a locked door on the ninth floor.

Ralph Brandreth, of New York, who was arrested in Brussels, on March 17 and sentenced to two years' imprisonment as a vagabond, was released after serving twenty days, his identity being established; the authorities expressed willingness to make ample apologies and pecuniary compensation.

AIMED AT FIREMEN'S RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

Vivian M. Lewis, commissioner of banking and insurance, may have another department added to his already important branch of the State Government of the movement on foot to try to get a bill through the Legislature to abolish the State organization of the Firemen's Relief Association is accomplished. If this is done it is proposed to place the distribution of its funds under the commissioner of banking and insurance. It is stated that this would effect a saving of about $16,000 a year.

Throughout the State there are relief associations in every city of any size. These associations are empowered by law to collect a fund of two per cent, from the foreign insurance companies. This money is used for relief purposes. The treasurer in each city makes a report annually to the State commission of banking and insurance and to the auditor of the State organization. It is contended by those back of the movement that the maintenance of the State organization is of no real value to the local branches. The money paid out for relief is paid directly in each city, and the State organization simply receives and files the reports. Each year the State organization holds a convention at Atlantic City. Their expenses are paid of course, certain officers receive a good salary for the amount of actual work performed.

Those favoring the proposed bill assert that the money paid out at present for salaries, unnecessarily, would be saved.

In several cities through the State the local branches of the Exempt Association have adopted resolutions in favor of the abolishment of the State organization of the relief association.

In Foulard.

A very charming afternoon frock is carried out in vieux rose foulard, lightly patterned with black. The skirt is arranged with a long transparent tunic of black ninon bordered with a black satin hem, and held in at the waist by a belt of black satin. The bodice is draped with fichu folds of black ninon, which are drawn down under the satin belt back and front, while the chemisette and the elbow sleeves are of vieux rose chiffon finely tucked and gathered and adorned with applique designs in ecru lace.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The motion picture entertainment given by the Baraca class at the Baptist church, Monday evening, was a success and well attended. Miss Theresa Brundage sang and Miss Gladys Thorne and Miss Grace Norman played a duet on the piano. The receipts will be used for new furnishings.

Mr. VanZandt, of Plainfield, is building a dock and boat-house on Spring Lake, for the shelter of the handsome canoe he purchased this winter.

A baseball game was played yesterday between the South Plainfield Stars and the Juniors, of this place, the score being 4 to 0 in favor of the Stars.

Miss Lewis, who teaches school here, is making her home with Mrs. Allen, on Maple avenue.

Mr. Ledden and Mr. Harris are the first to make garden and plant lima beans in this vicinity.

Judge Smith had some of the finest orpington chicks hatched in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson have removed from East Orange to Roselle Park.

Mrs. Charles Klinger is able to be out after her recent illness.

WESTFIELD.

Plans for the extension and improvement of Fairview Cemetery have been made by the trustees. Most of the land recently purchased for the extension of the cemetery has been cleared, and as soon as the weather will permit the extension of macadamized roads and the planting of trees and shrubbery in the new part will commence. The cemetery property now comprises several hundred acres.

Early Spring Suggestions

Our big store is most attractive just now with all the new designs in for your selection, and it is with considerable pride we can say that it's just the best assorted stock of new up to date home furnishings ever shown here; and when we hear the kind expressions of appreciation from our old customers it does make us feel that you will really miss a good treat if you do not at least look over our numerous lines; and our prices are, as usual—the lowest.

BEAUTIFUL JAPAN AND CHINA MATTING—A new fresh stock this season; prices, 40-yard rolls, $8.00 to $15.00.

RUGS! RUGS! RUGS! Just all the best lines represented here in every size; Wilton, Body Brussels, Axminster, Tapestry; Grex and Fibre Matting in great variety of colorings.

LINOLEUM OILCLOTH—From the best inlaid Linoleum printed in the best wood floor and regular patterns, in largest assortment.

AWNINGS AND WINDOW SHADES—Since February 1st we have been booking orders for awnings; in fact, many more than usual; you get the advantage of a BETTER JOB, PROMPT DELIVERIES and are all ready when the hot weather comes. Just a word about our work; ours is the best equipped work room in every respect and the most skilled workers in each line of work, as everything we do always proves so entirely satisfactory. Just 'phone or drop a card for our man to give you estimates and full details of our prices.

SHIRLEY & JOHNSTON
BABCOCK BUILDING

As Clarence Smith was hammering a piece of iron at his blacksmith shop on North avenue, Monday afternoon, a piece of steel broke from the hammer and struck his left wrist, severing one of the arteries. Dr. Sinclair dressed the wound.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Ammiel Jahn, who is a senior at Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y., is spending his Easter vacation with his mother, Mrs. Robert Jahn, of Park avenue.

Friday being Good Friday, special services will be held at All Saint's Episcopal church at the usual morning hour of service.

The weekly prayer and praise meeting of the Baptist church will be held tonight in the parlors of the church.

The Fanwood Realty Company's new office building on Park avenue, will be ready for occupancy by May 1.

One of the Macintyre new stores on Park avenue, has been rented as a candy and fruit store.

Mrs. William Deegan, of Front street, has been entertaining friends from out of town.

The public schools close tomorrow afternoon for an Easter vacation of ten days.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

At the N. Y. Hippodrome the big circus bill is headed by the "Great Albas," who performs a head slide down a tight wire from a height of 75 feet to the stage. The Clown Armando and his funny boxing kangaroo still continues as a laughable feature. Then there are Maude Wulff and her golden horse and dog; Towers' Elephants with Baby Mine, which is said to be the tinest performing elephant before the public; the Blumenfeld Sisters, epuestrienes; Erna and Jennie Gasch, epuilibrists; the Colonials, physical culturists; the Duffin-Redcay Co., high bar thrillers; the Three Donalds, gymnasts and the carnival of clowns headed by Marceline. The big triple spectacle "Marching Through Georgia," "The Ballet of Niagara" and "The International Cup," provides an extra entertainment in itself. Mr. Fleming's Southern plantation pageant furnishes some startlingly realistic pictures of life in the South during the time when Sherman's army marched to the sea.

CAPITOL EMPLOYES GOT THOUSANDS FOR NOTHING.

Washington gasped yesterday when the special report of Representative Palmer, of Pennsylvania, which led to the purging of the House pay roll and the saving of $182,000 in salaries, was made public revealing record-breaking sinecures.

A thirteen-year-old girl, daughter of the chief doorkeeper, was found to be drawing $1,200 a year, under the title of "clerk to the doorkeeper."

Thirty-eight extra policemen, authorized when, during the Spanish-American War, some one said that there was a plot to dynamite the Capitol, were still on the pay roll, costing annually $39,000.

Two telegraph operators, drawing $1,400 each, assigned to a wire long ago discontinued, were still on the rolls.

Six thousand dollars was saved by abolishing the salaries of employes of the clerk's document room, the room itself having been abolished sixteen years ago. Almost an equal sum was saved by stopping the pay of employes designated as "attendants in the library," the library having been removed many years ago from the Capitol.

Pitcher Walter Johnson, who arrived at Coffeyville Sunday from Washington, started back last night, after his disagreement with Manager McAleer, of the Washington Americans, had been adjusted by telegraph.

He will arrive in time for the opening game. Before leaving he stated that he had refused to sign a three and a two-year contract, insisting it be for only one year, and that he won his point. Johnson also demanded $7,500 a year.

Jimmy Cleary put in a busy day against the Superbas Monday. The Buffalo boy secured six assists in the five innings he worked.

The Giants handed out an awful lacing to Jack Ryan's Skeeters at the Polo Grounds Monday. The final score was 16 to 5. McGraw's men scored ten times in the third session.

Wilkes-Barre trimmed the second team of the New York Giants Monday afternoon, 8 to 6. Jenkins, Shontz and Hartley were the battery for the Giantlets, while Matthews, McBride, Corey and Brieger and Wager worked for the New York State League champions.

President Charles Murphy, of the Chicago Cubs, has purchased four outfielders from the Louisville club. They are Kenner and Kaiser, former Chicago recruits, and Wolf and Smith. They will be kept until May 15, when Manager Chance will select a regular outfielder from among the quartet.

Secretary Frank J. McTague, of the Indians, has received the application of the Avon Juniors for a place in the opening day parade.

PROPOSALS for COAL

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Board of Education of the City of Plainfield, N. J., at a meeting held April 3, 1911, notice is hereby given that the Board of Education will meet on Wednesday, April 12, 1911, at 7:45 p. m., at the Board room in the High School building, corner Ninth street and Arlington avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place said Board of Education will receive sealed proposals for furnishing eight hundred tons (more or less) of the best anthracite coal for steaming and hot-air purposes; in the different sizes. The quantity required of each size can be obtained at the office of the Secretary of the Board, High School building, Ninth street and Arlington avenue.

Parties bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of the coal and shippers of same.

All coal to be thoroughly screened over a sieve fine enough to take out all dust and small particles of coal, and to be prepared acceptable to the Committee on Fuel, or their agent or representative.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins within the public school buildings without any extra expense to the Board for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Board may direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons.

Payment for all coal contracted for to be made after July 1, 1911.

All proposals to be endorsed "Proposals for Coal," and addressed to the Secretary of the Board.

Upon receipt of the bids or proposals the Board will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided such parties or their agents choose to be then and there present; and also to make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Board.

No bids will be received until the day and hour above named, and none thereafter.

The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

For the Board of Education.

F. B. CLARK,
Clerk of the Board.

ALL OUT OF SORTS.

Has Any Plainfield Person Never Felt That Way?

Feel all out of sorts?
Tired, Blue, Irritable, Nervous
Back feel lame and achy?
That's the story of sick kidneys—
Bad blood circulating about;
Uric acid poisoning the body.
Just one way to feel right again,
Help the sluggish kidneys,
Do it with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Doan's have cured many Plainfield people.

Here's one case.

C. L. Treat, painter and paperhanger, 411 East Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: 'I suffered for a long time from kidney trouble and for years could not find anything that would give me relief. My back ached constantly and there was a pain across my kidneys. My kidneys were in bad shape and I became all run down, in fact, was almost a physical wreck. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply and they made a different man out of me. I got this remedy at Randolph's Drug Store and my experience was so satisfactory that I cannot make my endorsement of it too strong. I simply would not be without a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills on hand."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Joseph Connolly is manager of the club.

The New York Giants have the Phillies on the opening day of the National League season, five games out of eight. The athletes who performed in the Bush stadium are counting on winning from Fogel's Pets today, when the barrier for the season will be lifted.

The champion Danville aggregation of the Virginia State League was beaten 6 to 1, by the Bisons Monday afternoon in Danville.

Ernest Lanigan, the Eastern League secretary, has arranged for a party to visit the opening game in Newark, between Newark and Montreal, April 20. Harry Van Lone, the well-known New York magazine writer and former baseball scribe, will be in the group.

The Cincinnati National League team defeated the Rochester Hustlers Monday afternoon at Cincinnati, by a score of 9 to 5. Chubby Manser, the Irvington twirler, worked part of the game for the Eastern League champions and gave a good account of himself.

Joe Jackson, the heavy hitting outfielder of the Naps, has been charged with 1,338 times at the bat during the three years of his professional career. In that time he has made 475 hits, which gives him a batting average of .385.

Second baseman Jay Kirk, of Detroit, was sold by Manager Hughey Jennings, Monday to the New Orleans team of the Southern League. Jennings still has a string on him, as Kirk is considered a comer.

The Detroit Americans, minus Cobb, Crawford and Moriarity, defeated the Dayton, O., team of the Central League at Dayton, Monday, by a score of 7 to 2.

Left Fielder Jack Kelly will report to the Newark Indians on Thursday. The funeral of the player's father will take place from the home of a daughter, Mrs. John Cavanaugh, Baltimore avenue, Clifton Heights, today.

Infielder Fullerton has been turned over to the Orioles by Manager McGraw, of the Giants.

Ben Houser, the former Toronto Eastern League first baseman and now an understudy of Harry Davis, of the Athletics, would like to play ball every day. Ben has asked to be released to the Washington Nationals. McAleer is sweet on Ben and could use him to an advantage.

The Philadelphia Nationals defeated the Athletics in the fifth game of the inter-league series at Philadelphia, Monday by the score of 5 to 2. The Athletics won three out of the five games played.

GOLF.

Within a few days the stockholders of the Glen Ridge Golf Club will meet to decide upon definite plans for the future. The most absorbing problem at present confronting the members has to do with the work on the new eighteen-hole course upon land now controlled by the club. There is, however, little chance of this property being ready for play during the coming season, especially as the club is reasonably certain of remaining undistrubed where it is for several months to come.

The present nine-hole circuit will eventually be used for real estate purposes, and roads will also be cut through it. During the season the Glen Ridge golfers always manage to keep busy in a competitive way, so much so, in fact that on Saturdays and holidays the course sometimes becomes congested. Robert Thomson, the professional recently secured in place of Alec Cunningham, will have his hands full in superintending the improvements.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Trade Golf Association will be held at Murray's, in West 42d street, New York, tonight. At that time officers will be elected for the ensuing year and plans discussed with regards to the spring tournament. C. N. Brizse is president and A. S. Armagnac the secretary-treasurer.

Foreign advices state that Harry Vardon and George Duncan administered a decisive beating to Jas. Braid, the open champion, and James Sherlock, in a foursome match on the links of Stoke Pogis Golf Club recently. The margin of 5 up and 4 to play in favor of the first named pair came as a surprise to the gallery and those who tried to excuse the defeat of the champion and his partner pointed out that they threw away many chances by weak putting. Even so, it is worthy of mention that the winners reeled off a 70 in the morning round, thereby gaining a lead of 3 up.

Of Course She Did.

"So you think you can dress a chicken?"

"Oh, yes," said the ambitious bride. "I saw my uncle take a clock apart once. You number the pieces as you take 'em out."—Exchange.

UNION IN THE SENATE.

A retrospect of the creditable career of Ernest R. Ackerman, as Union county's representative in the State Senate naturally brings to mind the honored names of his predecessors. Among those who have cast lustre on the county in the past might be mentioned William J. Magie, Benjamin A. Vail, Foster M. Voorhees and Joseph Cross. Of these, as of the present senator, who has signified his purpose to retire at the end of his term, Union has just reason to be proud. Cast about where you will, you will find no county entitled to claim a more distinguished line and we do not believe it an exaggeration to say that no single contituency in the State can boast of an equally meritorious succession of senators.

The unusually high standard set years ago has been uninterruptedly maintained and at this day Union county is honored, as is the whole state, by Mr. Ackerman, whose record as a legislator and as the presiding officer of the upper house is free from a breath of adverse criticism. Since he succeeded Judge Cross in 1906, some legislation of tremendous importance to the well being of the State has been enacted and in its passage, Mr. Ackerman has invariably been largely instrumental. Several of the more important laws bear his name, they will remain on the statute books as an evidence of his public life.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Ackerman's successor, and we know not to whom that honor will come, will be a man who will carry forward the splendid record of Union. Already the names of former Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce and Assemblyman Lloyd Thompson have been suggested by their friends. Undoubtedly there will be others mentioned and when the proper time arrives the voters of Union county will have ample timber at their disposal from which to select the best sort of senatorial material.

CULINARY HINTS.

A tasty dish of beets is prepared in this way: Boil the beets until nearly tender, peel, slice and put into a buttered pudding dish, with plenty of rich cream sauce. Season well, cover the top with buttered bread crumbs, and brown in the oven.

Add a few chopped dates to the apple sauce made from tart apples, and you will be surprised at the improvement in the flavor.

When making soup or broth, have all bones well cracked and the meat cut up, so as to obtain all nutritive qualities.

IF you have never had a bank account you cannot understand the feeling of independence and happiness that comes with the possession if one.

A great writer has said that many people with good incomes are more unhappy than beggars because they live beyond their means. If you have never had a bank account you realize the truth of this assertion and cannot understand the feeling or independence and happiness that you may so easily enjoy.

YOUR OWN BUSINESS.

"I wonder what people will say?" Don't you know the woman who always seems to have this idea at the back of her head?

She can't bear to do anything that might cause adverse criticism from other people, and so she leaves undone a number of things that might bring her happiness.

People who give way to this feeling very often end by being positively afraid to do anything important without first consulting a friend or relation.

What other people will say or think about the thing you do is important, of course, but it is far more important that you should learn to make up your own mind, even though you may sometimes make mistakes.

As a rule other people really care very little what we say or do, unless we invite their criticism, though they take a friendly interest in us, of course.

It is a good plan to "mind your own business," and you'll find that if you once get into that habit you'll be ever so much happier than if you were constantly depending on others for a spur to action.

FASHIONS IN LEATHERWARE.

Leather belts are of patent leather, girdles of crushed kid.

Colored leather bags about eight inches wide are most fashionable—a moderate size somewhere between the very small and the enormous bags.

Cross-grain leather bags are stitched by machine to give a strip effect, the stitching being done in a contrasting color.

Brown and tan suede leathers are being largely used in dress accessories with tailor-made dresses.

Pierced leather cardcases and small handbags are seen mounted over colored plush or velvet.

The colored leather bags mentioned above are shown in such shades as blue, apricot, lavender, violet and garnet.

Many of the larger handbags and week-end bags are equipped with key locks, the tiny keys being worn on a chain around the neck.

Work More, Criticise Less.

Much of the time we are too critical. We spend in deprecation of ourselves or of others too many of the golden moments that should be given to progressive action rather than morbid introspection or to captious, querulous analysis of the various ailments of the long-suffering earth. Citizen Fix-it is a very useful fellow, to be sure, but he is prone to issue rather than to fill prescriptions for the ills that flesh is heir to and the diseases that afflict the body politics.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Heroism.

In the obscurity of retirement, amid the squalid privations of a hovel, the squalid poverty and revolting privations of a hovel, scenes of amgnamity and self-denial are often seen as much beyond the belief as the practice of the great; a heroism borrowing no support, either from the gaze of the many or the admiration of the few, yet flourishing amidst ruins, and on the confines of the grave; a spectacle as stupendous in the moral world as the falls of the Missouri in the natural; and, like that mighty cataract, doomed to display its grandeur only where there are no eyes to appreciate its magnificence.

Discoveries at Venice.

Some very interesting discoveries have been made in the course of excavation work around the island of Lido, at Venice, where a number of ancient pieces of artillery have been found beneath six feet of mud. The cannon are all in a state of excellent preservation, though it is clear, from their construction, that they must date back to a period almost immediately after the discovery of gunpowder, and it is believed that they will prove of very great artistic and historic value.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Realizing that there is but little prospect of the lake dam being rebuilt, Charles T. Rogers has sold his entire boat livery to Philip Smith, of South Plainfield. The latter will conduct a similar service on Spring lake. Mr. Rogers' outfit comprised about thirty row-boats and canoes and was one of the best liveries in this part of the state. Its loss will be greatly felt by Dunellen and New Market people.

SOLILOQUIES OF A BENEDICT.

After arguing politics with friends man is talked out when he reaches home, and wife prepares for a dull evening.

A good wife is the best asset a man can have.

While men are climbing the ladder of success their wives are usually at the bottom steadying it.

Because it is easy to pick a quarrel is no reason why we should insist on getting into one.

Life's heroes are those who are bringing up families in the way they should go.

Samuel Radin.

Samuel Radin, a life-long resident of Scotch Plains, died at his home on the valley road, yesterday noon. He was eighty-one years old and was a carpenter by trade. He was known throughout the township as one of the most expert hunters and trappers in this section of the State. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Lebens Pack, with whom he lived, and Mrs. William H. Lake, of Bartle avenue. The funeral will be held at Mrs. Lake's home on Thursday afternoon and will be private.

Provide a Directors' Room.

The improvements being made at the City National Bank building, whereby the store formerly occupied by Charles E. Vail, jeweler, is being added to the bank building proper to give extra needed room; also call for a room on the second floor to be used for the directors. Access to this room will be made by an attractive staircase leading into the main banking room.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Danish Lutheran services will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the Swedish Pilgrim church, West Sixth and New streets, with preaching by Rev. N. H. Nyrap, of Brooklyn.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest will be held tomorrow night in the parish house, and the men will attend the Good Friday night service at 7:30 o'clock according to the annual custom.

THEODORE PHILPOTT DIES IN 70th YEAR.

Theodore Philpott, a well known resident of the borough, died yesterday noon at his home on Jackson avenue. He had been ill for a long time with a complication of troubles.

Mr. Philpott was seventy years old and a native of Brooklyn. He came from that city to the borough thirty years ago. He conducted a candy store on West Fourth street, opposite the Franklin School in partnership with a sister for a long time, but disposed of the business when his health failed. He was unmarried and leaves three sisters, the Misses Adelaide, Julia and Cornelia Philpott, with whom he lived.

The funeral will be held at his late home Thursday night at 8 o'clock. Burial will be in Cypress Hills cemetery, Friday morning.

The Attack on Sumter.

In observance of today being the fiftieth anniversary of the attack on Fort Sumter and the beginning of the Civil War, Superintendent H. C. Krebs adressed the pupils of the Somerset School on the subject this morning. He related facts of the occurrance not published in histories as a rule and which are very interesting. The first gun on the morning of April 12, 1861, was fired by a man named Ruffin, an editor, whose hatred for the Northerners was so bitter, Mr. Krebs said, that when Lee surrendered four years later, he committed suicide rather than live under the Stars and Stripes. The talk was replete with similar interesting facts.

Somerset License Renewals.

The Somerset Court yesterday, granted renewals of the licenses of Henry Pedeflous and Randolph Balcer, proprietor of the former Hugo Maul place at Watchung. Pedeflous fee was increased from $100 to $150. Judge Parker warned all hotel and saloon men in ths county that they must observed the closing hours under penalty of revocation of licenses. The renewal of the County House license at Somerville was held up until Saturday and as a result that well known hotel is closed for the present.

EXAMINE TEACHER

New Rules to Place Jersey in Highest Rank as to Qualifacations.

TO ISSUE STATE CERTIFICATES.

Examinations to Be Held Each Year and The New Rules of State Board are Effective on July 1.

After full discussion in the State Board of Eucation, the board yesterday adopted the new set of rules governing the work of teachers and specifying their qualifications, which rules place New Jersey in the highest rank as regards the qualifications of her teachers force.

They provide that no person shall be employed as a teacher, principal or supervisor unless he shall hold a certificate in full force and effect in this state and valid for the position to be filled at the time he shall begin teaching under contract entered into with the Board of Education.

Before entering upon the duties of a teacher the certificate must be exhibited to the county superintendent or the city superintendent of schools. Applicants for certificates must be at least eighteen years of age and must file testimonials as to character, a physician's certificate of health, and in case of previous experience, testimonials as to his sucess in teaching. No certificate, granted upon examination is to be issued to any person whose percentage in any subject shall fall below seventy per cent., except in the case of provisional certificates, for which special provision is made.

Certificates in force July 1 next will be renewed upon application by the state board of examiners, but will be valid only as originally issued. There are to be two general classes of certificates, namely, state certificates, issued by the examiners of such cities as shall elect to grant their own certificates, as authorized by law.

A state certificate will be valid in any district in the state in the grades covered by it and a city certificate only in the city in which it is issued. The state board of examiners will issue certificates of the following grades: Elementary, secondary, normal schools, supervisors, special and provisional. Subject to certain rules and regulations, the state board of examiners may revoke for cause a certificate issued by any board of examiners. A city board, likewise, may revoke for cause any certificate granted by it. Any person holding a supervisor's certificate is to be deemed to hold a first-class state certificate as required by law.

Upon recommendation of a county or city superintendent, a provisional certificate may be issued to be valid only until the 15th of the month following the next examination. Upon receipt of a certified copy of an application for a certificate the county or city superintendent may issue a permit to teach valid for thirty days. Provisional certificates are not to be renewed except that in case of a person holding no certificate valid in this state, and therefore, required to take an examination in all subjects specified for the grade of certificate applied for, a proviso provisional certificate may be made valid until the 15th of the month succeeding the date of the second regular examination held after the granting of such certificate. This, however, is subject to the condition that at the first examination the applicant shall pass in more than half of the subjects, securing at least 70 per cent. in each subject and a general average of not less than 75 per cent.

The rules define a kindergarten as a school for children over the age of 4 and under the age of 7 years; an elementary school as one in which there are any or all of the first eight years of work exclusive of the kindergarten, and a secondary school as one in which there are any or all of the four years of work following the elementary work.

Two examinations for State certificates are to be held each year on the first three Saturdays of May and December at places arranged for by the State board of examiners and the local school authorities.

State certificates may be obtained by either endorsement or examination. In lieu of examinations the board may accept the diploma of any approved college for the subject it covers, the diploma of a State normal school of another State or a permanent State certificate granted in another State on examination. Such normal school diploma or State certificate to be effective must cover work equivalent to that required in this State for the grade of certificate for which application is made. Certificates from other States shall be endorsed only on terms of reciprocity, except that normal school diplomas issued in State not having a State system of certification, and therefore, unable to grant reciprocal privileges, may be endorsed as above provided.

After September 1 next an applicant for an elementary certificate must have had one year of a course in an approved high school; after 1912, two years; after 1913, three years, and after 1914, you must be a gradute of such school. A limited elementary certificate is valid for one year, at the end of which it may be renewed, with examination, for two years. After three years it may be made permanent by examination in certain specified subjects.

An applicant for a limited secondary school certificate must hold a diploma from an approved college, or a diploma from an approved four-year high school teachers' course of of a State normal school, or shall be the holder of a New Jersey permanent elementary State certificate. In addition he must be examined upon such of certain subjects as are not covered by his certificate or diploma. A limited secondary school certificate may be made permanent after three years of successful teaching. Special limited certificates may be issued for particular subjects.

The rules also specify in detail the manner in which examinations shall be conducted.

BECOMING EASTER MILLINERY

Come here expecting to have your desire satisfied in the most gratifying manner.—Perfect Millinery at $5 to $50 and more

True to Fashion's dictates, we are showing hundreds of entirely new creations. In the collection you will find pretty black and white effects, some with touches of flowers, just a small bouquet here and there in some pretty color to contrast. Many of the styles are of the poke or quaint Dutch bonnet style, with an elaborate bow of black or colored velvet. Some of the close fitting hats are in black with treatments of Empire Green or King Blue, and then there are also many smart sailor effects, in the burnt straw and black, with treatments of ostrich feather bands, garlands of flowers and bow loops and quill effects of velvet.

The finer hats are usually of hemp, fine chip or milan, trimmed with fancy feathers, aigrette, and French and willow ostrich plumes. In addition to the Paris hats and our own, you'll find many unsually smart hats; Gage hats, Burgesser hats and Crosly hats.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your issue of the 31st, you published a letter from Rev. Charles Hillman Fountain, in which the gentleman makes the assertion that Christian Science is Pantheism.

There can be but two distinct theories concerning the science of being. One extreme is the belief that the creation is wholly apart from the creator, that God made the universe, endowed it with certain inherent laws, then left it to revolve in an orbit of its own. The other extreme and paradoxical belief is Pantheism. It teaches that God and His creation are identical, that the sum of the creation constitutes the creator. The third proposition might be referred to as a "happy medium" between the two extremes. It is the Scriptural teaching that the creation is one and inseparable from the creator, that the creature is and should be demonstrated to be one with the Father. This idea is expressed in such Scriptural passages as the following: "I and my Father are one," "that they may be one, even as we are one." It is with this latter proposition that Christian Science agrees. It advocates the "all in all" of God as it is taught in the Scriptures, but not in the pantheistic sense. Christian Science teaches that mind, Spirit, God, truth is the only truth, that good is the only life, substance and intelligence, and therefore the only life, substance and intelligence that could be regarded in the ideal and spiritual deportment of mankind. Hence, the Scriptural instruction "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus," which implies the admonition to entertain no other mind, allow no other mind, since to use St. Paul's words "The carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." St. Paul declared "In Him we live, and move, and have our being." The Master declared "It is the spirit that quickenth; the flesh profiteth nothing;" it is "spirit" that gives existence, matter is not considered in the true science of being. It is altogether unprofitable. It is not a part of the divine creation, has no deific standing and plays no part whatever in the truth and reality of being.

It is quite true that sin and disease, being no part of the "very good" things which God created have only a mythical existence, but mortals cannot rid themselves of this myth by merely ignoring it. Their lives must be in accordance with their understanding that good alone is real and profitable. The denial of evil must be in accordance with the Scriptural teaching "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." The denial must extend to an abandonment of evil. Christian Science does not teach that God's creation is substance, but that it is the manifestation of God, the only real substance, that man is the "express image" of the divine mind.

What I have written above constitute the fundamental Christian truths. Thus, it may be noted that, far from destroying every fundamental Christian truth, the whole structure of Christian Science is based upon fundamental Christian truth.

While Christian Science teaches that the creation of God is "after his kind" and is one and inseparable from the Father, it affirms that the creation is distinct from the creator "from everlasting to everlasting." Man's individuality is forever preserved, not as a part of God, but as the "express image of his person."

Yours truly,
ALFRED FARLOW.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The P. H. S. baseball team will cross bats with the Cranford High team this afternoon at Crescent Oval. The game will be called at 3:30. The locals are on edge for the game and expect to win.

The Easter exercises will be held on Thursday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock and will consist of singing of special music, including several soles.

Two Stillman School classes of boys played a game of ball Monday afternoon which for excitement and a close finish has the prize up to the present. The boys represented the classes taught by Miss Wilbur and Miss Barnett and rivalry between them was hot. The game went the limit and was won in the ninth inning by a daring steal home from third by Neumann, when the game was tied at 12 to 12, Miss Barnett's boys finally winning out.

"I'm staying on in this place because you said you didn't mind," observed Van Torp. "Do you want me to go away if she arrives?"

"Why should I? Why shouldn't you stay?"

"Oh, I don't know. I was only thinking. Much obliged anyway, and I'll certainly stay if you don't object. We shall be quite a party, shan't we? What with us three, and Lady Maud and Kralinsky there—"

Mrs. Rushmore and Kralinsky had stopped in their walk and were waiting for them. They quickened their pace.

"I thought perhaps this was far enough," said Mrs. Rushmore. "Of course I could go on further, and it's not your usual walk, my dear, but unless you mind—"

Margaret did not mind, and said so readily; whereupon Mrs. Rushmore deliberately took Van Torp for her companion on the way back.

"I'm sure you won't object to walking slowly," she said to him, "and Miss Donne and the count can go as fast as they like, for they are both good walkers. I am sure you must be a great walker," she added, turning to the Russian.

He smiled blandly and bent his head a little, as if he were acknowledging a compliment. Van Torp looked at him quietly.

"I should have thought you were more used to riding," said the American.

"Ah, yes!" The indifferent answer came in a peculiarly oily tone, though the pronunciation was perfect. "I was in the cavalry before I began to travel. But I walked over 2,000 miles in Central Asia, and was none the worse for it."

Margaret was sure that she was not going to like him, as she moved on with him by her side; and Van Torp, walking with Mrs. Rushmore, was quite certain that he was Levi Longlegs, who had herded cattle with him for six months very long ago.

CHAPTER IX.

Logotheti reached his lodgings in St. James' place at six o'clock in the evening of the day on which he had promised to dine with Van Torp, and the latter's note of excuse was given to him at once. He read it, looked out of the window, glanced at it again, and threw it into the waste-paper basket without another thought. He did not care in the least about dining with the American millionaire. In fact, he had looked forward to it rather as a bore than a pleasure. He saw on his table, with his letters, a flat and almost square parcel, which the addressed label told him contained the Archaeological Report of the Egyptian Exploration Fund, and he had heard that the new number would contain an account of a papyrus recently discovered at Oxyrrhynchus, on which some new fragments of Pindar had been found. No dinner that could be devised, and no company that could be asked to meet him at it, could be half as delightful as that to the man who so deeply loved the ancient literature of his country, and he made up his mind at once that he would not even take the trouble to go to a club, but would have a bird and a salad in his rooms.

Unhappily for his peace and his anticipated feast of poetry, he looked through his letters to see if there were one from Margaret, and there was only a colored postcard from Bayreuth, with the word "greetings" scrawled beside the address in her large hand. Next to the card, however, there was a thick letter addressed in a commercial writing he remembered but could not at once identify; and though it was apparently a business communication, and could therefore have waited till the next morning, when his secretary would come as usual, he opened it out of mere curiosity to know whence it came.

It was from Mr. Pinney, the jeweler, and it contained a full and conscientious account of the whole affair of the theft, from the moment when Logotheti and Van Torp had gone out together until Mr. Pinney had locked up the stone in his safe again, and Baraka and Spiro had been lodged in Brixton jail. The envelope contained also a cutting from the newspaper similar to the one Margaret had received from Lady Maud.

Logotheti laid the letter on the table and looked at his watch. It was now a quarter-past six, and old-fashioned shops like Pinney's close rather early in the dull season, when few customers are to be expected and the days are not so long as they have been. In the latter part of August, in London, the sun sets soon after seven o'clock, and Logotheti realized that he had no time to lose.

As he drove quickly up towards Bond street, he ran over the circumstances in his mind, and came to the conclusion that Baraka had probably been the victim of a trick, though he did not exclude the bare possibility that she might be guilty.

He found Mr. Pinney in the act of turning the discs of the safe before going home and leaving his shopman to shut up the place. He smiled with grave satisfaction when Logotheti entered.

"I was hoping to see you, sir," he said. "I presume that you had my letter? I wrote out the account with great care, as you may imagine, but I shall be happy to go over the story with you if there is any point that is not clear."

Logotheti did not wish to hear it; he wished to see the ruby. Mr. Pinney turned the discs again to their places, stuck the little key into the secret keyhole which then revealed itself, turned it three times to the left and five times to the right, and opened the heavy iron door. The safe was an old-fashioned one that had belonged to his father before him. He got out the japanned tin box, opened that, and produced the stone, still in its paper, for it was too thick to be put into one of Mr. Pinney's favorite pill boxes.

Logotheti undid the paper, took out the big uncut ruby, laid it in the palm of his hand, and looked at it critically, turning it over with one finger from time to time. He took it to the door of the shop, where the evening light was stronger, and examined it with the greatest care. Still he did not seem satisfied.

"Let me have your lens, Mr. Pinney," he said, "and some electric light and a sheet of white paper."

Mr. Pinney turned up a strong drop light that stood on the counter, and produced the paper and a magnifier.

"It's a grand ruby," he said.

"I see it is," Logotheti answered rather curtly.

"Do you mean to say," asked the surprised jeweler, "that you had bought it without thoroughly examining it sir—you who are an expert?"

"No, that's not what I mean," answered the Greek, bending over the ruby and scrutinizing it through the strong magnifier.

Mr. Pinney felt himself snubbed, which had not happened to him for a long time, and he drew himself up with dignity. A minute passed, and Logotheti did not look up; another and Mr. Pinney grew nervous; a few seconds more, and he received a shock that took away his breath.

"This is not my ruby," said Logotheti, looking up, and speaking with perfect confidence.

"Not—your—ruby!" Mr. Pinney's jaw dropped. "But—" He could get no further.

"I'm sorry," Logotheti said calmly. "I'm very sorry, for several reasons. But it's not the stone I brought you, though it's just as large, and most extraordinarily like it."

"But how do you know, sir?" gasped the jeweler.

"Because I'm an expert, as you were good enough to say just now."

"Yes, sir. But I am an expert, too, and to the best of my expert belief this is the stone you left with me to be cut the day before yesterday. I've examined it most thoroughly."

"No doubt," answered the Greek. "But you hadn't examined mine thoroughly before it was stolen, had you? You had only looked at it with me, on the counter here."

"That is correct, sir," said Mr. Pinney nervously. "That is quite true."

"Very well. But I did more than merely look at it through a lens or weigh it. I did not care so much about the weight, but I cared very much for the water, and I tried the ruby point on it in the usual way, but it was too hard, and then I scratched it in two places with the diamond, more out of curiosity than for any other reason."

"You marked it, sir? There's not a single scratch on this one! Merciful Providence! Merciful Providence!"

"Yes," Logotheti said gravely. "The girl spoke the truth. She had two stones much larger than the rest when she first came to me in Paris, this one and another. They were almost exactly alike, and she wanted me to buy both; but I did not want them, and I took the one I thought a little better in color. This is the other, for she still had it; and, so far as I know, it is her legal property, and mine is gone. The thief was one of those two young fellows who came in just when Mr. Van Torp and I went out. I remember thinking what nice-looking boys they were!"

He laughed rather harshly, for he was more annoyed than his consideration for Mr. Pinney made him care to show. He had looked forward to giving Margaret the ruby, mounted just as she wanted it; and the ruby was gone, and he did not know where he was to find another, except the one that was now in Pinney's hands, but really belonged to poor Baraka, who could certainly not sell it at present. A much larger sum of money was gone, too, than any financier could lose with equanimity by such a peculiarly disagreeable mishap as being robbed. There were several reasons why Logotheti was not pleased.

"I am deeply humiliated," said the worthy old jeweler. "I have not only been tricked and plundered, but I have been the means of sending innocent people to prison."

"You had better be the means of getting them out again as soon as possible," said Logotheti. "And you must also make an effort to trace those young men who stole the ruby."

"I most certainly shall," replied the jeweler, "and if it is not found we will make it good to you, sir, whatever price you set upon it. I am deeply humiliated, but nobody shall say that Pinney & Son do not make good any loss their customers sustain through them."

"Don't worry about that, Mr. Pinney," said Logotheti, who saw how much distressed the old jeweler really was.

So they went out and hailed a hansom and drove away.

It would be tiresome to give a detailed account of what they did. Suffice it to say that the prisoners were set at large; Mr. Pinney restored the ruby to Baraka, and all her other belongings were given back to her, even including the smart gray suit of men's clothes in which she had been arrested; and her luggage and other things which the manager of the hotel where she had been stopping had handed over to the police were all returned; and when Spiro appeared at the hotel to pay the small bill that had been left owing, he held his head as high as an oriental can when he has got the better of any one, and that is pretty high indeed. Furthermore, Mr. Pinney insisted on giving Logotheti a formal document by which Messrs. Pinney & Son bound themselves to make good to him, his heirs, or assigns, the loss of a ruby, approximately of a certain weight and quality, which he had lost through their carelessness.

On the day following Baraka's liberation, Lady Maud received Margaret's pressing message begging her to go to Bayreuth. The message reached her before noon, about the time when Margaret and her companions had come back from their morning walk, and after hesitating for half an hour, she telegraphed that she would come with pleasure, and would start at once which meant that evening.

She had just read the official account of the ruby case in its new aspect, and she did not believe a word of the story. To her mind it was quite clear that Logotheti was still infatuated with the girl, that he had come to London as fast as he could, and that he had deliberately sworn that the ruby was not his, but another one, in order to get her out of trouble. If it was not his it had not been stolen from Pinney's, and the whole case fell through at once. If she was declared innocent the stone must be given back to her; he would take it from her as soon as they were alone and return it to his own pocket; and being an oriental, he would probably beat her for robbing him, but would not let her out of his sight again till he was tired of her. Lady Maud had heard from her late husband how all Turks believed that women had no souls and should be kept under lock and key, and well fed, and soundly beaten now and then for the good of their tempers. This view was exaggerated, but Lady Maud was in a humor to recall it and accept it without criticism, and she made up her mind that before leaving town to join Margaret she would make sure of the facts. No friend of hers should marry a man capable of such outrageous deeds.

So she went to Logotheti's lodgings and asked to see him, as regardless of what any one should think of her, if she were recognized, as she had been in the old days when she used to go to Van Torp's chambers in the Temple in the evening.

She was told that Logotheti was out of town. Where? The servant did not know that. The lady could see the secretary, who might, perhaps, tell her. He received every one who had business with Mons. Logotheti.

She went up one flight and was admitted to a very airy sitting room, simply furnished.

The Swiss secretary rose ponderously to receive her, and as she did not sit down he remained standing. His vast face was fringed with a beard of no particular color, and his eyes were fixed and blue in his head, like turquoises set in pale sole leather.

"I am Countess Leven," she said, "and I have known Mons. Logotheti some time. Will you kindly tell me where he is?"

"I do not know, madam," was the answer.

"He is not in London?"

"At present I do not know, madam."

"Has he left no address? Do you not forward his letters to him?"

"No, madam. I do not forward his letters to him."

"Then I suppose he is on his yacht," suggested Lady Maud.

"Madam, I do not know whether he is on his yacht."

"You don't seem to know anything!"

"Pardon me, madam, I think I know my business. That is all I know."

Lady Maud held her beautiful head a little higher and her lids dropped slightly as she looked down at him, for he was shorter than she. But the huge leathern face was perfectly impassive, and the still, turquoise eyes surveyed her without winking. She had never seen such stolidity in a human being.

There was clearly nothing to be done, and she thought the secretary distinctly rude; but as that was no reason why she should be, she bade him good-morning civilly and turned to go. Somewhat to her surprise, he followed her quickly across the room, opened the door for her and went on into the little hall to let her out. There was a small table there, on which lay some of Logotheti's hats, and several pairs of gloves were laid out neatly before them. There was one pair, of a light gray, very much smaller than all the rest, so small, indeed, that they might have fitted a boy of seven, except that they looked too narrow for any boy. They were men's gloves as to length and buttons, but only a child could have worn them.

Lady Maud saw them instantly, and remembered Baraka's disguise; and as she passed the big umbrella jar to go out, she saw that with two of Logotheti's sticks there was a third, fully four inches shorter! just a plain crook-handled stick with a silver ring. That was enough. Baraka had certainly been in the lodgings and had probably left in them everything that belonged to her disguise. The fact that the gloves and the stick were in the hall looked very much as if she had come in dressed as a man and had left them there when she had gone away in woman's attire. That she was with Logotheti, most probably on his yacht, Lady Maud had not the least doubt, as she went down the stairs.

The Swiss secretary stood at the open door on the landing till she was out of sight below, and then went in again, and returned to work over a heap of business papers and letters. When he had worked half an hour, he leaned back in his leathern chair to rest, and stared fixedly at the bookcase. Presently he spoke aloud in English, as if Lady Maud were still in the room, in the same dull, matter-of-fact tone, but more forcibly as to expression.

"It is perfectly true, though you do not believe me, madam. I do not know anything. How the dickens should I know where they are, madam? But I know my business. That is all."

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

President Taft and King George V., of Great Britain, will send letters to a tercentenary Bible celebration to be held in Carnegie Hall, on Tuesday evening, April 25. The celebration has been arranged by a special tercentenary committee, and is the American counterpart of the great Bible meeting just held in Albert Hall London, at which Ambassador Reid presented greetings from the American President, which greetings roused the British public. Ambassador Bryce will at the New York meeting present and read a letter from King George V. Bishop David H. Greer will preside at the meeting. Besides Ambassador Bryce, who presents the greetings of the people of Great Britain and reads the letter from the King, the speakers will be the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, of Princeton; Bishop Henry W. Warren, of Denver, and Dr. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale University. The music will be a feature, and Scripture lessons will be read from a copy of the original edition of King James Version published in 1611.

penetrates deeply into the pores of the wood

IF you were to put the Silex, the mineral substance which is the basis of Wheeler's Wood Filler, under a microscope you would find that it is composed of diamond-pointed crystals.

When Wheeler's Wood Filler is applied to the wood these minute particles imbed themselves deeply into the pores of the wood, binding them closely together and making a surface for the application of other Bridgeport Standard Wood Finishes that is unequalled.

Wheeler's Wood Filler has been on the market for over half a century. It is used in every civilized country of the world. Every architect, painter and contractor knows how good it is; it is an old standby in the paint trade.

Wheeler's Wood Filler is only another of the Bridgeport Standard Wood Finishes.

JUNIORS NO MATCH FOR THE FRESHMEN

The freshmen put it all over the juniors yesterday afternoon to the tune of 21 to 9. It was the first interclass game and both teams seemed anxious for victory. The juniors started off by scoring three runs in the first inning, but the freshmen come back with five. Denny, the juniors' pitcher pitched well enough, but the support was extremely ragged. Poor fielding really cost the juniors the game. They seemed to be unable to field. Newell pitched exceedingly well for the freshmen and besides was supported in great shape by his team mates, who took greater chances and had some luck on their side. Denny made two two baggers and Coyle contributed a three bagger.

The lineup: Juniors—Denny, p; Ulrich, 1b; Von Minden, c; Titsworth, 1b; Cullen, 2b; Doane, 3b; Dunwell, ss; Manley, lf; Fountain, cf; Line, rf.

Freshmen—Newell, p; Buckle, c; Butler, c; Greason, 1b; Gavett, 1b; Smink, 2b; Hatfield, ss; Coyle, ss; VanDeventer, 3b; Bowlby, lf; Van Zandt, cf; Steerer, rf; Platt, rf.

Score by innings:

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

"Resolved, That by-yearly examinations in the High School should be retained" was the subject of debate in the second period junior English class this morning. The affirmative won. Those who upheld the principle were Burnet Doane, James Dunwell and James Lindsey. They were opposed by Fred VanHoesen, John Denny and Harry Barone. Fred Krom acted as chairman and Miss Grace Pittington was judge.

Miss Marion Snyder, a member in the course of public speaking, recited before the asembled classes this morning, "The Mission of New Japan."

RIVAL MERCHANTS SCRAP; ALL ARE FINED IN COURT

Rivalry in business caused a rumpus at the corner of Clinton avenue and West Third street, last night. Samuel Botzisky, Solomon Schwartzman and David Meyrowitz, all peddlers, were arrested in consequence of the row and all were fined—Botzisky, $5; Schwartzman, $8 or 30 days and a similar dose was administered to Meyrowitz.

The two latter assaulted Botzisky, but because of the row all three caused, Judge DeMeza thought it best to inflict punishment for disturbing the peace and disorderly conduct.

CURRENT EVENTS

Theme of Lecture by Miss Janet Richards on Tuesday.

LORIMER CASE NOT FINISHED.

Mexico, Reciprocity With Canada, the Woman Question and Other Timely Topics—To Return Next November.

Miss Jenet Richards, of Washington, D. C., gave her ninth and final talk an Current History, Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Richards opened her lecture by a summary of the world's work in the past year. She said that the keynote to all the present activity among nations is the demand "Give us more freedom, give us more liberty, to pursue happiness and life" and it is the effort to gratify this demand that is the mainspring for the reforms which are pending in so many political circles, for reforms must be political and the necessity of offering opportunities to gain better livelihoods can only be met by wise political measures.

Miss Richards then dwelt briefly on the "Woman Question." She said that since 25 per cent. of our women are wage earners, many problems in relation to their industries arise which can only be solved by political measures and the question of having the women representation in elections is one which is urgently demanded in many quarters. Miss Richards has been invited to the Women's Conference at Stochholm, Sweden, in June as one of the 12 representative women of America. She expressed great surprise over the invitation, a surprise which, however, was not shared by her audience, who loudly applauded the news.

Amongst the measures of reform at present before the public are the questions of international arbitration, arbitration with Great Britain, the reciprocity treaty with Canada, and the amendments of the Tariff by the Democrats, so as to give fair play to the farmer. Reforms are also required in Mexico and Diaz is considered by many the man to give those reforms under coercion.

Miss Richads spoke at some length on the Lorimer case, which as she said like Banquo's Ghost, refused to be downed. Important revelations by the Illinois legislaturers investigating committee are likely to lead to a second investigation in the Senate, when the evidence of certain members of the Harvester trust may give a different verdict from that obtained in March.

As to coming events, she spoke of the Coronation of King Edward of England, giving her audience many picturesque details of the interesting and historical ceremony to take place in June. The jubilee celebration of united Italy and the great commemoration exhibition in Rome, led Miss Richards to give a brief sketch of political conditions in Italy, which have led to the voluntary imprisonment in the Vatican of Pope Pius X.

In closing Miss Richards expressed the hope of meeting her Plainfield audience again in the fall. Mrs. Percy Stewart made a short speech at the close of the lecture, thanking Miss Richards on behalf of the audience for the many pleasant afternoons she had given them through the winter and expressing their pleasure at the thought of seeing her again in November.

Dr. MacArthur to Lecture Here.

Rev. Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, New York, who has a world-wide reputation as a lecturer, will speak at the Park Avenue Baptist church Thursday night, April 20, on the subject: "America's Great Place Among the Nations." Dr. MacArthur has only held one pastorate during his life time, going to the Calvary Baptist church as pastor immediately after his graduation from the seminary. His lecture cannot fail to interest everyone.

Special Lenten Service.

The chorus choir of the First Baptist church, under the direction of Howard M. Case, organist and choirmaster, will render this evening Maunder's cantata, "Olivet to Calvary" and other selections. The choir will be assisted by Mrs. Davies-Jones, harpist, and Udo Gossweiler, 'cellist. The public is invited.

Sacramental Service at Trinity.

Sacramental services, appropriate to Holy Week, will be held at Trinity Reformed church, this evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor, will have charge and will preach a short sermon and there will be appropriate music by the choir under the direction of Arthur L. Titsworth, organist.

AIMED AT MAN; HIT HIS MOTHER

At an early hour this morning Harry Berlowitz, of East Third street, saw Robert Marks, a colored man, passing through his yard, and he ordered him to get out. Marks was in reality going out and did not hurry. Suddenly Berlowitz, it is alleged, approached him with his hand in his right hand hip pocket and shouted, "If you don't get out I'll shoot you."

Marks reached down and picked up a rock or something else nearly quite as hard and as Berlowitz still approached with threatening gestures Marks let fly with his missile. Mrs. Berlowitz, mother of Harry, who was standing in the doorway watching the actions of the two men failed to see the object hurled at her son by Marks in time to dodge it. The result was an awful blow in the mouth from which blood flowed freely.

All three parties were brought before Judge DeMeza in the city court at 9 oclock and after hearing the complaints and counter charges his honor set the case down for a hearing on Tuesday morning next allowing the two men to go on bonds of their own in $100 each.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR THEO. I. RUNYON

The postponed Theodore I. Runyon memorial service was held in the Sunday-school rooms of the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night. It was attended by a gathering that occupied all the available seating space and represented every department of the church. The servic was deeply impressive.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire was in charge and was assisted by Rev. F. St. John Fitch, who made the opening prayer. Besides Mr. Maguire's remarks, there were other addresses given by leaders in the congregation. Superintendent George E. Hall spoke of Mr. Runyon's great work in the Sunday-school during his term as its leader. David M. Runyon spoke for the deacons, Mr. Runyon having been one of them from the time the church was organized until his death.

Former City Judge William N. Runyon, speaking in behalf of the younger people of the church, paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the departed member. He spoke of the influence unconsciously extended over the junior church workers by the older people and what a lovable example Mr. Runyon had been. He reminded the younger people that it will devolve upon them to carry on the affairs of the church and the record of Mr. Runyon should serve as an incentive. Nelson Runyon told of Mr. Runyon's work as a teacher, having been a member of his class, while Benjamin Hadley read a letter of tribute from the Mutual Benefit Insurance Co., of Newark, in which Mr. Runyon held a responsible position for forty years. It demonstrated fully that in his business as well as religious life, Mr. Runyon's devotion itself deserved recognition as though he had accomplished deeds of valor in other fields.

A specially impressive part of the service was the singing by the congregation of Mr. Runyon's favorite hymns, "Rock of Ages," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "Simply Trusting every Day."

Pussy was Rescued.

A black and white cat clawed her way up the big pine tree next the North Avenue Station this morning, presumably after a sparrow, but somehow she couldn't get down. She called loudly for help. Her cries were heard and the resourceful patrolman on the beat, Nick Meyers, soon had a ladder against the tree with a boy skipping up to release pussy. When Puss got near enough to the ground to make a safe jump she let go and streaked it across Watchung avenue and when last seen was crawling under the Friends' Meeting house.

Celebrate Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart celebrated their fifty years of married life at their home on South avenue, on Tuesday. The Golden anniversary was a very enjoyable one and many tokens of remembrance were received by the happy couple from their children, grandchildren and friends. Many congratulations came from friends in this city, Bloomfield, New York and other places.

Annual Report of the City.

The annual report of the city of Plainfield, comprising all the reports of the various departments, together with the officials and committees of the Common Council and report of the Board of Health has been published and ready for circulation. The report is printed in convenient form and is aranged in an attractive way.

ANNUAL MEETINGS

First and Crescent Avenue Presbyterian and Congregational Churches.

TO BUILD ITALIAN MISSION.

Reports are Encouraging—Sunday Schools Vigorous—Rev. J. O. McKelvey Presides at Crescent Avenue.

Three of the principal churches in the city held their annual meetings last night and the general tone of the reports from the various enterprises of the three congregations were encouraging.

First Baptist.

Officers were elected and numerous reports presented from various departments and there was a general discussion concerning the welfare of the Italian Mission work, at the annual church and congregation meetings of the First Presbyterian church last night. It was a long session, there being considerable business under discussion. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor, presided at the church meeting, George B. Wean being secretary. After the pastor's address, which was full of good advice to his people to increase the efficiency of the church as well as the membership, E. M. Cave, clerk of the session read his report.

This report showed that a year ago the membership was 375 and that during the year seventeen were received on confession, ten by letter, sixteen were dismissed to other churches and there were three deaths leaving the present membership to be 383. The benevolent contributions amounted to $1,724.43.

Then followed the reports from the different societies. The Women's Foreign Missionary Society reported receipts and disbursements of $132.26, and the Women's Home Missionary Society reported receipts of $201.18, disbursements of $193.35, leaving a balance of $7.83. The Sewing Society received $71.79 and has a balance of $41.62, and $381.75 was received for the Forward Movement. The Christian Endeavor Society reported a balance of $3.02, after paying bills, and the missionary fund of the society has a balance of $3.27. The Junior C. E. Society received $5.41, which was expended. It has a membership of twenty-seven. E. D. George reported the receipts for the deacons' fund to be $450.06 and there is a balance of $387.85. The Pastor's Aid Society reported receipts of $853.77, expenditures of $339.46, leaving a balance of $514.31. The Sunday-school reported receipts of $183.96, disbursements of $169.60, leaving a balance of $14.36. In the Missionary fund the receipts were $426.36, disbursements $308, leaving a balance of $118.45 in the missionary fund of the school. The Light Bearers received and expended $1.

The Home department of the Sunday-school reported a membership of 184, including two men, three members have died, two removed from the city and two withdrawn, the present membership being 177. The sum of $194.57 was received. There are six visitors.

The Ways and Means committee having charge of the Italian Mision work stated that the receipts for the past year were $1,394.88, and there is a balance of $249.21. In conection with this Rev. Lewis Bond made a statement telling of the work of the past year, adding that the C. E. Society of Warren chapel had contributed fruniture and Hope chapel had given an organ. He made a strong appeal for funds to carry this work forward, expressing a desire that at least $8,000 be raised for a suitable chapel. The report was filed at this time and the matter came up again in the congregational meeting.

William H. Shotwell, Robert H. Radford and J. H. Manning were re-elected elders for a term of three years to succeed themselves and E. D. George and John S. Johnston were elected deacons for a term of three years to succeed themselves.

At the congregational meeting, which followed, F. T. Dickerson was the chairman and George B. Wean continued as secretary. Harry Williams, A. V. Searing, Jr., and Thomas E. Currin, Jr., were re-elected trustees for a term of three years to succeed themselves, and George B. Wean, E. D. George and F. O. Dunning were re-elected auditors. It was voted to make the pastor's salary the same as last year and to leave the question of music to the session.

William H. Shotwell, church treasurer, reported total receipts for the year to be $5,756.97 and disbursements the same. There is a deficit of about $850. During the year $756.02 was expended for repairs, and $272.92 was expended for miscelaneous items.

The question of continuing the support to the Italian Mission was then discussed at great length and it

WHO TOOK SILVER?

Police Board Still Investigating Case of Mysterious Disappearance.

EVERY POLICEMAN EXAMINED.

Former Patrolman Payne Secured the Articles, It Is Said, But Who Returned Them to Headquarters?

The Councilmanic Police Board met at police headquarters last night to continue its investigation of the now famous silverware case, but the result was not altogether satisfactory for it was not learned who took the silverware out of the headquarters and kept it for an indefinite time and then returned it to the drawer in the Gamewell cabinet. The board met at 7:30 o'clock and every policeman on the force, together with Chief Kiely and Mrs. Gertrude Fenner, of Ravine road, who owns the silverware, accompanied by her husband, were present and were examined.

The investigation did bring out the fact, it is said, that it was former Patrolman John Payne who secured the silverware from Mrs. Fenner and Patrolman Daniel McDonald stated that he had seen the silverware in Mr. Payne's possession on or about the time of the robbery. This was at headquarters about two years ago. The latter was on duty in Netherwood at the time, but has since left the department.

Chief Kiely declared that he did not authorize any member of the department to get the silverware and the first time he saw it was on the evening of March 29, when it was found, after its long disappearance, by Sergeant Overbaugh in the drawer at headquarters. The Mayor says that he will go on with the investigation for the purpose of getting all the facts.

City Judge DeMeza stated that he was with Sergeant J. J. Flynn, when the latter searched for the silverware and it was not in the drawer at that time, but was found there later. Questions by Mayor Moy brought out the information that John Payne had visited headquarters a couple of times within the past month.

The board also examined some of the old bicycles at headquarters and decided to auction them off when the new ones arrive.

W. H. TAYLOR DINES HIS DESCENDANTS

William H. Taylor, proprietor of Taylor's Hotel, Dunellen, entertained his children and grand children at a dinner last evening in honor of his seventy-eighth birthday. Mr. Taylor who is hale and hearty was in high spirits as he dispensed the good things which had been prepared for his guests. He received many congratulations from his descendants and the many friends who attended the dinner.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. George W. Taylor and son Russel, of Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Taylor, of Dunellen; Mrs. C. D. Taylor, Miss Eliza and Master William Taylor, of Dunellen; Mrs. Smith and Miss Fitzgibbon, of Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. Grandon Neighbor, Jeanette and Grandon Neighbor, of Dunellen, and others. Mr. Taylor is reputed to be the oldest hotelkeeper in the State in point of years in the business.

Governor for Two Days.

Owing to the absence in Indiana, of Governor Wilson, Senator Ernest R. Ackerman will be Governor of the State for two days. In this capacity, Acting Governor Ackerman will sign the requisition papers for the extradition of Richard T. Hone, who is now confined in the Tombs, in New York. It is expected that Hone will be brought to Elizabeth by Chief Kiely on Saturday or Monday.

Boys Take Warning.

Chief of Police Kiely announces that boys caught playing ball in the street will be locked up. So many escapes from being run down by automobiles and other vehicles have occurred recently and so many windows have been broken by the youngsters that it has become necessary to put a stop to the practice. Boys are warned to stop the habit of playing ball in the streets.

COOKING ECONOMY

Demonstrated by Miss Scott of the Philadelphia North American.

63 CENTS FOR A DINNER.

Results Prove That High Cost of Living Can Be Reduced—Audience Applauds Speaker.

When Miss Anna Scott, cooking demonstrator of the Philadelphia North American, began her lecture on "Cooking Economics" in the auditorium of the High School yesterday afternoon she faced a large and critical audience but when it came down to cooking facts Miss Scott had the critical ones looking for shelter. What the speaker does not know about the culinary art as adapted to present day needs wouldn't fill a very large volume.

If one can eke out a dinner with an expenditure of only sixty-three cents and feed four hungry people with the product then there should be no cavilling at the high cost of living, but one should get at the cooking facts.

Miss Scott was introduced to her audience by Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees on behalf of the Franklin-Whittier-Stillman Parent-Teachers' Association. Mrs. Voorhees told of the object of the demonstration and when Miss Scott arose to begin she was warmly applauded.

The demonstrator took her audience through the whole gamut of food preparation making many practical suggestions as to saving what ordinarily goes to waste. The care of milk and other perishable eatables; the ideal way of preparing tempting dishes out of remnants; why not to throw away stale bread and many other things calculated to help the careful housewife in managing her home. Miss Scott used an electric stove gratuitously furnished by the Public Service Gas Co. She said at the conclusion of her lecture that the recipes which she had been demonstrating would all be found in the North American tomorrow. This newspaper is for sale at all newsstands.

After the lecture Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, addressed the audience and told of the work that is being done toward educating the young in domestic science. A social hour was spent and a general discussion of Miss Scott's methods followed among the teachers and mothers present. This discussion included the effect upon children of the food prepared for them by their parents. A vote of thanks was extended to the North American, the P. S. C. and the local papers for their help along the lines of education.

Mrs. Floris Ferwerda.

Mrs. Mary Woodbridge Ferwerda, aged 35 years, wife of Rev. Floris Ferwerda, pastor of the Reformed church, Millstone, died at Dr. J. B. Cooley's sanitarium, Tuesday night, following an illness from nervous prostration. She was the daughter of Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Woodbridge, dean of the New Brunswick Seminary, who died six years ago. She was also related to the Janeway family. Beside a husband and two young daughters, there survives a mother and two sisters, the Misses Carrie and Anna Woodbridge, of New Brunswick.

Knocked Out in Ninth.

A ten-round fight in which the participants contested for a purse of $100 was pulled off last night, so it is said, within the sacred precincts of this city. The bout did not go the limit as one of the fighters was knocked out during the ninth round. It was said this morning that the fight occurred within twenty miles of Park avenue and East Second street and that considerable money was wagered on the result.

Bridesmaid at Bayonne Wedding.

Miss May Serrell, of Union street, was one of the bridesmaids at the marriage on Tuesday evening, of Miss Ada N. Potter and Harry A. Boist, at the First Baptist church, Bayonne. A reception followed at the home of the bride.

Chicken Thief Busy.

August Dressel, of East Seventh street, was the victim of chicken thieves last night for when he awoke this morning and went to his hen house there were seventeen of his choicest fowls missing. He reported his loss to the police.

Building Loan Annual.

The annual meeting of the Home Building and Loan Association will be held Monday night in the rooms, 109 Park avenue, at 8:30 o'clock, at which time officers will be elected for the ensuing year. The polls will be open from 7:30 to 8:30 oclock.

EXILED BLIND BEGGAR WAS A GENUINE FAKIR

Another chapter must be added to the story recently written about Penrose Warrington, alias Ralph Penrose, who with a woman whom he said was his wife, was banished from this city last Monday night. Warrington is totally blind, but the story he told of how he was made blind in a mine explosion has been in turn exploded. Through the police channels it has been learned that Warrington, which by the way is his real name, was released from the State prison at Trenton, about four years ago and it was while in confinement there that he lost his eyesight.

The crime for which he is said to have served several years was burglary, but the history does not say what caused the blindness. Ever since his release from prison, Warrington has been a professional beggar.

The boy, Bernard Snyder, who was taken away from the couple and placed temporarily with a family here has managed to decamp and is believed to have joined the couple, who are known to be in Somerville, where they yesterday applied for a license to marry. County detective Totten has been asked to find the boy.

HIGHER PRICES ASKED IN SCHOOL COAL BIDS

The city Board of Education held a special meeting last, for the purpose of receiving bids for the furnishing of the annual coal supply. Only two were submitted, one from the Consumers Coal Company and the other from Richard T. Parrot, Jr. In either instance the figures quoted were much higher than formerly and as they stand the board will have to pay over $400 more for its fuel than it did last year. The bids were as follows:

Consumers Coal Company—nut, egg and stove sizes, $5.90 per ton; pea, $4.90; buckwheat, $3.15; total bid for 783 tons, $4,355.95; Richard T. Parrot, Jr.,—nut, egg and stove, $5.91; pea, $4.65; buckwheat, $3.10; total for 783 tons, $4,275.58.

The price paid for regular sizes, nut, stove and egg, last year was $4.30. The coal dealers recently gave notice of a twenty-five cent raise in price, owing to an advance at the mines, which would mean $3.55 a ton anyway. According to the bids the twenty-five cents was put on and thirty-five cents additional in one case and thirty-six in the other The latter increase was something the board could not understand.

The scarcity of bids also caused some comment as notices were sent to ten reputable dealers in the city. No action was taken in awarding the contract last night, but the matter will be considered within the next few days.

HORSE INJURED IN HUNT CLUB CHASE

The bi-weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club yesterday afternoon, was marked by several spills and was one of the most exciting of the season leading over a stiff country and many difficult fences and ditches. Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., up on "All Alone," plunged into a post outside of Westfield, and the chest of the animal was cut open, requiring the services of a veterinarian at Westfield. The injury is not considered serious. Mr. Finch escaped injury himself.

Fred Alpers on "Double O," and Henry Rose on "Molly," also went off in trying to negotiate stiff four railers, but they escaped injury. The riders met at the water tower and the scent was found in the vicinity of East Front street. The chase continued through A. D. Shepard's place to Scotch Plains and the Brass Kettle Inn, where a check was made. The chase then led back to Netherwood, a total distance of about ten miles. The following riders were out:

Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., Henry Rose, C. F. Wildey, Fred Alpers, J. J. O'Donohue, Harry Finch, H. A. Bourne, Stanley Bellows, C. E. S Bellows and Huntsman Henry Watkins. Two grooms rode horses belonging to Marshall Clapp.

Auto and Bike Collide.

An automobile driven by Sandford Robinson and a bicycle ridden by an Italian boy collided at Craig place and Somerset street, early last evening. The boy was slightly hurt and his wheel somewhat damaged. He was attended at the office of Dr. Hughes and was afterward enabled to walk home. Bystanders say both participants were at fault in the accident.

CLUB'S HOME SOLD

Edwin S. Hooley Disposes of Valuable Watchung Hunt Club Lands.

J. J. O'DONOHUE NEW OWNER.

Consideration is $50,000—Club Will Continue to Have Use of Grounds as at Present.

Edwin S. Hooley, of North Plainfield, owner of the tract of land comprising about seventy acres, which has been the home of the Watchung Hunt Club for the past few years, today sold the same to J. J. O'Donohue, the well-known coffee broker and sportsman of New York, and the latter has taken possession of the property. The consideration was about $50,000. The change in ownership will not alter the plans of the club in any way, and the members will have the privilege of using as much or as little of the grounds and buildings as they desire.

Mr. O'Donohue, who owns a fine stable and is greatly interested in hunting, has acquired the local property with the idea of promoting the steeplechase hunts and flat races, and he will bring his own horses to the club at once. The Watchung Hunt Club will have the opportunity of renting the grounds and the buildings for a nominal figure, which will enable the organization to rank with the leading hunt clubs of the country.

The hounds will be kept at the club and the members will be able to stable their horses there, while it is likely that the small clubhouse will be used for meetings and social functions of all kinds during the season. Mr. O'Donohue is a personal friend of Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., and his brother, Harry Finch, who is president of the club, and last night he was entertained at a dinner party at the Finch home on Park avenue, when details for the transfer of the property were arranged.

Mr. O'Donohue plans to make some improvements in the property which will add to the convenience and pleasure of the members of the club. All of the sports, such as tennis, baseball, etc., will be continued and plans will be made for holding an occasional race meet on the club track during the season. Mr. O'Donohue is a member of the New York Athletic Club, the New York Riding and Driving Club and several other organizations.

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO ABRAM E. NELSON

Abram E. Nelson, son of Evelyn and the late Lloyd B. Nelson, died yesterday morning in the Somerset hospital, Somerville. He had been ill ten days with pneumonia.

Mr. Nelson was born at New Market fifty years ago and had lived in this vicinity all his life. His father was proporietor of the old New Market hotel for about forty years. He died at South Orange on March 25 last. Abram Nelson was the eldest of the family and was also a hotel man for many years. Since living in Somerville he had been a contracting painter.

Beside his mother, Mr. Nelson is survived by three sisters and three brothers. These are Mrs. Charles Smalley, of South Orange, with whom the mother lives; Fred Nelson, of New York; Frank Nelson, of Roselle; Mrs. Charles S. Day, of New Market; Mrs. Eva Weston, of New York; and Herbert Nelson, of Phoebus, Va. The funeral will be held at Mrs. Day's home tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be in the family plot in the Scotch Plains cemetery.

Two Small Fires.

The borough fire department was called out at 8 o'clock, last night, by an alarm from box 134 for a grass fire on Belmont avenue. It was put out before any damage had occurred. The department was again called out on a still alarm, this morning, for a chimney fire at the home of Oscar Zugbaum, on Myrtle avenue, formerly the Cadmus homestead. Several extinguishers were used in putting out the blaze.

Euchre and Dance Postponed.

The euchre and dance for the benefit of St. Mary's Convent fund, which was to have been given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luke McGauley, 709 East Sixth street, on Thursday evening, April 20, has been postponed until Thursday evening, April 27, and owing to the sale of so many tickets, will now be held at T. A. B. Hall, corner Fourth and Liberty streets.

WESTFIELD.

The Park and Tree Commission, of Westfield, has notified the Public Service Corporation and the New York Telephone Co. that they must not trim or in any way mutilate the shade trees on the streets of the town without first having obtained a permit from the commission. In the past property owners have made considerable complaint against these companies for the rough manner in which they cut trees, paying no attention to the looks of the tree or its future growth; cutting the branches so that they will not touch the wires of the companies and in many cases killing the trees.

The organization of the National Bank of Westfield, is about complete and J. M. Walsh, who has been working on the organization for the past year, states that he expects to open the doors of the new bank for business about the fifteenth of June. The directors have hired room in the Abbott building, formerly occupied by the People's Bank.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Tickets for the euchre and dance to be given by the young people of St. Mary's church Monday night, in Excelsior Hall, are selling well and the affair is an assured success.

Thomas Farrell and family, will remove May 1 from the Buckley property, on Stout avenue, to the MacCauley house, on Bartle avenue.

Yesterday marked the opening of the National game of baseball. From this on to the time snow falls the local fans will be busy.

The condition of Mrs. John S. Marsh, who has been ill at her home on Park avenue, for several months, is considered critical.

Special Easter services and music will be rendered Sunday morning at all the local churches.

Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., holds a regular meeting tonight in the library rooms.

Schools closed today for the regular Easter vacation of 10 days.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. C. C. Cain, the pastor-elect of Grace M. E. church, will take possession of the parsonage tomorrow. Arrangements will soon be made for a reception at the church.

Following the mid-week service at the First Baptist church last night, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, baptized several young people. They will be received into the church Sunday morning at a special service.

The W. C. T. U. will hold an adjourned business meeting at the rooms this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when the committee on cake sale will report and arrangements made for a parlor meeting to be held later in the month.

Alvah A. TenEyck, of Union street, who has been detained at home by illness, has recovered.

Rev. and Mrs. Ora J. Shoop and children, left yesterday for Mount Washington, Pittsburg, where Mr. Shoop will become pastor of the Mount Washington M. E. church.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Much alarm is felt at Millville over the increase of diphtheria, which caused four deaths since Sunday.

According to Carlo Quaroli, Italian residents of Vineland, are owners of land and property to the value of $3,434,528.

Charles B. Hendrickson, aged sixty years, died at Burlington Tuesday night, after suffering for nearly a year from the effects of a stroke of paralysis.

A degree of absolute divorce has been granted by the Court of Chancery to Mrs. Clara L. Gibson, of Millville, from her husband, Frank Gibson, upon the grounds of desertion.

Preparations are being made for an electric road to run from Lambertville to High Bridge, through Hunterdon county. The tracks would pass through Stockton, Sergeantsville, Flemington and Clinton.

Kranklin S. Gaskill, president of the Union Transportation Company, is in a serious condition at his home, near New Egypt, as a result of being thrown from his carriage at Cookstown, Tuesday afternoon, when his horse balked. The ligaments of his hip and shoulder are lacerated and he is hurt internally. Mr. Gaskill buried his wife three weeks ago.

Albert Garland, a Woodbury negro, said to have slashed Harry Muenzenberger, Saturday night, with a razor, was given a hearing, and held under $500 bail for further hearing next Monday, when it is hoped that the young man will be able to appear against him. Muenzenberger and his father were returning from a horse sale at Pittman with a horse. Two negroes took exception to the amount of roadway required by the father and son, and one of the man said something that the elder Muenzenberger resented. He jumped out of the wagon at the fellow, who drew out a razor and made a slash at him, cutting his coat across the breast. The son struck at the man with his fist and the negro made a lunge with the razor for his throat, but Harry threw up his arm and received a gash to the bone.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Although "Best People on Earth," John E. Henshaw's new comedy, must not be regarded as a musical show, the music introduced in the second act is quite a feature of this cheerful play and gives Mr. Henshaw and the recent Casino prima donna, Frances Golden, an opportunity to interpolate in a graceful and natural way some delightful numbers that will cause the audience to take notice and that will be sure to meet with hearty approval. Theatregoers seem much interested in this attraction and will give it a rousing reception when it comes to the Plainfield theatre, Saturday, matinee and night.

A play that Mr. Higgins used to take the place of his favorite piece, "His Last Dollar," was "Capt. Clay of Missouri." It is on the order of "The Man from Mississippi," "The Man of the Hour" and other big New York dramatic successes. The comedy situations are most amusing and laughter is considered as essential as seriousness by Mr. Higgins, the author, and in this play not a dull moment is there during the entire action of the play. The scenery is all special and the Myrkle-Harder Company announces this as positively one of their best performances. They open their engagement here next week.

Lawn Swings

FOR LITTLE FOLKS AND GROWN-UPS.

We sell more swings than any other store in the State—more, we think, than any store in New York, possibly because we are nearest the great suburban home section where most swings are used, but more likely because we sell only good swings, built of dependable materials, well braced, making them perfectly safe, and because we sell them at moedrate prices.

2-Passenger Swings, strongly built, nicely painted and varnished, for $3.98.

4-Passenger Swings, solidly built and safe; well braced; nicely painted; $5.25.

Hardwood Swings, extra large, carrying four heavy persons; finished in green and mission; $7.50.

Busch Steel Swings; 4-passenger size; very strong; equipped with awning top; $12.50.

Sliding Settees, most comfortable swing ever built, because of the ease and level motion; can be used by those who cannot stand the ordinary swing, the motion being entirely different; can be made into a bed if desired; equipped with large awning; price, complete..$17.50

Sorosis Shoes

ARE WINNING MANY FRIENDS THIS SEASON.

The Sorosis family grows apace—more and more being added to it every day—men, women, boys and girls and little children, all are in line, wearing and praising these best of all shoes.

There is a reason for this continued growth—many reasons in fact.

Sorosis Shoes must satisfy—they do satisfy, and once a man, woman or child is properly fitted (and they should be careful about this at the start) they will not want to change to any other make of shoe.

Sorosis Shoes are made in wonderful variety of styles, from the plainest to the most elaborate—fancy effects of velvet and cloth, and embroidered work being made to your order, and they may be had in all popular leathers, high and low cut, black or tan.

Women's Sorosis Shoes and Oxford Ties, $3.50 to $8.
Misses' Sorosis Shoes and Oxford Ties, $3.
Children's Sorosis Shoes and Oxford Ties, $2 and $2.50.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY,
City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., April 3, 1911.

AN ORDINANCE

Concerning street railway companies, their cars, motors, roadbed, tracks, wires and appurtenances.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. It shall be the duty of all street railway companies operating one or more lines of street railway within the limits of the City of Plainfield to maintain their roadbed, tracks, wires and appurtenances occupying or being upon or over any portion of any street or public highway in the City of Plainfield, in good condition and repair, and to repair any defects which may be found to exist therein within ten days after such defects would by the exercise of reasonable care and inspection have become apparent. Any such company violating any of the provisions of this section shall on conviction be punished by a fine of twenty dollars for each offense, and every day any such defect shall continue after written complaint made to the City Judge under this section shall constitute a new offense.

Sec. 2. It shall be the duty of the Street Commissioner of said City to examine the tracks and overhead equipment of all street railway companies in any of the public streets of said city at least once in every three months, and to report forthwith to the Mayor any defects which may be found to exist therein. Upon receipt of any such report, it shall be the duty of the Mayor to give written notice to the company affected thereby, requiring it forthwith to repair such defect or defects, which notice may be served by the Mayor or Chief of Police or any regular police officer upon any officer or agent of said company, and a copy thereof shall on the same day be sent by registered mail, postage prepaid, to said company at its principal office in this State. Any such company refusing, failing or neglecting to comply with the requirements of any notice herein authorized, for a period of thirty days after the date of service and mailing thereof as aforesaid shall on conviction be liable to a fine of twenty dollars for each and every day such defects shall continue after the expiration of said period.

Sec. 3. No car shall be used or operated upon any of the streets of said City as a street railway car, the wheels of which shall be flattened either in one or more places, so as to cause in the ordinary operation of the car either loud and unnecessary noise or unnecessary jar on account of such flattening, and such car or cars may be ordered off the tracks by the Mayor forthwith until the needed repairs shall be made.

Sec. 4. No car shall be used or operated upon any of the streets of said City as a street railway car by a motor or motors of such defective construction or in such defective condition as to produce loud and unnecessary noise or unnecessary jar in the ordinary operation of such car, and any car operated by such motor or motors may be ordered off the tracks by the Mayor forthwith until the defective condition of such motor or motors shall be remedied.

Sec. 5. Every order given by the Mayor under sections 3 or 4 of this ordinance shall be in writing directed to the company operating such car, and shall specify the number of the car and the character of the defects to be remedied. Said order may be served by the Mayor or Chief of Police or any regular policeman upon any officer or agent of said company, and a copy of said order shall on the same day be sent by registered mail, postage prepaid, addressed to said company at its principal office in this State.

Sec. 6. Any street railway company which shall violate any of the provisions of sections 3 or 4 of this ordinance, or refuse, fail or neglect to comply with the requirements of any order provided for by said sections of this ordinance shall on conviction be liable to a fine of fifty dollars for each offense, and each day's violation of any of the provisions of said sections of this ordinance or of any order given as directed in said sections of this ordinance shall constitute a new offense.

LONDON-PARIS BY AEROPLANE

Pierre Prier, flying in a monoplane too high for the make to be clearly determined, passed over Dover yesterday afternoon and headed across the Channel for the French coast. He had no attending boats.

Prier, who only recently learned how to handle a flying machine, started from Hendon, a small town near London, and said when he left he would try to make Paris without stopping.

Prier successfully essayed the cross-channel fight. He passed over Calais en route to Paris, late reports said, and appeared almost certain of reaching Paris.

Prier, if successful in his attempt will be the first aviator to make a continuous aerial trip between the two capitals.

John B. Moisant, the American, who was killed last December near New Orleans, was the first aviator to make the trip between Paris and London, but it was not continuous. He started on August 17 from Paris for London, and flew across the Channel after making one stop near Calais. After descending on the English coast he met with a number of mishaps. It was several weeks after Moisant left France that he reached London.

NEW HOUSE MEASURES ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Another bill that would provide for the collection of railroad taxes by the municipalities in which tracks are located, except as to franchise value, was offered in the House late Tuesday afternoon. The introducer was Assemblyman McLoughlin, of Union county.

The bill provides that all railroad and canal property shall be assessed among local ratables in the same manner as other property is taxed. The taxes are to be paid to the local district direct. Provision is made that the value of the franchise shall be taxed by the State Board of Assessors as at present.

Mr. Mylod offered a bill, House 595, which would amend the school law by providing that if any school district shall maintain a normal or training school for teachers, and such school has been approved by the State Board of Education, diplomas issued by such school may be accepted by the State Board of Examiners as certificates to teach in said district.

Other bill proposed were as follows:

Mr. Simpson, authorizes boards of freeholders to issue bonds for the maintenance and conduct of tuberculosis hospitals. The amount not to exceed $20,000, to run two years and bear two and one-half per cent. interest.

Mr. Simpson, authorizes boards of freeholders to issue a temporary loan bond to pay deficiencies in appropriations to maintain county courthouses and grounds not to exceed $50,000.

Mr. McGowan, amend the act relative to the erection of telegraph poles, and the securing of consents for such purpose.

Mr. Burke, supplements the sewage and drainage act for towns, approved April 3, 1902. Permits towns to issue notes for the payment of sewers or drains when the cost of same has exceeded the original amount appropriated for such work. The notes are to bear interest, not exceeding six per cent. and shall run for three years. Bonds may be issued to meet the payment of such notes.

Mr. Backus, allows boards of freeholders of adjoining counties to enter into agreements to repair and reconstruct roads and bridges. The bill also gives the boards of freeholders power to enter into agreements with such trolley companies as may use such roads or bridges for part payment of such repairs.

Mr. Burke, permits boroughs to provide by resolution or ordinances, after due notice to appropriate moneys for the sprinkling of streets.

STATE TO LOSE $448,000 OF INHERITANCE TAXES.

The State will have to open its purse at the present session of the Legislature and hand out $448,000 of its wealth for the purpose of returning the money collected under the unconstitutional collateral inhetirance tax law. This item will be included in the general appropriation bill. Another unusual item of expense will be large expenditures for the feeble-minded at Skillman.

Senator Bradley said yesterday that the Appropriation Committee will be ready to report next week and that the committee will not cause any delay whatever at any time the Legislature wants to adjourn. The committee met three times this week and was in session again last night.

Eben Bennett has leased his house on West Sixth street to Mr. Shotwell and has removed to 141 Grove street, in the house formerly occupied by Mr. Riley, who has gone to Greenville.

—William Thompson, of Manning avenue, was given a surprise party at his home, Monday evening. There were guests from Brooklyn, New York, and this city. The evening was spent dancing and playing games.

Elks' League Postponements.

The Rahway and Elizabeth Elks League bowling team were scheduled to roll last night in Elizabeth, but the match was postponed until Monday, April 17. The Hoboken Elks were to have rolled a match on the alleys of the Queensboro Elks, but this affair was called off until Tuesday night, April 18.

GOLF.

Occasionolly some one rises to remark that golf is no longer a rich man's game; not even expensive. These assertions, however, are hardly borne out by the facts, and it may be added that one of the favorite topics among British golfers is the lavish expenditure of money in this country on the old Scottish game. The Englishman, when he reads of the outlays on clubhouses and links in this country, compares it with the expenditures at home and stands appalled at the contrast. A fair average sum to spend upon a clubhouse in England is $15,000.

Here it is not uncommon to spend $100,000 on a clubhouse, whereas the Britons would want to provide several for that amount. The inevitable result of this extravagance here is that the game becomes more costly to each individual. Furthermore, courses involve clubs in far greater expense than formerly. Golfers visit Myopia, Brookline, Baltusrol or Garden City and view the many wonderful creations in the way of hazards at those famous greens. Returning home, they impress their colleagues with the necessity of being up to date. Result—a meeting is called and the club votes to go ahead with improvements along new lines.

After the work has been done comes the paying for it. In a majority of cases the improvements are not covered by existing income, whereupon initiation fees and dues are raised in order to meet the deficit and it sometimes happens that in a year or two the process is repeated. It is little wonder, therefore, that dues of $75 and $100 have become quite common, instead of the $30 and $40 of ten years ago. It has been claimed that there is no help for all this, that golf in America is becoming more and more a game for the rich. If this is so, then there seems all the more need for city authorities to pay greater attention to the growing need of providing additional public links.

Eldon Miller, of Washington avenue, a student at Syracuse University, returned home yesterday for the Easter vacation.

SCHOOLS' LEGISLATION.

We are unable to see any merit in the arguments advanced by those who would defeat the aims of the public schools investigation committee which has presented to the Legislature a number of reform measures drawn to rectify the weaknesses of our public schools system. It is a quite sufficient guarantee that they receive the unqualified support of Governor Wilson, who has gone to the trouble to issue a special message calling attention to their importance. The average citizen, we take it, is willing to accept the judgment of the distinguished educator who occupies the State executive office in preference to those whose experience has been very limited and whose ranks as educators are almost insignificant. While those among the latter who object to the pending legislation have a right to their opinions the thoughtful citizen will be apt to consider the source well before taking issue with the program of the investigating committee and the Governor.

One of the chief objections of the enemies of the bills appears to be that the selection of a commissioner of schools need not be narrowed down to the confines of the State. This, however, seems to be one of the most excellent provisions, for why in the name of common sense should not New Jersey be allowed to go to the farthest end of the earth if necessary to get the right man for the position. When Chicago wanted a school superintendent, it did not adopt the foolish notion that the man must be a resident of that city or of the State of Illinois. It cast about and finally decided upon the former president of Brown University. Should New Jersey be prevented from going to Yale, Harvard or Oxford for whom the Governor considers best suited for this most responsible position?

In his message advocating the adoption of the bills, Governor Wilson says:

"The report is singularly complete. It is the result of an investigation which has attracted the attention of the whole State. The method of the investigation, its thoroughness and its results have won applause on all hands. No one can read the report now submitted without admiring the work which has produced it or without feeling that every recommendation it contains is sustained by reasons which are quite unanswerable.

"The State annually spends vast sums of money upon the schools, and yet has never had any means of making sure of how it was spent, with what wisdom, with what economy, with what careful attention to the objects for what it was intended to be used. The State cannot be said to have had any legal arrangements in this matter which deserved the name of system. The measures now pending before you will introduce system, and will introduce a very effective system. They will not deprive localities of their much prized autonomy and should not do so, but they will give the State opportunity to exercise a systematic supervision, and will afford means by which the public instruction of the State may be intelligently co-ordinated and directed.

"It has seldom happened that reforms of this sort could be put upon a more solid basis than these changes will have, as sustained by the report of the senate committee. I cannot too urgently commend them to your favorable attention. I think the judgment of every person familiar with matters of this kind, if addressed to this matter without bias, must recognize both the necessity and the desirability of effecting the reforms suggested. They are, without exception, admirable."

The arguments against the revision of schedule in the tariff bill as presented by the American Sheep Breeder in its March issue only go to confirm the exposure of the American Woolen Trust as made by Collier's Weekly, one of the very, very few periodicals whose editorial policy is not directed by its business office. We do not know what, if any, connection there may be between the woolen trust and the Sheep Breeder, but we do know after reading this trade journal that there is an organized effort being made to defeat the best interests of the people.

One would naturally think that people driving about in automobiles would have some respect for police regulations. Nine out of every ten, however, persist in violating the traffic rules in turning the corner at Park and North avenues. When a human life is destroyed probably these offenders will be roused to a realization of their duty.

Arraigned for Non-Support.

Theodore Wilson, of the borough, a carpenter, was arraigned before Justice Snape on a non-support charge preferred by his wife. He was compelled to furnish a bond for $200 to guarantee the payment of $10 a week to the complainant. The couple have seven children.

was decided to do this by a vote of 27 to 23. The church has a lot on Johnston avenue, near East Front street, given by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bettman with the understanding, it was said, that a chapel for the Italians be erected there. This matter has been in charge of a Ways and Means committee, which has been restricted in its work, that is not being permitted to solicite funds from among the church members. According to the action of last night's meeting the committee can now solicit anywhere, but cannot expend any money without the authority of the church. On motion of LeRoy Gates, the use of the Sunday-school was extended to the mision as at present.

Crescent Avenue.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, presided at the annual meeting of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last night in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie. He read the call for the meeting and proceeding along the usual lines reports were read from the various societies and chapels connected with the church and all the reports showed an encouraging condition everywhere.

Leander N. Lovell, John F. Harmon and Dr. E. W. Hedges were re-elected elders unanimously, the secretary casting a vote for the candidates. The same procedure re-elected J. F. Murray and T. F. Budlong deacons.

The reports included those of the Ladies' Aid Society, which expended $1,456.37 during the year; the Women's Missionary Society, whose receipts and expenditures reached a total of $1,268.57. The Sunshine Mission Band, and all other of the young people's societies showed gains in their work as did the McAll Missionary branch.

Reports of the work in the home Sunday school were read and showed that 350 children were on the roll with 11 officers and 133 teachers. Contributions received from the school, all of which is used in missionary work, amounted to $610.74. Howard Williams, who read this report, said that at the Christmas entertainment in the church 698 pupils were present, the largest number yet recorded. They included the children from the three chapels. A. W. Duxbury read the report of Bethel chapel and the pastor, Rev. F. D Tildon, told of the continued prosperity of his charge. He said the members of Bethel felt sincerely and regretfully the death of Mrs. S. A. Ginna, who he said had been one of their greatest helpers. The Sunday school is growing and its influence for good among the colored people is increasing.

G. Herbert Condict reported on Hope chapel and at the end said that the new pastor, Frederick L. Greene, had already endeared himself to the people of the chapel and every indication pointed to a successful pastorate. There are 303 members on the Hope chapel roll.

Rev. Mr. Green spoke briefly and appreciably of what the Crescent Avenue church had done for Hope chapel. He said the people of Hope feel very keenly the love they have for their "Mother" church, Crescent Avenue.

Warren chapel's report was read by Superintendent Gavett, who declared that during the past year $700 of the church mortgage had been paid off and that the outlook for the future was brilliant.

Treasurer Whitney of Crescent Avenue church, reported a total membership of 1,106, an increase of 30 over last year. The total of money raised during the year was $34,638.

Congregational

Preceding the business meeting at the Congregational church last night a bountiful supper was served by the Women's Association, at which more than two hundred sat down. Reports for the year showed an increase in all departments and the following were elected as trustees: F. A. Weeks, C. E. Steiner and E. L. Morgan. James McClymont was elected auditor and Thomas West clerk of the society. The deacons elected for two years were H. C. Nomer and A. W. Nielsen. The official board consists of L. W. Dunning, E. L. Suffern and R. M. Hooker.

Some discussion followed the elections as to the new choir and building plans. The first bond of $25 was sold last night nicely framed for $100.

Court Plainfield to Meet.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, will initiate two candidates and act on five applications at its meeting tonight. The entertainment committee which is planning for the banquet on May 12, will make a report and important business regarding the Supreme Court meeting in Toronto, May 2 will be transacted. Henry Hansen will represent the court at Toronto. No members of this court have joined Court Union, which was instituted this week, the majority coming from Court Watchung.

Sons of Veterans Install.

Division Commander F. G. Hanson, of Hoboken, installed these officers of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, last night: Captain, T. W. Clarkson; junior vice, E. E. Towney; senior vice, W. C. Smith, Jr.; secretary-treasurer, John B. Pudson. Members of the G. A. R. were present and after the business refreshments were served and there was a musical program by Albert Naylor.

THOMPSON WOULD LIKE TO BE SENATOR

Senator Ackerman, of this city, having announced that he will not be a candidate for re-election next fall, Asemblyman Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, does not hesitate to say that he will be a candidate for the position—all of which fully substantiates the news article published on Saturday last.

When interviewed by a reporter yesterday, Mr. Thompson said, "I am frank to say that I would consider it a distinction to represent Union county in the Senate in view of the long line of able men who have filled that position in this county in the past, and if my legislative record in the Assembly sufficiently approves itself to the voters of Union county to make them feel that I would worthily represent them in the Senate, I shall gladly be a candidate."

Assemblyman Thompson was elected in 1909 and re-elected in 1910. He has had a good record and has been successful in getting several bills through. His slaughter house bill is now in force, and, according to the office of the State Board of Health, the measure is effective. Mr. Thompson is the minority member of the Atlantic County Investigating Committee from this year's Legislature.

Mr. Thompson spoke in the highest terms of Senator Ackerman, and said that he felt it a great honor to be placed in a position to succeed so efficient a legislator.

SAMUEL LOYD, THE PUZZLE INVENTOR, DIES IN BROOKLYN

The funeral service of Samuel Loyd, the successful inventor of puzzles, was held last night at his home in Brooklyn, and the burial was in Maple Grove cemetery, Queens county. Mr. Loyd was a brother to Thomas Loyd and the Misses Loyd, of Washington avenue, the borough.

At the time of his death, Sunday-night, he was the head of a puzzle syndicate subscribed to by various newspapers, and he made a fortune through his inventions, one of the most popular of which was "Pigs in Clover."

Truant in Court.

Albert Brown, a small boy, was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver, in the borough court, this morning, charged with habitual truancy. He was sent back to school with a warning that a continuance of the practice would result in severe punishment.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Voorhees, of East Orange, spent yesterday with their niece, Mrs. Abram King, of Duer street.

Mrs. Richard Randolph, of West Third street, has returned home after an extended visit to her old home in Isle of Wight county, Virginia.

COULD PLAINFIELD'S Y. M. C. A. RAISE FNUDS?

Since the closing up of the campaign in Reading, Pa., on Monday, for the raising of $200,000 for a new Young Men's Christian Association building, which was eminently successful, the idea has begun to form itself that a similar campaign conducted in this city would have the result so much desired by the association here.

Under the management of Charles S. Ward, who has conducted no less than 200 similar campaigns all of which have been successes, there is a belief here that a new building so much needed by the local association can be secured. Mr. Ward has recently been instrumental in raising sums of $1,000,000 in Philadelphiaand Boston and other large sums in Cleveland, Paterson, Atlanta, Ga., and Camden. He started out to get $200,000 in Reading, but when the final returns were counted he found that the sum actually recorded as pledged was $216,964. It took him just ten days to raise the money.

Mr. Ward is field secretary of the international Y. M. C. A. Committee. He has a novel and interesting method of doing his work and in no instance has he failed to secure what he went after.

Many Plainfielders have watched the progress of the work in Reading and when the result was published this morning the question instantly arose, "Why cannot Plainfield do as well?"

AUGUSTUS SCHWARTZ FOR STATE SENATOR

Following the announcement of the candidacy of Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, for State Stnator, to succeed Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, who, it is said, will retire from legislative life after the present term, comes the rumor that former Assemblyman Augustus W. Schwartz, of Elizabeth, will also be a candidate. As Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, is said to be a candidate, this places three men in the field, although Senator Ackerman's retirement is not yet officially confirmed.

When the question was put to Mr. Schwartz last evening he smiled; It was the kind of smile that betokened many things—but not unconfirming.

Mr. Schwartz would not deny that he was to be a candidate, neither would be deny that his friends were urging him to become a candidate. When he was asked if he would enter the contest for Senator he only smiled, and the smile seemed like an affirmative one.

Former Assemblymen Schwartz served two terms in the State Legislature, he being defeated for re-election at the general election last fall, when the Democratic landslide buried two Republican Asembly candidates.

During his service as an Asemblyman he was the father of much legislation that affected Elizabeth. He was the sponsor of the bill that created the new Board of Excise and he was also responsible for getting the supplements to the city charter repealed. Both acts were hailed with welcome following their passage. Mr. Schwartz, as an Asemblyman, was known by both Republican and Democrats as a hard worker—a member who was always trying to fulfil the wishes of some constituent.

Mr. Schwartz was formerly a councilman from the Twelfth ward. His work in the Council was followed by his nomination for the Assembly.

He is president of the Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association, a prominent Elk and Mason, and belongs to many other fraternal organizations. His friends declare that his candidacy would be a strong one.

Some prominent Republicans believe that the retirement of Senator Ackerman is not yet assured. They claim that he should be a candidate to succeed himself and in such case it is probable that some, or even all, of the other Republican candidates would retire. An effort will be made, it is said, to induce Senator Ackerman to remain in legislative life for one more term.

BEAT UNION TOWNSHIP-NEWARK ANNEXATION.

Union county representatives objected yesterday to Mr. McGowan's bill, House 550, to annex Union township, in Union county, to Newark, and the measure was lost, 33 to 5. Both Asemblymen McLoughlin and Thompson spoke against it. The former was especially vigorous and said he hoped the House would bury the bill "the way the Scotchman buried the Devil—head downwards, so that the more he scratched the deeper he went."

Mr. Thompson objected to the haste with which the bill came up, it having been introduced only last week. He objected also to the breaking up of the county line.

Mr. McGowan stated that the measure was introduced at the request of the township people.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The congregation of the First Presbyterian church held the annual meeting for the transaction of all business last night. The reports presented showed that the church had enjoyed the best year of its history. The total receipts, exclusive of a balance of $787, were $5,553.74. This is $800 more than was raised the previous year. The expenditures were $5,686.95, leaving a balance of $653.80. The salary of the pastor, Rev. Ernest R. Brown, was increased $100. B. J. Gardner and Fowler Vail were elected trustees and F. R Wynkoop, A. F. Gaston and T. W Day as auditing committee. F. R. Wynkoop presided as chairman of the meeting and J. Travis Sutphen secretary.

BROADER FIRE MARSHALL BILL.

Almost at the last minute to enable it to become a law this year, a bill establishing the office of fire marshal in this State, somewhat on the plan followed in Ohio, was introduced in the Assembly yesterday.

The bill was offered by Assemblyman Balentine and it is understood that it was drafted after a careful study of the Ohio law and the bill now pending in New York.

"That is good," said an insurance man to whom the news was conveyed. "Although the action is late, the law is so desirable, means so much both in the concrete and abstract, that I believe concerted action will bring about its passage at this session.

The bill is entitled "An act establishing the office of fire marshal, defining his powers and duties and providing for his compensation and the maintenance of his office."

It authorizes the Governor to appoint a fire marshal within thirty days after the law takes effect, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. No specific term is fixed for tenure in office, but it is provided that he may be removed at any time by the Governor for cause.

HAUNTS THE HORN

The Phantom Ship That Shows Itself Near the Cape.

IT IS REALLY A HUGE ROCK.

But to Vessels Passing Through the Strait of Le Maire It Appears to Be a Bark Running Under Short Sail. Other Rock Ship Formations.

The "phantom ship" seen in the vicinity of Cape Horn is, as has been proved by the investigation of various hydrographic bureaus, nothing more or less than a rock which under certain atmospheric conditions bears a deceptive resemblance to a ship.

Very often vessels coming from Europe to the west by way of Cape Horn have been startled to see what appeared to be a derelict with the water washing over her deck. If the sailors were of an imaginative turn they would invest the unknown ship with ghostly qualities and call her the Flying Dutchman or sometimes the "ghost ship" of Le Maire, from the strait of that name, where she was usually seen.

One of the stories which have been longest remembered is that of the ill fated Crown of Italy, which sighted the supposed derelict and subsequently went ashore. The Crown of Italy was standing close to the jagged black rocks at the entrance to the strait of Le Maire when she sighted what seemed to be a waterlogged bark drifting on the rocks of the strait. Many other ships rounding the Horn have seen a similar apparition, and the various hydrographic offices of the world have received many reports to that effect.

Some years ago the Norwegian bark Servia got into Seattle with the tale of a phantom ship that almost exactly corresponded to that given by the Crown of Italy. The second officer of the Norwegian vessel declared that he had seen a derelict with sails set and decks awash drifting in through the strait. It was this report that led our government officers to make public the declaration that the phantom ship was nothing but a combination of rocks and shadows.

The numerous reports of derelicts or ghost ships always appearing in the same place led even the Argentine government to look into the matter. A tender was sent out from the nearby lighthouse with the object of making an investigation, and it was found that the apparition was due to a strange freak of nature. Among the black jagged rocks that line both sides of the strait of Le Maire there is one in particular which, under certain atmospheric conditions, bears a deceptive likeness to a ship. The formation of the rocks and the shadows they cast combine to produce the effect of a bark running under short sail.

The passage through the strait of Le Maire is not often made. Steamers shorten the route by going through the strait of Magellan, while sailing vessels usually prefer to be entirely on the safe side by going still farther south and rounding the Horn itself. Only under the most favorable conditions of weather do they slip through the strait of Le Maire on the outward trip, going toward the southwest, but never when bound for the north. For this reason many old sailors have never met the ghost ship or the rock ship.

Those who have seen it give a minute description of the rock and testify to its striking resemblance to a ship. It seems to be standing head on, pointing to the south and low in the water. The sails are shortened as they would be in what sailors call half a gale. The whole formation is very dark, as if the hull were painted black and the sails weather beaten. It has three masts and is higher on the fore than on the main. Upon coming on the side of the vessel the illusion vanishes and the whole thing resolves itself into a conglomeration of black rocks. The perpetual fog of these regions helps, of course, to befuddle the vision.

The rock looking like a ship is by no means a rare natural formation. Almost every sailor has seen one in some part of the world. In the Clipperton islands there is a great white rock looking like a three masted schooner leaning on the wind with her royals set and the sun shining on her white sails.

About six or seven miles west of Honolulu there is a rock known as French Frigate rock because once upon a time a French frigate went ashore on it. The cliffs looked so much like a ship that the frigate was deceived and thought she was meeting another vessel.

St. Paul island, in the middle of the Atlantic, is said to look very much like a ship when approached from a certain direction, but it is a place that mariners prefer to give a wide berth.—Harper's Weekly.

Her Unalterable Decision.

To the new cook Mrs. Cross elaborately explained a certain method of preparing potatoes greatly approved of by the family. The cook listened to the directions with apparent attention.

"And now, do you quite understand, Delia?" asked Mrs. Cross in conclusion.

"I do, mum," was the response, and then, in a firm tone that admitted of no contradiction, she added, "But it's biled potatoes ye'll eat."

"Happy the man who learns the very wide chasm that lies between his wishes and his powers."—Goethe.

WHY THE WIND BLOWS.

The Basic Principle, the Tendency of Hot Airs to Rise.

The wind, like other things of everyday life, rarely invites notice unless it is unusually "high," and rarely do we hear the questions, "Why does the wind blow?" "Why doesn't the wind blow?"

What is this wind that rushes "out of the nowhere into the here?" Why should it blow at all, or why sometimes so gently and at other times with the resistless force of the hurricane?

The wind could have no power, it could not even exist, if the air had no weight, this weight having been shown to be about thirty-one grains for each hundred cubic inches of air. When air is put in motion the effect is like that obtained by throwing a ball against an object. The harder you throw the ball the harder it will strike, and the greater the number of balls thrown at one time the greater will be the force of the blow. When the wind is blowing it strikes what it blows against, and the harder it blows (that is, the greater the speed of the air) the harder it will strike against the resisting object.

What causes the wind to blow or why the air should be in motion is not easy to explain. Simply stated, it is caused by the tendency of hot air to rise and thus to form a partial vacuum into which the cooler surrounding air rushes, in much the same way as water will rush downward to seek its level. If the earth were smooth, if it did not rotate and if there were no sun the air would be motionless. When the sun shines on a wide space of the earth the air of that region becomes heated, this great volume of warm air rises and the cooler, heavier surrounding air flows in to take its place. As the earth rotates there tends to be formed a ring of heated and rising air with currents inflowing at the bottom and at both sides. This is the condition that prevails near the equator and causes the trade winds that blow so steadily. The rotation of the earth causes the wind south of the equator to flow toward the northwest and that north of this line to flow toward the southwest.—St. Nicholas.

THE CLOWN'S FACE.

Pathetic Incident From Which the Use of Black Lines Sprang.

"Every once in awhile," says a prominent comedian, "I am asked by some newspaper or magazine to tell of the actual feelings of a man who is called on to appear before the public as a continuous funmaker. Usually I reply by calling attention to the fact that one of the greatest tragedies of the theater is connected with the clown.

"In the time of Louis XIV. there was a famous clown known as 'Fat William' (Gros Guillaume), who held his audiences in the Rue Favari by his wonderful eccentricities of gesture, voice and mimicry. One night, so the legend runs, his wife was dying, and he was still obliged to go on and entertain the clanking, clashing, ribald Parisian mob that stood in the pit. It was in the days before there were seats in the orchestra.

"Like all imitators of the Italian 'commedia,' his face was whitened with flour. Under the burden of his great domestic sorrow he was stupid and slow in his performance, and in order to stir him up his companion on the stage hit him with a resounding whack with a heavy cane. The combination of his sentimental troubles and the physical pain caused Gros Guillaume to weep. As the tears streamed down over his whitened face the aspect was so comical that the audience cheered and laughed itself into hysterics. And ever since then every clown has black lines on his whitened face.

"Many are the black lines on the face of the actor that the audience knows not of."—Chicago Tribune.

Dickens as a Reporter.

Dickens once described the conditions under which he pursued the calling of a reporter—conditions, he said, of which his successors could have no adequate idea. On one occasion he transcribed his shorthand notes of important election speeches, he said, on the palm of his hand, by the light of a dark lantern, in a postchaise and four galloping through a wild country at the dead of night at the then surprising rate of fifteen miles an hour. He once, in the castle yard at Exeter, took an election speech of Lord Russell in the midst of a lively fight.—Westminster Gazette.

Pure Reading Matter.

"One of the funniest requests I ever got," the advertising manager told us, "was from a local dry goods merchant. He said, 'I want this advertisement put in a part of the paper where women will be sure to read it.'

"'Great Scott, man!' I said. 'Don't you know that when we have some pure reading matter that we want women to be sure to see we put it next to a dry goods advertisement?'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

An Ox Hide.

"Thomas," said the professor to a pupil in the junior class in chemistry, "mention an oxide."

"Leather," replied Thomas.

"What is leather an oxide of?" asked the professor.

"An oxide of beef," answered the bright youngster.—Chicago News.

Called Her Bluff

"You are the first man I ever permitted to kiss me."

"And you are the first girl I ever kissed. Will you marry me?"

"I wouldn't marry a liar."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Topic.—The spirit of the resurrection.—Rom. vi. 1-14. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The saddest day that this world ever saw was the day that the body of Jesus lay in the tomb of Joseph's garden. The gladdest day that this world ever saw was when the angel of the resurrection proclaimed, "He is not here; He is risen." No man can say how much that proclamation has meant and through all eternity shall mean to the sinning and dying sons of men. But we know that that first Easter message has answered the deepest yearnings of the human heart. It has turned man's night of ignorance and uncertainty into the brightness of the morning. It has emancipated the believing soul from the fear of death. It has flooded the world with the light of a new hope and a new life.

1. The spirit of the resurrection is the spirit of joy. If it be true that no hour is more solemn than that in which the bodily powers fail, the fluttering pulse ceases to beat, the cold stillness settles upon the features so lately wreathed in smiles; if there is no corruption to be compared with the corruption of the tomb and no sorrow with the breaking of the ties of love, then where shall we look for a greater joy than to the message of the angel who stands by the tomb of our Lord? In the light of the beautiful Easter message no longer does death appear as a terrible calamity, nor does the grave drip with horrors, nor does a man leaving the world enter into a black and silent eternity. But death appears as an angel from heaven, and the grave is the place where Jesus giveth his beloved sleep. Dying, a man goes home—home to the Father. Easter is the day of days. No other festival has so much joy in its keeping. In our Scriptural lesson Paul makes the believer one with his Lord. We may not understand all the mystery. But we can enter into the gladness of Paul's faith when he exclaims, "If we died with Christ we believe that we shall also live with Him." Is not any message which brings such glorious news a message of joy?

2. The spirit of Easter is also the spirit of power. We are no longer the bond slaves of sin and death, for by His dying and resurrection Christ has delivered us. The power that raised Christ from the dead is working in us, and it will defy all those forces of the world, the flesh and the devil which serve to make a good and true life impossible for us in this sinful world. We may walk in newness of life if we yield ourselves to the working of this power. It is no longer I, but Christ, that liveth in me. What a wonderful truth it is! I am weak, I am sinful, I am subject to death but Christ is divinely strong. Christ dies for my sins; Christ overcomes death on my behalf. Henceforth not in my weakness, but in Christ's strength; not in bondage to sin, but as an instrument of righteousness unto God; not as the slave of death, but as possessing the power of an endless life, am I to live my life in this world. May this Easter, with all its messages of joy and power, lead us to open our hearts anew to the spirit of Christ that he may reign supremely within us and make our lives His own.

An Invitation From Japan.

Our Japanese friends take long looks ahead, as is shown by the fact that they have invited the World's Christian Endeavor union to hold its convention in 1917 in Japan. The invitation reads as follows:

The year 1917 is a most important year in Japan, because the semicentennial anniversary of the coronation of the present Emperor Mutsuhito will be observed and the World's Industrial exhibition will be held in Tokyo during that year. These two things alone will no doubt call together many people to Japan from every part of the world, and that is the reason why we are especially anxious to have a great Christian Endeavor gathering in Japan during that year. We believe there will be many Endeavorers abroad who will come to Japan to attend or see those two special occasions besides the Christian Endeavor convention.

We hope you will take this matter into your careful consideration and find some way to grant and realize our earnest desire.

Representing 4,000 Endeavorers in the empire, we are TOKIYUKI OSADA, President.
TORAJI MAKINO, Treasurer.
TATSU SAWAYA, General Secretary.
The Japan Union of Christian Endeavor.

Christian Endeavor In Europe.

On the continent of Europe Christian Endeavor has held steadily on its widening way. Except in France and possibly Austria, there has been no backward step, while some of the countries have forged ahead. Even in the countries mentioned the decline has been more seeming than real.

The German national convention, held in October, was particularly strong and helpful.

The following are the numbers of societies reported by some of the European countries:

France, 83; Germany, 440; Finland, 41; Hungary, 14; Italy, 19; Norway, 60; Spain, 48; Switzerland, 43.—Francis E. Clark.

Dr. Baer's Advice.

President John Willis Baer, former general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, who conducted the exercises at the funeral of Arch Hoxsey, the aviator, advised in his sermon that all airmen should devote themselves wholly to the [illegible] of aviation and abjure the sensational.

CHAPTER X.

The Erinna was steaming quietly down the channel in a flat calm, at the lazy rate of 12 knots an hour, presumably in order to save her coal, for she could run 16 when her owner liked, and he was not usually fond of going slow. Though September was at hand, and Guernsey was already on the port quarter, the sea was motionless and not so much as a cat's paw stirred the still blue water; but the steamer's own way made a pleasant draught that fanned the faces of Logotheti and Baraka as they lay in their long chairs under the double awning outside the deckhouse.

The Tartar girl wore a skirt and jacket of dark blue yachting serge, which did not fit badly considering that they had been bought ready-made by Logotheti's man. She had little white tennis shoes on her feet, which were crossed one over the other on the deck chair, but instead of wearing a hat she had bound a dove-colored motor veil on her head by a single thick gold cord, in the Asiatic way, and the thin folds hung down on each side, and lay on her shoulders, shading her face, and the breeze stirred them. Logotheti's valet had been sent out in a taximeter, provided with a few measurements and plenty of cash, and commissioned to buy everything that a girl who had nothing at all to wear, visible or invisible, could possibly need. He was also instructed to find a maid who could speak Tartar, or at least a little Turkish.

After five hours he had come back with a heavy load of boxes of all shapes and sizes and the required maid. You can find anything in a great city, if you know how to look for it, and he had discovered through an agency a girl from Trebizonde who had been caught at 12 years old by missionaries, brought to England and educated to go into service; she spoke English very prettily, and had not altogether forgotten the lingua franca of Asia.

The consequence of her presence was that Baraka was dressed with great neatness and care, and looked very presentable, though her clothes were only ready-made things, bought by a man-servant, who had only her height and the size of her waist to guide him. Logotheti watched her delicate, energetic profile, admiring the curves of her closed lips, and the willful turning up of her little chin. She was more than very pretty now, he thought, and he was quietly amused at his own audacity in taking her to sea alone with him, almost on the eve of his marriage. It was especially diverting to think of what the proper people would say if they knew it, and to contrast the intentions they would certainly attribute to him with the perfectly honorable ones he entertained.

As for Baraka, it never occurred to her that she was not as safe with him as she had been in her father's house in the little white town far away, nearly three years ago; and besides, her steel bodkin with the silver handle had been given back to her, and she could feel it in its place when she pressed her left hand to her side.

Logotheti has been first of all preoccupied about getting Baraka out of England without attracting attention, and then for her comfort and recovery from the strain and suffering of the last few days. As for that, she was like a healthy young animal, and as soon as she had a chance she had fallen so sound asleep that she had not waked for 12 hours. Logotheti's intent was to take her to Paris by a roundabout way, and establish her under some proper sort of protection. Margaret was still in Germany, but would soon return to France, and he had almost made up his mind to ask her advice, not dreaming that in such a case she could really deem anything he did an unpardonable offence. He had always laughed at the conventionalities of European life, and had paid very little heed to them when they stood in his way.

He had been on deck a long time that day, but Baraka had only been established in her chair a few minutes. As yet he had hardly talked with her of anything but the necessary preparations for the journey, and she had trusted him entirely, being so worn out with fatigue and bodily discomfort that she was already half asleep when he had at last brought her aboard, late on the previous night. Before the yacht had sailed he had received Van Torp's telegram informing him that Kralinsky was at Bayreuth; for his secretary had sat up till two in the morning to telegraph him the latest news and forward any message that came, and Van Torp's had been amongst the number.

"I have something of importance to tell you," Logotheti said.

Baraka prepared herself against betraying surprise by letting her lids droop a little, but that was all.

"Speak," she answered. "I desire knowledge more than gold."

"You are wise," said the Greek gravely. "No doubt you remember the rich man Van Torp, for whom I gave you a letter, and whom you had seen on the day you were arrested."

"Van Torp." Baraka pronounced the name distinctly, and nodded. "Yes, I remember him well. He knows where the man is whom I seek, and he wrote the address for me. I have it. You will take me there in your ship, and I shall find him."

"If you find him, what shall you say to him?" Logotheti asked.

"Few words. These perhaps: 'You left me to die, but I am not dead, I am here. Through me you are a rich, great man. The rubies are my marriage portion, which you have taken. Now you must be my husband.' That is all. Few words."

"It is your right," Logotheti answered. "But he will not marry you."

"Then he shall die," replied Baraka, as quietly as if she were saying that he should go for a walk.

"If you kill him, the laws of that country may take your life," objected the Greek.

"That will be my portion," the girl answered, with profound indifference.

"You only have one life," Logotheti observed. "It is yours to throw away. But the man you seek is not in that country. Van Torp has telegraphed me that he is much nearer. Nevertheless, if you mean to kill him, I will not take you to him, as I intended to do."

Baraka's face had changed, though she had been determined not to betray surprise at anything he said; she turned to him, and fixed her eyes on his, and he saw her lashes quiver.

"You will tell me where he is," she said anxiously. "If you will not take me, I will go alone with Spiro. I have been in many countries with no other help. I can go there also, where he is. You will tell me."

"Not if you mean to murder him," said Logotheti, and she saw that he was in earnest.

"But if he will not be my husband, what can I do, if I do not kill him?" She asked the question in evident good faith.

"If I were you, I should make him share the rubies and the money with you, and then I would leave him to himself."

"But you do not understand," Baraka protested. "He is young, he is beautiful, he is rich. He will take some other woman for his wife, if I leave him. You see, he must die, there is no other way. If he will not marry me, it is his portion. Why do you talk? Have I not come across the world from the Altai, by Samarkand and Tiflis, as far as England, to find him and marry him? Is it nothing that I have done, a Tartar girl alone, with no friend but a bag of precious stones that any strong thief might have taken from me? Is the danger nothing? The travel nothing? Is it nothing that I have gone about like a shameless one, with my face uncovered, dressed in a man's clothes? That I have cut my hair, my beautiful black hair, is that as nothing, too? That I have been in an English prison? That I have been called a thief? I have suffered all these things to find him, and if I come to him at last, and he will not be my husband, shall he live and take another woman? You are a great man, it is true. But you do not understand. You are only a Frank, after all! That little maid you have brought for me would understand me better, though she has been taught for six years by Christians. She is a good girl. She says that in all that time she has never once forgotten to say the Fatiheh three times a day, and to say 'el hamdu illah' to herself after she has eaten! She would understand. I know she would. But you, never!"

The exquisite little aquiline features wore a look of unutterable contempt.

"If I were you," said Logotheti, smiling, "I would not tell her what you are going to do."

"You see!" cried Baraka, almost angrily. "You do not understand. A servant! Shall I tell my heart to my handmaid, and my secret thoughts to a hired man? I tell you, because you are a friend, though you have no understanding of us. My father feeds many flocks, and has many bondmen and bondwomen, whom he beats when it pleases him, and can put to death if he likes. He also knows the mine of rubies, as his father did before him, and when he desires gold he takes one to Tashkent, or even to Samarkand, a long journey, and sells it to the Russians. He is a great man. If he would bring a camel bag full of precious stones to Europe he could be one of the greatest men in the world. And you think that my father's daughter would open her heart to one of her servants? I said well that you do not understand!"

Logotheti looked quietly at the slim young thing in a ready-made blue serge frock, who said such things as a Lady Clara Vere de Vere would scarcely dare to say above her breath in these democratic days; and he watched the noble little features, and the small white hands, that had come down to her through generations of chieftains, since the days when the primeval shepherds of the world counted the stars in the plains of Kaf.

He himself, with his long Greek descent, was an aristocrat to the marrow, and smiled at the claims of men who traced their families back to the Crusaders. With the help of a legend or two and half a myth, he could almost make himself a far descendant of the Tyndaridae. But what was that compared with the pedigree of the little thing in a blue serge frock? Her race went back to a time before Hesiod, before Homer, to a date that might be found in the annals of Egypt, but nowhere else in all the dim traditions of human history.

"No," he said, after a long pause, "I begin to understand. You had not told me that your father was a great man, and that his sires before him had joined hand to hand, from the hand of Adam himself."

This polite speech, delivered in his best Tartar, though with sundry Turkish terminations and accents, somewhat mollified Baraka, and she pushed her little head backwards and upwards against the top of the deck chair, as if she was drawing herself up with pride. Also, not being used to European skirts, she stuck out one tiny foot a little further across the other, as she stretched herself, and she indiscreetly showed a pale-yellow silk ankle, round which she could have easily made her thumb meet her second finger. Logotheti glanced at it.

"You will never understand," she said, but her tone had relented, and she made a concession. "If you will take me to him, and if he will not be my husband, I will let Spiro kill him."

"That might be better," Logotheti answered with extreme gravity, for he was quite sure that Spiro would never kill anybody. "If you will take an oath which I shall dictate, and swear to let Spiro do it, I will take you to the man you seek."

"What must be, must be," Baraka said in a tone of resignation. "When he is dead, Spiro can also kill me and take the rubies and the money."

"That would be a pity," observed the Greek, thoughtfully.

"Why a pity? It will be my portion. I will not kill myself because then I should go to hell-fire, but Spiro can do it very well. Why should I still live, then?"

"Because you are young and beautiful and rich enough to be very happy. Do you never look at your face in the mirror? The eyes of Baraka are like the pools of paradise, when the moon rose upon them the first time, her waist is as slender as a young willow sapling that bends to the breath of a spring breeze, her mouth is a dark rose from Gulistan—"

But Baraka interrupted him with a faint smile.

"You speak emptiness," she said quietly. "What is the oath, that I may swear it? Shall I take Allah, and the prophet, and the Angel Israfil to witness that I will keep my word? Shall I prick my hand and let the drops fall into your two hands that you may drink them? What shall I do and say? I am ready."

"You must swear an oath that my fathers swore before there were Christians or Mussulmen in the world when the old gods were still great."

"Speak. I will repeat any words you like. Is it a very solemn oath?"

"It is the most solemn that ever was sworn, for it is the oath of the gods themselves. I shall give it to you slowly, and you must try to pronounce it right, word by word, holding out your hands like this, with the palms downwards."

"You Will Never Understand," She Said.

"I am ready," said Baraka, doing as he bade her.

He quoted in Greek the oath that Hypnos dictates to Hera in the "Iliad," and Baraka repeated each word, pronouncing as well as she could.

"I swear by the inviolable water of the Styx, and I lay one hand upon the all-nourishing earth, the other on the sparkling sea, that all the gods below may be our witnesses, even they that stand round about Kronos. Thus I swear!"

As he had anticipated, Baraka was much more impressed by the importance of the words she did not understand than if she had bound herself by any oath familiar to her.

"I am sorry," she said, "but what is done is done, and you would have it so."

She pressed her hand gently to her left side and felt the long steel bodkin, and sighed regretfully.

"You have sworn an oath that no man would dare to break," said Logotheti solemnly. "A man would rather kill pigs on the graves of his father and his mother than break it."

"I shall keep my word. Only take me quickly where I would be."

Logotheti produced a whistle from his pocket and blew on it, and a quartermaster answered the call, and was sent for the captain, who came in a few moments.

"Head her about for Jersey and Carterets, captain," said the owner. "The sea is as flat as a board, and we will land there. You can go on to the Mediterranean without coaling, can you not?"

The captain said he could coal at Gibraltar, if necessary.

"Then take her to Naples, please, and wait for instructions."

Baraka understood nothing, but within two minutes she saw that the yacht was changing her course, for the afternoon sun was all at once pouring in on the deck, just beyond the end of her chair. She was satisfied, and nodded her approval.

"When shall we reach that place?" she asked lazily, and she turned her face to Logotheti.

"Allah knows," he answered gravely.

She had been so well used to hearing that answer to all sorts of questions since she had been a child that she thought nothing of it, and waited awhile before speaking again. Her eyes studied the man's face almost unconsciously. He now wore a fez instead of a yachting cap, and it changed his expression. He no longer looked in the least like a European. The handsome red felt glowed like blood in the evening light, and the long black silk tassel hung backwards with a dashing air. There was something about him that reminded Baraka of Saad, and Saad had been a handsome man, even in her eyes, until the traveler had come to her father's house with his blue eyes and golden beard. But Saad had only seen her unveiled face once, and that was the last thing he saw when the ball from the Mauser went through his forehead.

"I mean," she asked after some time, "shall we be there to-morrow? or the next day? I see no land on this side; is there any on the other?"

"No," Logotheti answered, "there is no land near. Perhaps, far off, we might see a small island."

"Is that the place?" Baraka began to be interested at last.

"The place is far away. You must have patience. All hurry comes from Satan."

"I am not impatient," the girl answered mildly. "I am glad to rest in your ship, for I was very tired, more tired than I ever was when I was a child, and used to climb up the foothills to see Altai better. It is good to be in your ship for a while, and after that, what shall be, will be. It is Allah that knows."

"That is the truth," responded the Greek. "Allah knows. I said so just now. But I will tell you what I have decided, if you will listen."

"I listen."

"It is better that you should rest several days after all your weariness, and the man you seek will not run away, for he does not know that you are so near."

"But he may take another woman," Baraka objected, growing earnest at once. "Perhaps he has already! Then there will be two instead of one."

"Spiro," said Logotheti, with perfect truth, "would as soon kill two as one, I am sure, for he is a good servant. It will be the same to him. You call me a great man and a king; I am not a king, for I have no kingdom, though some kingdoms would like to have as much ready money as I. But here, on the ship, I am the master, not only because it is mine, and because I choose to command, but because the men are bound by English law to obey me; and if they should refuse and overpower me, and take my ship where I did not wish to go, the laws of all nations would give me the right to put them all into prison at once, for a long time. Therefore when I say, 'Go to a certain place,' they take the ship there, according to their knowledge, for they are trained to that business and can guide the vessel towards any place in the world, though they cannot see land till they reach it. Do you understand all these things?

"I understand," Baraka answered, smiling. "But I am not bound to obey you, and at least I can beg you to do what I ask, and I think you will do it."

Her voice grew suddenly soft, and almost tender, for though she was only a Tartar girl, and very young and slim, she was a woman. Eve had not had long experience of talking when she explained to Adam the properties of apples.

Logotheti answered her smile and her tone.

P.H.S. WINS AFTER 10 INNING STRIFE

Without their regular pitcher, the local High School boys put up a great game against the Cranford High nine yesterday afternoon at Crescent Oval. Terry was suffering from a sore arm and could not go on the mound. Three substitute pitchers were used and after a ten inning tussel victory perched on the banners of the home team.

It was the first game of the season played on the local grounds in the regular schedule and a big band of rooters of both sexes was on hand to encourage P. H. S. "Shake" Clarke was the "big smoke" of the game. Out of five times at the bat he made three singles and a two-bagger and was directly concerned in nearly every run scored for the home team. Good and Nash as usual contributed some telling bingles when they would do the most good and taken all together the local boys are to be congratulated on their victory. Cranford did some hitting, too, but not quite enough to overcome the stinging swats of Plainfield.

The lineup: Plainfield H. S.—Vandeventer, Grisley, Nash, Mills, Clark, Hanrahan, Hatfield, Barone, Runyon, Carty Good, Davenport and Nelson.

Cranford—Lawrence, Tool, Oakeyey, Hamilton, Bell, Gilmore, Hopkins, Halsey.

Umpire, Bert Trotter; time of game two hours.

A. R. LEWIS BURIED IN HILLSIDE AT HIS REQUEST

The remains of Alexander R. Lewis, who was secretary of the Johnson & Johnson Company, New Brunswick, were interred in Hillside cemetery, yesterday, in accordace with the request of Mr. Lewis, who had selected a spot inthe beautiful grounds for his last resting place. Mr. Lewis died at his home in Metuchen, Sunday, and the funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at the late home. Rev. John F. Denton, rector of the Episcopal church, Metuchen, assisted by Rev. E. B. Joyce, of New Brunswick, officiated.

The large manufacturing concern at New Brunswick with which Mr. Lewis was connected, was closed during the time of the funeral. Officials of the company served as honorary pall-bearers at the funeral. Mr. Lewis had been connected with the New Brunswick concern for many years. The floral tributes were of unusual beauty and numerous.

CHARITY IN MARCH

Society's Report Gives Some Idea of the Relief Work Being Done.

CASES HANDLED TOTAL 135.

In the One Month There Were 27 Cases of Tuberculosis Alone—How Problems are Met by the Organization.

There was no "let-up" in the regular stress of winter work during the month of March in the activities of the Charity Organization Society. During the month 135 cases were handled and $223.86 expended in material relief. This relief was spent on only a few cases, the aim of the society being to provide adequately and in such a manner that the help may put the family permanently on its feet. Clothing, coal, rent, milk and groceries were the chief necessities, also two pairs of glasses for school children and eleven prescriptions, filled gratuitously by the druggists, for the sick. There were 155 calls from applicants at the office of the society and 264 persons called to consult with the secretaries on questions of relief. The secretaries made 374 calls and wrote 174 letters, receiving 170. Twenty-two volunteer visitors assisted the secretaries in the care of families and there was an aggregate attendance of 78 at committee meetings during the month.

Statistics give only a vague idea of the human side of the work of the society. For instance, it is only slightly startling to know there were 27 cases of tuberculosis on the books during March. But when one knows that one of these cases, the mother of four children, formerly worked in a factory, and that by paying her rent the society is able to keep the woman at home, the question of tuberculosis becomes concrete. In another case the father and fifteen-year-old son are both tubercular. This family has been removed to a comfortable shack on the mountainside, extra nourishment provided, and both cases are doing well. All dangers of infection to the community have also been removed. The Anti-Tuberculosis League bears half the expenses of this case. Doubtless before long, however, the city will feel the obligation for the sake of all, to assume the care of such cases.

The cases of children call for the assistance of the society as emphatically as does tuberculosis. One pathetic instance was a little girl of four years who had been deserted by her parents, both of the latter living at present in the red-light districts of different cities. The child was in a wretched home of relatives who heeded no warnings to improve conditions. Through the overseer of the poor, the society had the little girl turned over to the State Board of Children's Guardians, which will find a good home for her.

The converse of this case was that of a little girl who had been in an institution for several years at the expense of private charity. The home asked the society to attempt to find the mother of the child. This was done, and the girl is now in her own home where she will be carefully watched to see that she is not neglected. Her mother's home is, of course, better than even the best of institutions unless perverted by neglect. From such a poor home the society this month had the satisfaction of removing another girl, of fifteen years, and finding her a good place in service. Here she is very happy and giving value received. Still another case, this one a boy of thirteen years, was found to be working at night and consequently too tired to go to school regularly. He has been removed from the situation and his mother is being given the amount weekly which he formerly made.

A third type of case which often calls for all the resources at command is that of the family which through misfortune or wrong-doing has drifted into low standards and wretched living. One such family of three had reached almost the bottom of the social ladder through the man's intemperance and the woman's careless treatment of "furnished rooms." A man "friendly-visitor" was put "on the job," the saloons were warned not to sell the man liquor, and after a short time the family was able to take a house of their own. They were assisted in furnishing it and at present the home is a great pleasure to see. The man's time at leisure is spent about the house and garden. Almost the whole credit for this transformation is due the man who undertook to be a "friend" and has so proven. There are other families in need of such a help and it seems as though the society should not have to ask in vain for such volunteers. In some places the churches are all repre-

IMPRESSIVE MUSIC

Maunder's "Olivet to Calvary" Sung by First Baptist Chorus Choir.

HOWARD CASE AS DIRECTOR.

The Solo Parts Taken By the Misses Hazel Hatfield and Ruth Harris and William Holmes and George Smith.

Maunder's cantata, "Olivet to Calvary," together with other selections of a similar character, was given at the First Baptist church, last night, by the chorus choir under the direction of Howard Case, organist and choirmaster. The edifice was filled with worshippers and all were impressed with this beautiful work which was rendered superbly by the soloists and the well-trained chorus.

The choir was assisted by Mrs. Edith Davies Jones, harpist, and Udo Gossweiler, 'cellist, and the instrumental accompaniment in the special numbers, as well as the cantata, was delightful, adding greatly to the effectiveness of the rendition. The music of the cantata is beautiful and the words deeply spiritual, and a more appropriate work for Holy Week could not have been chosen.

The solo parts were taken by Miss Ruth Harris, soprano; Miss Hazel Hatfield, contralto; William Holmes, baritone, and George Smith, tenor, and if anything their work was better than ever. Miss Harris, whose voice is of unusual sweetness and strength, gave a delightful rendition of her several parts, always singing true and with great effect. Miss Hatfield had several solo parts, and her singing was pleasing to the large congregation.

Mr. Holmes had many solo parts in the cantata and it was remarked that his voice was never heard to better advantage. He sang with that expression for which he is noted, and never failed once in the rendition. Mr. Smith's voice was pleasing, as usual, his interpretation of the parts assigned him, being all that one could desire. Under the careful training of Mr. Case the chorus displayed unusual strength and harmony and much praise is due both Mr. Case and the chorus. The work of the assisting artists was of the highest order throughout.

The service opened with "Andante Religieuse," Thome, organ, harp and violoncello, followed by Passion music from Haydn by the chorus and a pleasing contralto solo of a work by Gounod, by Miss Hatfield. The Scripture lesson and prayer was by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss and this part was concluded with a selection, "Meditation," Massenet, organ, harp and violoncello.

Then followed the rendition of the cantata, opening with a selection by the chorus, "On the Way to Jerusalem;" "Before Jerusalem," a recitative for tenor and baritone; "In the Temple," recietative for tenor and baritone, followed by a soprano solo and chorus. "The Mount of Olives," included a beautiful tenor solo and chorus, followed by a soprano solo, effectively rendered by Miss Harris, and then a baritone solo by Mr. Holmes and chorus.

The cantata at this point was interspersed by the singing of a hymn, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," by the congregation. The subdivisions and selections by the soloists and chorus follow: "A New Commandment," recitative for baritone; "Arietta," chorus; "Gethsemane," recitative for baritone; "Betrayed and Forsaken," chorus; recitative for tenor; "Before Pilate," chorus; "The March to Calvary," chorus; "Calvary," recitative for baritone; soprano solo and chorus. The service was concluded with the singing of "In the Cross of Christ I Glory," by the congregation.

On Wireless Trip.

Charles G. August, of West Fourth street, secretary of the New Jersey Wireless Association leaves this evening for Easton, Pa., where he expects to organize an association which will become affiliated with the local organization. Mr. August has been invited to address the boys of the Y. M. C. A. at Easton in order to try to interest them in wireless and has been assured a cordial welcome. This is the first of several trips which Mr. August will make throughout the State for organization purposes.

MRS COOMBE DEAD

Wife of H. Bernard Coombe Dies Following a Serious Operation.

AT THE AGE OF FORTY-EIGHT.

Member of Famous Knickerbocker Family—Active in Grace Church—Husband and Daughter Survive.

Mrs. H. Bernard Coombs, of 831 Madison avenue, aged forty-eight years, died this morning at Muhlenberg Hospital, following an operation yesterday for stomach trouble with which she had been a sufferer for six weeks. On Tuesday it was decided, after a consultation of physicians, to perform an operation. Mrs. Coombs passed through the ordeal favorably and her general condition afterwards was considered satisfactory. Early this morning, however, there was a change for the worse and not having sufficient vitality she passed away about 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Coombe was a daughter of the late Stephen and Mary Masterson Pell, of New York, and was a descendant of the Knickerbocker, New York, family of that name, for whom Pelham and Pelham Manor were named. She had lived in Plainfield about seven years, removing here from Brooklyn. Surviving her are the husband, one daughter, Evelyn Marion Elizabeth Coombe, aged fifteen years; three sisters, Miss Pell, of Jamaica, L. I.; Mrs. James T. Perkins and Mrs. Joseph W. Conklin, both of Minneapolis, Minn., and two brothers, Henry W. S. Pell and Thomas Nowlan Pell, of New York city.

Mrs. Coombe was a member of Grace church and was active in the work of the parish. Her death will be a distinct loss not only to the church, but her home as well. Mr. Coombe, husband of Mrs. Coombe, is well-known here. He is the stock exchange member of the firm of T. G. Coombe & Co., bankers, at 100 Broadway, New York. The funeral will be held at Grace church Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock and the burial will be in Greenwood cemetery at the convenience of the family.

MAUNDY THURSDAY OBSERVED YESTERDAY

Maundy Thursday was appropriately celebrated yesterday in the churches, the customary services being held in all the Episcopal churches and Catholic churches. Special services were held last night in the First Baptist and Trinity Reformed churches.

At Trinity for the first time in its history a special secramental service was held including the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The service besides special music by the quartet choir included the reading by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, of the Scriptures relating to the Last Supper of the Lord and His betrayal. The elders and deacons of the church occupied seats on either side of the pulpit. With the elders sat Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor emeritus of the church. The deacons passed the sacramental bread and wine. There were about 200 members of the congregation present and the occasion was so impressive and so much enjoyed by them that a request was made that the servics become an annual fixture.

Miss S. Etta Raybert, soprano, sang beautifully and without notes "There is a Green Hill Far Away," and the other selections by the quartet were sung with adequate feeling and were appropriate to the occasion.

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock there was evening prayer and address and at 7:30 o'clock preparatory services to Easter Communion. In St. Stephen's at 10 o'clock in the morning the communion service was held. At Grace church the regular evening service was held preparatory for the Easter Communion.

At St. Mary's church in the morning yesterday there was the customary Holy Thursday procession of children, celebration of the Holy Sacrament and the choral singing.

Programs of the Easter music will be published in this paper tomorrow. All the church choirs have prepared elaborate programs for the day.

MRS. CRAGIN DECLARES HUSBAND ABUSED HER

At the second day's session in Newark yesterday of the hearing in the suit for divorce brought by William B. Cragin, formerly of this city, a noted tennis player, and the cross suit of his wife, Mrs. Mayzie Bruce Cragin, the latter testified her husband had struck her, used profane language to her, and was often sulky and disagreeable. She said also that he was indifferent to their child, and that she was forced to leave him.

She emphatically denied his testimony that her love for him had ceased when their baby was born. She said she endured several years of suffering before she left him to live with her mother.

DISTRICT COURT CASES ON LIST YESTERDAY

Yesterday in the District Court, Christopher Del Nezzio won his suit against the Babcock & Wilcox Co., of New York. Del Nezzio sued for damages for injuries sustained at the pumping station last March. Being a minor Del Nezzio brought his action through a guardian and Judge William G. DeMeza was his counsel. Judge William Newcorn rendered a verdict for Del Nezzio for $300.

Two other cases in which Judge DeMeza was the counsel and which were satisfactorily settled out of court by the defendant, the P. S. C., was that of Theodore Martin, whose horses were injured by being hit by a trolley car last March on East Fifth street, and Captain Brown Thompson, who sustained injuries, also on East Fifth street in the same month.

FRED'K C. PATTERSON DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Frederick C. Patterson, who has been so successful as a coach for amateur dramatic productions in this city under the auspices of the Park Comedy Club, as well as having unusual talent as an amateur actor, died last night at his home in New York of penumonia. He had been ill but a short time, and was obliged to give up the work of coaching the Park Comedy Club for its forthcoming production of "The Henrietta."

Mr. Patterson's death is a great shock to the members of the comedy club as well as a great many friends both here and in New York. He will be remembered by many as playing a leading part in "Trelawney of the Wells," which was presented last year at the Plainfield theatre, and made a decided hit. The comedy club has arranged to secure the services of Mr. White, of New York, a former coach for the club.

Taking the position that the proceedings of the stolen silverware investigation in the police department, so far as they have been made public, have placed him in a false light, John Payne, a former patrolman, has requested that he be allowed to appear before the police board. The request has been granted and Mr. Payne will have something to say at a meeting of the board next week.

Although not made public yesterday, it transpired that the investigation at police headquarters on Wednesday night brought out the fact that the silverware was in safe keeping at headquarters fully ten months after Payne resigned. This was testified to by Captain Frederickson. Except that he took the silverware from Mrs. Fenner's home to headquarters shortly after the robbery at her home two years ago, there is nothing to show that he has any connection with the case. Notwithstanding this, however, he does not propose to be placed in any false light by anyone and therefore has arranged to appear before the board.

Burned Rubbish on Street.

Ernest Higgins, of the West End, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning, charged with burning rubbish in the street. He was discharged with a warning.

SOLEMN SERVICES

Day of Christ's Crucifixion Commemorated in the Churches.

IN THE CITY AND BOROUGH.

The Saviour's Three Hours' Agony Observed in the Episcopal and Catholic Churches.

Good Friday services were held in all the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches today, the feature being the three hour devotion, from noon until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The attendances at Grace, Holy Cross, Heavenly Rest and St. Stephen's were large and both St. Mary's and St. Joseph's had their usual quota of worshippers.

The services in St. Mary's began at 8 o'clock this morning, with the mass of the pre-sanctified followed by the adoration of the cross and the Passion sermon. At noon the observance of the three hours' agony began with Rev. B. M. Bogan in charge. Father Bagon will also be in charge this evening when the Passion service will be held. Tomorrow the services will consist of the blessing of the font and water and the celebration of the usual mass.

At Grace the services began at 9 o'clock this morning with holy communion which was repeated at 10 o'clock. At noon the three hours devotion began, during which Rev. Melville K. Bailey, of Grace church, New York, made the addresses.

At Heavenly Rest there was a children's service at 9 o'clock this morning, at which the rector, Rev. C. H. Mallery made an address and at 11:45 the ante-communion service was held. This evening at 7:30 there will be evensong and sermon by the rector at which the Men's Association will attend in a body.

In St. Stephen's church the rector, Rev. Geo. A. Warner conducted the Litany and Altar service at 10 o'clock and the three hours' devotion from 12 until 3 o'clock. At the Church of the Holy Cross, the rector, Rev. George A. Warner conducted sevice with sermon at 9 o'clock with a young people's service at 10. Three hours' devotion from 12 to 3 o'clock and this evening regular evensong and sermon will be given.

A Good Friday service will be held in the Netherwood Reformed church this evening at 7:45 o'clock at which Rev. J. T. Searle, D. D., president of the Reformed Theological Seminary, of New Brunswick, will be the principal speaker. Rev. R. H. Craig, LLD., of Leland avenue, will assist in the services. A special quartet under the direction of Horace J. Martin will render two anthems and there will be chorus song from "The Story of Calvary," a sacred cantata.

ITEMS OF INTEREST TO SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS.

Rev. Wayland D. Wilcox, professor at Alfred University, it is expected, will preach at the 10:30 o'clock service at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, tomorrow morning, and the following Easter program will be rendered by the choir:

Prelude, "Andante," Beethoven, organ, violin and piano; anthem, "Rejoice Today With Gladness," Spencer, choir; hymns, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory," and "Crown Him With Many Crowns;" offertory anthem, "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth," Schackley; anthem, "I Am He that Liveth," Scott; hymn, "He Lives the Great Redeemer Lives;" postlude, Finale in E flat, Guilmant, organ and piano.

There will also be Easter vesper services at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. A. L. Titsworth will render several selections on the organ and the pastor, Rev. Edwin Shaw, will lead the devotions and speak on the topic, "Jesus, Our Easter." At the session of the Sabbath-school, the children of the primary department will sing two selections as their special contribution to the Easter season. Violet Johnston will lead the Junior Endeavor prayer-meeting, the topic being, "Miriam the Good Sister." A member of the New Market Endeavor Society will lead the Endeavor meeting at 5 o'clock, the topic being, "The Spirit of the Resurrection."

Played Ball On Street.

The first arrests for playing baseball in the streets were made yesterday afternoon by Patrolman Saunders. Ernest Jackson, who said he was no relation of the other Jacksons, and Willis Burns, both colored lads, pleaded guilty to playing in the street. They were discharged on their promise to never offend again.

STUNG FOR BUNS

Boy Bouncoed East Side Residents of Good Friday Delicacy.

COLLECTED MONEY IN ADVANCE

Said He Was Soliciting For a Well Known Borough Bakery—Concern Denies Knowledge of Youngster.

A chubby faced youngster, apparently guileless and enjoying the best of health as was shown by his ruddy cheeks, went through several of the East End streets Wednesday evening and yesterday morning soliciting orders for the hot cross buns which almost everybody looks for on Good Friday morning for breakfast.

This boy represented himself as an employe of the Home Made Bakery, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, and promised early morning delivery of the buns. In nearly every case he collected the money in advance and so far as can be learned people in the neighborhood of Sandford and Norwood avenues, Richmond street and the Netherwood section are still waiting for their buns.

Inquiry from the baker disclosed the fact that a boy answering the description of the one mentioned above ordered on Wednesday evening twenty-five dozen buns, but on Thursday eentered the store and cancelled the order, saying that he had contracted with another bakery for them.

From the description furnished by the different victims of the youthful financier it is likely that he will be picked up by the police some time tonight.

It is said that a boy of similar characteristics has been watched for some time for various other peculiar financial transactions, in all of which he managed to get off with the "change" and once in awhile a simple punishment from his parents.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF BENJAMIN CRUM

Benjamin Crum, aged fifty-seven years, who died at his home in Glenn, N. Y., on April 9, was brought to this city yesterday for burial in Hillside cemetery. Short funeral services were held at the undertaking parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, on Park avenue, conducted by Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville. Mr. Crum's first wife was Miss Heidloff, a sister to Jacob, Henry, Walter, Phillip, George, Edward and Fred Heidloff, of this city. Mrs. Crum died about six years ago in New York.

Afterward Mr. Crum married again and his second wife, together with a four-year-old son, and a son and daughter by the first marriage survive. After his second marriage, Mr. Crum purchased a summer home at Glenn, N. Y., where he resided to the time of his death. He suffered four strokes of paralysis.

SOMERSET PHYSICIANS HOLD ANNUAL ELECTION

The regular annual meeting and dinner of the Somerset County Medical Society was held yesterday at the Hotel TenEyck, in Somerville. These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. Josiah Meigh, of Bernardsville; vice president, Dr. F. J. Hughes, of North Plainfield; secretary, Dr. F. E. DuBois, of North Plainfield; treasurer, Dr. Thomas H. Flynn, of Somerville; censor, Dr. C. R. P. Fisher, of Bound Brook; annual delegate, Dr. David F. Weeks, of Skillman, and reporter, Dr. J. H. Buchanan, of North Plainfield.

Following the business meeting Dr. Gerhard H. Cocks, of New York city, read a most interesting paper dealing with "Inflammatory Conditions of the Middle Ear in Children."

Indictments Rumored.

Following an investigation conducted by Prosecutor Frederick Pope, the Somerset grand jury was presented with testimony on Wednesday against Egbert Scribner, of Duer street, who conducted a junk business. He admitted purchasing lead pipe from the four boys who were arrested for despoiling borough homes. The boys testified before the jurymen and it is understood that two indictments were found against Scribner, one for receiving stolen goods and the other for buying from minors.

POST OFFICE PLANS

Architects to Compete for Design When $50,000 More is Appropriated.

WAIT FOR MARTINE TO ACT.

Departing From Custom, Secretary of the Treasury McVeagh Will Ask Architects to Submit Plans.

It is practically "up to" United Senator Senator James E. Martine how long Plainfield will have to wait for its new postoffice building for it is necessary that he get an appropriation of $50,000 additional from Congress before the Treasury Department can go ahead. This sum needed in addition to the $100,000 originally appropriated through the influence of former United States Senator John Kean, was asked for last year by the latter but Congress adjourned before it was passed. It, therefore, falls to the lot of Senator Martine to renew the request.

Departing from its long established custom, the Treasury department has sought out the leading architects of the country to submit plans for a postoffice building for Orange, New Jersey, and the new order of things will be made to apply to Plainfield. It appears that the supervising architect of the Treasury department has all he and his assistants can do to design the Federal buildings for the large cities of the United States and that as there are 126 now on the list to be erected, most of which are in small cities, Secretary of the Treasury Franklin McVeagh has interested the country's greatest architects in this work.

In a letter received by Evarts Tracy, of this city, of the firm of Tracy, Swartout & Litchfield, Secretary McVeagh makes this explanation:

"Public buildings of the cost stated above do not appeal to architects of the highest rank, because of the exactions of the Government and the requirement that recognition shall come only as the result of an architectural competition. These are tests which are not applied to practitioners of recognized position in other professions, but there is no other way, under the law, to secure the services of architects who are in private practice.

"I feel that you will agree with me that no specimens of good architecture in the country are better fitted to exert a beneficial influence upon the general development of our building than these postoffice buildings of lesser important classes placed in the smaller cities where they are often the most imposing structures in their neighborhoods so that they stand as examples of what we should like to see done by the citizens themselves.

"It is from this point of view, appealing to your patriotism, your love of good architecture and your professional pride, that I extend this invitation, trusting that you will feel, as I do, that the placing of one of your buildings to represent what is best in modern architecture, to raise and fix the quality of Government work, is an honor not to be measured by the size of the building, and that such buildings are far more important than buildings of ten times their cost erected in the great cities where the work of the best men crown the streets.

"It is in this spirit, relying upon your assistance, that I trust that you will accept this invitation, and that in designing and supervising the construction of one of these buildings you will assist in creating a type which shall stand in its absolute simplicity, dignity and justice of proportion, an example that will lead and foster the development of American architecture."

Practically $35,000 of the original appropriation of $100,000 for the Plainfield postoffice is being used to obtain the site at Watchung avenue and Second street. The commissioners for condemnation have placed a price of $30,000 on the tract, part of which is owned by A. L. Force and the rest by the Friends' Society. The remaining $65,000, together with the desired $50,000, making $115,000, will be used in the erection of the building. The Orange postoffice structure is to cost $100,000.

Announce Approaching Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Rimmer, of 681 Essex street, have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Elsie M. Rimmer, and John B. Slorah, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Slorah, of Prescott place. The wedding will take place Wednesday afternoin, April 26, at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents.

Frank Schulte, right fielder of the Cubs, is credited with the first home run swat of the season in the National League. In the sixth inning of the game against the St. Louis Cardinals, at Chicago, Wednesday, the Cub player drove the ball over the right field fence.

John ("Dots") Miller, the Kearny boy, who covered the keystone sack for the Pittsburg Pirates Wednesday against the Cincinnati Reds, was very much in the game. He was at bat six times, scored three runs and poked out four bingles, including a triple. In the field he accepted five chances without a miss.

GOLF

When the summer course of the Baltusrol Golf Club is put in commission the members will find it more attractive than ever. Most important in the way of improvements at present is the enlarging of the fifteenth green. Instead of the old punch-bowl formation the green has been extended to the south, while the surface will be of an undulating nature. These undulations will be brought about by gutter-like depressions, which will also serve the purpose of draining off the water during wet weather. When completed the green will be double its former size.

Work is also progressing on a new shop for George Low, the professional. This building is of stone, and harmonizes with the architecture of the clubhouse. The shop is conveniently located, being adjacent to the first tee and the home green. Low, by the way, is undecided just when it will be best to open the regular course, though if the weather continues favorable the shift may take place on Saturday, April 29.

There seems to be no limit in the line of golf ball improvement. Each season sees new creations that for resiliency are far ahead of the older brands. While in the South Alec Smith, the national open champion, was playing round with James Maiden, the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association title holder, and it didn't take Alec long to discover that Maiden was using a different make of ball, and after a while Alec tried one, with the result that he at once added fifteen yards to his drive. How different all this from the old gutty ball days, when a golfer was well pleased to get 180 yards! Now the heavy hitters think nothing of getting distances all the way from 250 to 275 yards.

—Harry Montross, of Watchung avenue, has removed to Belmont avenue.

LAST SAD RITES FOR MRS. M. I. ROSEBERRY

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Ida Roseberry, whose death occurred Tuesday after a brief illness, was held at her late home on West Fourth street at noon today. It was conducted by Rev. F. L. Greene, pastor of Hope chapel, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. During the service, two hymns, "Crossing the Bar," and "Lead Kindly Light," were sung by William N. Runyon.

The floral tributes were unusually numerous and almost hid the casket from view. They included a set piece from the management of Scheuer & Company's store and also the employes of the sales department of the Public Service Corporation, the Sunday school and home departments of Hope chapel and friends of the family.

Following the service the body was sent to Phillipsburg for interment in the family plot. The accompanying pall bearers were Theodore Larew, Rufus Larew, Clinton Moyer and Robert Parsons.

Horse Injured His Foot.

In preventing a fractious horse belonging to A. E. Force & Co. from running away on West Front street, Wednesday, Daniel Kiederling, Chief Doane's driver, had a foot badly hurt. The annual stepped upon it, tearing away the shoe and lacerated the flesh. The injury was dressed by Dr. Lufburrow. Keiderling is able to be on duty, but was compelled to secure a new pair of shoes.

Banks Closed Today.

In observance of Good Friday, the banks and many other places of business are closed today. The schools in this city and the borough closed yesterday for the regular Easter vacation and will not re-open until Monday, April 24. General observance of the day is being held in the several churches in this city.

The Ladies Aid Society of Hope chapel will hold a cake sale in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tomorrow afternoon from 2 until 4 o'clock.

FIGHT UNTIL THE END.

Life can be made a success. It is not a question of climbing above poverty; it is a question of understanding life. So many of us have been lured away and fascinated by what turn out to be phantoms and false gods. We have had to wheel back and begin over again and fight along against tremendous odds, and yet with all that life can be made a success, for success consists in doing right, in doing the best you can with what you have. Fight until the end.

Gifted Idiots.

Idiots have been known whose memory for names and words was so retentive that they could repeat verbatim and indicate where the preacher blew his nose and coughed in delivering it. Dr. Moffat, the distinguished African missionary and father-in-law of Dr. Livingstone, once preached a long sermon to a crowd of negroes. Shortly after he had finished he saw a number of negroes gather about a simple minded young savage. He went to them and discovered that the savage was preaching his sermon over again. Not only was he reproducing the precise words, but imitating the manner and gestures of the white preacher.—London Tit-Bits.

Winning to Lose.

Prince Vladimir Teropakoff, a penniless nobleman, sacrificed his life at Moscow in an attempt to win a strange wager. Count Waldig, a wealthy landowner, made a bet with him that he would not drink a gallon of liquor at a draft. The prince's reward if he accomplished the feat was to be the title deeds of a valuable estate. The prince ate nothing all day with the exception of a salt herring, and in the evening, in the presence of the count and four witnesses, he raised the gallon jar to his lips and drank steadily until he set it down empty. The title deeds of the estate were handed to him, but hardly had he received them when he sank to the ground and died in a few moments.

A Landsman's Idea.

In the port of Galveston one day a darky from the interior was looking at the shipping in the harbor. A roustabout was explaining the whole thing to him. Finally the roustabout said:

"It's low water now."

At that the negro, shaking his head sagaciously and pointing to a heavily laden tramp steamer that was passing, said:

"Den it's a good thing for dat ship dat's going past. De water's near de edge of her now."—Harper's Magazine.

Andrew Jackson.

Andrew Jackson, whose will is on record, was perhaps the poorest of all the presidents of the United States. He confessed his poverty and admitted that he had been ruined financially by his nephew, whom he had adopted and treated as a son.

DECISION.

Good habits bring a personal freedom that is impossible to obtain otherwise. He who has the habit of doing anything he ought to do with regularity is saved from a galling bondage of uncertainty, time consuming, energy wasting debate with himself, renewed daily and growing more of a burden as life advances. When the matter is relegated once for all to the realm of unquestioning, automatic habit that man's life passes from bondage to freedom in at least one detail.

The Point of View.

The eastern man looked at the drivers of the stage which was to land him near the Top Notch mine and found him an interesting specimen in many ways. "But I mustn't let him suspect I intend to use him for material," he thought.

"I suppose there are a good many queer people about here," he said with caution a moment later. "You must have a good chance to see them."

"The best there is," returned the stage driver. "As I said to Sam Barker the other day, if one of us knew how to write stories all we'd have to do for characters would be to take 'em from the folks that land here when the train from back east comes in."—Youth's Companion.

A Statesman's Queer Ambition.

The great Lord Grey had an ambition far above politics. He had passed the reform bill, but that did not satisfy his soul. There was talk of Taglioni, and Grey said quite earnestly, "What would I give to dance as well as she!" The statesman who had been prime minister and had left an indelible mark on the history of his country was envious of an opera dancer!—London Saturday Review

He Wanted the Dog.

"My neighbor has a dog for which I am willing to pay $1,000," said the householder, "but the owner won't sell. He stands out for $2,000. I may possibly be able to get the dog for $1,500, but I doubt it." And he shook his head pensively.

"Why do you want the dog so badly?" inquired somebody.

"To break his neck. He barks all night."—New York Times.

Had a Tough Foot.

A barefooted negro wandered into a blacksmith shop in a little southern town. While watching the smith pound the iron into shape he unconsciously stepped on a redhot coal. After several minutes had passed he sniffed his nose once or twice and remarked in an incidental way, "Peahs to me, sah, dat I smells rubbah burnin'."—National Monthly.

A Virtue Misplaced.

"I ordered this steak not well done," said the impatient guest.

"I know it," answered the intellectual waiter. "But the cook is one of those people who believe that no matter how small a thing is it should be well done."

Announcement!

ALBERTO BUCCINI

347 Fifth Ave., New York City

Respectfully announces that he is now ready to offer to the Plainfield public his new artistic ideas and the execution of work for the interior decorations of residences. He has just completed the decorations of Mr. R. A. Meeker's residence, at Belvidere avenue, Plainfield, to the full satisfaction of the owner. Mr. Buccini had also decorated many high class residences in New York City and New Jersey and is ready to submit references and credentials on request. Any resident contemplating to make his home more beautiful will do well to communicate or call at Buccini's Studios to inspect the kind of work that he produces. He would appreciate the privilege of estimating on any work that may be desired.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

Your dreams of reputation, your swift determination, your impulsive pride, your deep uttered vows to win a name, have all sobered into affection, have all blended into that glow of tender feeling which finds its center and hope and joy in the home. From my soul I pity him whose soul does not leap at the mere utterance of that name.—Ik Marvel.

The Laughing Hyena.

Although the hysterical laughter of the laughing hyena is not, as was once supposed, the outcome of a deliberate attempt to decoy unwary travelers to their doom, this strange animal is, nevertheless, one of the most cunning of dumb animals. He is so suspicious of everything he does not understand that the sight of even a bit of string at once puts him on his guard. Trappers are aware of this fact and generally use the stems of creeping plants instead of string of any kind in setting their spring traps.

A Cobbler's Dozen.

In most countries thirteen is always spoken of as "the baker's dozen," but in Italy it is called "a cobbler's dozen." There is a tradition in that land that formerly there was a law compelling cobblers to put twelve nails around the edge of a boot heel and that when nails were cheap a thirteenth nail was driven in the center for luck.

DRY CLEANING TALK

The Pressers and Finishers

Those who have read our Dry Cleaning Talks are aware by this time that there is something to Dry Cleaning.

After the garments have been properly dusted and passed through their proper bath, properly dried, spotted, etc., they reach the Finishing Department.

It is the duty of this Department to prepare the work for return, also largely to inspect, proving the previous work.

Our Finishing Department is our pride and we know it is efficient. Our ever increasing trade confirms this fact. Send your next work to us.

UNION GRAIN COMPANY BUILDING COMPLETED

The Union Grain Company, a company recently incorporated, is about ready to begin operations in its commodious and well-equipped three-story brick building on East Third street, adjoining the beef house. The building is about 40x100, constructed in the most modern methods, concrete floors, heavy iron and steel beams and the company is prepared to do a large business.

The members of the company are A. I. Smalley, president; Frank Mobus, vice president; Henry Nischwitz, treasurer; Joseph Ryno, secretary, and Thomas Traynor. The plant is now open and ready for inspection and the public is invited to call at any time and witness the latest methods of handling grains of all kinds. A speciality will be made of crushed oats, and ground corn and oats for horse feed.

With the equipment it is possible to clean 750 bushels of oats an hour and a like quantity of corn. The company also handles hay in large quantities and can give the best of service. The building and entire equipment was designed by A. I. Smalley. There is provision for a fine office, lavatories, while a modern gas engine, which operates the plant, is located in the cellar.

sented on the visitors list of the Charity Organization Society, and it does seem work that the church is almost under moral obligations to support, not only apart but in co-operation with others and in touch with the most approved methods.

Finally, the society has at heart, and always, the welfare of the babies. As a result of the conference called on March 21 by the committee on co-operation, the society feels more than ever convinced that this community should be still more active in preventing the sickness and death of infants. Plainfield has such a good milk supply that it would be comparatively easy to reduce the mortality of infants to a minimum. All that is needed is a nurse who would have time to visit frequently the mothers of all young children and see that the milk was properly prepared and kept clean. A visiting house-keeper who would instruct by example as well as by precept, would also assist in reducing the mortality of children and such an auxiliary is the greatest present need of the Charity Organization Society. Part of the salary of a visiting housekeeper has already been assured.

Giants' Home Destroyed.

A loud lament was heard from one end of Manhattan to the other when the news was spread that the home of the Giants at the Polo grounds had been destroyed by fire early this morning. No game will be played today and only limited admissions will be sold on Monday. The grand stand is a total wreck and it will take several months to rebuild it.

Proctor's Good Show.

Rutledge and Pickering, clever exponents of the real country life of a village lawyer, whose son is in New York, is a headliner at Proctor's. Harry Bouton and Company present a novel comedy magical act; Georgolas Brothers, sharpshooters, are especially good and George Sinclair and the Percy Girls are good in a singing and dancing act.

Election Reform Bill.

The State Senate yesterday afternoon unanimously passed the amended Geran elections' bill. This substitute, containing 200 changes in the original measure, will now be sent back to the House. Acting Governor Ackerman, president of the Senate, was among those who loudly praised the bill.

COLBY TRIES OUT A NEW AEROPLANE

Howard Colby, of Evergreen avenue, has been doing some aeroplaning by himself in Texas. He is interested in what is believed to be the only safety device yet produced. It consists of a pair of parachutes which act automatically in case the machine falls or the motor stops. The device is the invention of a New Yorker named Raney.

Yesterday at Fort Sam Houston, Mr. Colby gave an exhibition of the invention, soaring up 100 feet, stopping the motor and permitting the aeroplane to drop gently to the ground. It was reported that the trial was a complete success and today and tomorrow he will put the new machine through severer tests. Last night the Plainfielder, with Harold McCormick, of Chicago, left for home. It is capable of making forty miles an hour against the wind, but Mr. Colby does not speed up faster than twenty miles, which is speed enough for him, so he says.

POLITICAL DEFINITIONS.

We are indebted to a writer in "Success Magazine" for the following brief definitions:

Under the initiative, a constitutional amendment or a legislative measure may be proposed directly on petition signed by eight per cent. of the voters of Oregon.

Under the referendum, any measure passed by the Legislature may be, and on petition signed by five per cent. of the voters must be, submitted to popular vote before it can become a law.

Under the direct primary system, the nomination of candidates for public office is made by direct popular vote ;names being placed on the nominating ballot by petition.

Under the recall, any unsatisfactory public servant may be voted out of office at any time by a special election called on petition, signed by twenty-five per cent. of the voters qualified to vote on the question. (which awaits an enabling act) the Under proportional representation Legislature is elected from the State at large instead of from single districts, thus insuring each party a representation according to its true numerical strength in the State.

The corrupt-practices act, among other provisions, limits each candidates's election expenses to one-fourth of his salary. It provides that paid advertising matter in the newspapers must be designated as such and bear the name of its author. The state publishes a pamphlet containing the text of each question to be submitted, with such arguments as those interested in any measure may choose to have inserted at the rate of eight dollars a page. A copy of this is mailed to every voter in the State.

The local-option tax amendment gives each county the privilege of raising its revenues from any subject of taxation that it sees fit to designate, under such general laws as the Legislature may enact.

What Spoiled the Coffee.

A family living in East Orange has a model servant who has proved herself the best cook they ever had, but she has insisted upon making up all her dishes strictly according to her own recipes.

"Margaret," said the mistress, one day, "the coffee you are giving us is very good. What kind is it?"

"It is no kind at all, mum," was the reply. "It's a mixture."

"Well, won't you tell me how you mix it?"

"Sure, mum. I make it one-quarter Mocha, one-quarter Java and one-quarter Rio."

"Yes, but that is only three quarters. What do you put in for the other quarter?"

"Why, I put in no other quarter at all, mum. That's where so many people spoil their coffee, mum, by puttin' in a fourth quarter, mum."—From "Success Magazine."

It was said that the San Francisco Presbytery would probably demand that the New York Presbytery be excluded from the Church proper, at next month's meeting of the general assembly.

A dispatch from Shanghai stated that sixty girls were unsuccessfully offered for sale at one small town in China's famine stricken district because the food the slaves eat was more valuable than their lives.

The civic organizations in New York enlisted in the effort to bring about more adequate fire protection for workers, agreed that the building code must be completely revised.

A dispatch from Epernay, France, stated that comparative quiet prevailed among the wine growers of the Department of Marne; millions of bottles of champagne were reported to have been destroyed during the riots.

Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, speaking before the Boston Chamber of Commerce, said that Boston's opportunity was at hand to become the leading seaport on the Atlantic and the gateway to European ports.

Congress — Senate: President Taft's Mexican policy was commended by Senators Rayner, Lodge and Cullom. House: A bill for direct election of Senators without federal control was passed by a vote of 296 to 16, and the Canadian reciprocity bill was favorably reported from the Committee on Ways and Means.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"Best People on Earth," is the title of a new serio comic play with music that that very popular comedian John E. Henshaw is starring in this season, aided by a company of rare excellence and a scenic equipment that covers every artistic requirement. This attraction comes to the Plainfield theatre on Saturday, matinee and night, and there's every indication of it playing to a crowded house.

One of the standard and high class productions to be presented by the Myrkle-Harder Campany at the Plainfield theatre during its engagement here is "The Great John Ganton," which has never before been presented outside of the great cities of New York and Chicago. It is only by special arrangements with the Shuberts and a large royalty that Mr. Harder is able to present this most powerful drama at popular prices. Believing that the proper staging of a play contributes in no small measure to its assured success, Mr. Harder has equipped "The Great John Ganton" with a wealth of realistic scenic environments and electrical effects, making it most complete in every detail. There will be no advance in prices when the Myrkle-Harder Company presents this great drama at the Plainfield theatre on Tuesday night.

—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walsh, of Richmond street, have removed to Steiner place.

—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Brien, of Westervelt avenue, have removed to the Bronx, New York.

Best Easter Clothes for Boys

It used to be that pretty nearly anything in the clothing line would suit a boy. It's different now-a-days; the present generation of youngsters know a thing or two and unless every detail is exactly as it should be, Mr. Small Boy complains. Our boys' clothing pleases both the boys and their elders, otherwise our great clothing section would not be the busy place it is these days.

MEN'S COLUMN

DRESSY SUITS AT $10.

It is as much as lots of them care to pay in these days of costly living—and we sell them really good suits for this money. Suits of Dark and Medium Mixtures, also Blue Serges, all-wool materials; good, desirable patterns; a full range of sizes here at a moderate price of.....$10

MEN'S SUITS AT $12.

These $12 Suits are made of excellent materials that are strictly all wool and embrace many handsome gray and brown mixtures, plain blue serges and attractive fancy striped serges, but they are tailored in a fashion that gives them a well-rounded out appearance of the most carefully done custom work. The linings and trimmings are first-class, made to do service along with the outer materials—well balanced garments in every sense, fine enough for dress, cheap enough for business, and we ought to sell a lot of them this season—will sell a lot when men see them and appreciate the quality.

MEN'S SUITS AT $15.

We want every man in Newark to see our $15 Suits so that they may know exactly what we are offering; that they may make comparisons with suits offered them elsewhere at equally low price.

Suits made of strictly new Spring cloths, all wool, embracing gray and brown mixtures, plain and fancy serges, and are plainly tailored, handwork being put on them where most needed. The linings and trimmings are first-class and insure a suit that will give long, satisfactory service. The sizes run to 44.

OSTEOPATHS TO BE RECOGNIZED

Recognition of osteopaths in this State, though not to the extent that this school of medical practitioners had sought, will be given in the medical practise bill that was introduced by Dr. Ramsay, of Middlesex county, if amendments that he proposed Wednesday afternoon to his measure are adopted by the Legislature.

The Ramsay bill as introduced was of a radical nature that would have prevented osteopaths from practising at all if it were passed without change. It would also prohibit the practise of optometry, but another proposed amendment will eliminate the eye diagonsticians as well as the osteopaths from the jurisdiction of the medical men.

The radical nature of the Ramsay bill threatened its passage in the House, and for that reason the medical men back of it may have been willing to grant the concessions to the osteopaths.

One of the amendments authorizes the appointment of "an advisory committee of osteopaths," to the State Board of Medical Examiners. This committee is to consist of three members to be appointed by the New Jersey Osteopathic Society. Their terms are to be three years each. Recognition is not given to the State osteopathic "association."

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Grace Goodale, the eccentric head waitress in George M. Cohan's new comedy success, "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," at the Cohan theatre, is a native of California and was born in San Francisco. Her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Schultz, are famous musicians in the Pacific Coast country. The mother is a singer and the father a noted pianist and organist. A musical career was mapped out for the daughter, but as Miss Goodale puts it: "The musical road was too long. I needed the money and when I had a chance to get a part in the Alcazar theatre in San Francisco I went on the stage." In her first part she had five words to speak. This was in Hall Caine's "The Manxman." Miss Goodale has won success in many other parts including Gervais in "Drink," Regina in "Ghosts," the Red Angel in "The Hourglass" and one she created in Clyde Fitch's "Happy Marriage." Miss Goodale has also played a wide range of roles in stock companies all over the United States.

"Over Night," Philip H. Bartholomae's farcical comedy, is now in its third month at The Hackett, and which moves to The Playhouse next week, and interest in this merry play shows no evidences of abatement. It is possible that it will be seen in New York all summer, as it has qualities which make it an ideal hot-weather show. There is a persistent demand for its production in other cities, however, and another company is being organized for the cities outside of New York. "Over Night" has no stars, and both companies presenting it will, it is announced, be of equal merit. William A. Brady has also completed arrangements for the production of "Over Night" in London and on the Continent.

FOR AUDITING PUBLIC'S ACCOUNTS ANYWHERE.

A bill of importance to every county and city in the State is Senate 240, which passed the Senate Wednesday morning by a vote of 13 to 4 as follows:

Yes—Ackerman, Brown, Fielder, Frelinghuysen, Gaunt, Johnson, Leavitt, Low, Plummer, Edge, Hand, Cornish, Gebhardt.

No—Nichols, Price, Silzer, Prince.

The bill requires the Supreme Court justice in each county to appoint annually an auditor or auditors to audit the accounts of every county and municipality within the county and of the officers thereof. The report of the auditor is to be made to the justice and is to be made a public record. The auditor is to be paid by the county or municipality examined, but his bill is to be approved by the justice. The measure was introduced by Senator Fielder. It was presented shortly after the revelation made with reference to the alleged diversion of funds in Hudson county.

WILL DISCUSS NEW HEAD FOR PRINCETON.

The vacant presidency was the chief matter for consideration at yesterday's meeting of the trustees of Princeton University. There is small likelihood, however, that a man will be chosen now, because, it is said, on good authority, the committee in charge of the nominations has not agreed on a man.

The resignation of Professor Henry van Dyke from the Murray professorship in English literature also came up. The resignation was written on Thanksgiving Day and laid over at the last meeting.

ANOTHER DEPARTMENT STORE FOR N. Y. CITY.

Jacob L. Kesner, formerly general manager and part owner of The Fair, Chicago, a large department store, Wednesday obtained a lease, for a long term, of the store and property formerly occupied by Ehrich Brothers in the heart of the New York shopping district. He will open and conduct a department store.

Mr. Kenser retired from active business two years ago and since then has devoted his attention to his real estate holdings, chiefly in the "Loop" district in the Windy City.

SOPHS ARE TROUNCED BY THE SENIORS, 7-5

The second game of the inter-class series of the Plainfield High School was played between the seniors and sophomores yesterday afternoon on Crescent Oval and resulted in a win for the seniors by a score of 7 to 5 after a strenuous struggle. The sophs started with a rush, scoring three runs in the first inning, but that seemed to have strained them to the limit for only twice after did any of them cross the pan, once in the third and again in the eighth. The seniors began to find the ball in the third session and in the seventh they banged out four runs after having scored two in the fifth.

Seniors .....0 0 1 0 2 0 4 0 0—7

Sophomores ....3 0 1 0 0 0 0 1 0—5

Umpire—C. R. Bostwick.

Tomorrow, weather permitting, the High School team will play the Poly Prep team at Brooklyn. Terry will probably be on the mound for the local boys and a crowd of rooters is going along to encourage the boys to win.

MERRY CHASE FOLLOWS A TELEPHONE ALARM

The telephone bell at fire headquarters jingled merrily at 7:35 last night and when the call was answered, someone at the other end of the wire said there was a fire at Dr. Davis' house on Park avenue. The informant failed to state whether it was the Dr. Charles Davis residence at Park avenue and Fifth street or Dr. T. S. Davis' place at Park avenue and Sixth street. The firemen presumed it was the latter and Chief Doane sallied out with the chemical engine and No. 2 truck. On reaching Dr. T. S. Dayis' home the family expressed surprise at the invasion and declared they knew nothing of any blaze, neither had they telephoned. A search of the premises failed to disclose anything.

It was then suggested that the alarm might have been for Dr. Charles Davis' place and the apparatus scurried to the other block. Again did the men search in vain for anything that looked like a fire. The mystery was deepened about this time by the appearance of No. 1 hose truck which swept by the corner and stopped at Park avenue and Sixth street. It began to look as if someone who had lost track of dates was playing an April fool game on the department.

Chief Doane called up headquarters on the telephone and learned that the call had been sent in from Dr. Lowerie's home on Park avenue and was intended for the Dr. T. S. Davis residence. The woman who had 'phoned said the upper part of the structure was enveloped in smoke. She failed to notice the first apparatus drive up and back and rang up a second time. Assistant Chief Jennings thought the men had made a mistake and sent No. 1 truck out. This explained the latter's appearance on the avenue.

The other apparatus then returned to the Dr. T. S. Davis home and a second investigation was commenced. It was finally discovered that a workman had turned the blower on in full force under the grate of a steam boiler and a cloud of the vapor was pouring out of the chimney. It had the appearance of smoke and was what led to the alarm.

No explanation of the workman's action could be made. It will probably mean extensive repairs to the boiler.

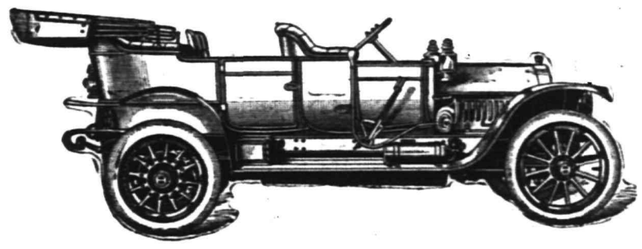
ALCO



First of All Your Car Should be Safe

THREE things you have a right to demand in your automobile—safety, dependability, the stability of the builder.

Materials that stand all the tests it is possible to devise, structural rightness and searching inspection make for safety. The steels that go into an Alco car have been tried, so that their last limit of endurance is known—then the load given them to bear is far below that point. The Alco factor of safety is an unprecedented one.

ONE detail of Alco construction will suffice to illustrate our high ideal of structural perfection. We bought the biggest drop hammer in the world to forge our rear axle from a single piece of steel. The rear axle is the key to safety in a shaft driven car, and we spent $51,700 to make the Alco rear axle safe.

No Alco car goes out for sale before it has passed the inspection of sixty men. They are protecting you.

AS for dependability, Grant drove a stock Alco an average of 65.2 miles an hour in the Vanderbilt race of 1910 which he won. But beyond the mere speed, the car came through that race and the Vanderbilt of 1909 which Grant won in the same stock Alco without strain, and a road race tries the very soul of a car. The Alco you buy is the same general type of engine and chassis.

Finally the American Locomotive Company, builders of the Alco, is a fifty million dollar corporation, that can take ample care of your car after it is in your hands. Our locomotives have been moving the world's goods in many lands for half a century, and customers of 30 years' standing still re-order them. We know how to build motors that move vehicles either on roads or rails. We stand back of what we make.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," a copy of which is subjoined to this notice, has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt such ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council, to be held in the Council Chamber, No. 149 North avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., at eight o'clock p. m., on Monday, the first day of May, A. D. Nineteen Hundred and Eleven, at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance, said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council, and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council with reference to the proposed ordinance.

By order of the Common Council.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY,
City Clerk.

AN ORDINANCE

For the Permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of Streets of the City of Plainfield, with Permanent and Durable Macadam Pavement, and to provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the following streets and parts of streets of the City of Plainfield shall be permanently improved with durable macadam pavement to be completely laid and constructed on or before the thirty-first day of October, 1911, said macadam pavement to be of the depth and width hereinafter specified, the plain macadam to be in every respect equal to the macadamizing on Randolph Road, between Arlington Avenue and Cedar Brook and the macadam with bituminous binder to be in every respect equal to the macadamizing on Johnston Avenue in said city, the quantity of bituminous binder to be 1¾ gallons per square yard. All work to be given out upon contract to the lowest responsible bidder, and only after bids thereof shall have been solicited and received according to law, all bids to specify prices for each of said streets or parts of streets separately:

West Fifth and West Sixth Streets from the macadam on Monroe Avenue to the macadam on Clinton Avenue;

East Sixth Street from the northeasterly curb line of Richmond Street to the line of the proposed macadam on Central Street;

Webster Place from the northerly curb line of Putnam Avenue to the intersection of Berckman Street;

Berckman Street from the intersection of Webster Place to the macadam on East Seventh Street;

Central Street from the macadam on South Avenue to the westerly curb line of Woodland Avenue;

Columbia Avenue from the macadam on Leland Avenue to the northeasterly curb line of Frederick Street;

Leland Avenue from the macadam on South Avenue to the southeasterly side of Cushing Road;

Essex Street from the macadam on Spooner Avenue to the macadam on John Street;

Irving Place from the macadam on West Seventh Street to the macadam on West Eighth Street;

Central Avenue from the end of the present macadam to the southerly City Line;

East Seventh Street from the macadam on Belvidere Avenue to the macadam on Terrill Road;

Sec. 2. That said streets and portions of streets described in Section 1 shall be macadamized for the width and depth and of the kind shown in the following schedule, and the macadamizing preparation shall be laid down to the grades already established by ordinance for said streets or portions of streets, respectively:

	Width.	Depth Inches.	Kind.
W. Fifth St.	16	6 to 4	Plain Macadam
W. Sixth St.	16	6 to 4	"
E. Sixth St.	25	6 to 4	"
Webster Pl.	16	6 to 4	"
Berckman St.	16	6 to 4	"
Central St.	16	6 to 4	"
Columbia Ave.	16	6 to 4	"
Leland Ave.	16	6 to 4	"
Essex St.	30	6 to 4	Macadam with bituminous binder in top course.
Irving Pl.	30	6 to 4	"
Central Ave.	16	6 to 4	"
E. Seventh St.	16	7 to 5	"

Sec. 3. That for the purpose of obtaining money by the sale of bonds hereinafter specified for the permanent improvement of said streets and parts of streets as aforesaid, in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits, to an amount not exceeding fifteen dollars per capita for each of the inhabitants of said City according to the last official census, but not for more than the amount limited by law, the Common Council of said City do hereby, pursuant to the Act of the Legislature of said State entitled "An Act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State, and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same, and for the assessment of the benefits of such improvement upon the land and real estate benefited thereby," and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, authorize the issuing of thirty-four coupon municipal bonds of the City of Plainfield of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) each, and amounting in all to Thirty-four Thousand Dollars ($34,000), which bonds shall be dated July first, 1911, and shall bear interest at the rate of five per centum (5 per cent.) per annum, payable semi-annually, and be payable three years from the date thereof, with the option to the City to redeem or pay off the said bonds, or any one or more of them, at any time after one year from the date thereof and before three years from the date thereof, on giving personal notice to said holders of said bonds or thirty (30) days notice by advertisement in the official newspapers of the City of the intention to make such redemption or payment, which bonds shall be signed by the Mayor and bear the corporate seal of the City and be attested by the City Clerk, and may severally or collectively when ordered by resolution of the Common Council be sold for an amount not less than par value; and there shall be raised by tax in each year hereafter such sum of money as may be necessary to pay the interest on all outstanding bonds and the principal of such bonds as may mature during that year, and the money derived from the assessments upon the property benefited shall when collected be held as a fund toward the payment of said bonds.

Sec. 4. That after said improvements shall have been completed, the Common Council shall, pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, apply to the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Union for the appointment of Commissioners to estimate and assess benefits upon the owners of the lots or parcels of land and real estate peculiarly benefitted by such improvements, in proportion, as near as may be, to an amount equal to the amount of benefits actually acquired by the lands and real estate bordering on said streets or portions thereof respectively, by reason of such improvements respectively; and in case the costs and expenses aforesaid shall exceed the amount of said benefits, the excess thereof shall be paid by the City at large and raised by general tax; no property or owner thereof to be in any case assessed beyond the amount of benefit actually derived from said improvements.

GATHERING RUBBER.

The Sap Is Coagulated by the Action of Pungent Smoke.

The industry of collecting and preparing rubber is carried on extensively in the valley of the Amazon. There are districts of many square miles owned and operated by one person. The rubber trees are scattered more or less plentifully among other trees that yield no profit as yet.

When one has secured a large tract of forest land for the industry he puts up a rough shelter upon it and engages Indian natives of the neighborhood to aid him in the work. Early in the morning they start out to make the rounds of the estate, for they must get back to the riverside before the heat of the day becomes too great. They tap the trees, attach little tin cups to catch the sap and take home whatever sap may be collected.

The sap of the rubber tree is a white liquid of the consistency of goat's milk. It is necessary that it be converted into a solid. This is effected by the action of a pungent smoke that coagulates or curdles the milky fluid. For this use the seeds of two different kinds of palm are employed. The seeds are put in an earthen jar which has a narrow neck, the bottom of which is perforated with a number of square holes. In this the palm nuts are burned. The holes in the bottom of the jar admit a draft and cause a dense smoke to issue from the neck.

The operator takes a paddle similar to that with which he paddles his canoe and holds the blade of it over the jar. Upon it he pours the milky juice cup by cup, all the time turning the blade so as to bring all parts of it into the smoke. The fluid is instantly fixed and adheres to the wood or to the rubber already formed. This process is continued until a solid lump is formed that will perhaps weigh sixteen pounds. When the lump has grown large enough for handling a slit is cut in it and the blade is drawn out. A mass of rubber is left ready for exportation. It is the smoke used in coagulating the sap that gives crude rubber the dark appearance familiar to every one.

Natives who collect rubber have, curiously enough, little use for the article. They do, however, devise playthings for their children by pouring the sap into clay molds of birds, fishes etc., and then crushing the clay and removing it.—New York Press.

Pumps Versus Baths.

The poor are dirty because they cannot afford to be clean and not from inclination or choice. As the woman in an English town said to the doctor who thoughtlessly suggested that her child of six was old enough to be washed, "It's easy for you to talk of washin', with yer hot and cold taps but what are the likes of me to do with only the loan of my neighbor's pump?" In the multitude of schemes occupying the attention of public bodies the establishment and maintenance of public wash houses, with due regard to the prevention of the spread of infection, ought to take a foremost place.—Medical Press and Circular.

The Loyal Bookseller.

Certainly the loyalist bookseller of record was the John Stubbs who offended Queen Elizabeth by publishing a book protesting against the proposed marriage with the "imp of the crown of France." The unhappy man was condemned to suffer the loss of his right hand, which was accordingly chopped off with a butcher's knife in the market place at Westminster. "I remember," says Camden, "standing by Stubbs, who, as soon as his right hand was off, took off his hat with his left and cried aloud, 'God save the queen!' The next moment he fainted."—"The Romance of Bookselling."

Easy Indolence.

"A good turkey dinner and mince pie," said a New York raconteur, "always put us in a lethargic mood—make us feel, in fact, like the natives of Nola Chucky.

"In Nola Chucky one day I said to a man:

"'What is the principal occupation of this town?'

"'Waal, boss,' the man answered yawning, 'in winter they mostly sets on the east side of the house and follers the sun around to the west, and in the summer they sets on the west side and follers the shade around to the east.'"

Raising the Wind.

Dannbauer would gamble his last cent. That was his great weakness. He went home one evening after a bad day. He looked tired.

"Wife," he said, "have you got anything to eat?"

"Yes, lots of things," the wife said.

"Well, cook up everything you've got—everything."

"Gracious! Are you that hungry?"

"I'm not hungry at all. I'm going to sell the stove."—Kansas City Star.

Thoughtful Maud.

Maud—Yes, I got papa to buy a vacuum cleaner for mother. Jessica—How thoughtful! Maud—Yes. Mother is a little stiffened up with rheumatism, you know, and I used to feel so sorry to see her trying to use the broom that I always left home on sweeping day.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Rich and Poor.

"There's a difference in children."

"Yes; the poor man's children are assets, the rich man's liabilities."—Washington Herald.

You have not fulfilled every duty unless you have fulfilled that of being pleasant.—Charles Buxton.

FELT SORRY FOR HIS MULE.

But That Was Before the Grizzly Made His Attack.

In a trip over the Sierra Nevadas a Californian took with him not only his favorite horse, but a mule named Billy. Billy was a large iron gray mule of the pack variety and had more than once made the trip.

On the second day in the mountains the owner tethered Billy to a tree, allowing him about twenty feet range where there was good feed, and then took a seat on a fallen tree not far away to eat his own lunch. He had finished his meal and was half dozing when suddenly the mule reared and snorted loudly. His owner sprang to his feet and looked about.

Not ten feet off stood a huge grizzly bear, evidently with designs on the owner of the mule. That individual rushed for the nearest tree and made good time in climbing it. He was safe for the nonce, but how about Billy? How could the tethered mule defend himself?

To his owner's surprise Billy dropped his head after a moment and resumed feeding as if oblivious of the grizzly's proximity. As for the bear, he stood still for several minutes, his eyes wandering from the man in the tree to Billy. The mule's composed demeanor evidently puzzled him.

By and by the grizzly started to make a circuit of the tree to which the mule was tethered. Billy continued to nibble grass, but kept an eye on the enemy's movements. The bear emitted a series of deep growls, then opened his great mouth and disclosed two rows of ugly teeth.

Slowly the great creature advanced upon the mule. Billy still continued to graze, his back toward the bear. Nearer came the grizzly and still nearer. The mule stopped feeding. From his perch the Californian watched the scene with breathless interest. He felt sorry for his mule.

Finally the bear stopped, rose on his hind quarters and prepared to strike. At that moment the mule, at whose stupidity his owner had wondered, sprang forward, and the grizzly's paws struck empty air.

Then the man in the tree saw a gray form double itself into a ball and bound upward. It was the mule's turn. Out of that ball flew two iron shod hoofs, which shot back and forth with the regularity of piston rods, with a thump, thump, thump, against the body of the grizzly, which was completely off its guard.

He was hit all over—on his head, on his shoulder, on his side, on his back—by those pile driving hind feet. He fell in one direction, then in another, seeming utterly incapable of getting away, and when Billy stopped kicking the breath of life was gone from the bear's body.

The mule had not a hair harmed, apparently, and after resting a bit returned quietly to his feeding.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Smuggling in Italy.

In no other country are the laws against smuggling so severe as in Italy. All the customs officials on the Swiss frontier are armed with carbines, and they are authorized to shoot any smuggler who seeks to evade them. Any peasant caught with even one pound of contraband tobacco is sure of two years' imprisonment, besides a ruinous fine. Still, many are found to run the risk, for the profits attached to smuggling are great. A knapsack full of tobacco, cigars or salt safely landed yields a small fortune to the bearer, so heavy are the Italian taxes upon these. The custom house officers cannot guard every point at once, and their movements are closely watched and reported by the people, who are all in league against them.

A Misapplied Diminutive.

The late Bishop William N. McVickar of Rhode Island harbored a large soul in a body to match. He was a bachelor, whose sister kept house for him. On one occasion he telephoned to his tailor that he wished to have a pair of trousers pressed, and the tailor sent a boy to his residence to get them. The bishop's sister admitted the messenger and called upstairs, "Willie, the boy has come for your trousers."

When her brother appeared the youth's astonished gaze traversed the prelate's impressive "corporosity"; then he murmured:

"Gee! Is that Willie?"—Youth's Companion.

Coddling the Hippo.

Writing in a London periodical, an Englishwoman begins the story of her African hunting trip with:

"Hippos are usually killed in the water, but a more humane method is to shoot them by moonlight when they come up on dry land to graze."

Could anything be more considerate? The hippopotamus must positively enjoy being shot by moonlight, especially when his feet are nice and dry.—New York American.

Raising Geese.

The raising of geese was a profitable occupation of farming in England years ago, and some farmers had flocks of 8,000 or 10,000. Each goose produced a shilling's worth of feathers every year and quills to the value of threepence. The quills were used for pens.

Not Necessarily.

"The face is the index of the mind, it is said."

"Oh, I don't know. Because a woman's face is made up is no sign that her mind is."—Toledo Blade.

F. MARION CRAWFORD

AUTHOR OF "SARACINESCA," "ARETHUSA" ETC. ETC.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY A. WEIL

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY F. MARION CRAWFORD

"I shall do what you ask me, but I shall do it slowly rather than quickly, because that will be better for you in the end. If we had gone on as we were going, we should have got to land to-night, but to a wretched little town from which we should have had to take a night train, hot and dirty and dusty, all the way to Paris. That would not help you to rest, would it?"

"Oh, no! I wish to sleep again in your ship, once, twice, till I cannot sleep any more. Then you will take me to the place."

"That is what you shall do. To that end I gave orders this afternoon."

"You are wise, as well as great," Baraka said.

They left the rail and walked slowly forward, side by side, without speaking; and Logotheti told himself how utterly happy he should be if Baraka could turn into Margaret and be walking with him there; yet something answered him that since she was not by his side he was not to be pitied for the company of a lovely Tartar girl whose language he could understand and even speak tolerably; and when the first voice observed rather drily that Margaret would surely think that he ought to feel very miserable, the second voice told him to take the goods the gods sent him and be grateful; and this little antiphone of Ormuzd and Ahriman went on for some time, till it occurred to him to stop the duo by explaining to Baraka how a European girl would probably slip her arm, or at least her hand, through the arm of the man with whom she was walking on the deck of a yacht, because there was generally a little motion at sea, and she would like to steady herself, and when there was none, there ought to be, and she would do the same thing by force of habit. But Baraka looked at such behavior quite differently.

"That would be a sort of dance," she said. "I am not a dancing girl! I have seen men and women dancing together, both Russians in Samarkand and other people in France. It is disgusting. I would rather go unveiled among my own people!"

"Which may Allah forbid!" answered Logotheti devoutly. "But where there are Englishmen, Allah does nothing; the women go without veils, and the boys and girls dance together."

"I have done worse," said Baraka, "for I have dressed as a man, and if a woman did that among my people she would be stoned to death and not buried. My people will never know what I have done since I got away from them alive. But he thought he was leaving me there to die!"

"Surely, I cannot see why you wish to marry a man who robbed you and tried to compass your death! I can understand that you should dream of killing him, and he deserves to be burnt alive, but why you should wish to marry him is known to the wisdom of the blessed ones!"

"You never saw him," Baraka answered with perfect simplicity. "He is a beautiful man; his beard is like the rays of the morning sun on a ripe cornfield. His eyes are bright as an eagle's, but blue as sapphires. He is much taller and bigger and stronger that you are. Do you not see why I want him for a husband? Why did he not desire me for his wife? Am I crooked, am I blinded by the smallpox, or have I six fingers on both hands and a hump on my shoulder like the Witch of Altai? Was my portion a cotton shift, one brass bangle and a horn comb for my hair? I gave him the riches of the world to take me, and he would not! I do not understand. Am I an evil sight in a man's eyes? Tell me the truth, for you are a friend!"

"You are good to see," Logotheti answered, stopping and pretending to examine her face critically as she stood and faced him.

"I do not desire you to speak for yourself," returned Baraka. "I wish you to speak for any man, since I go about unveiled and any man may see me. What would they say in the street if they saw me now, as a woman? That is what I must know, for he is a Frank, and he will judge me as the Franks judge when he sees me! What will he say?"

"Shall I speak as a Frank? Or as they speak in Constantinople?"

"Speak as he would speak, I pray. But speak the truth."

"I take Allah to witness that I speak the truth," Logotheti answered. "If I had never seen you, and if I were walking in the Great Garden in London and I met you by the bank of the river, I should say that you were the prettiest dark girl in England, but that I should like to see you in a beautiful Feringhi hat and the best frock that could be made in Paris."

Baraka's face was troubled, and she looked into his eyes anxiously.

"I understand," she said. "Before I meet him I must have more clothes, many beautiful new dresses. It was shameless, but it was easy to dress as a man, after I had learned, for it was always the same—the difference was three buttons—or four buttons, or a high hat or a little hat; not much. Also the Feringhi men button their garments as the Mussulmans do, the left over the right, but I often see their women's coats buttoned like a Hindu's. Why is this? Have the women another religion than the men? It is very strange!"

Logotheti laughed, for he had really never noticed the rather singular fact which had struck the born Asiatic at once.

"But this woman's dressing is very difficult to learn," Baraka went on, leaning back upon the rail with both elbows, and sticking out her little white shoes close together. "Without the girl Maggy whom you have found for me—but her real name is Gula, and she is a good Mussulman—without her, Allah knows what I should do! I could not put on these things for myself; alone, I cannot take them off. When I was like a man, buttons! Two, three, four, twenty—what did it matter? All the same way and soon done! But now, I cannot tell what I am made of. Allah knows and sees what I am made of. Hooks, eyes, strings, little bits one way, little bits the other way, like the rigging of ships—those Turkish ships with many small sails that go up the Bosphorus, you remember? And it is all behind, as if one had no front! Gula knows how it is done. But if I were alone, without her help, Allah is my witness, I would tie the things all round me decently and sit very still for fear they should come off! That is what I should do!"

The Greek thought her extremely amusing. She punctuated her explanations with small gestures indicative of her ignorance and helplessness.

"You will soon grow used to it," he said. "But you must get some pretty things in Paris before you go to meet the man. It would also be better to let your hair grow long before meeting him, for it is hard to wear the hats of the Feringhi ladies without hair."

"I cannot wait so long as that. Only to get pretty dresses, only so long! I will spend a thousand pounds or two—is that enough? I have much money in Paris; I can give much."

"You can get a good many things for a thousand pounds, even in Paris," Logotheti answered.

Baraka laughed.

"It will not be what I paid for the first clothes after I ran away," she said. "I did not know then what the stones were worth! A little ruby to one woman for a shift and an overtunic, a little ruby to another for a pair of shoes, a little ruby for a veil and a head-blanket, all little rubies! For each thing one! I did not know; the women did not know. But at Samarkand I sold one for money to a good Persian merchant, and what he gave me was enough for the journey, for me and the old woman servant I hired there, till we got to Tiflis; for the Persian merchants everywhere gave me letters from one to another, and their wives took me in, or I should have been robbed. That is how I reached Stamboul after many, many months, more than a year. The Persian merchants are good men. All fear them, because they are wise in their dealings, but they are honest men. They do not lie, but they are silent and shake their heads, and you must guess what they mean; and if you do not guess right, that is your fault, not theirs. Why should they speak when they can hold their peace? But this is all emptiness! We must talk of the fine dresses I must buy in Paris, and of what I must put on my head. The barbers in Paris sell wigs. I have seen them in the windows, very well made, of all colors, even of the Khenna color. I shall wear a wig, so that the beautiful Feringhi hat will stay on. I shall perhaps wear a Khenna-colored wig."

"I should not advise a wig," said Logotheti gravely, "certainly not one of that dye."

SAVAGES OF ASIA.

The Untamed Chites of Tibet Are Idolaters and Cannibals.

MURDER IN THEIR RELIGION.

At Their Wild Ceremonies the Priests of These Barbarians Offer Up Human Sacrifices to Their Grotesque and Repulsive Stone Gods.

A religious festival by a savage tribe of Asia, in which occurred a human sacrifice and the burning of the victim on a funeral pyre, is described by William Jameson Reid in his book, "Unexplored Asia." The rites were held in a place called Chite City, Tzuchan, which was reached after a hazardous journey through the Ping mountains. He says:

"Let me give a brief history of this strange race, who for centuries have defied the most persistent research of explorers and ethnologists. Many centuries ago, in the vicinity of Shanghai, there lived a highly enlightened race known as the Chites. They were the most fanatical and bigoted Buddhists, so fanatical, in fact, that their turbulent spirits and eager desire to sow the seed of proselytism caused frequent revolutionary disturbances. The government, as its only means of salvation, made war on them. For years the Chites battled against overwhelming odds until at last, their numbers fearfully reduced, they gradually retired to the west, settling here and there, only to be again driven back. After years of wanderings they located in the wild mountain region of northwestern Tibet.

"For untold centuries they have held entirely aloof from their more civilized Chinese neighbors, and today they are as untamed and barbarous as were their fierce ancestors. Many of them are savages of the worst degree; even cannibalism is said to be prevalent among many of them. They acknowledge no allegiance to the emperor, entirely ignore the authority of the mandarins and hold no communication with the outside world. Yet we have visited their wild domain; we have penetrated into their stronghold and have witnessed their strange customs.

"It had been our intention to steal into the city under cover of night, but from our position of vantage we could see that some religious demonstration was in progress, and we did not dare to move. For half an hour our guides (natives) crawled out on the plain and returned with the information that they had discovered a considerable cave in the hillside to the left of the town, which would screen us from observation and at the same time permit us to watch the movements of those inside the walls. We had just time to reach our place of concealment when the leaders of the procession entered the narrow orifice and halted while torches were being lit to guide their passages through the gathering gloom. Following them pressed the unkempt crew, until the interior of the dome shaped cave was filled to the point of suffocation.

"For half an hour the ear torturing strife of discord waxed louder at every moment until a hundred devils in human form flitted beneath the flare of flickering torches. A frenzied enthusiast would leap into the air, lacerating himself with a knife, grasping the gory strip of flesh and grinding it under his heel, or taunting a neighbor into the spirit of emulation by flaunting before his eyes the ghastly piece of flesh. Suddenly from out the compact mass rose a howl of mingled anguish and fury, and a solitary individual mounted a sort of platform and stretched forth his hand. Evidently he was a high priest. Instantly there was silence. The light of the torches enabled us to see the man who had mounted the platform. He was a tall, gaunt individual. All his right side was naked, and his face was covered with gaping rents of knife wounds, from which blood trickled.

"A garment of coarse cloth covered his body below the waist. Soon we saw five others follow him upon the platform, which was of raised earth. In a recess in the wall at the rear of the platform one could see the distorted form of a gigantic image—a stony, impassive figure of such grotesque ugliness that one could not help wondering how a race of people, however unenlightened, could bring themselves to worship an object of such repulsiveness.

"At last a fearful moment was at hand. An old man was seized and stretched upon a sort of stone altar, raised above the platform. He realized his last hour had come, and he struggled in fear and fury to escape from the grasp of his captors, giving vent to shriek after shriek until, exhausted, he fell into a stupor. Four of the priests held the faintly struggling body, while from the gloom stalked forth the sacrificial priest, his hand holding a long knife. Once, twice, thrice he abased himself before the image, and then, turning round like a beast ready to leap upon its prey, he rushed toward the prostrate form. A flash of light and the keen blade sank to the hilt in the flesh of the victim.

"Three times did the worshipers on the floor rise and abase themselves, and then quickly the minor priests seized the lifeless body and held it in the air. For a moment it silhouetted against the fitful glare of the fire; then the flames leaped forward in eager ecstasy to receive their prey."

Kindness in us is the honey that blunts the sting of unkindness in another.—Landor.

NEWPORT Coal and Gas Range

—a modern kitchen convenience that housewives will be quick to appreciate.

Embraces every good feature of the regular single oven "Newport," with the added capacity of the gas attachment.

BOYNTON FURNACE CO.

It nearly doubles the cooking capacity of the range, as both coal and gas may be used at the same time if desired. Besides, this handy range gives, in compact form, both a winter necessity and a summer convenience. It solves the "cook stove" problem. Ask your dealer to show you this best of all combination ranges—the "Newport."

SPECTER SHIPS.

Legends of Shadowy Craft of the New England Coast.

The coast of New England has numerous legends concerning specter ships firmly believed by the rugged fishermen, who assert stoutly that on various occasions glimpses of the shadowy craft have been seen, followed invariably by fatal disaster. The specter of the Palentine is occasionally seen on Long Island sound and is the forerunner of a gale of wind. She was a Dutch trading vessel and was wrecked off Block Island in 1732. The wreckers, it is said, made short work of her, stripping her fore and aft and setting fire to the hull.

As she drifted blazing off the coast a human form was visible amid the flames, the form of a female passenger, left to perish on the doomed craft. Since and generally upon the anniversary of the wreck a phantom ship with blazing hull, charred spars and scorched sails and rigging has been seen cruising off Block Island.

Whittier recorded the legend in graceful verse as well as that of a ghostly cruiser that sailed from a New England port of her last voyage, which he termed "The Dead Ship of Salem." In the seventeenth century a ship was about to sail from Salem to England. Her cargo was on board, sails bent and passengers on deck, when two passengers came hurriedly off and engaged passage. The couple were a young man and a young woman, who, so tradition records, were remarkable for their bearing and beauty.

Who they were or whence they came no one in Salem town could tell. The ship being detained by adverse winds, the mysterious couple excited the suspicions of the townspeople, who viewed them as uncanny and prophesied disaster to the vessel if allowed to sail in her. But the master, a bluff and stern sailor, refused to listen and finally departed on a Friday.

The vessel never reached her destination and was never spoken, but later in the year incoming vessels reported sighting a craft with luminous rigging and sails and shining hull and spars. She was sailing with all canvas set against the wind, with a crew of dead men standing in the shrouds and leaning over the rail, while upon the quarterdeck stood a young and beautiful couple.—New York Herald.

MAKING UMBRELLAS.

The Work of Assembling the Frames and Putting on Covers.

In most umbrella factories the task of turning out ribs and stems is left to other factories making a specialty of those parts. These are sent to the manufacturer, and the man whose work it is to assemble the parts inserts a bit of wire into the small holes at the end of the ribs, draws them together about the main rod and adjusts the ferrule.

In cutting the cloth or silk seventy-five thicknesses or thereabouts are arranged upon a table at which skilled operators work. In one department there are girls who operate hemming machines. A thousand yards of hemmed goods is a day's work for one of these girls. The machines doing this job attain a speed of some 3,000 revolutions a minute. After the hemming has been done the cloth or silk is cut into triangular pieces with a knife, as before, but with a pattern laid upon the cloth. The next operation is the sewing of the triangular pieces together by machinery.

The covers and frames are now ready to be brought together. In all there are twenty-one places where the cover is to be attached to the frame. The handle is next glued on, and the umbrella is ready for pressing and inspection.

By far the greater number of umbrellas today are equipped with wooden handles. A large variety of materials may, however, be used. Gold and silver quite naturally enter into the construction of the more expensive grades of umbrellas.

A wooden handle may be quite expensive, though, by reason of the wood used.—Harper's Weekly.

The Turning of the Worm.

"I guess it's true that the worm turned," growled the farmer boy to himself as he wearily twisted the handle of the grindstone round and round. "I've read it in the Third Reader at school, an' I've heard it said time an' again. I don't know whether he turned over in bed, or turned some different color, or turned out badly, or how the dingnation he turned, but what I'm here to say is that if the worm turned the grindstone when he didn't have to he was a dum fool! There!"—Success Magazine.

On Schedule Time.

A young member of a certain family had the measles, and the family was quarantined. One of the little girls spoke from an open window to a neighbor inquiring into the state of her health:

"No, 'm," she said, "I haven't got 'em yet, but I expect to have 'em day after tomorrow."—Lippincott's.

A Bad Boy.

Bertie—I don't want to go to bed yet, Ma. I want to see you and Mr. Shepherd play cards. Lucie—You wicked boy, to think we should do such a thing! We never do it! Bertie—But I heard mamma tell you to mind how you played your cards when Mr. Shepherd came.

A Smile.

A smile betrays a kind heart, a pleasant friend, an affectionate brother, a dutiful son, a happy husband. It adds a charm to beauty, and it beautifies the face of the deformed.

SONGS OF GLADNESS ON EASTER MORN

Elaborate Music in the Local Churches to Mark the Festival of the Resurrection.

PROGRAMS FOR ALL SERVICES.

Easter day, the great festival of the Resurrection, observed by the whole Christian world, will be celebrated tomorrow. Elaborate music will be the feature of all the services in the various churches. The official programs follow:

Grace Episcopal Church.

At Grace church the services will begin at 7 o'clock in the morning, another at 8 and the regular service with sermon at 11 o'clock and evensong at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. At Holy Cross, Holy Communion at 6 o'clock and 7:30 o'clock in the morning, the latter service being especially for young people; and at 9:45 the children's service with mite-box offering. Details of the musical service will be found below.

At Grace Episcopal church at the morning service which begins at 11 o'clock, this program will be followed: Processional Hymn, "Welcome Happy Morning;" anthem, "Christ Our Pasover;" Te Deum in E major, Parker; introit hymn, "Come Ye Faithful;" communion service in G., S. Frederick Smith; offertory anthem, "We Declare Unto You," Matthews; office hymn, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today;" recessional hymn, "Alleluia, Hearts and Voices Heavenward Raise." The communion service is a new composition by the organist of the church and is a work of art. There will be a children's service at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and a choral service at 4:30 o'clock.

Holy Cross Church.

At the Holy Cross morning service at 11 o'clock this program will be sung under the direction of William S. O'Brien, organist and choirmaster: Processional hymn, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today," Carley; chant, "Christ Our Passover," Humphrey; Te Deum, Lee, in C; Jubilate, Nevin; creed, Eyre in E flat; hymn, "Come Ye Faithful," Sullivan; office hymn, "The Strife is O'er," Palestina; offertory, "As it Began to Dawn," Foster; recessional, "Jesus Lives," Gauntlett. At evensong, 7:45, this will be the program: Processional, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today;" Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis, West; hymn, "The Day of Resurrection," Neale; offertory, "Now is Christ Risen," West; hymn, "The Strife is O'er," Palestrina; recessional, "Jesus Lives," Gauntlett. The soloists will be L. H. Jacobi, baritone; William Thiers, tenor and Chester Chamberlain, soprano.

Heavenly Rest Church.

Easter services at the Church of the Heavenly Rest will be morning, Holy Eucharist at 7 and 8 o'clock, and at 11 o'clock Holy Eucharist and sermon. Children's service at 4 p. m. and evensong and sermon at 7:30 p. m.

The music at the 11 o'clock service will be as follows: Organ prelude; processional hymn, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today," Worgan; Communion service, Simper in E flat; hymn, "Jesus Lives," Gauntlett; anthem, "Christ is Risen from the Dead," Roberts; recessional hymn, "The Strife is O'er," Palestrina; organ postlude.

Evensong, 7:30; organ prelude; processional hymn, "Christ the Lord is Risen Today," Rimbault; Magnificat, Nunc Dimittis; hymn, "Angels Rolled the Rock Away," Roper; anthem, "Awake Thou That Sleepest," Adlam; hymn, "God That Madest Earth and Heaven," Monk; recessional hymn, "He is Risen," Neander. The music will be under the direction of Juan A. Babcock and Miss Laura Long, organist.

St. Stephen's Church.

At St. Stephen's, in the Netherwood district, there will be Holy Communion at 7:30 and 11 o'clock in the morning. At the latter service the following program will be sung: processional hymn, 110; Communion service in E flat, Haynes; hymn 116; offertory anthem, hymn 121; recessional hymn, 118. The gloria, kyrie, sanctus, benedictus, Agnus Dei, and gloria in excelsis will be from the service by Haynes. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon there will be a service for the children at which the rector, Rev. Elory G. Bowers, will make an address and the customary distribution of plants will be made.

Crescent Avenue Church.

At the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church there will be a special musical service in the evening with a preliminary organ recital by Alexander Russell: Organ prelude, (a), Pilgrims' Chorus, Tannhauser; (b), Good Friday Spell, Parsifal; anthem, "As it Began to Dawn," Martin; offertory solo, "The Resurrection," Shelley; and a chorus from Gounod's Redemption; organ postlude, "Festal March," Best. At the morning service this will be the program; Organ prelude, "Grand Chorus," Renaud; anthem, "He is Not Here, but is Risen," Hawley; "Ring Out Glad Bells," Bartlett; "Easter Carol" (response), Alex Russell; offertory solo, "Hosannah," Granier; organ postlude, "Easter Morning," Otto Malling.

A quartet will furnish the Easter music at the Congregational church at 10:30 in the morning and includes a violin solo, "Cantilent," Golterman; anthem, "Speak Ye Comfortably," Starckley; duet, "Love Divine;" anthem, "Mary Magdalene," Warren; anthem, "Awake Thou That Sleepest," Maker. The Sunday school service at 11:55 will include carols, primary class songs and an Easter talk by the pastor, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich.

Monroe Avenue M. E.

The Easter program at the Monroe Avenue church will be elaborate, as usual, and will begin with a sunrise meeting at 6:30, conducted by the Epworth League, John McCormack leading. The public is cordially invited. The regular morning service will be held at 10:30 and for the most part will comprise exercises by the Sunday school departments in charge of Rev. C. S. Kemble and Assistant Superintendent Edward H. Beekman. The regular Epworth League meeting will be held at 7:15 in the evening and the regular preaching service at 8. The pastor will preach from the sermon, "What is the use of believing in a resurrection."

The floral decorations will be a feature at this church. They have been arranged by John McCormack and will add greatly to the observance of the day. A large green cross, hung with Easter lillies and cut flowers rises from a floral mound in the forward part of the platform, and banks of palms and plants form a background. The arrangement is very striking.

Park Avenue Baptist.

The morning service at the Park Avenue Baptist church is to be in charge of the Sunday school and the following Easter program will be rendered:

Selection, orchestra; prayer, pastor; anthem, choir; carol, "This is the Happy Morning, school; selection, "Ring Ye Bells," young women's chorus; recitation, Frances Beals; song, "The Lilies," elementary department; recitation, "A Little Blossom," Helen Parker; carol, "Hallelujah, Christ is Risen," school; offertory, anthem, choir; carol, "Music is Sounding," school; recitation, "The Bouquet," Gladys Hadley; solo, "The Palms," Miss Edith Bechtel; recitation, "A Child's Thought of Jesus," Sarah Johnson; selection, "Shine on, O Star," young ladies' chorus; carol, "I Know That My Redeemer Lives," school; recitation, "Everything is Happy Now," Emily VanWinkle; recitation, "Easter Offering," five members of elementary department; Easter song, elementary department; carol, "Low in the Grave," school; exercise, 'Nature's Easter Story," four intermediates; selection, "Long Ago," young women's chorus; exercise, "The Cross and Crown," eight intermediates; carol, "Gone are Earth's Shadows," school; address by the pstor, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire; carol, "Rejoice Evermore," school; benediction, pastor; selection, orchestra.

An orchestra of twelve pieces, under the direction of A. S. Mosher, will accompany the singing of the carols by the school, in addition to rendering three selections of their own. The superintendent, George E. Hall, is to have charge of the program.

Netherwood Reformed Church.

Organ prelude, "Ave Verum," Mozart; doxology, invocation, anthem, "The Risen Lord," Miles; psalter, Gloria Patri; scripture reading; hymn, 277; offertory solo, by George W. Stout, a brother of the pastor; hymn, 275; sermon, "Christ Risen."

Following the sermon the quartet choir will sing "The Open Gates of Glory," Tyler, followed by hymn 290. The baptism of children will take place immediately after the singing of the hymn. The closing hymn will be No. 717 and the organ postlude the Credo from Haydn's first mass. In the evening the Sunday school will hold their Easter exercises including carols and recitations. The offertory will be a duet by two of the youngest children and the evening offering will also be

TO STUDY WIRELESS AT CAMP WAWAYANDA

Wireless operating will occupy some of the time of the boys in the Wawayanda Camp this summer, according to plans now being made by W. A. Bingaman, leader of the Boys' Camp. Complete apparatus will be taken along and set up and much sport is promised especially to those who have been interested in the science at the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Bingaman said this morning, that he had received twenty-eight applications for accommodations at the summer camp. It will be the largest delegation ever registered from this city. Eight of the boys will remain for the entire month of July and twenty will select the first or second half of the month.

Joseph Sattels, who won the quoit championship at the camp last year is one member of the camp wireless committee which held its first meeting in Newark today.

GRAND LODGE OFFICERS VISITED LYDIA CHAPTER

Lydia Chapter, Order Eastern Star, received an official visit last night from a number of the grand lodge officers, together with the most worthy matron of the State of New York, as well as prominent representatives from all parts of the State and many master masons from this city. The grand lodge officers were Mrs. Marie Baum, most worthy grand matron; Charles Meiman, most worthy grand patron; Mrs. William Covington, right worthy grand conductress; Mrs. William Boerman, worthy grand warden, Mrs. Charles Meiman, worthy grand marshal; Mrs. William White, grand electa.

There were nearly two hundred members of the order present, and Lydia Chapter provided handsome entertainment for the visitors. In connection with the visitation, Lydia Chapter was inspected by the grand lodge officers and the chapter was highly complimented for its fine showing during the past year and the admirable way in which it performed its work. During the evening two candidates were initiated. After the business of the evening an elaborate banquet was served in the large dining room of the Masonic Hall Association, and there were a number of short speeches.

Mrs. Louis H. Echelberger and son, Louis, Jr., of McCall Ferry, Pa., are visiting Mrs. Echelberger's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Campbell, of Grove street.

FIGHT EXTRADITION

Richard Hone Wife Deserter, Resorts to Habeas Corpus Proceedings.

HEARING IN NEW YORK TODAY.

Gov. Dix Granted Extradition Yesterday But Prisoner Battles Against Being Brought Back to Union County.

Richard T. Hone, formerly of this city and now residing in New York, against whom extradition papers were signed yesterday by Governor Dix, of New York, is making a fight against being brought to Union county, for trial on a charge of desertion, made by his wife. Chief of Police Kiely accompanied Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., to New York today where argument on habeas corpus proceedings will take place before a justice of the Supreme court.

Hone, it is alleged, deserted his wife while living in this city, several months ago after giving bonds to pay her $5 per week. It is allaged that he took with him when he left a young woman known as Jennie Thorne, who came here with Hone from Easton, Pa., to act as his housekeeper. He has one daughter, Lizzie, eighteen years old, who presumably has been with her father in New York, as she has not been seen in this city for some time.

Hone gave as his reason for deserting his wife the first time that she is an habitual drunkard and was not a fit person to care for their daughter. Mrs. Hone denied the allegation.

ARRAIGNED IN COURT ON TWO INDICTMENTS.

Egbert Scribner, of Grove street, was arraigned in the Somerset County Court, this morning, on two counts found against him by the Grand Jury. One was for purchasing stolen property and the other buying from minors. He pleaded not guilty and was released in $400 bail furnished by himself to appear for trial later.

The four borough boys from whom Scribner is alleged to have bought about $20 worth of stolen lead pipe, will be arraigned in the Somerset Juvenile court next Friday for sentence.

THE WEATHER.

Unsettled, probably showers; cooler tonight; Sunday fair and cooler; N.W. winds.

MOVINC PICTURES TO ILLUSTRATE LECTURE

An afternoon with the Edison moving pictures has been arranged by the New Jersey State Food Committee of the Consumers' League and the Legislative Committee, Woman's Club, of Orange, to be held Monday afternoon, April 24, at 3:30 o'clock at the Woman's Club, Prospect and William streets, East Orange.

Mrs. Charles T. Gwynne will be chairman of the meeting and Mrs. William Downs, the representative of the Legislative committee. The program: Milk, J. Scott McNutt, health officer, Orange; film, "The Man Who Learned;" "Child Labor," Mrs. G. W. B. Cushing, president Consumers' League of New Jersey; film, "The Wedding Bells;" "Transfer of Tuberculosis to Man by Milk," Dr. H. L. Colt, of Newark; film, "The Story of the Red Cross;" "What the Moving Picture Show Can Do," L. G. Peloubet; film, selected; special music.

GOOD PRODUCTION AT THE THEATRE TONIGHT

John E. Henshaw, who will be remembered as one of the famous team of Henshaw and TenBroeck, will return to Plainfield today in the new serio-comic play, "The Best People On Earth." It will be at the Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight. The show is up-to-date in music, comedy and effects, appealing to all classes whether B. P. O. E.'s or not.

The splendid supporting cast selected by Mr. Henshaw includes Miss Frances Golden, who was prima donna in "The Chinese Honeymoon" and also Miss Grace Avery, a talented young actress, who recently closed a long engagement as "Kate" in "Way Down East." Miss Avery is the daughter of G. H. P. McVay, a well known New York newspaper man and has been very successful in her profession. When only a child she enjoyed the honor of dedicating the Harlem ship canal, her father then being the editor of the Up-Town News. She has a leading role in "The Best People On Earth" and contributes no small part to the success of the production. The opportunity to see her should not be missed.

Mrs. Eli Long, of Grove street, is recovering from a severe attack of grip.

Mrs. E. Johnson has removed her boarding house from Grove street to 108-112 Central avenue.

TO HEAR CITIZENS

East End Residents to Discuss the Inadequacy of the Fire Protection.

BEFORE THE FIRE COMMITTEE.

R. C. Woodhouse and Siegfried Arens Express their Views on the Unfortunate Condition of Affairs.

Robert C. Woodhouse and Sigfried Arens, together with other citizens, will appear before the Councilmanic fire committee Monday night and present arguments to show the inadequacy of the fire protection afforded residents especially in the Netherwood section of the city and also the great advantage to be gained by introducing an automobile fire apparatus in place of relying upon horse-drawn apparatus. Mr. Arens especially has suffered on several occasions through a lack of proper protection and on one or two occasions the apparatus has been delayed in reaching fires at his home because the horses were unable to get there on time.

Mr. Woodhouse has carefully prepared a statement, giving facts and figures to prove the value of automobile apparatus over that drawn by horses and he says that he will show that it will be economy for the city to make the change. He has considerable knowledge, it is said, on the subject and will be ready to offer convincing facts.

Other citizens are expected to attend the meeting and have something to say on the subject, and will urge that better protection be given to the residential sections of the city. It was remarked today that if the Underwriters' Association became cognizant of the local situation it would probably compel the city to make a number of changes simply as a protection to property throughout the city. It is also said that fire insurance rates are quite apt to take a jump unless something is done in the near future.

Nothing definite has been reported as yet regarding the settlement for the team of horses secured for the Netherwood fire house, one of which died, but it was understood today that the city will undoubtedly be forced to pay for the dead animal. Efforts, it is said, are being made to compromise with Fiss, Dier & Carroll from whom the team was obtained.

MODEL PHONE SERVICE IN QUEEN CITY HOTEL

That the new Queen City Hotel will be up-to-the-minute seems to be assured. In preparation for coming events Manager Peter Floerisch will install a telephone system which will be equal to that of any New York hotel and in so doing institute a service not heretofore obtainable in any hostelry in this city.

As for getting up in the morning, it will be easy for the operator at the new switchboard, which was placed on exhibition today by the New York Telephone Company, to call you. All you will have to do is to leave your order at the clerk's desk and your bell will ring until you get from under the covers and answer. Then you're sure you're up to stay up.

Manager Floersch knows that telephone service has become a necessity in all branches of business, but particularly is this so in the hotel business. When a guest is to be aroused at a certain hour in the morning he formerly had to depend upon the memory of the night clerk. But with the new system all the guest has to do is to notify the night operator at the switchboard and, presto! the work is done.

The telephone in this instance, as has been found true in all the big hotels in other cities, will do away with the bell boy service and insure the guests of prompt attention to their wants without the added expense to the management of extra help. The swtihcboard, which will be installed as soon as the new hotel's floors are completed, has a capacity of ninety instruments. Every room in the hotel will be equipped with the common battery type of instrument and will answer every requirement of a complete telephone as though in a private dwelling.

Manager P. H. Burns, of the local exchange, explained the advantages of the latest devised system for communicating with the outside world from the rooms of a hotel or any other place. It involves considerable work at the outset, but when complete is the most simple yet practical thing in telephony. An operator will be at the exchange desk at all hours and it is quite likely that experienced operators will be engaged from among former employees of the telephone company's office.

BUILDING A ROAD TO BLOCK SEWER

Anticipating Adverse Action of State Board of Health Bound Brook Rushes New Highway Over Site.

Anticipating that the decision of the State Board of Health expected on Tuesday may be favorable to North Plainfield in its application for certain rights in establishing a sewage disposal plant, the residents of Bound Brook and several wealthy property-owners in North Plainfield township, are rushing the building of a new road, about three-quarters of a mile in length, which runs directly across the Zvolnck farm, where the borough had selected a site for the beds.

This work was started about three weeks ago, when the borough, through the influence of Senator Frelinghuysen, secured favorable legislation, and recently a large gang of men together with about twenty teams, were put to work on the improvement. It is expected that the road will be completed tonight, that is so far as the opening is concerned. It is proposed to macadamize the thoroughfare.

The road is an extension of the old "back road," which skirts the mountain and will make a continuous thoroughfare from Plainfield to Chimney Rock and eventually to Pluckemin, without going to Bound Brook. The improvements planned by the wealthy property-owners, who recently acquired the tract, also include the erection of a number of fine dwellings, all of which they believe will effectually block North Plainfield in its efforts to locate sewage beds in that vicinity, which it is claimed, would be also very objectionable to Bound Brook.

North Plainfield proposes to secure land for its sewage beds through condemnation proceedings, and it is still believed that it will be successful in its purpose. The opening of the road and possible erection of several dwellings will no doubt play and important part in the scheme of the borough. Some of the property-owners deny that this is a move on their part to block North Plainfield, saying that the improvement was planned some time ago.

The survey for the road was made several years ago, it is said, but the actual work not undertaken because of one or two objectors. This has been overcome and now the improvement is being made.

SOCCER FOOTBALL CLUB HAS A REAL JOLLY TIME.

The officers-elect of the Plainfield Association Football Club were tendered a "stag" party at the club rooms, last night, President Thomas B. Douglas was in charge of the affair. The evening was spent in enjoying a fine program of vocal and instrumental music, Samuel Sutton being at the piano.

Songs were contributed by John Page, Peter Neil, John Donaldson, William Spalding, Hugh Hosie, Richrad Hennessy, Oswald Woolgar, Samuel Sutton, John Craig, James Henderson, James McInnes, Thomas B. Douglas, William Brainewood, Bernard Eglinton, Walter Howe, John Young, William Bottomley and readings by James Brown and Walter Howe. Refreshments were served at intervals during the evening and all had an enjoyable time.

Continue Billiard Tourney.

The billiard tournament being run off by the Plainfield Association Football Club has now narrowed down to thirteen contestants and another round was drawn last night as follows: W. Braidewood vs. T. Douglas, Robert Baillie vs. A. Campbell, C. Woolgar vs. W. Crawford, D. Hennessy vs. H. Fenton, M. O'Connors vs. G. Pearson, G. Heaume vs. J. Clifton. W. Spaulding draw a bye. All ties not played by April 24 will be forfeited.

Will Hold a Basket Social.

The adult Bible class, including the Home department and the officers and teachers of the First Presbyterian church Sunday-school, will hold a basket social in the parlors of the church, next Tuesday evening. A full attendance of all the members is requested.

Distinctive Houses.

For the discriminating will be built to suit purchaser. Location of great national beauty. Stillman Estate Agency, broker or room 708, 76 William street, New York City.

HOPE'S MINSTRELS MAKE NINTH ANNUAL BOW TO PUBLIC NEXT WEEK

Determined to eclipse all previous efforts in the line of black-face entertainment, the Hope minstrel troupe announces itself in readiness for the third annual performance at the chapel next week. The presentations will be made on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday nights and if the advance sale of seats is any criterion, capacity audiences will be in evidence on each occasion. Rehearsals have been in progress for the past two months under the leadership of Clifford Braider, who has gotten the full program in applepie order.

The show is being conducted by the William N. Runyon Association with Benjamin Evans acting as general chairman. The troupe for the most part comprises young men well versed in the amateur minstrel game, some of them having been appearing in similar productions for the past ten years. Mr. Evans will act as interlocutor in the first part and the ends and their song numbers will be as follows:

"If He Comes in I'm Going Out," Russell Randolph; "The Moonlight Glide," Barton Davis; "The Jingle of Jungle Joe," Fred Miller; "Out of the Fryin' Pan into the Fire,' George Rittenhouse; topical song, "If I had the Mayor's Job for Just a Day," Tom Muir; "Jimmy Valentine," William J. Firstbrook. There will also be ballads by Harry Kartscher, Edward Harding, Jr., Roy Titsworth and John Jamison.

A striking effect will be produced in the first part by elaborate costumes and electrical displays. The finale will be very much out of the ordinary and one long remembered by the spectators. William Little will be electrician and William Schorb has charge of the calcium and lighting arrangements.

In the second part or olio, the following numbers will be given: Leo and Benjamin Berse, presenting an original skit, "The Yiddisher Gavotsky;" Herbert Smith, cellist; Harry Kartscher, impersonation and recitations; C. R. Bostwick, expert club swinging. The show will close with a screamingly funny after-piece, "A Bird in the Hand Gathers no moss." It has been arranged by Fred Miller, who has selected a cast of competent comedians.

During the intermissions, Silbert's orchestra of eight pieces will provide a musical program. The show will begin promptly at 8:15 and is scheduled to run two hours and a half. Some choice seat reservations are still to be had and may be obtained from members of the association.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE.

Plainfield People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease.

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistakable that they leave no ground for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy speels may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or dropsy. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Plainfield.

Miss Lena Wahl, 235 East Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I can endorse Doan's Kidney Pills highly. They did me so much good when I was suffering from pains in my back caused by disordered kidneys that I think there is nothing like them. The promptness with which Doan's Kidney Pills disposed of my trouble was surprising and gratifying. They not only removed the pain and lameness but strengthened my kidneys."

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

MICHAEL FINNERAN CALLED BY DEATH.

Elizabeth, April 15.—Michael Finnerman died at 6 o'clock last night at the St. Elizabeth Hospital. Death was due to heart affliction.

Mr. Finneran was 56 years old, and for the past ten years had been collector for the Wiedermayer Brewing Company, of Newark, having never missed a day with that concern. He had never been ill in his life until last November, when his health began to fail.

Mr. Finneran was born in Bethel, Sullivan county, New York, of Irish parents. He lived in this city about thirty years, coming here to take charge of a boat plying along Elizabethport. He was elected tax collector in 1891, serving ten years. He had been active in Democratic politics since coming to the city. He conducted the New Jersey collecting agency for many years, and was known to most Elizabethans by the title of "Judge." He also conducted a store on First street many years, and was connected with St. Patrick's church At the time of his death he was communicant of St. Mary's church. His aged mother, who lived with him at 441 Maple avenue, a brother, John, who lives at White Lake, Sullivan county, and a sister, Miss Anna Finneran, who lives with him, survive him. He never married.

The date for the funeral has not been set. Interment will be at Monticello, N. Y.

BASKET OF GREENBACKS.

Policeman Makes Rich Find in New Home.

Trenton, April 15.—A mass of torn paper money, sufficient to half fill a peach basket, was found by Patrolman Patrick Kirwick, at his newly-purchased home yesterday. Kirwick tore up the floor in his home to make some improvements and between the rafters he found this great pile of green paper. It took but a minute to ascertain that it was money real greenbacks. The certificates had been chewed by rats, and one of the rodents lay dead in the midst of the ruins.

It is thought that the money was horded and hid by some former owner, and then the rats started their destructive work. The pieces, several of which could be plainly distinguished as parts of $100 bills, were gathered together and sent to the Treasury Department at Washington.

Miss Agnes L. Smith, of East Sixth street, has returned from the St. James Mission, Lydea, Va.

ACTOR DENMAN THOMPSON DIES.

One of the oldest and best known actors in America, Denman Thompson, the man who made "The Old Homestead" famous, died at his country estate in West Swanzey, N. H., early yesterday. Mr. Thompson had been ill of heart trouble and uremia since last month.

Henry Denman Thompson was born in a log cabin in the hamlet of Beechwood, three miles from Girard, Pa., on October 15, 1833. Two years previous his father, Captain Rufus Thompson, had left West Swanzey, which in later years this boy of the wilderness was to make a household word as the setting for the "Old Homestead."

GOLF.

Regular play at the Deal Golf and Country Club has started earlier than usual this year. Many of the members are already putting in week ends at the club.

Prominent among the many improvements on the course are the widening and enlarging of the tees, while practically all of the traps are being made deeper. Going to the eighth hole the centre of the bunker has been taken away and a new gravelike trap substituted. To No. 9 the bunker to be carried on the second shot has been made higher, so that now nothing short of two good shots will get over.

Down the hill to the tenth the middle of the old-fashioned cross bunker has been cut away, so as to make room for a deep hazard immediately in front of the green. The short thirteenth hole, known as the Marl Pit, is more tricky than ever, for the reason that the green is nearly surrounded by a circular trap. Going to the fourteenth the ditch has been widened sufficiently to make quite a water hazard. A small lake with waterfall now has to be negotiated while playing the sixteentn hole. The other night Joseph M. Byrne, the club's former president, entertained the officers and directors at dinner.

Those long suffering enthusiasts who play over the public links at Forest Park, in Brooklyn, can take heart once more again, for the word has been passed around that the course will be opened for play on April 19. Several weeks ago the links were temporarily closed by order of the authorities.

KILLED WIFE WITH AX, HE ADMITS.

Jersey City, April 15.—After making an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Helen Kwiatkowski, who was found dead in her home, 319 Hendersoa street, Thursday night, Deputy County Physician Hasking decided yesterday the wound in her head was not made by a bullet, as at first supposed. The woman's skull was fractured and Dr. Hasking said the wound was made by a blunt instrument.

Later in the day Joseph Kwiatkowski, the woman's husband, who had been placed under arrest, confessed that he had killed his wife and that the weapon he used was an ax. He said he discovered that his wife had been receiving the attention of other men in his absence. Kwiatkowski said he had quarreled with his wife Wednesday night and that he left the house and did not return until 8:30 a. m. Thursday. His wife was asleep in bed. He decided to kill her and hit her twice on the head with the axe. When he found his wife was dead he planned to escape, but, having no money, made up his mind to remain in the neighborhood and endeavor to make it appear the crime was committed by one of her callers.

The axe with which Kwiatkowski killed his wife was found in a corner of the room. It was blood-stained and will be a mute witness against the murderer in his trial.

Another Sherlock Holmes Story.

Congratulations have been pouring in from every quarter since the New York Sunday World commenced giving away the series of Sherlock Holmes stories in booklet form as free suplements with its regular editions. The complete story booklet to go with next Sunday's World is entitled "The Adventure of the Norwood Builder." Eleven more of the series will follow, one each Sunday for eleven consecutive Sundays. Don't miss one of this wonderful set of detective narratives. Order the Sunday World for the next month or two from your newsdealer in advance.

Plainfield, N. J., April 15, 1911.

State Superintendent of Schools Charles J. Baxter, who has held his position under four governors, has sent out an open letter criticising the school investigation brought about by the Senate committee. He is aginst a single head for the State school system, saying that it will bring the whole affair into politics, place too much power in the hands of one man and render the system built up during the last fifteen years null and void.—News dispatch.

Tis official act on the part of the State Superintendent of Schools will impress many that the present head of the public school system is not above playing politics himself.

Among those prominently mentioned to succeed Rev. Dr. George Edward Reed as president of Dickinson College is Rev. Abel C. McCrea, formerly pastor of the largest Methodist Episcopal church here and more recently pastor of the largest one in Newark. Dr. McCrea is at present the minister of the largest church of that denomination in Jersey City. He is a large man himself in many respects. He is large in mental equipment, large in executive ability and in genial qualities. He has the knack of making friends wherever he goes and of commanding their respect and influence. And he is liberal and consistent in his views. In fact he is just the sort of a man to fill the position of a president of an institution of learning. Dickinson could not pick a better man for the place.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

In the selection for the present touring company for John E. Henshaw's new comedy "Best People on Earth," the management exercised great care, not only in engaging artists of positive ability but "types" that fill the visual requirements of the roles and convey to the auditors the best possible effect of the roles and living their parts on the stage. This commendable and unusual effort assures a great deal of interest and enjoyment to audiences who care less for "acting" than for realizing true embodiment of character. The moral of "Best People on Earth," is pure and uplifting. One feels ever so much better after seeing it and the eminent New York Divine, the Rev. Rollin Howard in a recent sermon was gracious enough to say "Best People on Earth" teaches a better lesson than the clergy have ever been able to deliver. The dramatist is at his best in this play and its real merit justifies its remarkable success. John E. Henshaw in "Best People on Earth" will be at the Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight.

"John Ganton" is a powerful drama and was running in New York at the Lyric theatre the same time as "The Witching Hour," "Gentleman from Mississippi," "Music Master" and other great successes and without comparisons, which are odious at all times, "The Great John Ganton," outlived them all (with probably one exception.)) The play is human and right up to the modern stage writing, not a character is overdrawn, but scenes are taken right from life. The Stock Yards, the plotting, the Stock Exchange, the ruining of men, Capital fighting Labor and in the midst of all this comes a pretty story with such a great moral lesson, that it grips the audience like a vice. Good books, good sermons and good plays all walk hand in hand and teaches as well as entertains, and this you get in "The Great John Ganton," at the Plainfield theatre, next Tuesday night, presented by Myrkle-Harder Company.

Rev. Thomas S. Robjent, of New York, will preach at the Unitarian church on Park avenue, tomorrow morning at 10:30, his subject being: "Is Death the End?"

"Doctrine of the Atonement," will be the subject of the lesson sermon at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in the Babcock building, at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. The Sunday-school will meet at 10 o'clock.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church will omit its meeting at 6:45 o'clock tomorrow evening, the sunrise meeting at 6:45 tomorrow morning taking the place of the other service. F. H. Andrews will lead.

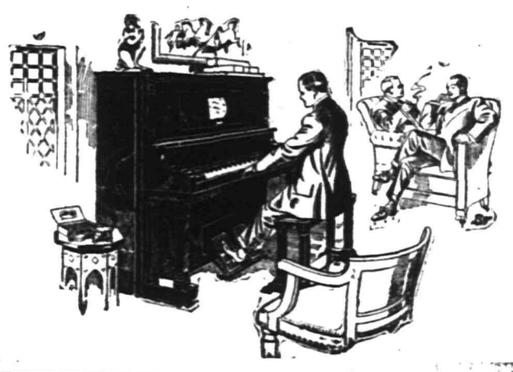
The Virtuolo



MUSIC is a language—the composer's language by which he tells you the things he sees and feels.

Playing music is feeling the things the composer felt. Whether or not you really feel them depends on the kind of a player-piano you have.

A new player-piano has been invented. It is called the Virtuolo Piano. Ten years from now all player-pianos will have to be built like it.

The ease with which a novice can play even the most difficult pieces on the Virtuolo is due to a new invention in player-piano building called "the air-muscle finger." We will explain the principle of the "air-muscle finger" at our store. Space won't permit it here.

These "air-muscle fingers" play inside the piano almost direct on the strings. They are as sensitive as a nerve. By the easy and simple operation of two buttons, two levers and the pedals, you can make them play for you a difficult piece like "A Wandering Iceberg." You can make the chords of sunshine glisten over the iceberg; you can make the heavy chords of the heaving waves resound tempestuous and beautiful, and at the close you will be surprised how you can make these "air-muscle fingers" touch the strings lighter and lighter until they die out deliciously into nothingness.

Or, if you wish to play ragtime or a popular air, you can make the Virtuolo "air-muscle fingers" fill you and your guests with all the ecstasies of joy that these pieces create in the theatres.

THERE really isn't any reason why you shouldn't have a Virtuolo Player-Piano playing in your home tomorrow night. The price is reasonable, terms are easy, and it is manufactured and guaranteed by the Hallet & Davis Piano Company of Boston, who have been leading art piano builders for 71 years.

The Virtuolo in a Hallet & Davis upright piano retails at $750; terms, $50 cash and $15 per month.

The Virtuolo in a Conway upright retails at $550 to $600; terms, $25 cash and $12 per month.

If in 30 days you are not satisfied with your Virtuolo, we will take it back, without expense to you, refund all you have paid, and cancel your contract.

Pianos or unsatisfactory player-pianos taken in exchange.

Come in and hear the ingenious "air-muscle fingers" of the Virtuolo play today. Whether you wish to purchase or not doesn't matter. You are very welcome. Our automobile will bring you to our store and back home if you write or 'phone us. If you put it off you will never come.

ORGANIZED WIRELESS SOCIETY AT EASTON

After a successful trip to Easton yesterday, Charles G. August, organizer of the New Jersey Wireless Association, returned this morning and reported having formed the Easton Wireless Association, which now becomes through an unanimous vote, a member of the New Jersey Wireless Association.

Mr. August was accompanied by his son, L. W. August, who illustrated on the blackboard some of the subjects which his father described to the fifty-eight wireless enthusiastics present. Both Mr. August and his son received a cordial welcome from Secretary E. D. Moyer, of the Easton Y. M. C. A. and the new association promises to become just as lively as the Plainfield organization.

It is intended to organize other wireless clubs throughout the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey and the by-laws, which are not yet in shape to print, were accepted from the outline given by Mr. August.

TOMORROW'S WEATHER.

The official weather forecast for tomorrow is fair and cooler. For tonight, unsettled conditions with probable showers are predicted. Early today the official government prophecy for Easter was increasing cloudiness, which means anything from a mild wind to a hurricane or rain or snow. Later in the day came the report that it would be fair and colder tomorrow.

Mischievous Boys.

Because William Ryan, a fourteen year old boy failed to appear in court this morning, together with Brila and Julius Vargo and George Boland, Judge DeMeza was compelled to postpone the hearing in the charge made by Detective Lavarette, of the Central Railroad force who charges the boys with breaking the signal bell at Rock avenue. Ryan will answer to the charge next Saturday morning with the other boys.

"Reminiscences of Civil War."

Captain Joel Wilson, of the Wilson Military Academy, Findern, will speak before the Men's Club of the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow night at 8 o'clock on "Reminiscences of the Civil War," and a general invitation is extended to all to hear the speaker, especially veterans of the Civil War.

Played Ball in the Street.

Arthur Parsons, accused of playing baseball in the streets yesterday, was released with a warning by Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning after being warned to desist from the practice.

CANDIDATE FOR HEAD OF DICKINSON COLLEGE

Rev. Dr. Abel C. McCrea, former pastor of the First M. E. church, and now pastor of a large church in Jersey City, is prominently mentioned as the successor to Rev. Dr. George Edward Reed, president of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., whos resignation takes effect in June. A successor will probobly not be chosen by the board of trustees before the June commencement.

Dr. McCrea is a graduate of Dickinson. Five years ago the degree of doctor of divinity was conferred upon him by his alma mater. He has always shown a deep interest in the institution, frequently visiting there to keep in touch with its affairs.

The special committee appointed by the board of trustees of the college to select a list of available candidates for the post and to present them to the board met and organized in Philadelphia, yesterday. Members of the committee, which will meet here again in two weeks are: Dr. S. B. Carroll, of Baltimore; former Judge Edward W. Biddle, of Carlisle; former Governor Edward C. Stokes, of Trenton, N. J., Horatio C. King, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; the Rev. Charles W. Straw, of Frankford, and Charles J Hepburn, an attorney, of Philadelphia.

Complainant Must Appear.

Following a complaint made by Solomon Mann, a Third treet grocer, against three boys for breaking a window in his store, the three were arrested and brought before Judge DeMeza this morning. The complainant failed to appear and the court dismissed the case, saying that in such cases as these where the complainant fails to appear he will take the same course. Mann 'phoned the Judge that he was too busy to appear.

Hearing Postponed.

The case of Albert Olsen against Joseph Manhattan was again postponed at request of counsel this morning until next Saturday morning. Olsen accuses Manhattan of abusing him and a woman. Francis J. Blatz appeared for Manhattan and V. W. Nash, Jr., for the complainant.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY,
City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., March 28, 1911.

AN ORDINANCE TO ESTABLISH A BUILDING CODE.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

CHAPTER I.

SECTION 1.

Purpose of Code.

The Building Code.—The following provisions shall constitute the Building Code of the City of Plainfield, and shall affect and relate to the construction, alteration, demolition or removal of buildings or structures erected or to be erected in said City.

CHAPTER II.

Powers, Duties, Penalties, etc.

SECTION 2.

(1) Powers and Duties of the Inspector of Buildings.—The Inspector of Buildings shall have power, and it shall be his duty, subject to the provisions of this Code, to issue notices of violation, certificates, permits and notices of unsafe conditions and survey, to make rules and regulations and to issue notices thereunder; to approve or reject plans, applications, detail drawings and amendments thereto; to decide upon and make orders in relation to variations and modifications; to pass upon questions relative to the mode, manner of construction, or materials to be used in the erection, alteration or removal of buildings, to require that such mode, manner of construction or materials shall conform to the true intent and meaning of the several provisions of this Code; to authorize the Corporation Counsel to institute any and all actions that may seem appropriate or necessary for the enforcement of its provisions; or if in the judgment of the said Inspector of Buildings the interests of the City so require, to make report on any matter to the Common Council with request for instructions.

(2) During Building Operations.—The provisions of this Code shall not prevent the lawful, ordinary and temporary use of building materials, structures and appurtenances during building operations upon city, public or private property, except as herein otherwise provided.

(3) Order Thereon, With or Without a Hearing.—The Inspector may deny any application without a hearing, or may fix a date within a reasonable time for a hearing upon such application, but shall, as soon as a decision is rendered, enter an order thereon. Such application, decision and order shall be filed in the Office of the Inspector of Buildings. If the application be granted or denied, a certified copy of the order thereon shall be immediately issued by the Inspector of Buildings to the applicant.

(4) Inspection During Construction.—It shall be the duty of the Inspector personally or by Deputy, to diligently inspect every building while in course of erection, and to see that it is constructed in accordance with the ordinances of the City relating thereto.

(5) Duty of Counsel to Proceed.—The Inspector of Buildings shall authorize the Corporation Counsel in writing, immediately upon receipt of evidence of a violation, or upon failure of a person to comply with a notice concerning a violation within the time specified therein, to institute the proper action to enforce the provisions of this Code. The Corporation Counsel shall thereupon, if the facts of the case so warrant, institute such an action on behalf of the City or apply for such an order as may seem appropriate to restrain, correct or remove such violation or enforce said ordinance or collect the penalty thereof from the offending parties. If in the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, the interests of the City so require, he may in the first instance make report to the Common Council and the Common Council may then instruct him to take such action as it may deem proper.

(6) Notices in Writing.—All written notices of violation shall be issued in duplicate by the Inspector of Buildings, shall have his name and seal affixed thereto, and one shall immediately be filed in his office.

(7) Penalty and Persons Liable.—That the owner or owners of any building or structure or part thereof, upon which any violation of this ordinance in any part or section may be placed, or shall exist, and any architect or employer, or superintendent, or other persons who shall fail to comply with any of the requirements or provisions of this ordinance in any particular, or who shall in any degree depart from the conditions of the detailed specifications and plans submitted, or any permit issued thereunder, shall severally be deemed to have violated this ordinance, and upon conviction shall, for each and every violation, respectively, be punished by a fine not exceeding Twenty (20) dollars, and a further penalty not exceeding Fifty Dollars for each day the provisions of this ordinance are not complied with by the owner, contractor or such other persons as shall have control of the building; provided, that the penalties provided by this paragraph shall not apply to the particular offences specified in the next succeeding paragraph of this section.

(8) Additional Penalty.—That any and all of the aforementioned persons who after service of due and proper notice as herein prescribed, shall fail to comply with said notice within ten days, after such service, shall on conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding One Hundred (100) dollars.

(9) Service of Notice.—Said notice of violation shall contain a description of the building, premises or property upon which said violation shall have been put, or may exist, or which may be deemed dangerous or unsafe, or to which said notice shall refer; shall specify the dangerous or unsafe condition or other violation of the ordinance complained of, and require removal of any dangerous or unsafe conditions, and strict compliance with the ordinance, and may be served personally upon the person or persons liable for violation, or by leaving said notice at the residence or place of business of such person or persons, or by leaving said notice with a member of the family of such person or persons over fourteen years of age, informing such person with whom said notice is left, of its contents.

Service by Mail.—If the person or persons or any of them to whom the said notice is addressed do not reside in said City, and cannot by diligent search be found therein, then the said notice may be served by posting a copy of the same in a conspicuous place upon the premises, and by also depositing a copy thereof in the post office of said City, enclosed in a sealed wrapper addressed to the said person or persons at his or their last known place of residence with the postage paid thereon; and said posting and mailing of a copy of said notice shall be equivalent to a personal service of said notice.

(10) Remitting Penalties.—The Common Council may in its discretion, good and sufficient cause being shown therefor, remit any fine or fines, penalty or penalties, which any person or persons may have incurred or may hereafter incur under any of the provisions of this section; but no fine or penalty shall be remitted for any such violation until the act or omission constituting such violation, shall have been satisfactorily corrected and such correction evidenced by the Inspector's certificate.

(11) Seal and Badge.—The Inspector of Buildings shall have a seal and badge, to be approved by the Mayor.

(12) Right of Entry.—The Inspector of Buildings or his duly authorized Deputy, so far as it may be necessary for the performance of his duties, shall have the right to enter upon any real estate or buildings in said City upon exhibiting his badge.

(13) Inspector's and Employees' Liability.—Neither the Inspector of Buildings nor any person appointed, hired or employed by him, when acting in good faith and without malice, shall be liable for damages by reason of anything done by him under the provisions of this Code.

(14) Accounts, Annual Estimates; Expenditures.—The Inspector of Buildings shall keep accurate and detailed accounts, in a form approved by the Mayor, of all moneys received and expended by him, the source from which they are received and the purposes for which they are expended.

(15) Record of Applications; Public Documents.—The Inspector of Buildings shall keep a record of all applications presented to him concerning, affecting or relating to the construction, alteration or removal of buildings. Such record shall include the date of the filing of each application; the name and address of the applicant; the name and address of the owner of the land upon which the building mentioned in said application is situated; the name and address of the architect, engineer and builders employed thereon; a designation of the premises by street number, or otherwise, sufficient to identify the same; a statement of the character and proposed use of such building, and a brief statement of the nature of the application, together with a memorandum of the decision of the Inspector upon such application and the date of rendition of such decision. The books containing such records and all papers required to be filed in the office of the Inspector of Buildings are hereby declared to be public records and report of the same shall be sent to the Common Council monthly.

(16) Unsafe and Dangerous Buildings, etc.—If in the opinion of the Inspector of Buildings, a building becomes unsafe or dangerous to life, limb or property, or because of any defective or illegal work, or work in violation of this Code, he or such person as he may duly authorize, may enjoin and restrain further work upon, remove all violations from, or vacate and prevent the use of the property, temporarily hire such experts, employees, mechanics, workmen and laborers, temporarily hire or purchase and furnish such materials, ways, works and means in and about the same as may be necessary to remove the danger, and may, when public safety requires, temporarily close the public highways adjacent thereto and require the assistance of the police or other Departments of the City of Plainfield.

(17) Failing Buildings, Aid to the Injured; Search for the Dead and Missing.—Should a building fall, or in the opinion of the Inspector of Buildings, persons be entrapped, he shall, with the aid and assistance of the Fire and Police Departments, or any other Department of the City called upon by him, immediately examine the building, take such steps as may be necessary to assist and aid the injured, and search for the dead and missing. He shall immediately take all necessary steps to prevent any further injury to life, limb or property, until further action, pursuant to the provisions of this Code. For such purpose he may temporarily hire the persons and temporarily hire or purchase the necessary materials, ways, works and means, called for by this Section.

CHAPTER III.

Applications, Plans and Drawings; Ordinary Repairs Without Notice; Demolishing Buildings.

SECTION 3.

Applications, Plans and Drawings.

(1) Approval Thereof.—No building or structure shall be erected, altered or removed except in conformity with the provisions of this Code, and after written approval of the Inspector of Buildings of the applications, plans and detail drawings, or the issuance of a written permit, and the work of erection, alteration, or removal shall strictly conform to such applications, plans and detail drawings, or to such permit, provided that if in the judgment of the Inspector of Buildings the erection of any proposed building or other structure or the proposed alteration of any existing building or other structure would be prejudicial to the interests of the City, he shall in such case, report thereon to the Common Council, and take such action thereon as the Common Council shall direct, and in the meantime shall suspend his ruling upon the application for such permit.

(2) Applications; Filing.—Before the erection or alterations of any building is begun, there shall be submitted to the Inspector of Buildings a verified application in duplicate on appropriate blanks to be furnished by said Inspector of Buildings, containing a detailed statement of the specifications and a full and complete copy of the plans of such proposed work, its intended cost, and such detailed structural drawings thereof as the Inspector of Buildings may require. The application shall state the full name, residence and business address (by street and number, whenever possible) of the owner of the building and of the owner of the real estate upon which the building is to be erected, altered, removed, describing the location thereof, and setting forth his authority to erect, alter or remove the same. In case adequate plans and statements are presented, the Inspector of Buildings may, at his discretion, issue an approval and permit for the construction of a part of the building before the approval of applications and plans of the complete structure.

(3) Amendments Thereto.—Applications to amend original applications, plans and detail drawings may be made in the same manner as required for original applications, and the Inspector of Buildings shall approve them, provided the application, plans and detail drawings, when so amended shall be in conformity with the provisions of this Code, and requirements of the Inspector of Buildings; and provided further, that if in the judgment of the Inspector of Buildings the allowing of the proposed amendments would be prejudicial to the interests of the City, he shall report thereon to the Common Council, and take such action thereon as the Common Council shall direct, and, in the meantime, shall suspend his ruling upon the application for such amendments.

(4) Revocation of Approval.—The Inspector of Buildings shall have power to revoke said approval in case of any intentional departure from the approved application, plans and detail drawings, or in case there shall be found in any application or any paper referred to therein any false statement or representation as to a material fact relating to the erection, alteration or removal of the building.

SECTION 4.

Ordinary Repairs Without Notice.

Ordinary repairs only may be made to a building without notice to the Inspector of Buildings, but such repairs shall not be construed to include the cutting away of any constructional support, whether wall, pier, column, girder or beams, or the removal, change or closing of any staircase or exit, or the erection, construction or placing of any furnace, heater, or heating system in any building.

SECTION 5.

Demolishing Buildings.

(1) Application.—Before the demolition or removal of any building is begun a verified application, on appropriate blanks to be furnished by the Inspector of Buildings, containing a statement of the facts in relation thereto, and as to the ownership and location thereof, shall be filed with the Inspector of Buildings, and a written permit obtained from him. Such permit shall expire by limitation two months from the date of its issue. The Inspector of Buildings shall be given not less than twenty-four hours' notice before the demolition of any building is begun.

(2) Demolishing the Building.—In demolishing any building, story after story shall be completely removed. No material shall be left upon a floor of any building in the course of demolition, but the bricks, timbers and other parts of each story shall be lowered to the ground immediately upon displacement. The material to be removed shall be properly wet to lay the dust incident to its removal.

(3) Removal to Other Site.—Permits for removal shall specify the time within which the removal shall be made. The removal of any wooden building or structure from without to within the fire limits is absolutely prohibited. No building that is not fireproof shall be removed from any point in the city limits to any point within or without the city without the permission of the Common Council first obtained, and no building shall be removed through the public streets of the city without the permission of the Common Council first obtained. Every application for permission to remove any building shall specifically state the place from and the place to which it is proposed to remove said building, and the street or streets, if any, through which it is proposed to carry the same.

(4) No frame building within the fire limits shall be removed except to lot without the fire limits.

CHAPTER IV.

Classification of Buildings and Construction.

SECTION 6.

Classification of Buildings.

(1) For the purposes of this ordinance all buildings within the city limits coming under its provisions shall be divided into three general classes, to be known as Public Buildings, Residence Buildings and Business Buildings. These general classes shall in turn be sub-divided into six classes, as designated in this section. Unless special exception is made, every provision of this ordinance applying to the erection of any building of a class shall apply to all buildings of that class, either when the general class or class designated alphabetically is referred to. In case any building is not specifically provided for or there is any doubt as to its classification, the Inspector of Buildings shall decide the class to which it belongs, the classification to be made according to the character of the building and the purposes for which it is intended. Whenever the purpose or use of a building is such that in part it would come under one class and in part under another class, it shall be constructed in its various parts so as to comply with all the provisions relating to each respective class. In case there is a conflict of provisions the provision securing the greater safety shall apply.

Public Buildings.

(2) Public Buildings shall be construed to mean and include all structures to which the general public has access, or in which there may be a congregation of people for civic, political, educational, religious or amusement purposes, and shall include the following:

Class A.—Municipal Buildings, Court Houses, Armories, Police Stations, Jails, Fire Houses, Schools, Colleges, Libraries, Museums, Theatres, Hospitals, Asylums. All buildings of this class hereafter erected shall be of fireproof construction.

Class B.—Churches, Amusement Halls, Public Halls, Lodge Rooms, Exhibition Buildings. All buildings of this class hereafter erected over thirty-six feet six inches in height shall be of fireproof construction. When under thirty-six feet six inches in height the first floor shall be of fireproof construction.

Residence Buildings.

(3) Shall be construed to mean and include all structures in which sleeping accommodations are provided and shall include the following:

Class C.—Hotels, Lodging Houses, Dormitories. All buildings of this class hereafter erected over thirty-six feet six inches in height shall be of fireproof construction. When under thirty-six feet six inches in height the first floor shall be of fireproof construction.

Class D.—Tenement Houses, Apartment Houses, Dwellings. All buildings of this class hereafter erected over fifty-nine feet in height shall be of fireproof construction. When over three stories in height, if the floor beams are of wood, all plaster on ceilings and stud partitions below the first and second floors of said beams shall be on metal lath or approved plaster board ⅜ inch thick, strongly secured.

(4) All other residences within the City limits to be constructed as required by the general conditions of this Code.

Business Buildings.

(5) Shall be construed to mean and include all structures used for, or adapted to, the transaction of business, the operation of machinery, the manufacture or storage of machinery or materials, the housing of horses or live stock, or for any or all industrial purposes, and shall include the following:

Class E.—Office Buildings, Lofts, Stores, Warehouses, Restaurants, Stables, Factories, Work Shops and Printing Houses. All buildings of this class hereafter erected over fifty-nine feet in height shall be of fireproof construction.

Class F.—Light and Power Plants, Car Barns, Garages, Laboratories, Foundries. All buildings of this class hereafter erected shall be of fireproof construction.

SECTION 7.

Classification of Construction.

For the purposes of this Code the various types of construction shall be classified and defined as Frame, Mill, Non-Fireproof, Reinforced Concrete and Fireproof Construction.

(A) Frame Building.—For requirements as to Frame Buildings, see Chapters 26, 27 and 28.

(B) Non-Fireproof Construction.—The term Non-Fireproof Construction shall apply to all buildings or structures of which the exterior walls shall be constructed of brick or other approved masonry of the thickness provided in this Code for varying conditions in height and area and in which the floors and roof, interior supports and other interior construction, may be wholly or in part of wood or other combustible materials, or of iron or steel that is not protected in the manner approved by this Code for fireproof construction.

(C) Mill Construction.—The term "Mill Construction," shall apply to buildings without hollow or concealed spaces, having brick walls not less than twelve inches in thickness for the top story and increasing in thickness according to section 46 of this Code; Roofs shall be of three-inch splined planking spiked directly to roof timbers not less than six inches in the least dimensions, covered with metal or other approved standard incombustible roof covering. Floors shall be solid without openings constructed of not less than three-inch splined planking covered with one inch top flooring laid crosswise or diagonally, properly nailed. Between the top flooring and the planking shall be placed not less than two thicknesses of waterproof material carefully laid to break joints and flashed at least three inches around all walls, posts, columns and openings, with mouldings or mop-boards. Size and spacing of floor timbers shall be suitable for the load to be carried, but the timbers shall in no case be less than eight inches in the least dimension, and shall rest on top of girders or on iron or steel plates in the wall. Girders shall rest on iron or steel plates in the walls and on iron or steel caps on columns, so arranged as to be self-releasing. All columns and posts shall rest on pintles, and the size and spacing thereof shall be suitable for the load to be carried, but no column or post for the top story shall be less than six inches in the least dimension or eight inches for all other stories. Columns, girders and beams, if of wood, shall be of solid material, and if of iron or steel shall be protected as called for in regular fireproof construction. All elevators, stairs, belts, pipes, shaftings and vents piercing floors shall be enclosed in towers having brick walls not less than eight inches in thickness, or reinforced concrete walls not less than six inches in thickness, and all openings therein shall be protected by standard automatic self-closing fire doors.

Buildings of mill construction shall not exceed seventy-five feet in height.

(D) Reinforced Concrete Construction.—For description of reinforced concrete construction see sections 22 and 104.

(E) Fireproof Construction.—For description of fireproof construction see chapters 23 and 24 of this Code.

CHAPTER V.

Limits of Area—Light and Ventilation.

SECTION 8.

(1) No building hereafter erected shall occupy a larger area of the building lot than the following: No buildings in Class A, B, C, D and E shall occupy more than ninety per centum of the lot area above the second tier of beams, where built on other than corner lots.

(2) No buildings in said classes shall occupy more than ninety-five per centum of the lot area above the second tier of beams where built on corner lots where the area of the lot does not exceed two thousand five hundred square feet.

(3) For buildings on corner lots of area exceeding two thousand five hundred square feet, the area in excess of two thousand five hundred square feet shall be governed by Clause One covering interior lots.

(4) All buildings occupying corner lots, fronting on three or more streets, where the maximum width does not exceed seventy-five feet, may occupy the entire lot area.

(5) For buildings covering an entire block not more than seventy-five feet wide no court shall be required.

SECTION 9.

Floor Areas Between Fire Walls.

(1) In all non-fireproof buildings hereafter erected, the open floor area between fire walls at least twelve inches in thickness shall not exceed the following; when fronting on one street, five thousand square feet; when fronting on two streets, seven thousand five hundred square feet; when fronting on three or more streets, ten thousand square feet. When a standard equipment of automatic sprinklers is provided the above floor areas may be increased fifty per centum.

(2) The open floor area between fire walls at least twelve inches in thickness of all fireproof buildings hereafter erected, except such buildings as are occupied for offices, hotels, armories, churches, light and power stations, exhibition buildings, theatres and such buildings as are herein otherwise provided for, shall not exceed the following: When fronting on one street, seven thousand five hundred square feet; when fronting on two streets, ten thousand square feet; when fronting on three or more streets, twelve thousand five hundred square feet; when a standard equipment of automatic sprinklers is provided, above areas may be increased fifty per centum.

(3) The open floor area between fire walls at least twelve inches in thickness of all fireproof buildings occupied as stores, when provided with a standard equipment of automatic sprinklers, shall not exceed above or below first story the general limits of area as herein provided for fireproof buildings. The area of the first story may, however, be increased, but shall not exceed thirty thousand square feet between fire walls. All interior openings in fire walls of such buildings shall not exceed eighty square feet in area and shall not be placed nearer than forty feet on centres.

SECTION 10.

CHAPTER VI.

Fire Limits.

(1) Fire Limits.—No frame building or construction except as provided in Sections 112 and 113 of this Code, shall be built hereafter, in the City of Plainfield within the following limits hereinafter referred to as the fire limits of said city.

(2) Extent of.—In the district contained within the City of Plainfield within the following boundary lines or within the additional space included within lines drawn one hundred and fifty feet beyond and parallel to the said boundary lines:

Beginning at the intersection of the centre line of Green Brook and the centre line of Elm Place, thence extending along the centre line of Elm Place to its intersection with the centre line of East Front Street, thence along the centre line of East Front Street to its intersection with the centre line of Washington Street, thence along the centre line of Washington Street to its intersection with the centre line of East Fourth Street, thence along the centre line of East Fourth Street to its intersection with the centre line of Watchung Avenue, thence along the centre line of Watchung Avenue, to its intersection with the centre line of East Fifth Street, thence along the centre lines of East Fifth Street and West Fifth Street respectively to the intersection of the centre line of the latter with the center line of Madison Avenue, thence along the centre line of Madison Avenue to its intersection with the centre line of West Fourth Street, thence along the centre line of West Fourth Street to the centre line of Central Avenue, thence along the centre line of Central Avenue to its intersection with the centre line of West Front Street, thence along the centre line of West Front Street to its intersection with the centre line of Grove Street, thence along the centre line of Grove Street to its intersection with the centre line of Green Brook, thence through the centre line of Green Brook to the place of beginning.

(3) Repairs to existing roofs.—Ordinary repairs to any existing combustible roofing within the said fire limits of said city may be made to the extent of twenty-five per centum thereof without permit therefor; but should necessary repairs or injury by fire, the elements or otherwise, require renewal of said roofing in excess of twenty-five per centum of its area, then said renewal in part or whole shall be made of metal, slate, tile, gravel, or other approved incombustible material.

CHAPTER VII.

Explosives—Combustibles—Storage of, Etc.

Within the City Limits.

SECTION 11.

(1) Chemicals, Explosives, Etc.—For the purpose of ascertaining all neglect and violations of ordinances designed for the more effectual prevention of fires, it shall be lawful for the Inspector of Buildings or his deputy to enter into or upon any lands or buildings for the examination of receptacles for ashes, ovens, boilers, heaters and chemical apparatus, which may be dangerous as tending to cause or promote fires; and it shall be his duty to direct the owner or occupant of any defective apparatus or building, by notice signed by said Inspector, to alter the same in such manner and within such reasonable time as he may deem necessary. He shall also examine, at reasonable hours in the daytime, and it shall be lawful for him for that purpose, to enter into and upon, all buildings and places where any oils, chemicals, gunpowder, saltpetre, hemp, flax, tow, hay, rushes, firewood, boards, shingles, shavings, or other combustible materials may be lodged; and whenever he shall discover any neglect or violation of any such ordinances, or anything that is detrimental to public safety he shall notify in writing the owner or occupants of the building wherein such unlawful or unsafe conditions exist to immediately cause the same to be corrected, and it shall be the duty of the person so notified to comply with such notice. And in case of the delay or refusal of the owner or occupant of such building, or the possessor of such combustible materials to correct said unlawful or unsafe conditions and to alter, remove or secure the same within the time and in the manner directed in said notice, the person offending shall be served with a notice of violation and be liable for the penalties therefore as per Section Two of this Code.

(2) Storage of Rags and Waste Paper.—It shall be unlawful to store rags or waste paper in any building inside of the fire limits, except that such a building is used exclusively for the storage of rags or waste paper, and before any such rags or waste paper can be stored in any building a permit in writing for such storage shall be obtained from the Inspector of Buildings. The violation of this section shall cause the building to be vacated, and subject the owner, tenant or lessee, or both, to a fine of one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for thirty days, or both.

(3) Lumber, Boxes, Etc.—When lumber, boxes, second-hand building material or other combustible material are located or piled in such a manner as in the opinion of the Inspector of Buildings is dangerous to life, limb or property, then the Inspector of Buildings has authority to regulate and remove the same.

CHAPTER VIII.

Floor Loads—Weights of Materials.

SECTION 12.

Floor Loads.

(1) The dead loads in all buildings shall consist of the actual weight of walls, framing, floors, roofs and all permanent construction except partitions not over four inches in thickness, exclusive of plaster.

(2) The live loads shall include all forms of loading, other than the weight of the material entering into the construction of the building.

(3) Every floor shall be of sufficient strength to bear safely the weight to be imposed thereon in addition to the weight of the materials of which the floor is composed. Each floor of every building of the following classes shall be of sufficient strength in all its parts to bear safely upon each and every superficial foot of its surface a minimum of not less than the live loads specified in the following table:

Class of Building.	Ground and Lower Floors, Pounds Per Square Foot.	Upper Floors, Pounds Per Square Foot.
A	100	100
B	100	100
C	90	50
D	75	50
Office Buildings	100	75
Lofts, Stores, Markets, Stables, Factories, Workshops, Libraries, Museums	125	125
Warehouses, Printing Houses	200	200
Restaurants	100	60
Foundries	200	200
Garages	125	125

(4) The roofs of all buildings having a pitch of less than twenty degrees shall be proportioned to bear safely forty pounds upon every superficial foot of their surface in addition to the weight of materials composing same. If the pitch be more than twenty degrees the live load shall be assumed at thirty pounds upon every superficial foot measured on a horizontal plane.

(5) For sidewalks over vaults between the curb and area lines live loads shall be taken at three hundred pounds upon every square foot.

(6) Every column, post or other vertical support shall be of sufficient strength to bear safely the weight of the portion of each and every floor depending upon it for support in addition to the weight required as before stated to be supported safely upon said portion of said floors.

(7) No safe shall be placed in any building on a stair-landing or in a stair-hall, nor shall its weight be carried by any beam which also carries the floor of any landing or stair-hall.

SECTION 13.

Loads on Floors to be Distributed.

The weight placed on any of the floors of any building shall be safely distributed thereon. The Inspector of Buildings may require the owner or occupants of any building, or of any portion thereof, to redistribute the load on any floor, or to lighten such load where he deems it to be necessary, and on failure to comply with such request the Inspector shall cause the floor or building to be vacated as unsafe.

SECTION 14.

Strength of Existing Floors to be Calculated.

In all buildings of Classes A, E and F, now existing or hereafter to be erected, the weight that each floor will safely sustain upon each superficial foot thereof, or upon each varying part of such floor, shall be estimated by the owner or occupant, or by a competent person employed by the owner or occupant. Such estimate shall be reduced to writing on printed forms furnished by the Inspector of Buildings, stating the material, size, distance apart, and span of beams and girders, posts or columns to support floors and its correctness shall be sworn to by the person making the same, and it shall thereupon be filed in the office of the Inspector of Buildings. If the Inspector of Buildings shall have cause to doubt the correctness of said estimate, he is empowered to revise and correct the same, and for the purpose of such revision the Inspector of Buildings may enter any building and remove so much of the floor or other portion thereof as may be required to make necessary measurements and examinations. When the correct estimate of the weight that the floors in any such building will safely sustain has been ascertained, as herein provided, the Inspector of Buildings shall approve the same and thereupon the owner or occupant of said building, or of any portion thereof, shall post a copy of such approved estimate in a conspicuous place on each story, or varying parts of each story of the building to which it relates. Before any building hereafter erected is occupied and used, in whole or in part, for any of the purposes aforesaid, and before any building erected prior to the passage of this Code, but not at such time occupied for any of the aforesaid purposes, is occupied or used, in whole or in part, for any of said purposes, the weight that each floor will safely sustain upon each superficial foot thereof shall be ascertained and posted in a conspicuous place on each story, or varying parts of each story, of the building to which it relates. No person shall place, or cause or permit to be placed on any floor of any building any greater load than the safe load thereof, as correctly estimated and ascertained as herein provided. Any expense necessarily incurred in removing any floor or other portion of any building for the purpose of making any examination herein provided for shall be paid by the person or persons on whose behalf said estimate was made.

SECTION 15.

Weights of Certain Materials.

In computing the weights of materials:—

(1) A cubic foot of common brick-work shall be deemed to weigh one hundred and twenty pounds; pressed brick, one hundred and thirty-five pounds.

(2) Sandstone, white marble, granite, and other kinds of building stone shall be deemed to weigh one hundred and seventy pounds per cubic foot.

(3) A cubic foot of stone concrete shall be deemed to weigh one hundred and forty-four pounds.

(4) A cubic foot of cinder concrete mixed in the proportions specified in Section 22, when rammed, shall be deemed to weigh ninety-six pounds; when not rammed, eighty-four pounds. A cubic foot of cinder concrete fill, when not rammed, shall be deemed to weigh sixty pounds.

CHAPTER IX.

Quality of Materials.

SECTION 16.

Brick.

(1) The brick used in all buildings shall be good, hard, well burnt brick, and thoroughly dampened before being used, except in freezing weather, when they shall be laid dry. Not more than five per centum shall be bats or broken brick.

(2) When old brick are used in the construction of any wall they shall be thoroughly cleaned and dampened before being used, and they shall be whole and good, hard, well burnt brick of uniform size.

SECTION 17.

Hollow Building Blocks.

(1) Moulded or cast hollow building blocks, of concrete, cement, terra cotta, or other hard, incombustible material may be used for walls of any building not more than thirty-six feet in height, provided the materials are not stressed beyond the safe limits fixed in this section.

(2) No such blocks shall be used until complete and satisfactory tests have been made by the manufacturer under the direction of the Inspector of Buildings, in accordance with the requirements of Section 25, of this Code, and until an approval for the use of such blocks has been obtained.

(3) No blocks shall be approved that do not at the age of twenty-eight days or less develop a compressive strength of at least one thousand five hundred pounds per square inch of net section.

(4) In no cases shall the hollow spaces of a block exceed thirty-three and one-third per centum of the cross section of the block.

(5) The thickness of the walls or webs of such blocks shall be not less than one-fourth of the height of the blocks, but in no case less than one inch thick.

(6) All such walls shall be laid in Portland cement mortar.

(7) Buildings of hollow terra cotta blocks, or hollow cement blocks, laid in cement mortar, shall be classed as frame construction when floors and roofs are of wood. The blocks shall not be less than six inches thick for a one-story building; eight inches for the first story and six inches for the second story in a two-story building; eight inches for the first and second stories and six inches for the third story in a three story building. If the walls are exposed to the weather the blocks shall be of dense material, vitrified in burning, or they may be of semi-porous material covered on the exposed side with at least one inch of cement plaster. Semi-porous terra cotta blocks shall be well scored, grooved or roughened to retain this coating.

(8) Whenever girders or joists rest upon walls so that there is a concentrated load of over two tons, the blocks supporting the girders or joists shall be made solid by filling at least two contiguous blocks with cement concrete, mixed in proportion of one part cement, two parts sand and four parts broken stone or gravel. Wherever walls are decreased in thickness, the top course of the thicker wall shall be made solid in the same manner.

(9) No semi-porous hollow blocks shall be loaded in excess of one hundred pounds per square inch of net end section in compression or one hundred pounds per square inch if laid on the side, and if dense tiles are used they shall not be loaded in excess of two hundred pounds per square inch if set on end, or one hundred and fifty pounds per square inch if on the side. All piers and buttresses that support loads in excess of five tons shall be filled solid with cement concrete. Lintels spanning over four feet six inches in the clear shall rest on blocks filled solid with concrete, or an equivalent in iron support.

(10) When used for curtain walls between supporting piers not over twenty feet apart on centres not more than twelve feet in height between girders, hard burned clay standard blocks not less than eight inches in thickness, set in cement may be used, re-inforcing by concrete filling to the extent necessary and directed by the Inspector.

(11) For foundations not over ten feet in height, of frame buildings and of buildings as per clause seven of this section, hard burned clay blocks, set and if necessary, re-inforced as above, not less than twelve inches thick, may be used.

For small houses or light constructions blocks eight inches thick may be used in lengths not exceeding twenty lineal feet between masonry cross walls or buttress piers of dimensions approved by the Inspector.

SECTION 18.

Sand.

All sand shall be sharp, clean, coarse, siliceous sand, free from clay, loam or other foreign material. It shall all pass a one-quarter inch screen and be uniformly graded down in fineness. Not more than six per centum shall pass a sieve having one hundred meshes per linear inch. The percentage of voids shall not exceed thirty-eight.

SECTION 19.

Lime Mortar.

Lime mortar shall be made of one part of unslaked lime and not more than four parts of sand. All lime used for mortar shall be thoroughly burnt, of good quality and properly slaked before it is mixed with the sand. If hydrated lime is used it shall be used in such proportions as will give the same per centum of lime to sand as specified above.

SECTION 20.

Cement and Cement Mortar.

(1) Portland Cement.—The term Portland cement shall be applied to the finely pulverized product obtained from the heating or calcining up to incipient fusion of intimate mixtures properly proportioned, either natural or artificial, of argillaceous with calcareous substances, and to which no addition greater than three per centum has been made subsequent to calcination.

(2) Natural Cement.—This term shall be applied to the finely pulverized product resulting from the calcination of an argillaceous limestone at a temperature only sufficient to drive off the carbonic acid gas.

(3) Tests of cement used in building operations shall be made as required by and under the supervision of the Inspector of Buildings, in accordance with standards prescribed by the Testing Committee of the American Society of Civil Engineers. All Portland or natural cements meeting these requirements shall be approved by the Inspector of Buildings. No brand of cement, which has not been tested under the provisions of this section, and which has not met the requirements thereof, shall be used in building operations.

(4) Cement Mortar.—Cement mortar shall be made of Portland or natural cement and sand in the proportion of one part of cement and not more than three parts of sand by volume and shall be used immediately after mixing. The cement and sand are to be measured and thoroughly mixed before adding water.

SECTION 21.

Cement and Lime Mortar.

Cement and lime mortar shall be made of one part of unslaked lime, one part of cement, and not more than three parts of sand to each. All materials shall be measured and shall be used immediately after being made, the cement and sand to be measured and thoroughly mixed before adding water.

SECTION 22.

Concrete.

(1) All concrete for footings of buildings in classes A, B, E and F shall be made of at least one part Portland cement and not more than three parts sand and five parts broken stone or gravel. Footings in buildings of classes C and D may be of one part natural cement, three parts sand and not more than five parts of broken slag, brick or tile of specified sizes.

(2) All other concrete shall be made of at least one part Portland cement and not more than two parts sand and five parts broken stone or gravel. Except as per section 101.

(3) The cement and sand shall be of a quality already described.

(4) The crushed stone shall be granite, trap rock or equally hard stone approved by the Inspector of Buildings and shall consist of the run of the crusher graded from the larger size down to that retained on the one-quarter inch screen. Where gravel is used it shall be thoroughly clean, free from loam and dust, and well graded from the larger permissible size down to that retained on the one-quarter inch screen.

(5) For foundations, where the concrete is to be used in mass, the stone or gravel shall be of such size as will pass a two inch ring.

(6) For reinforced concrete construction, the stone or gravel shall all pass through a three-quarter inch ring.

(7) The water shall be clean and free from acid or strong alkalies.

(8) All materials shall be measured; three and seven-tenths cubic feet shall be considered as the contents of a barrel and four bags of cement of ninety-five pounds each shall be considered one barrel.

(9) The ingredients of concrete shall be so thoroughly mixed that the cement shall be uniformly distributed through the mass and that the resulting concrete shall be homogeneous.

(10) The concrete shall be mixed as wet as possible without causing a separation of the cement mortar from the mixture, and shall be deposited in the work in such a manner as not to cause a separation of the mortar from the stone or gravel.

(11) The concrete shall be placed in the forms as soon as practical after mixing, and in no case shall concrete be used that has partially set or if more than one-half hour has elapsed since the addition of the water.

(12) It shall be deposited in horizontal layers not to exceed eight inches in thickness and thoroughly tamped.

(13) All forms and centering shall be built plumb and to true lines in a substantial manner and with joints sufficiently tight to prevent the leakage of the cement mortar. They shall be properly supported and braced in such a manner as to safely stand both the dead load and the load that may be placed upon them during construction. Before placing the concrete the forms shall be thoroughly cleaned of all chips, shavings and other debris.

(14) Before the placing of concrete is suspended, the joint to be formed shall be made in such a manner as will not injure the strength of the completed structure.

(15) The time at which centering may be safely removed from under floors or roofs shall vary with the condition of the weather, but in no case shall they be removed until the hardening of the concrete has reached a point where they may be removed with safety.

(16) During extreme hot, dry weather special precautions shall be taken to prevent premature drying by keeping the concrete moist until it has attained its initial set, or at least during the first twenty-four hours

SECTION 22.

Specifications for Timber Required in the Construction of Buildings.

General Requirements.

(1) All timber shall be cut from sound stock and sawed standard size, close grained, free from rot, ring shakes, decay and unsound knots, or other defects that will impair its strength and durability, and shall be of such size and carrying capacity as to support the loads for which the building is intended.

(2) Standard Size of Sawed Timbers.—Rough timbers when sawed to standard size shall mean that they shall not be over one-quarter inch scant from actual size specified. For instance, a twelve-inch by twelve-inch shall measure not less than eleven and three-quarters inches by eleven and three-quarters inches.

(3) Definitive description of structural defects in timber stock or timber and definition of defects may be consulted, if desired, in the office of Inspector of Buildings.

SECTION 24.

Structural Material.

(1) Rivet Steel.—Shall have an ultimate strength of from fifty thousand to sixty thousand pounds per square inch, an elastic limit of not less than fifty per centum of the ultimate strength, an elongation of not less than twenty-eight per centum in eight inches, and a reduction of area of not less than fifty per centum. A rivet rod must be capable of being bent and cold-hammered down on itself without any fracture.

(2) All other structural steel shall show an ultimate strength of from sixty thousand to seventy thousand pounds per square inch, an elastic limit of not less than fifty per centum of the ultimate strength. It shall have an elongation of not less than twenty-five per centum in eight inches, and fifty per centum reduction of area.

(3) No cast iron beams or channels shall be used in any structure.

(4) No second-hand steel shapes shall be used in any structure without the written permission of the Bureau of Buildings; and not then, if they have unnecessary holes in them or holes that have been plugged.

(5) Steel castings shall be made from open hearth steel, and shall be practically free from blow-holes, with a reasonably clear skin and sharpness to pattern. The steel shall not contain over eight one-hundredths of one per-centum of phosphorus. Steel castings shall be tested for strength and ductility from runners cast with

"You know, and you are a friend. When I feel rested we will go to Paris, and you shall take me to all the richest shops and tell them in French what I want. Will you?"

"I shall do all I can to help you," answered the Greek, wondering what would happen if his friends met him piloting a lovely barbarian about between the smartest linen draper's and the most fashionable dressmaker's establishment in the Rue de la Paix.

The two dined on deck, with shaded lights, but screened from the draught of the ship's way. The evening was cool, and the little maid had dressed Baraka in a way that much disturbed her, for her taper arms were bare to the elbows, and the pretty little ready-made French dress was open at her ivory neck, and the skirt fitted so closely that she almost fancied herself in man's clothes again. But on her head she would only wear a large veil, confined by a bit of gold cord, and she drew one fold under her chin, and threw it over the opposite shoulder, to be quite covered; and she was glad when she felt cold, and could wrap herself in the wide traveling cloak they had bought her, and yet not seem to do anything contrary to the customs of a real Feringhi lady.

CHAPTER XI.

"You don't mean to say you've come right through?" he inquired, looking at her with admiration as he grasped her hand. "You're as fresh as paint!"

"That's rather a dangerous thing to say to a woman nowadays," she answered in her rippling voice. "But mine won't come off. How is Margaret?"

Her tone changed as she asked the question.

"She showed me your letter about Logo," answered her friend without heeding the question, and watching her face to see if she were surprised.

She got into the carriage he had brought, and he stood by the door waiting for the porter, who was getting her luggage. She had no maid with her.

"I'm glad you have told me," she answered, "though I wish she had not. You probably think that when I wrote that letter I remembered what you said to me in London about giving me money for my poor women."

"No," said Van Torp thoughtfully, "I don't believe I do think so. It was like me to make the offer, Maud. It was like the sort of man I've been, and you've known me. But it wouldn't have been like you to accept it. It wasn't exactly low-down of me to say what I did, but it's so precious like low-down that I wouldn't say it again, and I suppose I'm sorry. That's all."

His rough hand was on the side of the little open carriage. She touched it lightly with her gloved fingers and withdrew them instantly, for the porter was coming with her not very voluminous luggage.

"Thank you," she said quickly. "I understood, and I understand now."

They drove slowly up the Bahnhofstrasse, through the dull little town, that looks so thoroughly conscious of its ancient respectability as having once been the "residenz" of a duke of Wurtemburg, and of its vast importance as the headquarters of Richard Wagner's representatives on earth.

"See here," said Mr. Van Torp. "I've almost persuaded them all to run down to Venice, and I want to know why you won't come too?"

"Venice?" Lady Maud was surprised.

"It's as hot as Tophet now, and full of mosquitoes. Why in the world do you want to take them there?"

"Well," answered the American, taking plenty of time over the monosyllable, "I didn't exactly mean to stay there more than a few minutes. I've bought a pretty nice yacht since I saw you, and she's there, eating her head off, and I thought you might all come along with me on her and go home that way, or somewhere, and what I want you to decide right away is whether you'll come, provided they will—for I don't suppose you and I could go mooning around in the yacht by ourselves."

"And I don't suppose," returned Lady Maud, mimicking him ever so little, "that if 'they' decide not to come, you will have time for a long cruise."

"Now that's not fair," objected the American. "I didn't intend to put it in that way. Anyhow, will you come if they do? That's the point."

"Really, it depends a little on who 'they' are. Do you mean only Margaret and that nice old friend of her—Mrs. Patmore, isn't she? I never met her."

"Rushmore," said Van Torp, correcting her. "Then there's the Russian—Count Kralinsky. Ever hear that name?"

"Never. It sounds Polish."

"He might be anything. Sometimes I'm absolutely sure he's a man I used to know out west when I was on the ranch, and then again there's something quite different about him. Something about his legs or his eyes, I can't tell which. I don't quite make him out."

They reached the hotel, and Van Torp went off promptly, leaving Margaret to take Lady Maud upstairs and introduce her to Mrs. Rushmore.

An hour later the two young women were together in Margaret's room, while Potts was unpacking for Lady Maud in the one that had been secured for her in spite of all sorts of difficulties.

The prima donna was sitting at her toilet table, turned away from the glass, and Lady Maud occupied the only possible chair there was, a small, low easy chair, apparently much too small for such a tall woman, but less uncomfortable than it looked.

"Are you going on Mr. Van Torp's yacht?" asked Lady Maud suddenly. "He spoke to me about it on the way from the station, and asked me to come, in case you accept."

"I don't know. Will you go if I do? That might make a difference."

Lady Maud did not answer at once. She wished that she knew how matters had gone between Margaret and Van Torp during the last few days, for she sincerely wished to help him, now that she had made up her mind as to Logotheti's real character. Nevertheless, her love of fair play made her feel that the Greek ought to be allowed a chance of retrieving himself.

"Yes," she said at last, "I'll go, on one condition. At least, it's not a condition, my dear; it's only a suggestion, though I hate to make one. Don't think me too awfully cheeky, will you?"

Margaret shook her head, but looked very grave.

"I feel as if I were getting into a bad scrape," she said, "and I shall be only too glad of any good advice. Tell me what I had better do."

"I must tell you something else first as a continuation of my letter, for all sorts of things happened after I wrote it."

She told Margaret all that has been already narrated, concerning the news that Baraka had been set at large on

"What Has Happened?" She Cried. "Are You Ill, Dear?"

Logotheti's sworn statement that the ruby was not his, and that he had seen it in her possession in Paris; and she told how she had tried to find him at his lodgings, and had failed, and how strangely the leather-faced secretary's answers had struck her, and how she had seen Baraka's gloves and stick in Logotheti's hall; and finally she said she had taken it into her head that Logotheti had spirited away the Tartar girl on his yacht, which, as every one in town had known through the papers, was at Cowes and in commission. For Logotheti, in his evidence, had explained his absence from the police court by the fact that he had been off in the Erinna for two days, out of reach of news.

Margaret's face grew darker as she listened, for she knew Lady Maud too well to doubt but that every word was more than scrupulously true; and the deduction was at least a probable one. She bit her lip as she felt her anger rising again.

"What do you advise me to do?" she asked, in a sullen tone.

"Telegraph to Logo and prepay an answer of 20 words. Telegraph to his rooms in St. James' place and at the same time to his house in Paris. Telegraph anything you like that really needs an immediate reply. That's the important thing. If he does not answer within 24 hours—say 36 at the most—he is either on his yacht or hiding. Excuse the ugly word, dear—I don't think of any other. If you are afraid of the servants, I'll take the message to the telegraph office and send it for you. I suppose you have some way of signing which the clerks don't recognise—if you sign at all."

Margaret leaned back in her chair in silence. After a few seconds she turned towards the glass, rested her chin on her folded knuckles, and seemed to be consulting her own reflexion. It is a way some women have. Lady Maud glanced at her from time to time, but said nothing. At last the prima donna rose with a sweep that upset the light chair behind her, one of those magnificent sweeps that look so well on the stage and are a little too large for a room. She got her blotter and pen from a shelf, brought it back to the toilet table, picked up the chair in a very quiet and sensible way, as if she had never been on the stage in her life, and sat down to write.

"I shall take your advice, dear," she said, opening the blotter and placing a large sheet of paper in the right position.

Lady Maud rose and went to the window, where she stood looking out while Margaret wrote her message.

"You needn't write it out twice," she said, without turning round. "Just put 'duplicate message' and both addresses."

"Yes. Thank you."

Margaret was already writing. Her message said it was absolutely necessary that she should see Logotheti directly, and bade him answer at once, if he could come to Bayreuth; if important financial affairs hindered him, she herself would return immediately to Paris to see him.

She was careful to write "financial" affairs, for she would not admit that any other consideration could delay his obedience. While she was busy she heard, but scarcely noticed, an unearthly hoot from a big motor car that was passing before the hotel. There must have been something in the way, for the thing booted again almost at once, and then several times in quick succession, as if a gigantic brazen ass were beginning to bray just under the window. The noises ended in a sort of wild, triumphant howl, with a furious puffing, and the motor took itself off, just as Margaret finished.

She looked up and saw Lady Maud half bent, as if she had been struck; she was clinging with one hand to the flimsy chintz curtain, and her face was as white as a sheet. Margaret started in surprise, and rose to her feet so suddenly that she upset the chair again.

"What has happened?" she cried. "Are you ill, dear?"

The delicate color came slowly back to the smooth cheeks, the thoroughbred figure in black drew itself up with elastic dignity, and the hand let go of the curtain.

"I felt a little faint," Lady Maud answered. "Did I frighten you? It was nothing, and it's quite gone, I assure you."

"You looked dreadfully ill for a moment," Margaret said in a tone of concern. "Won't you let me send for something? Tea? Or something iced? I'm sure you have had nothing to eat or drink for hours! How disgracefully thoughtless of me!"

She was just going to ring, but her friend stopped her.

"No—please!" she cried. "I'm all right, indeed I am. The room is a little warm, I think, and I've been shut up in that stuffy train for 30 hours. Have you written your telegram? I'll put on my hat at once, and take it for you. The little walk will do me good. Where is the telegraph? But they can tell me downstairs. Don't bother! Walking always brings me round, no matter what has happened!"

She spoke nervously, in disjointed phrases, in a way not like herself, for there was generally an air of easy calm in all she did, as if nothing really mattered in the least, save when she was deeply interested; and hardly anything interested her now except what she had made her work. In all that belonged to that, she was energetic, direct and quick.

Margaret was sure that something was wrong, but let her go, since she insisted, and Lady Maud folded the written message and went to the door. Just as she was going to turn the handle Margaret spoke to her.

"If I have no answer to that by to-morrow afternoon I shall accept Mr. Van Torp's invitation."

"I hope you will go," Lady Maud said with sudden decision, "for if you do, I can go with you, and I'm dying to see the new yacht!"

Margaret looked at her in surprise, for it was only a little while since she had seemed much less ready to join the party, and only willing to do so, if at all, in order to please her friend. She saw Margaret's expression.

"Yes," she said, as if in explanation, "I've been thinking it over in the last few minutes, and I want very much to go with you all. I shall be back in less than an hour."

"An hour?"

"Say half an hour. I want a good walk."

Straight and tall in her mourning, Lady Maud went down the stairs of the hotel. As she was going out the hall porter raised his cap, and she stopped a moment and asked him which was the nearest way to the telegraph office. He stood on the doorstep and pointed in the direction she was to follow as he answered her question.

"Can you tell me," she asked, "whose motor car it was that passed about ten minutes ago, and made so much noise?"

"Count Kralinsky's, my lady," the porter answered; for he spoke good English, and had the true hotel porter's respect for the British aristocracy abroad.

"He was the gentleman with the big fair beard, I suppose? Yes, thank you."

She went out into the dull street, with its monotonous houses, all two stories high, and she soon found the telegraph office and sent Margaret's duplicate message. She had not glanced at it, but the clerk asked her questions about words that were not quite clearly written, and she was obliged to read it through. It occurred to her that it was couched in extremely peremptory terms, even for an offended bride-elect; but that was none of her business.

She resumed her walk, not knowing whither and not caring, always at the same even pace, and hardly noticing the people who passed her, of whom a good many were in two-horse cabs, some in queer little German motors, and a few on foot; and she thought, and wondered, and tried to understand, but could not. At all events, she was glad to be alone; she was glad not to have even Van Torp with her, and she was quite indifferent to the fact that time was passing, and that Margaret was beginning to wonder where in the world she was.

"My dear child," Mrs. Rushmore said, when the prima donna expressed her surprise, "those English people are all alike, when they are once out on a road by themselves. They must take a long walk. They never know when to stop walking. I cannot understand what they can see in it. Perhaps you will kindly touch the bell, my dear, and I will send the tea away. It can be brought fresh for her when she comes. Thank you, Margaret. But she will not come in till it is just time to dress for dinner. Mark my words, my child, the countess will be late for dinner. All English people are. Have you heard from Mons. Logotheti to-day?"

"Not to-day," Margaret answered, repressing a little start, for she was as near to being nervous as she ever was, and she was thinking of him just then, and the question had come suddenly.

"I think it is time you heard from him," said Mrs. Rushmore, her natural severity asserting itself. "I should think that after those very strange stories in the papers he would write to you and explain, or come himself. By the by, perhaps you will kindly pass me the Herald, my dear. What did you once tell me was the name of his yacht?"

"The Erinna," Margaret answered, handing Mrs. Rushmore the sheet.

"Exactly! I think that means the 'Fury.'"

"He told me it was the name of a Greek poetess," Margaret observed.

"On account of her temper, I suppose," answered the good lady absently, for she was looking up and down the columns in search of something she had already seen. "Here it is!" she said. "It is under the yachting news. 'Cape Finisterre. Passed at 4 p. m., going south, steam yacht Erinna, with owner and party on board. All well.' My dear child, it is quite clear that if this is Mons. Logotheti's yacht, he is going to Gibraltar."

"I don't know anything about geography," Margaret said, and her wrath, which had been smouldering sullenly for days, began to glow again.

"Margaret," said Mrs. Rushmore, "you surprise me! You were very well taught—"

But the prima donna did not hear the long tirade of mild reproof that followed. She knew well enough where Gibraltar was, and that Logotheti was going all the way round to the Mediterranean on his yacht with some one for company, and that the voyage was a long one. After what Lady Maud had said, there was not the least doubt in her mind as to his companion, who could be no one but Baraka. He had been told that he was not wanted at Bayreuth, and he was celebrating the sunset of his bachelor life in his own way. That was clear. If he received the telegram that had just been sent to him, he would get it at Gibraltar, should be stop there, and as for answering it before Margaret left Bayreuth, she was inclined to make such a thing impossible by going away the next morning, if not that very night.

Her angry reflections and Mrs. Rushmore's lecture on the importance of geography in education were interrupted by the discreet entrance of Mr. Van Torp, who was announced and ushered to the door by Justine in a grand French manner. On the threshold, however, he stood still and asked if he might come in; being pressed to do so, he yielded, advanced, and sat down between the two ladies.

"Mr. Van Torp," said Mrs. Rushmore, "I insist upon knowing what has become of Countess Leven."

"I don't know, Mrs. Rushmore," answered the millionaire, slowly rubbing his hands. "I haven't spoken to her since I brought her from the station. I dare say she's all right. She's probably gone to take a walk. She often does in the country. I know—her father's country seat is next to mine, Mrs. Rushmore. I hope you'll pay me a visit some day. Why, yes, Lady Maud sometimes goes off alone and walks miles and miles."

"There, Margaret," said Mrs. Rushmore triumphantly, "what did I tell you? Mr. Van Torp says the countess often walks for miles and miles."

"Why, certainly," said Mr. Van Torp, "though I'm bound to say she's just as fond of horseback. Her friends generally call her Lady Maud, Mrs. Rushmore. Perhaps you won't mind my telling you, as she prefers it a good deal herself. You see, I've had the pleasure of knowing her several years, so I daresay you'll forgive me for mentioning it."

"I think it is quite kind of you, on the contrary," answered Mrs. Rushmore. "Margaret, why did you never tell me of this? Had you any reason for not telling me?"

"I don't think I noticed what you called her," Margaret answered patiently.

"Because if you had any reason," said Mrs. Rushmore, following her own thoughts, "I insist upon knowing what it was."

"Well, now, I'll tell you," rejoined Mr. Van Torp, to save Margaret the trouble of answering the futile little speech, "her husband didn't treat her very well. There's not a purer woman in the six continents, Mrs. Rushmore, but he tried to divorce her, because he'd lost his money, if he ever had any, and she had none, and he wanted to marry an heiress. However, they automobilized him, or something, in St. Petersburg last June."

"Auto—what did you say?" inquired Mrs. Rushmore.

"Killed by an automobile," explained Mr. Van Torp gravely. "But now I come to think, it wasn't that. He got blown up by a bomb meant for a better man. It was quite instantaneous, I recollect. His head disappeared suddenly, and the greater part of him was scattered around, but they found his pocket-book with his cards and things, so they knew who it was. It was driven through somebody else's hat on the other side of the street, wasn't it, Miss Donne? Things must have been quite lively just then, where it happened. I supposed you knew."

Mrs. Rushmore explained that she had never heard any details.

"Besides," said Mr. Van Torp, in answer, though not quite relevantly, "everybody always calls her 'Lady Maud' instead of 'Countess Leven,' which she has on her cards."

"She would naturally use the higher title," observed Mrs. Rushmore reverently.

"Well, now, about that," objected Mr. Van Torp, "I'm bound to say I think the daughter of an English earl as good as a Russian count, anywhere west of Siberia. I don't know how they figure those things out at courts when they have to balance 'em up for seats at a dinner party, of course. It's just my impression, that's all, as a business man. He's dead, anyway, and one needn't make personal remarks about dead men. All the same, it was a happy release for Lady Maud, and I doubt if she sits up all night mourning for him. Have you been out this afternoon, Miss Donne?"

He changed the subject with extreme directness, and Mrs. Rushmore, who was used to the dictatorial ways of lions, took the hint submissively enough, though she would have been glad to discuss the relative and intrinsic values of the designations "Lady Maud" and "Countess Leven." But it was much more important that the lion should be left alone with Margaret as much as possible, and the excellent lady therefore remembered that she had something to do and left them.

"I had a little talk with Kralinsky before he left," said Van Torp, when she was gone. "He says he'll meet us in Venice any time in the next few days. He's just going to run over to Vienna in his sudden-death-cart for 24 hours; then he'll go south, he says. He ran me up to the hotel and dropped me. I dare say you heard the toots. I thought I saw Lady Maud looking out of the window of your room as I got out."

"Yes," Margaret said. "But how do you know that is my window?"

"In the first place, I've counted the windows. I felt a sort of interest in knowing which was yours. And then, I often see your maid opening the shutters in the morning."

"Oh!" Margaret smiled. "Did you notice anything unusual about Lady Maud when you saw her?" she asked, for she knew that he had good eyes.

"Since you mention it, I thought she looked as if she didn't feel quite up to the mark—pale, I thought she was."

"Yes," Margaret said. "She felt ill for a moment, and I thought she was going to faint. But it passed almost directly, and she insisted on going for a walk."

"Oh," mused Mr. Van Torp, "is that so? Well, I dare say it was the best thing she could do. I was telling you about Kralinsky. He's not Levi Longlegs after all, and I'm not sure he was ever in the west."

"I thought it sounded unlikely," Margaret said.

MUSIC FOR EASTER

taken up by the children. The services will close by the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers."

The Willard Loyal Temperance Legion, under the direction of Mrs. Henry Thomas, will hold Easter services at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the W. C. T. U. rooms, on Madison avenue. There will be carols, recitations and solos. Miss Rosalie Karling, of Brooklyn, will preside at the piano and Miss Burnet will play on the violin. Henry Thomas will have charge of the music.

Trinity Reformed.

Elaborate Easter programs will be presented at Trinity Reformed church tomorrow, both morning and evening, under the direction of Arthur L. Titsworth, organist and choirmaster. The quartet choir comprising Miss S. Etta Raybert, soprano; Mrs. Bayard Hawthorne, contralto; E. D. Young, tenor and F. S. Cutter, bass, will render the various anthems and there will also be solo numbers.

The musical program for the morning will be as follows:

Organ prelude, "Magnificat in D Minor," Edmond Lemaigre; anthems, "Awake, Thou that Sleepest," B. Jackson; "Christ Our Passover," Thomas E. Lloyd; "Angles, Roll the Rock Away," J. R. Thomas; soprano solo, "Alleluia," Charles Humphries; organ postlude, "Offertoire de Concert," W. Eugene Thayer.

In the evening there will be special Easter services under the auspices of the Sunday-school, including the singing of carols, recitations, etc. The quartet choir will also sing. The Christian Endeavor Society will hold a sunrise meeting tomorrow morning at 6:45 o'clock, to which all Endeavorers in the city are invited. F. H. Andrews will be the leader.

St. Mary's Church.

There will be masses at St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 6:30, 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and at 10:30, a fine program of music will be rendered under the direction of Miss Mary Smith, the organist. The program will be as follows: Prelude, Communion in G, Batiste; processional, "He is Risen," chancel choir; Vidi Aquam Becher, choir; Kyrie, Gloria in Excelsis, Hammerel; Veni Creator, Hamman; Regina Coeli, Dachame; Credo, Sanctus, Benedictus, Agnes Dei, Hammerel; recessional, Holy God; postlude, St. Cecile, Batiste.

Temple Baptist Church.

Rev. Frank Fletcher will preach at the Temple Baptist church tomorrow morning and the chorus choir will present a special program of Easter music. The Sunday-school session will be held in the afternoon and in the evening it will offer a fine Easter program, including carols, recitations, dialogues, etc., all under the direction of L. W. Randolph, superintendent.

St. Joseph's

In St. Joseph's R. C. church tomorrow, masses will be said as usual at 8:30 and 10:30, the latter being a solemn high mass celebration. The participating priests will be Rev. Father Baldwin, celebrant; Rev. Father Miller, deacon; Rev. Father Tyrrell, of Rahway, sub-deacon and a Passionist Father, master of ceremonies. Father Miller will preach the sermon.

Paroubeck's orchestra will assist in the musical program and violin solos will be given by B. A. Paroubek and Joseph Denny. Mrs. Harry G. DeMeza, as organist, will have charge of the following program:

Voluntary, Largo, Handel; processional, Christ the Lord is Risen Today; Kyrie Eleison, Stehle; Gloria in Excelsis, Stehle; Credo, Stehle; Regina Coeli, Mine; Sanctus, Stehle; Benedictus, LeProvost; Agnus Dei, Stehle; processional Tannhauser, Wagner.

The church has been decorated with palms, plants and cut flowers by the sisters of the parish.

Warren Chapel.

The program for the service at 10:30 at Warren chapel: Prelude, "Song Without Words," Faulkes; Anthem, choir, "Christ is Risen," Ashford; offertory anthem, "The Lord is Risen Indeed," Wilson; solo, Miss Barrow; Postlude, Et Incarnatus, Hayden's Third Mass.

In the evening there will be a special musical service at 8 o'clock. Prelude, melody, Moszkowski; duet "Christ is Risen," Mr. and Mrs. Nevin McKay; anthem, choir, "My Redeemer Liveth," Lorenz; solo, Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz; duet, Miss Edith Wheeler and Miss Hilda Story, "Live on O Trusty Heart," Wilson; offertory anthem, "Sing Victory," Heyser; organ postlude, "Festival March in F," Rieff.

At 2:45 special Easter carols by the children and a solo by Miss M. Barrow. Rev. Mr. McKelvey will preach an Easter sermon in the morning and in the evening will make a few remarks.

First Presbyterian Church.

Special music will be the feature of the services at the First Presbyterian church. At the morning service, the oratorio, "The Resurrection," by Manney, will be sung. This is a new oratorio arranged for quartet, organ and violin, with solos for soprano, contralto, tenor and baritone. In addition to the oratorio there will be violin solos by Miss Edith Rubel, of New York, and the offertory solo, "Easter Dawn," by Woodman, will be sung by Mrs. C. Kendall Mason. At the evening service these anthmes will be sung.

"It is Fulfilled," Motet by Chaffin; "The Resurrection," by Shelley; "Lo, the Tomb is Empty," Chaffin. The offeratory solo, "Hosanna," by Ranier, will be sung by Mrs. June Bilby, soprano. Miss Rubel will also be the soloist at the evening service. The entire musical program will be in charge of Clifford A. Braider, organist and choirmaster and the following comprise the quartet: Mrs. June Bilby, soprano; Mrs. C. Kendall Mason, contralto, Aleck MacGowan, tenor and Charles Potter Titsworth, baritone. The Sunday-school will have its Easter exercises at the usual hour.

Grace M. E. Church.

The choir of Grace M. E. church will render special music tomorrow at both services under the direction of the organist, Miss Alice Carroll and there will be a chorus of twenty voices and solos by Mrs. E. D. Young, soprano and Clarence Steiner, bass. At the morning service the following anthems will be sung: He is Risen, Harker; Ring Out Glad Bells of Easter, J. C. Bartlett; Unfold, Ye Portals, from Gounod's Redemption; It is Fulfilled, Magler; Hosanna, Granier; soprano solo and chorus. In the evening the choir will give a cantata, The Story of Calvary, by Schnecker. The new pastor, Rev. C. C. Cain, will preach at both services.

First M. E. Church.

J. Edmund Skiff, organist and choirmaster of the First M. E. church has arranged attractive Easter programs for morning and evening at the church. The regular chorus choir will render the special music. The Sunday-school will have its Easter exercises in the afternoon in Vincent chapel. The morning program:

Organ selection, anthem, "Now is Christ Risen," Maher, choir; Psalter for Easter day; anthem, "The Lord is Risen Indeed," Judson, choir; solo, 'Angles Rolled the Rock Away,' Hawley, Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis; sermon, prayer and benediction.

The evening program: Organ selection; anthem, "Lift Your Glad Voices," VanLear; choir; prayer, anthem, "Awake Ye Ransomed," Spence; Psalter, Gloria Patri, Evening lesson; anthem, "High in Heavens Enthroned,' Eyer; solo, "He is Not Here for He is Risen," Broome, Miss Jessie Haynes; sermon, prayer, hymn and benediction.

First Baptist Church.

Special services will be held at the First Baptist church in the morning, including anthems by the chorus choir under the direction of Howard Case, organist, with solo numbers. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor, will preach a short sermon and will then give the right-hand-of-fellowship to about forty new members, the majority of whom were recently batpized. the rest will be received by letter. The muiscal program will be an elaborate one, as usual, and will comprise solos, duets, quartet and chorus selections.

The Sunday-school will have an Easter program in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, which will comprise carols, recitations, reports and a short address. The musical program will be an extensive one. James E. Church, superintendent, will have charge of the exercises.

The following anthems will be sung by the choir at the morning service: "I Am Alpha," Stainer; "Te Deum," Buck; "Upon the First Day," Foster; chorus from "Olivet to Calvary," Maunder; "As Sleep Takes Flight," Shelley. Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist, will play as a prelude to the service the andante from Saint Saens violin concerto.

Hope Chapel.

Special music will be a feature at the Easter services tomorrow at Hope chapel. The choir will sing several anthems at the morning service. In the afternoon members of the beginners, primary and junior departments will give recitations and songs. Easter carols will be sung by the main school. A mixed choir has been organized from the intermediate department. The pastor, Rev. Frederic L. Greene, will also speak at this service. The preaching at night will be the third in the series of sermons for the men at Hope chapel.

Shiloh Baptist Church.

Rev. Dr. E. W. Roberts, pastor of Shiloh Baptist church, will preach at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning on the subject, "The Risen Lord." The women will have charge of the program for the day and there will be a special platform meeting at 3:30 o'clock with special music by the junior choir. At 8 o'clock in the evening the pastor will conduct a special program, with a choir of twenty voices directed by Messrs. Bolling and Wilson, choristers.

Mt. Zion A. M. E. Church.

There will be a sunrise prayer-meeting at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church tomorrow morning at 6 o'clock. Rev. A. L. Murray, presiding elder, will preach at 11 o'clock, at the close of which there will be infant baptism. Rev. S. E. Reynolds, of Kenilworth, will preach at 3 o'clock and there will be a continuation of the baptismal service. At 7 o'clock there will be Easter exercises by the Sunday school and Dr. Murray will preach at 8 o'clock when he will continue the baptismal service and adminster the Lord's Supper.

Clover Club Dance.

The Clover Club, which has been holding weekly dances at Debele's Hall since the first of January, has decided to hold one more club dance next Thursday evening and on May 4. A large invitation dance will be given at the hall.

CUSTODY OF SON GIVEN TO FATHER BY COURT

On complaint of the Charity Organization Society, supplemented by another of Overseer-of-the-Poor Alexander Ayres, Nichols Kelly, formerly a patrolman on the local police force and now residing in Elizabeth, was arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning charged with non-support of his eight-year-old son William, who was left with the society at the Children's Home several months ago. Judge DeMeza dismissed the case after hearing the declaration of Mr. Kelly that he was ready and would be glad to support his son.

The story attached to the apprehension of Mr. Kelly for deserting his boy is interesting. He and his wife disagreed some time in the early fall last year and Mrs. Kelly took the boy for a visit to friends promising to bring him back in a week or two. She did not return and Kelly became despondent and took himself off. He obtained a good position in Elizabeth and was there when asked to appear in the local court. He declared that he had not known the whereabouts of the child until faced with the complaint and added that the youngster was kidnapped and that Mrs. Kelly came to this city placed the boy in the home and decamped and he has not seen her since.

Miss Holly, of the Charity Organization Society, was in court and suggested that the society put the boy in a home and that Kelly support it. He refused to accept this declaring that it was his right to have his boy. The judge coincided with him and the incident closed.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS PLAN FOR THEIR BANQUET.

Arrangements are about complete for the banquet of Plainfield Council, No. 402, the Order of United Commercial Travelers, to be held in Sebring's auditorium, on Wednesday evening, April 19. The banquet will be cooked and served by the members and an elaborate menu will be prepared. The banquet will be followed by a fair and dance, the fair being under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary committee.

Many donations of fancy and useful articles have been made by the members of the auxiliary. The decorations will be in charge of a local florist and it is expected that they will be unusually attractive. Several prominent speakers are expected and a large attendance of patrons is anticipated.

Entertained at Cards.

Millard W. Bellis, of Park place gave a card party at his home, last evening. After the play there were songs by Charles Kreger, Russell Hann, Alvin Smith, James Richardson and Millard Bellis. Refreshments were served.

The usual services will be held at the Salvation Army Hall tomorrow with a big gospel meeting at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Easter services will be held at the West End Tabernacle tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock under the auspices of the Sunday-school.

H. E. Parker, teacher of the Men's Bible conference class at the First Presbyterian church, will talk to the men tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 o'clock on the subject: "The Church and Immigration."

RATHER WATCH BALL GAMES THAN WORK

Should boys be prevented from playing baseball in an open lot just because the employees of a factory have their attention detracted from their work? That's the question put up to the police yesterday when complaint was made from Scott's Printing Press plant, that the boys were playing ball and that workmen inside the shop were watching them instead of attending to their work. Naturally the police could not interfere as the agent of the property said that the boys were doing no damage and that they could not play their game in the street. "The youngsters must have some place in which to play ball and why not there?" he said.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. John Johnson, of Duer street, is recovering from an atack of grip.

Miss Carrie Coombs, of Linden avenue, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Jack Raymond, of Berwick, Pa.

Mrs. M. T. Mulford, of Steiner place, is spending the week-end with relatives at White House.

Miss Edith Richards, of East Front street, left yesterday for Allentown, Pa., to spend a week with friends.

Miss A. Wodward Rogers, of Baltimore, Md., is spending the Easter week with Mr. and Mrs. George H. Campbell, of Grove street.

Mrs. Seymour Perkins, of East Sixth street, who has been suffering from grip and pleurisy, for the past fourteen weeks, is convalescing.

W. Lyman Campbell, a sophomore at Yale, is spending the Easter vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Campbell, of Grove street.

Lieut. and Mrs. Richard McCullough, of Philadelphia, are spending the week-end with Lieut. McCullough's father, R. H. McCullough, of Steiner place.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Morris Hunter, of Bayonne, but formerly of this city, will entertain the K. R. C., at dinner tonight at their home in Bayonne. They will have as their guests, Frank Rimmer, Peter C. Sweeney, Allen S. Snyder, James S. Kenny, Donald A. Mortimer and Robert L. Cuzen, of this city.

NED CRANE HURLED TO DEATH ON TRACK.

Kansas City, Mo., April 15.—Ned Crane, driving a Buick racing car in a practice test at Elm Ridge racetrack, preparatory to his attempt to be made today to establish new records, was killed yesterday afternoon when the machine threw a tire and turned over.

The 90-horsepower Buick that Crane drove was making a fast turn at the west of the track beyond the clubhouse and opposite the locker house when a front tire burst and sent the machine hurtling over and over three times. Crane lay on the track motionless, his head turned under his chest. A superficial examination indicated that death was the result of a broken neck.

Bert Dodge, a mechanician employed by the Buick Motor Car Company, who was riding with Crane, was injured, but not dangerously.

CHAPTER XII.

Strength of Columns, and Temporary Supports.

SECTION 31.

Working Stresses.

The working stress per square inch for all cast iron, steel or wood columns having flat ends shall not exceed those given in the following tables:

	Working Stresses per Square Inch of Section.
	L / R Cast Iron.	L / R Steel.
When the Length Divided by Least Radius of Gyration Equals—
120	....	8,240
60	6,600	11,720
10	8,600	14,620

L equals length in inches. R equals least radius of gyration.

Working Stresses per Square Inch of Section.

When the Length Divided by the Least Side or Diameter Equals—	Longleaf Yellow Pine. L / 1,000-18-D	White Pine. Spruce Chestnut. L / 800-15-D	Oak. L / 900-17-D
20	640	500	560

L equals length in inches. D equals least side in inches.

Three-fourths the value given for white pine shall also apply to hemlock posts.

For locust posts use one and one-half the value given for white pine.

For short leaf yellow pine use three-fourths the values given for longleaf yellow pine.

Columns and compression members shall not be used having an unsupported length of greater ratios than given in the tables.

SECTION 32.

Columns Eccentrically Loaded.

(1) Any column eccentrically loaded shall have the stresses caused by such eccentricity computed, and the combined stresses resulting from such eccentricity at any part of the column added to all other stresses at that part shall in no case exceed the working stresses stated in this Code.

(2) The eccentric load of a column shall be considered to be distributed equally over the entire area of that column at the next point below at which the column is securely braced laterally in the direction of the eccentricity.

(3) Tie plates and lattice bars shall not be used on columns eccentrically loaded, unless approved by the Inspector of Buildings, otherwise plates extending the full length of the column only shall be used.

SECTION 33.

Strengths of Temporary Supports

Every temporary support placed under any structure, wall, girder or beam, during the erection, alteration, demolition, or repairing of any building or structure, or any part thereof, shall be of sufficient strength to safely carry the load to be placed thereon.

CHAPTER XIII.

Excavations, Footings and Foundations.

SECTION 34.

Excavations.

(1) The person causing any excavation for a building to be made shall have the same properly guarded and protected. Wherever necessary he shall properly sheath pile and, if for his independent use, or unless otherwise agreed with adjoining owner shall at his own cost erect sufficient retaining wall to permanently support the adjoining earth. Such retaining wall shall be carried to the level of the adjoining earth and shall be properly coped.

(2) Whenever an excavation is not intended to be or shall not be carried to a depth of more than eight feet below the curb level, the owner of every adjoining or contiguous wall or structure shall protect the same so that it shall be and remain as safe as before such excavation was begun. Such owner shall be permitted to enter upon the premises where the excavating is being made when necessary for this purpose.

(3) Whenever an excavation is intended to be or shall be carried to a depth of more than eight feet below the curb level, the person causing such excavation shall at all times from the beginning until the completion of the excavations, foundations, retaining walls or other structures to be built in such excavation, protect at his own expense every adjoining or contiguous wall or structure, and support the same by proper means. For this purpose he shall be afforded the necessary access to the adjoining premises. Access be denied by any owner of adjoining property it shall be the duty of the person causing such excavation to notify the Inspector of Buildings in writing to this effect. Thereafter it shall be the duty of the owner who has refused access to his premises, to make safe such adjoining wall or structure upon his premises and to protect and support it by proper means so that the excavation may be made; and for this purpose he shall, when necessary, be permitted to enter upon the premises where the excavation is being made.

SECTION 35.

Adjoining Party Walls.

(1) In case an adjoining party wall is intended to be used by the person causing the excavation to be made, and the footings and foundations, of such party wall are in good condition and sufficient for the uses of both the existing building and the new one adjoining, then and in such case the person causing the excavation to be made shall, at his own expense, preserve such party wall from injury and support the same by proper means, so that said party wall shall be and remain as safe as before the excavation was begun.

(2) In case the footings and foundations of any such party wall are not in good condition or not sufficient for the uses of both the existing building and the new one adjoining, then it shall be the duty of the person causing such excavation to be made to extend such defective or insufficient footing or foundation, or to replace same with a new footing or foundation. Such extended or new footing shall extend on each side of the party line such a distance as to bring the centre of the footing under the centre of the wall, so that the total load upon the wall may be uniformly distributed over the area of the footing. In order that this may be done the person causing the excavation to be made shall be allowed access to the adjoining premises.

(3) In case any excavation, or the removal of any existing building, shows any adjoining wall or walls or structure to be unsafe at the time the excavation was begun, then it shall be the duty of the person causing the excavation to be made, or the building to be removed, to forthwith report the fact, in writing, to the Inspector of Buildings. The Inspector of Buildings shall, upon the receipt of such notice from any person causing any excavation to be made, or any building to be removed, forthwith cause an inspection of such adjoining premises to be made, and if such inspection prove the aforesaid wall or walls or structure to be unsafe, then it shall be the duty of the Inspector of Buildings, acting under the provisions of Section 2 of this Code, to declare such wall or walls, or structure or structures, to be unsafe and cause the same to be repaired as therein provided.

(4) If the person whose duty it shall be to preserve or protect from injury any wall or walls, structure or structures, shall neglect or fail so to do within twenty-four hours after the receipt of a notice so to do from the Inspector of Buildings, then the Inspector of Buildings shall enter upon the premises and employ such labor and furnish such materials and take such steps as, in his judgment, may be necessary to make the premises safe and secure, or to prevent the same from becoming unsafe or dangerous, at the cost and expense of the person whose duty it is to keep the same safe and secure. Payment of such expenses shall be collected in the manner set forth in Section 2 of this Code.

Bearing Capacity of Soil.

(1) Applications filed in the Office of Inspector of Buildings shall contain a statement of the character of the soil at the level of the footings. The Inspector of Buildings shall be notified before any test is made of the sustaining power of the soil, so that he may be present or represented thereat. When doubt arises as to the safe sustaining power of the soil upon which a building is to be erected, the Inspector of Buildings may order borings to be made, or he may order tests to be made of the sustaining power of the soil by and at the expense of the owner of the proposed building.

(2) In tests of the sustaining power of the soil the ultimate test load shall be one and one-half times the load which the soil is to actually bear when the building is completed. Measurements of the settlement shall begin as soon as one-tenth of the ultimate test load has been applied and shall be continued until a period of twenty-four hours shall have elapsed without increase of settlement under the ultimate load. On no soil shall the total allowable settlement after the application of one-tenth of the ultimate test load exceed one inch.

(3) In the absence of a test the area of the bearing footing shall be so proportioned that the load per square foot upon the respective character of soil shall not exceed those set forth in the following table:

Soil Under Footings.	Load in Tons.
Soft, clay	1
Clay, sand or clay and sand together or in layers, wet and springy	2
Loam, clay or fine sand, firm and dry	3
Coarse sand, gravel, or sand and gravel	4

Classification of Soils.

(A) Mud, Peat, Bog, Silt—Any soil containing more than a trace of vegetable matter, or which on drying shrinks more than five per cent. of its volume shall be classed as mud, peat, bog, or silt and shall be deemed unsuitable material on which the foundations of a building shall be directly supported.

(B) Filled in Material—Any material which has been removed or deposited by any agency of man, as by filling, dumping, dredging or otherwise, shall be classed as "filled in" material and shall be deemed unsuitable material on which the foundations of a building shall be directly supported.

(C) Clay—Any natural soil containing such ingredients as to render it capable of being worked when wet into a plastic state shall be called a clay.

(D) Sand—Any soil or natural material composed of quartz or other rock particles shall be classed as fine sand when fifty per cent. or over by weight passes a fifty mesh sieve, and as coarse sand when fifty per cent. or over is retained on a fifty mesh sieve.

(E) Gravel—Any soil or natural material composed of rock particles where fifty per cent. or over of the particles forming the mass shall be one-quarter of an inch in diameter or over, shall be classed as gravel.

(F) No footing of a building shall be directly supported upon filled in material, mud, peat, bog, silt or similar material.

SECTION 37.

Footings.

(1) All Foundations to Have Footing Courses—Except on rock bottom all foundations shall have footing courses, and all footing or base courses under foundation walls shall be laid not less than three feet below the original surface of the ground, on a good solid bottom.

(2) When Grade is Lowered.—Should any grade be lowered the foundational supports shall also be carried down to the depth above prescribed.

(3) What Built Of.—All footing or base courses shall be of stone, concrete, or concrete steel construction.

(4) Loads on Footings.—All footings shall be so designed that the stresses in the materials employed conform in all respects to the requirements of this Code, and the loads they sustain per unit or area shall be as nearly uniform as possible, and also so that a line drawn from the outer edge of the wall or pier at the bottom, to the outer edge of the footing, at the bottom, shall make an angle of not more than sixty degrees with a horizontal plane and shall lie within the masonry throughout its length, except when tensile stresses are properly taken care of.

(5) The dead loads carried by the footings shall include the actual weight of the superstructure and foundations down to the bottom of the footing. All tanks or other receptacles for liquids shall be figured as being full. All vaults or similar built-in structures shall be considered as forming a part of the building.

(6) In warehouses, stores and buildings, used for light manufacturing, in which the live load on the floors is not over one hundred and fifty pounds per square foot, and in churches, school houses and places of public amusement or assembly, the live load carried by the foundation shall not be less than seventy-five per centum of the total live load upon the floors contributing thereto.

(7) In office buildings, hotels, dwellings, apartment houses, lodging houses, tenement houses and stables, the live load carried by the foundation shall not be less than sixty per centum of the total live load on the floors contributing thereto.

(8) The live load carried by the foundations of all other buildings shall not be less than that required to be carried by the lowest tier of columns or by the foundation walls.

(9) Stone Footings.—Under walls their thickness shall not be less than one-third of their width, and in no case shall it be less than five inches; under piers, columns or posts the thickness of footing stones shall not be less than eight inches. The footing shall project a minimum distance of three inches beyond each side of any foundation wall, and six inches beyond each side of any pier. Footing stones shall be laid on their natural bed, crosswise, edge to edge and well bedded, and filled up, solid and level.

(7) Concrete Footings.—Concrete footings shall not be less than six inches thick and shall project not less than four inches beyond each side of any foundation wall and eight inches beyond each side of any pier.

For actual required thicknesses see clause one of this section. For materials and proportions thereof see section 22.

(8) Grillages.—Where necessary suitable grillage beams of steel, resting upon a good and sufficient bed of concrete, may be used. Such beams shall be fastened by bolts and separators and the grillage filled solid with concrete. All metal which forms part of any footing or foundation shall be thoroughly protected from rust by concrete or by the use of other approved coating.

SECTION 38.

Foundations.

(1) Every building, (except sheds), shall have good and sufficient foundations of brick, stone, concrete, reinforced concrete, or hollow blocks. When the building is erected upon solid ground the foundations shall extend not less than three feet below the surface of the earth, footings inclusive. When neither solid earth nor rock is found, piles, of wood or concrete, shall be used, as per requirements of the Inspector and the latest rules of engineering practice relating thereto.

(2) If built of rubble stone they shall be, for a depth of twelve feet below the curb level, at least eight inches thicker than the wall which rests upon them. If built of brick or concrete they shall be for a depth of twelve feet below the curb level at least four inches thicker than the wall which rests upon them.

(3) Headers.—All stone walls to have at least one header extending through the wall in every three feet each way, of good flat stones.

(4) All stone to be laid on its natural bed, every stone to extend into the wall at least six inches, to be built flush and true, firmly bedded in mortar with all spaces and joints thoroughly filled.

(5) Only cement mortar shall be used in the construction of the footings and foundations of any fire-proof building. No lime whatever shall be used under any conditions.

CHAPTER XIV.

Masonry.

SECTION 39.

Walls.

(1) The walls of all buildings, other than frame buildings, shall be constructed of stone, brick, iron, steel, cement concrete (in bulk, blocks or reinforced concrete), or other approved hard, solid and incombustible material.

(2) All buildings shall be enclosed on all vertical sides with independent or party walls.

(3) The walls and piers of all buildings of brick or stone shall be properly and solidly bonded, with close joints filled with mortar. They shall be built to a line and carried up plumb and straight.

(4) No brick, stone, concrete or masonry work of any description shall be built when the temperature is below twenty-eight degrees Fahrenheit at the point where the work is in progress. No frozen materials shall be built upon.

(5) No wall or walls of any building shall be carried up more than two stories higher in advance of any portion of the walls of said building, except that in the case of wall bearing buildings the exterior walls may be carried up so that the iron or steel work shall not be, at any time, more than five stories in advance of the walls, but this provision shall not apply to buildings in which the walls are carried independently by girders at each floor. The front, rear, side and party walls shall be properly bonded together.

(6) When not carried up at the same time the perpendicular joint between the walls shall be made with four-inch offsets at every heading course, and have also iron or steel anchors at least every three feet in height. These anchors shall not be less than two-inch by one-quarter-inch metal, and shall be either bent up at the ends or have a cross-pin to form the anchorage.

Anchors inserted for the purpose of connecting front and rear walls with side or party walls shall extend not less than eight inches into the side party wall and not less than twelve inches into the front and rear walls, when these walls are not built and bonded together, in themselves.

(7) The walls and beams of every building during the erection or alteration thereof shall be strongly braced from the beams of each adjacent story, and when required shall also be braced from the outside until the building is enclosed.

(8) In all brick walls every sixth course shall be a heading course, except where walls are faced with brick in flemish or running bond, in which latter case every sixth course shall be bonded into the backing by cutting the course of the face brick and putting in diagonal headers behind the same, or by splitting the face brick in half and backing the same with a continuous row of headers. Where face brick is used of a different thickness from the brick used for backing, the course of the exterior and interior brickwork shall be brought to a level bed at intervals of not more than ten courses in height of the face brick, and the face brick shall be properly tied to the backing by a heading course of the face brick.

(9) All bearing walls faced with brick laid in running bond shall be four inches thicker than the walls are required to be under any other section of this Code. In running bond approved metal wall ties may be used in place of the diagonal headers if placed not over four courses apart vertically and twenty inches horizontally.

(10) Face brick shall be laid at the same time as the backing, and shall in no case be laid after the backing is in place.

SECTION 40.

Piers.

(1) Piers shall be built of dimension stone, stone concrete, hollow blocks or good, hard, well-burned brick. Stone block or brick piers shall be laid in cement mortar. Every exterior pier shall be securely anchored to the beams or girders at the level of each tier. The height of any isolated pier shall not be greater than ten times the least horizontal dimension of the pier.

(2) Every pier of less than nine square feet in cross-section which supports any beam, girder, arch or column upon which a wall rests, or a lintel spanning an opening over ten feet wide on which a wall rests, shall have built into it, at vertical intervals of not less than thirty inches, steel plates five-sixteenths inch thick, or stone bonders not less than four inches thick.

Every steel plate shall have the same horizontal dimensions as the piers into which it is built.

(3) Every pier which supports a column or girder shall have immediately below the column or girder a suitable cast iron or steel plate to distribute the load over a sufficient area to comply with the permissable stress for the material supporting it as determined in sections 28 and 29 of this Code.

SECTION 41.

Stone Walls Above Grade.

(1) All stone walls to be built and bonded as already prescribed in section 39, except that above grade they may be laid in lime mortar, or lime and cement mortar as per sections 19 and 21 of this Code.

Where walls are built of stones with dressed level beds and vertical joints, the Inspector of Buildings may permit such walls to be of the same thickness as specified for brick walls. In no case shall stone walls be of less thickness than specified for brick walls, and in no case shall the pressure per unit of area exceed that provided for in the sections of this Code governing the strength of materials.

SECTION 42.

Ashlar.

(1) Stone used for the facing of any building, and known as ashlar, shall be not less than four inches thick.

(2) Stone ashlar shall be anchored to the backing, and the backing shall be of such thickness as to make the walls, independent of the ashlar, conform as to thickness with the requirements of the sections of this Code, unless every alternate course be at least eight inches thick and bonded into the backing, and then four inches of it may be counted as part of the thickness of the wall. However, no wall faced with ashlar shall be less than twelve inches thick in any case.

(3) Where terra cotta or other approved artificial material is used instead of stone ashlar, it shall not be less than four inches thick. It shall be properly and securely anchored to the backing, and not counted as part of the thickness of the wall.

SECTION 43.

Brick Wall Thicknesses.

(1) The minimum thickness of all bearing walls shall be in accordance with the schedule below. In determining the thickness by means of these schedules, the height of the walls shall be measured to the point of complete support whether this be a foundation, a beam or a girder.

For Buildings of Classes A., B. E and F.

16 in.	35 ft.	20 in.	35 ft.	24 in.	40 ft.
12 in.	25 ft.	16 in.	40 ft.	20 in.	25 ft.
12 in. throughout.		12 in. throughout.		...	...

For Buildings of Classes C and D.

Top Section. Thickness.	Height.	Middle Section. Thickness.	Height.	Bottom Section. Thickness.	Height.
12 in.	50 ft.	16 in.	25 ft.	...	...
8 in.	25 ft.	12 in.	25 ft.	16 in.	20 ft.
8 in. throughout.		12 in. throughout.		...	...

Increased Thickness of Walls.

(2) When the height of any wall exceeds one hundred feet, it shall be increased in thickness in general accordance with the above schedule as shall be approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

(3) When the clear span is greater than twenty-five feet, the thickness of bearing walls shall be increased four inches over that set forth in the above schedules for every twelve and one-half feet or fraction thereof that the said span exceeds twenty-five feet; or shall have in lieu of this increase of thickness such piers or buttresses as the Inspector of Buildings may direct. In all walls the same amount of materials herein required for walls, may be in part used in piers or buttresses, provided the walls or bays between shall be of a thickness approved by the Inspector.

(4) Every bearing wall faced with brick laid in running bond shall be four inches thicker than specified in the foregoing schedules.

(5) If any horizontal section through any part of any bearing wall shows more than thirty per centum area of flues and openings, such wall shall be increased in thickness by four inches for every fifteen per centum, or fraction thereof, by which the total area of flues and openings exceeds thirty per centum.

(6) In all buildings, walls over one hundred and five feet in length shall be four inches thicker throughout than is required by this Code, unless they are properly braced by cross walls, piers, buttresses or similar means.

Reduced Thickness of Non-Bearing Walls and Interior Walls.

(7) The thickness of non-bearing walls may be four inches less than that of bearing walls, provided that no non-bearing wall is less than twelve inches thick, nor extends for more than fifty feet in height without an increase of thickness.

(8) When bearing walls are less than twenty-five feet apart, or are intersected by cross walls, or strengthened by piers of sufficient size, the Inspector may permit the reduction of thickness of interior walls in just proportion to such added strength, except on walls less than forty feet in height.

SECTION 44.

Enclosure Walls for Skeleton Structures.

In skeleton structures not over seventy-five feet in height, walls between columns or posts and supported by girders, shall be of brick, stone, concrete of hard hollow clay blocks thoroughly anchored to enclosing columns, posts and girders, and be of a thickness for brick and stone required for non-bearing walls, for concrete not less than six inches, and for clay blocks set in cement mortar not less than eight inches in thickness, provided that the supporting columns or posts are not over twenty feet apart on centres, nor the vertical distance between supporting girders greater than twelve feet.

SECTION 45.

Existing Walls.

(1) Existing Party Walls.—Walls heretofore built for or used as party walls, the thickness of which was at the time of their erection in accordance with the requirements of the existing laws, which are in good condition but are not in accordance with the requirements of this Code, may be used at the discretion of the Inspector of Buildings for the ordinary uses of party walls provided the height of the same be not increased. No existing wall shall be used for party wall or other different purposes without his written permit.

(2) Lining Existing Walls.—Should it be desired to increase the height of existing party or independent walls, which are less in thickness than required under this Code, this shall be done by lining with brickwork to form a combined thickness with the old wall of not less than four inches more than the thickness required for a new wall corresponding with the total height of the wall when so increased in height. The said lining shall be supported on proper foundations and carried up to such height as the Inspector of Buildings may require. No lining shall be less than eight inches in thickness, and all linings shall be laid up in cement mortar and thoroughly anchored to the old brick walls with suitable wrought iron anchors, placed two feet apart, properly fastened or driven into the old walls in rows alternating vertically and horizontally with each other, the old walls being first cleaned of plaster or other coatings where any lining is to be built against the same. No rubble wall shall be lined until it has been approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

SECTION 46.

Arches and Lintels.

(1) Openings for doors and windows in all masonry buildings, shall have good and sufficient arches of stone, brick or terra cotta, well built and keyed with good and sufficient abutments, or lintels of stone, iron or steel of sufficient strength, which shall have a bearing at each end of not less than four inches on the wall. On the inside of all openings in non-fireproof buildings in which lintels shall be less than the thickness of the wall to be supported, there may be timber lintels, which shall rest at each end not more than three inches on any wall, which shall be chamfered at each end and be cut to true arch shapes on top. A suitable rowlock or keyed arch shall be turned over the timber lintel. Or the inside lintel may be of cast iron or steel, and in such case stone blocks or cast-iron plates shall not be required at the ends where the lintel rests on the walls, provided the opening is not more than six feet in width.

(2) All masonry arches shall be capable of sustaining the weight or thrust which they are designed to carry, and the stress at any point shall not exceed the working stress for the material used, as given in section 29 of this Code. Tie rods shall be used where necessary to secure stability.

Parapet Walls.

All exterior and division or party walls over fifteen feet high, excepting where the front walls are to be finished with cornices, gutters or crown mouldings, shall have parapet walls not less than eight inches in thickness and carried two feet above the roof, but for warehouses, factories, stores and other buildings used for commercial and manufacturing purposes the parapet walls shall be not less than twelve inches in thickness and carried two feet above the roof, and all such walls shall be coped with stone, terra cotta or cast iron.

SECTION 48.

Hollow Walls.

(1) In all walls that are built hollow the same net horizontal section of stone, brick or concrete shall be used in their construction as if they were built solid, as in this Code provided, and no hollow wall shall be built unless the parts of same are connected by proper ties, either of brick, stone, iron or suitable metals, placed not over twenty-four inches apart, horizontally, and vertically. No such hollow space shall exceed four inches in width.

SECTION 49.

Furred Walls and Studded-Off Spaces.

(1) The inside four inches of all walls may be built of hard burned hollow brick, the dimensions of ordinary brick, properly tied and bonded into the walls. Where hollow tile or porous terra-cotta blocks are used as lining or furring the walls, they shall not be included in the measurement of the thickness of such walls. In fire-proof skeleton buildings, however, hard burned hollow brick of standard size may be used to form the entire backing, provided that in no case shall the load imposed thereon exceed ten tons per square foot.

(2) In all walls furred with wood, the masonry between the ends of wood beams shall project the thickness of the furring beyond the inner face of the wall for the full depth of the beams. In cases where the beams are parallel to a wall furred with wood, there shall be a space of not less than two and one-half inches between such wall and the nearest beam. This space shall be filled in solidly with brickwork or concrete for the full depth of the floor beams.

Studded-Off Spaces.

(3) Where walls are studded off, unless fire-stops are provided as called for in this section, the space between the inside face of the wall and the studding at the floor level shall be fire-stopped with approved fire-proof material. The beams directly over the studded-off space shall be deafened with not less than four inches of such material, which shall be laid on boards cut in between the beams. The under side of such beams shall be protected by a covering of metal lath, or other approved fire-proof materials, and plaster. Dry cinders or sand shall not be permitted for fire stopping.

SECTION 50.

Recesses and Chases in Walls.

Recesses for stairways or elevators may be left in the foundation or cellar walls of all buildings, but in no case shall the walls be less in thickness than the walls of the top story, unless reinforced by additional piers with steel girders, or iron or steel columns and steel girders, securely anchored to walls on each side. Recesses for alcoves and similar purposes shall have not less than eight inches of brickwork at the back of such recesses, and such recesses shall not be more than eight feet in width, and shall be arched over or spanned with iron or steel lintels, and not carried up higher than eighteen inches below the bottom of the beams of the floor next above. No chase for water or other pipes shall be made in any wall more than one-third of its thickness. No horizontal recess or chase which exceeds four feet in length shall be allowed in any wall. The aggregate area of recesses and chases in any wall shall not exceed one-fourth of the whole area of the face of the wall on any story, nor shall any such recess be made within a distance of six feet from any other recess in the same wall. There shall be no chase in any pier.

SECTION 51.

Walls of Brick Buildings Raised, Lowered or Altered.

(1) Within the fire limits no brick dwelling house with eight inch walls, already erected, that has a peaked roof, shall be raised for the purpose of making a flat roof thereon, unless the same be raised with the same kind of material as the building, and unless such new roof be covered with fire-proof material. The building, when so raised, shall not exceed thirty-six feet six inches in height.

(2) No brick building within the fire limits shall be enlarged or built upon unless the exterior walls of the addition be of approved incombustible materials. Such building shall be raised, lowered or altered in the manner provided for in this section.

CHAPTER XV.

Chimneys, Flues and Fireplaces; Heating Pipes and Apparatus.

SECTION 52.

Chimneys, Flues and Fireplaces.

(1) Every chimney hereafter erected shall be of brick, dimension stone concrete or other approved incombustible material. Every chimney shall extend at least four feet above the highest point of contact with the roof. Every chimney shall be properly capped with terra cotta, stone, cast-iron or other approved incombustible weather-proof material.

(2) The side walls of brick or concrete chimneys may be not less than four inches thick outside the flue linings, for a height not greater than twenty-five feet, and any partition walls between adjacent flues in the same chimney shall be not less than four inches thick. In non-fireproof buildings there shall be at least eight inches of masonry between the smoke flue and any woodwork. The firebacks of all fireplaces shall be of solid masonry not less than eight inches thick. There shall be an air space of not less than two inches between any metal fireback and the masonry behind it. All flues shall be properly cleaned upon the completion of a building.

(3) No chimney shall rest or in any way depend upon woodwork for support.

(4) In no case shall a chimney be corbeled more than eight inches from a wall. In brick chimneys the corbeling shall consist of at least five courses of brick, but no corbeling more than four inches shall be allowed in eight-inch brick walls. Piers which support chimneys shall start from the foundation on the same line with the chimney breast and shall be not less than twelve inches on the face, properly bonded into the walls. All chimneys which shall be dangerous shall be made safe or taken down.

(5) Each smoke flue (except as per clause 6) shall be lined with burnt clay or terra cotta pipe, made smooth on the inside from the bottom of the flue, or from the throat of the fireplace if the flue starts from the latter, and carried up continuously the entire height of the flue. The ends of the sections of all such lining pipes shall fit closely together and the pipes shall be built in as the flues are carried up.

(6) The smoke flue of every steam power boiler shall be lined on all sides with not less than four inches of fire brick, laid in fire mortar, for a distance of twenty-five feet from its entrance into stack. The smoke flue of every smelting furnace, every steam boiler and of every other device which heats the flues to a high temperature, shall be built with double walls of suitable thickness for the temperature. There shall be an air space between the walls, and the inside wall shall be of fire brick not less than four inches thick, and the enclosing walls at no point less than eight inches thick.

(7) All smoke flues from boilers or furnaces shall have metal clean-out frame and door built in at bottom.

(8) All fireplaces and chimney breasts where mantels are placed, whether intended for ordinary fireplace uses or not, shall have trimmer arches to support hearths. The arches shall be at least twenty inches in width, measured from the face of the chimney breasts, and they shall be of brick, stone, concrete or burnt clay. The length of a trimmer arch shall be not less than the width of the chimney breast. Wood centres under trimmer arches shall be removed before plastering the ceiling underneath. If a heater is placed in any fireplace the hearth shall be the full width of the heater. All fireplaces in which heaters are placed shall have approved incombustible mantels. No wood mantel or other woodwork shall be exposed back of a summer piece; the iron work of the summer piece shall be placed against the masonry back of the fireplace. No fireplace shall be closed with a wood fireboard. When a grate is set in a fireplace, a lining of firebrick, at least two inches in thickness shall be added to the fire back, unless soap stone, tile or cast iron is used, and filled solidly behind with fire proof material.

(9) Cupola chimneys of foundries, or similar works, shall extend at least ten feet above the highest point of any roof within a radius of fifty feet of such cupola, and be covered on the top with a heavy wire netting. No woodwork shall be placed within two feet of the cupola.

(10) If, when or before the scaffolds are at the proper height, the building owner is requested so to do by the owner of the building or structure adjoining, the one erecting or altering a building to be raised more than ten feet above the adjoining and contiguous building shall, at his own expense, raise the adjacent chimney or chimneys of such adjoining building to the same level as the chimneys of his building, or shall supply sufficient flues connecting such chimneys with his own chimneys, which shall be of ample capacity to accommodate both buildings.

(11) All ash holes, ash houses or ash depositories or receptacles of any kind shall be built wholly of incombustible material.

SECTION 53.

Heating Flues, Pipes and Vent Ducts.

(1) All stone, concrete or brick hot air flues and shafts shall be lined with tin, galvanized iron or burnt clay pipes. No wood casings, furring or lath shall be placed against or cover any smoke flue. No stovepipe shall be placed nearer than nine inches to any lath and plaster or board partition, ceiling or any woodwork. Smoke pipes of laundry stoves, cooking ranges and of furnaces shall not be less than twelve inches from any woodwork, unless they are properly guarded by metal shields; if so guarded, stovepipes shall be not less than six inches and smoke pipes of laundry stoves, cooking ranges and of furnaces shall be not less than nine inches distant from any woodwork. Where smoke pipes pass through a lath and plaster partition or wood floor or roof they shall be guarded by galvanized ventilated thimbles at least twelve inches larger in diameter than the pipes, or by galvanized iron thimbles built in at least eight inches of brick. Metal pipes in masonry walls, used or intended to be used to convey heated air, shall have backing in brick or stone work of not less than eight inches, in concrete of four inches, and may be covered in with metal lath and plaster.

(2) Where hot air pipes are placed in wood partitions, the sides of the studs, beams and all contiguous woodwork is to be lined with tin flues and the soldered joints to be strongly secured in place with sufficient air space left between the wood and the lining, and between the lining and the pipes; or, in lieu of the above protection two inches of brick or porous terra cotta set in cement, or three inches of concrete may be placed between the hot air pipe and the woodwork. No vertical hot air pipe shall be placed in a stud partition or in a wood enclosure, unless it be at least four feet distant in a horizontal direction from the furnace. If placed in brickwork it may not be less than two feet distant. Hot air pipes in closets, where exposed, shall be double, with a space of one inch between them. All outer faces of all hot air flues in woodwork to be covered with metal lathing.

(3) Horizontal Hot Air Pipes.—Horizontal hot air pipes in cellar or basement shall be placed six inches below the floor beams or ceiling; if the floor beams or ceiling are plastered or protected by a metal shield, then the distance shall be not less than three inches. All shut-off dampers in hot air pipes shall be at least twelve inches below the floor beams or ceiling.

(4) Vent Flues and Ducts.—Vent flues or ducts for the removal of vitiated or foul air, in which the temperature of the air cannot exceed that of the rooms, may be constructed of sheet iron, or similar incombustible material, and shall not be placed nearer than one inch to any woodwork. No such flue or duct shall be used for any other purpose. Cold air ducts of hot air furnaces shall be of metal or other approved fireproof material.

(5) Protection of Woodwork Against Steam and Hot Water Pipes.—Steam heating pipes shall not be placed within two inches of any woodwork unless the woodwork is protected by a metal shield, where the air space shall be not less than one inch. Every steam or hot water heating pipe passing through floors and ceilings or lath and plaster partitions shall be protected by a metal tube one inch larger in diameter than the pipe, with a metal plate at the floor. Where they run in a horizontal direction between the floor and ceiling, a metal shield shall be placed on the under side of the floor over them and on the sides of wood beams running parallel with the pipe. All wood boxes or casings inclosing any steam or hot water heating pipe, or wood covers to recesses in walls in which any steam or hot water heating pipe is placed, shall be lined with lock-jointed metal.

(4) Cold water or other exposed plumbing pipes shall have the surrounding air space closed off at the ceiling and floor lines of any wood floor through which any such pipe shall be carried, except that hot water supply pipes may run through metal sleeves. All steam pipes shall have coverings of fireproof material from ceiling to floor line over.

SECTION 54.

Ducts for Pipes.

In all buildings the ducts for pipes, wires, cables and for similar purposes shall in all cases be separately inclosed on all sides with fireproof material or lined with metal strongly secured.

No pipes, wires, cables or similar material of any kind shall be encased within or embedded in the fireproof protection of columns or other structural members; all such chases shall be fire-stopped at each floor.

SECTION 55.

Registers.

A register placed on wood work or other combustible material in connection with a metal pipe or duct, shall have the end of the pipe or duct flanged over on the woodwork under it. All such registers shall have soapstone or metal borders firmly set in plaster of paris or gauged mortar.

(2) All register boxes shall be made of metal with a flange on the top to fit the groove in the frame. There shall be an open space of two inches on all sides of the register boxes extending from the underside of the border to and through the ceiling below. The opening shall be fitted with a tight tin or galvanized iron casing, the upper end of which shall ordinance.

SECTION 58.

Drying Rooms.

All walls, floors, ceilings and partitions inclosing drying rooms and smoke houses when not of fireproof materials, shall be metal lathed and plastered, or covered with other approved incombustible material.

CHAPTER XVI.

Vaults, Areas and Cellars.

SECTION 59.

Cellars to Be Protected From Water.

Before the walls of buildings are carried up above the foundation walls, provision shall be made to prevent water accumulating in the cellars to the injury of the foundations.

SECTION 60.

Vaults Under Sidewalks and Retaining Walls.

(1) In buildings where the space under the sidewalk is utilized, a sufficient stone, concrete or brick wall, or brick arches between steel beams, shall be built to retain the roadway of the street, and the side, end and party walls of such building shall extend under the sidewalk, of sufficient thickness, to such wall. The roofs of all vaults shall be of incombustible material.

(2) Openings in the roofs of vaults for the admission of coal or light, or for manholes, or for any other purposes, if placed outside the area line, shall be covered with glass set in iron frames, each glass to measure not more than sixteen square inches, or with iron covers having a rough surface, and rebated flush with the sidewalk. When any such cover is placed in any sidewalk, it shall be placed as near as practicable to the outside line of the curb.

SECTION 61.

Areas.

(1) All areas shall be properly protected with suitable railings, or covered over.

(2) When areas are covered over, iron or iron and glass combined, stone or other incombustible materials shall be used, and supported on brick, concrete or stone walls, or on steel beams.

SECTION 62.

Cellar Partitions in Buildings of Classes "C" and "D."

(1) In all buildings of Classes "C" and "D," except dwellings, hereafter erected having a clear span of over twenty feet between bearing walls, and supporting stud partitions above, there shall be constructed in the cellar or lowest story at right angles to the floor beams, at least one partition of brick or concrete, not less than eight inches thick, or piers of brick or concrete, with openings arched below the underside of the first tier of beams.

(2) If height of basement or cellar exceeds ten feet in the clear, partition walls shall be not less than twelve inches thick. Girders of steel, with iron or steel columns, or piers of masonry, may be used in place of partitions. If steel floor beams, spanning the distance between bearing walls, of adequate strength to support the stud partitions above in addition to the floor load to be sustained by the said steel beams, are used, then the fore-and-aft brick or concrete partition, or its equivalent, may be omitted.

Cellar Ceilings.

The ceiling of every cellar or lowest story in all buildings hereafter erected of Classes "C" and "D," except dwellings, less than thirty-six feet six inches in height, occupied by more than one family, when the beams are of wood, shall be lathed with metal lath and plastered thereon with two or more coats of mortar, not less than three-quarters of an inch in thickness.

CHAPTER XVII.

Entrances; Stairs; Fire Stairs and Escapes, Fire Shutters, Stand Pipes and Sprinklers.

SECTION 64.

Entrances.

(1) Every building hereafter erected or altered shall have at least one entrance direct to a street, yard or court communicating directly with the street.

(2) In all buildings of Classes "A," "B" and "C" hereafter erected, all doors in the first story giving admission to or egress from the building, including the doors of vestibules, shall be so hung as to swing outwards when opening. This requirement shall not be construed to prohibit the use upon doors of double swing hinges which permit the door to swing both outwards and inwards, nor of sliding doors in stables, garages and the shipping rooms and receiving rooms of manufacturing and mercantile buildings.

(3) Every revolving door at the entrance or exit of any building shall be an approved revolving door having a mechanical device by which it can be readily transformed into an open exit.

(4) Where buildings are interiorly connected every opening between them shall be provided with an approved self-closing standard fire door.

Entrance to Cellar or Basement.

(5) Every tenement building hereafter erected that is arranged to be occupied by more than two families above the first story shall be provided with an entrance to the cellar or basement thereof from the outside of the building. If not over three stories in height and if not arranged to be occupied by more than two families, the stairs leading to the cellar or basement may be located inside the buildings, provided they are enclosed with approved fireproof partitions.

SECTION 65.

Interior Stairs.

(1) Number Regulated by Area of Building.—In all buildings hereafter erected the number of stairs in each story shall be regulated by the area of each story measured on the outside of walls, except as hereinafter mentioned. All stairways shall be practically continuous from the top floor to the curb level, and the main stairway shall extend to the roof. Exits from all stairs shall be provided as the Inspector of Buildings may direct. Where more than one stairway is required the stairs shall be remote from each other. When the ground floor area exceeds that of the floors above, the number of stairs required for this story shall be determined by the area of the story next above.

(2) In all Municipal Buildings, Court Houses, Schools, Colleges, Hospitals, Asylums, Churches, Amusement Halls, Lodge Rooms, Exhibition Buildings, Hotels, Lodging Houses, Club Houses, Studios, Dormitories, Dwellings, Tenements, Lofts, Stores, Restaurants, Factories, Workshops and Printing Houses there shall be the following number of stairs for stories not exceeding the given areas:

Not exceeding 2,500 square feet in area, one stairway.

Not exceeding 5,000 square feet in area, two stairways.

Not exceeding 10,000 square feet in area, three stairways.

Not exceeding 20,000 square feet in area, four stairways.

(3) In all Fire Houses, Libraries, Museums, Office Buildings, Warehouses, Stables, there shall be the following number of stairs for stories not exceeding the given area:

Not exceeding 3,750 square feet in area, one stairway.

Not exceeding 7,500 square feet in area, two stairways.

Not exceeding 15,000 square feet in area, three stairways.

Not exceeding 30,000 square feet in area, four stairways.

(4) In all Armories, Markets, Light and Power Plants, Car Barns, Garages, and Foundries, there shall be the following number of stairs for stories not exceeding the given areas.

Not exceeding 5,000 square feet in area, one stairway.

Not exceeding 10,000 square feet in area, two stairways.

Not exceeding 20,000 square feet in area, three stairways.

Not exceeding 40,000 square feet in area, four stairways.

(5) Where the area of any story exceeds the above requirements for four continuous lines of stairs, such extra number of stairs, outside fire stairs or fire escapes shall be provided as the Inspector of Buildings shall direct.

(6) At the discretion of the Inspector of Buildings the allowable area for any given number of stairs as mentioned above may be increased as he shall direct between the given areas.

(7) In all Theatres or Opera Houses hereafter erected stairs of such number and of such width shall be provided as called for in Section 116 of this Code.

(8) The width of the stairs required by this section shall in no case be less than three feet and two inches from wall to centre of hand rail, or from centre to centre of parallel hand rails, and shall be greater if required by the Inspector of Buildings.

(9) All stairs shall have treads and risers of uniform width and height throughout in each flight and the rise shall be not more than eight inches, and the treads, exclusive of nosing, not less than nine inches.

(10) All stairs shall be provided with proper banisters or railings and hand rails.

(11) Each flight of stairs in every story which exceeds a height of twelve feet in the clear shall have a proper intermediate landing. When stairs have a straight run the landing shall be placed at the central portion thereof.

(12) If there are two or more flights of stairs, one outside fire stairs erected in accordance with Section 66 of this Code shall be considered the equivalent of one inside flight of stairs as herein provided, but no outside fire escape shall be accepted in lieu of such stairs.

(13) The Inspector of Buildings may order, in addition to fire escapes, such increase or alteration of existing inadequate stairways and exits in combustible structures, as will best conserve the safety of employees therein or the public users thereof.

(14) Slate and Stone Treads to be Supported.—In all buildings hereafter erected where the treads and landings of metal stairs are of slate, marble or other stone, there shall be placed directly underneath each tread and each landing for their entire length and width a metal plate made solid, or having openings not exceeding four square inches in same, of adequate strength, but not less than one-quarter of an inch in thickness, and securely fastened to the strings with bolts or rivets, or to both the strings and risers if the treads be more than three and one-half feet long. If stairs are of other fireproof material than metal, and the slate, marble or other stone treads and landings are each solidly supported for their entire length and width by the materials composing such stairs, metal supports shall not be required.

SECTION 66.

Outside Fire Stairs.

(1) Any building hereafter erected or altered, which exceeds thirty-six feet and six inches in height, and is required to have two or more staircases, as specified in section 65 of this Code, may have, when approved by the Inspector of Buildings, in place of one inside stairs an outside fire staircase, which shall be accessible to all occupants.

(2) Such outside fire stairs shall be entirely of suitable iron, reinforced concrete or steel. They shall extend from the curb, court or yard level to the roof, and shall in no case be in front of openings in the wall. At each story there will be access to the stairway. Access shall be only by doorways connecting with steel or iron balconies on the outside walls of the building. Doors shall be self-closing, at least three feet wide, metal covered, with metal-covered jambs and casings, and shall swing outwards to open, and be provided with locks or latches, with visible fastenings that require no keys.

(3) Direct outlets shall be provided at roof and curb level. Where staircases end in a court or yard there shall be a fireproof passageway not less than three feet wide and six feet six inches high, leading direct to the street. There shall be no steps within this passageway.

(4) The staircase shall be at least three feet wide in the clear and have treads not less than nine inches wide, exclusive of nosings, and risers of not more than eight inches. Landings the full width of the stairs shall be provided at vertical intervals of not more than twelve feet. All treads shall be of uniform width. No winders shall be permitted. The connecting balconies, which shall be provided in addition to any stair landing at the same level therewith, shall be at least three feet six inches wide in the clear, and not more than two inches below the door sill. The top surface of treads, landings and balconies shall have an approved roughened surface to prevent slipping. Stairs shall have substantial railings and handrails. All parts of stairways and balconies shall receive not less than three coats of paint, one before and two after erection, and shall be kept painted and in good repair. Stairways, balconies and all passageways connecting thereto shall at all times be kept free from incumbrance, as required in section 67 for fire escapes.

SECTION 67.

Fire Escapes.

(1) The Inspector of Buildings shall have full and exclusive power and authority to direct fire escapes and other means of egress to be provided upon and within any of the said buildings, except as herein otherwise provided. The owner of any building upon which a fire escape is erected shall keep the same in good repair and properly painted.

(2) Tenements, Boarding Houses, which have more than fifteen sleeping rooms above the basement floor; every hotel, lodging house, factory, mill, workshop, store and school more than two stories in height, and every office and business building which is more than three stories in height, all buildings used or occupied as a place of public entertainment or instruction, and all such special buildings as may be designated by the Inspector of Buildings, unless otherwise provided with outside fire stairs as per Section 66 of this code, shall have one or more fire escapes as follows:

(3) Fire escapes on the outside of buildings shall consist of open iron balconies and stairways.

(4) The stairways shall be placed at an angle of not more than sixty degrees with the horizontal; and with steps not less than six inches in width and twenty inches in length, and with a rise of not more than nine inches.

(5) Balconies.—The balcony on the top floor, except in case of a front fire escape, shall be provided with a gooseneck ladder leading from said balcony to and above the roof.

(6) The balconies shall be not less than three feet in width, and placed where directed by the Inspector of Buildings, at each story above the ground floor.

(7) They shall be below and not more than one foot below the window sills and extend in front of and not less than nine inches beyond each window.

(8) There shall be a landing not less than twenty-four inches square at the head and foot of each stairway.

(9) The stairway opening on each platform shall be of a size sufficient to provide clear headway.

(10) Floors of Balconies.—The floors of balconies shall be of steel slats not less than one and one-half inches by three-eighths of an inch, placed not more than one and one-quarter inches apart, and well secured and riveted to steel battens one and one-half inches by three-eighths of an inch, not over three feet apart and riveted at the intersection. The openings for stairways in all balconies shall be not less than twenty-four inches wide and thirty-six inches long, and such openings shall not have covers of any kind.

(11) The platforms or balconies shall be constructed and erected to safely sustain in all their parts a safe load, at a ratio of four to one, of not less than eighty pounds per square foot of surface.

(12) Railings.—The outside top rail shall extend around the entire length of the platform, and in all cases shall go through the wall at each end, and be properly secured by nuts and four-inch square washers at least three-eighths of an inch thick, and no top rail shall be connected at right angles by cast-iron. The top rail of balconies shall be one and three-quarter inches by one-half inch of steel, or one and one-half inches by one and one-half inch angle, one-quarter of an inch thick. The bottom rails shall be one and one-half inches by three eighths of an inch steel, or one and one-half inch by one and one-half inch angle, one-quarter inch thick, well leaded into the wall. The standards or filling-in bars shall be not less than one-half inch round or square steel, well riveted to the top and bottom rails and platform frame. Such standards or filling-in bars shall be securely braced by outside brackets at suitable intervals, and shall be placed not more than six inches from centres; the height of railings shall in no case be less than two feet nine inches.

(14) Brackets.—The brackets shall be not less than one-half inch by one and three-quarters inch steel, placed edgewise, or one and three-quarters inch angle, one-quarter inch thick, well braced. They shall be not more than four feet apart, and shall be braced by means of not less than three-quarters of an inch square steel, and shall extend two-thirds of the width of the respective balconies or brackets. The brackets shall go through the wall and be turned down three inches, or be properly secured by nuts and four inch square washers at least three-eighths of an inch thick.

(15) When brackets are put on buildings already erected, the part going through the wall shall be not less than one inch in diameter, with screw nuts and washers not less than five inches square and one-half an inch thick.

(16) Drop Ladders.—A proper balanced drop-ladder shall be required from the lower balcony when the floor of such balcony is more than fourteen feet above the sidewalk or ground.

(17) Painting.—All the parts of such fire escapes shall receive not less than two coats of paint, one in the shop and one after erection.

Incumbrances on Fire Escapes.

(1) No person shall at any time place an incumbrance of any kind whatsoever before or upon any fire-escape, balcony or ladder used as a fire escape. It shall be the duty of every Policeman who shall discover any fire-escape, balcony or ladder of any fire-escape, incumbered in any way to forthwith report the same to his commanding officer, and such officer shall forthwith cause the occupant of the premises or apartment to which said fire-escape, balcony or ladder is attached, or for whose use the same is provided, to be notified, either verbally or in writing, to remove such encumbrance and keep the same clear. If said notice shall not be complied with by the removal forthwith of such incumbrance, and keeping said fire-escape, balcony or ladder free from encumbrance, then it shall be the duty of said commanding officer to apply to a Police Magistrate for a warrant for the arrest of the occupant or occupants of the said premises or apartments of which the fire-escape forms a part, and the said occupant shall be brought before the said Magistrate as for disorderly conduct and on conviction the occupant or occupants of said premises or apartments shall be fined not more than ten dollars for each offense, or may be imprisoned not to exceed ten days, or both, in the discretion of the court.

(2) In constructing all balcony fire-escapes the manufacturer thereof shall securely fasten thereto, in a conspicuous place, a metal plate having suitable raised letters on the same, to read as follows: "Notice: Any Person Placing Any Incumbrance on This Balcony is Liable to a Penalty of Ten Dollars and Imprisonment for Ten Days."

(3) Scuttle Ladders.—All buildings requiring fire escapes, unless provided with stairs to the roof, shall have stationary iron ladders leading to the scuttle, opening in the roof thereof, and all scuttles and ladders shall be kept so as to be ready for use at all times. If a scuttle instead is used in place of a scuttle it shall have stairs with sufficient guard or hand-rail leading to the roof. In case the building shall be a tenement house the door in the bulkhead or scuttle shall at no time be locked, but may be fastened on the inside by movable bolts or hooks.

SECTION 68.

Engineers' Stationary Ladders.

Every building in which boilers or machinery are placed in the cellar or lowest story shall have stationary iron ladders or stairs from such story leading direct to a manhole through the sidewalk or other outside exit.

SECTION 69.

Fire Shutters.

(1) Whenever the Inspector shall so direct buildings shall have standard fire doors, blinds or shutters or their equivalent, as required in this section, on every exterior window and opening above the first floor, except on openings fronting on streets, which are more than thirty feet in width, or where no other building is within thirty feet of such opening.

(2) If an approved metal window frame and approved metal sash with approved wire glass, are built in a window opening, fire shutters may be omitted.

SECTION 70.

Standpipes.

(1) In every building, exceeding fifty-nine and not over one hundred feet in height, unless already provided with a three-inch or larger standpipe, and in all buildings hereafter erected exceeding fifty-nine feet and not exceeding one hundred feet in height, there shall be provided a vertical standpipe of not less than four inches in diameter.

(2) These standpipes shall be of wrought iron or steel galvanized, and together with fittings and connections, shall be of such strength as to safely withstand at least three hundred pounds water pressure to the square inch when installed and ready for service; also to stand such a test without leaking at joints, valves or fittings.

(3) Standpipes shall be located within fireproof stairway inclosures where the latter are of such construction, and shall pass through the landings or the halls where they are not so enclosed.

(4) In buildings exceeding one hundred feet deep fronting on two or more streets there shall be a standpipe at each end of building, and in buildings of an area exceeding eight thousand square feet there shall be one standpipe at each stairway, or within each stairway enclosure.

(5) Where more than one standpipe is required in a building they shall be connected at their bases by pipes of size equal to that of the largest standpipes, so that water from any source will supply all the standpipes.

(6) Standpipes shall extend from the cellar to and through the roof, with a hose connection located from four to six feet above each floor level, fitted with approved straightway composition gate valve in each story, including cellar, and a hose connection provided above the roof with valve controlling latter located in the standpipe under the roof and arranged to be operated both from above and below the roof. A suitable three-quarter inch drain pipe and valve shall be provided under the roof for each roof connection.

(7) Hose sufficient to reach to all parts of the floor shall be attached to each outlet in the building, and hose for roof hydrant may be placed on rack in top floor near the scuttle or bulkhead leading to the roof. Hose shall be two and one-half inches in diameter, in fifty-foot lengths, and provided with standard couplings at each end; all couplings shall be of standard thread as that used by the Plainfield Fire Department.

(8) Hose shall be of standard make approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

(9) Each line of hose shall be provided with washers and be fitted with play pipe of standard pattern, with discharge outlet not less than three-quarter inch in diameter. Two spanners shall be located at each hose connection throughout the building.

(10) All standpipes shall be provided with a female siamese steamer connection with clapper valve, located on the outside of the building, about one foot above the curb level, and where a building fronts on two or more streets, a connection shall be provided on each street front. Inlet pipe from steamer connection to standpipe shall be not less than the diameter of the largest standpipe. The thread on the siamese connection shall be uniform with that used by the Fire Department. Siamese steamer connections shall be provided with check valves in the "Y," and substantial caps provided to protect thread on the connection. The steamer connection fitting shall be horizontal. A suitable iron plate with raised letters shall be secured to the wall near steamer connection, reading, "Standpipe leading to cellar, sub-cellar or up through building," as the case may be.

(11) In each connecting pipe just inside of the building, in a horizontal section, shall be placed a straightway check valve, but not a gate valve. A drip pipe with valve to same, shall be placed between said check valve and steamer connection to properly drain this section to prevent freezing.

(12) In addition to the provision made for steamer connections to standpipes, the water supply may be had from city water, automatic fire-pump of five hundred gallons or more capacity per minute, elevated tank or steel pressure tank of not less than five thousand gallons capacity.

(13) In all buildings coming under these regulations as to height the standpipe system shall have at least one of the approved automatic supplies before described.

(14) Where a standpipe is connected to a tank there shall be straightway check valve in a horizontal section of pipe between the first hose outlet in connecting pipe and tank, and said tank shall be filled by separate pipe, and not through the standpipe.

(15) Where pumps furnishing a supply to standpipe are located in the lowest story of a building, they shall be placed not less than two feet above the floor level, and boilers upon which pumps depend for steam shall be arranged so that flooding of fires under same will be impossible.

SECTION 71.

Automatic Sprinklers.

(1) Where the maximum floor area is desired as per section 9, and in all building of Classes E and F, the height of which exceeds fifty-nine feet, except office buildings, restaurants, light and power plants, and any portion of loft buildings used for office or dwelling purposes, there shall be provided in addition to standpipes a standard equipment of automatic sprinklers, placed at ceiling of each story extending the full depth and breadth of the building. Said sprinkler pipes shall be connected with a pipe not less than four inches in diameter leading to the outside of building, and there provided with an approved siamese steamer connection, the latter to be installed under the requirements set forth in section 70 of this Code, and to be under the control of and for the use of the Fire Department. A suitable iron plate with raised letters shall be secured to the wall near said steamer connection, reading "Automatic Sprinklers."

CHAPTER XVIII.

Enclosures for Elevators, Stairways, Dumbwaiters and Shafts.

SECTION 72.

Elevator Enclosures.

(1) All elevators hereafter placed in any theatre, hospital, asylum, or in any building of classes B and E, excepting office buildings, shall be enclosed by partitions of brick, terra cotta block, reinforced concrete or other approved fire proof material, built in accordance with section 103 of this Code and carried by suitable foundations of masonry, concrete or steel. In all other buildings passenger elevators may be erected within staircase enclosures of brick or other approved masonry. In such cases the elevator shaft may be surrounded by open iron grill work, backed throughout with approved wire glass, and staircase throughout built of incombustible materials.

(2) If not used as bearing walls the partitions enclosing elevators, when of brick, shall be not less than eight inches in thickness for the uppermost fifty feet and shall increase four inches in thickness for each lower fifty feet or part thereof; or when wholly supported by suitable steel framing at vertical intervals of not over forty feet, they may be eight inches in thickness throughout their height. If not used as bearing walls such walls when of terra cotta block, wholly supported by steel framing at vertical intervals of not over twenty-four feet, and suitably spaced upright members shall be not less than six inches in thickness. If not used as bearing walls such walls, when of reinforced concrete, shall be not less than four inches in thickness when suitably supported at vertical intervals of not over twenty-four feet, through their height. Such walls or partitions when of other approved fireproof material shall be constructed and supported as may be directed by the Inspector of Buildings. The inside surfaces of all elevator shafts shall be flush, smooth and free from projecting sills, lintels or breaks. Said walls shall extend through and at least three feet above the roof in all cases. Where the elevator shaft extends into the cellar or lowest story it shall be enclosed in that story with brick walls not less than eight inches thick, or reinforced concrete not less than four inches thick.

(3) Every door opening in any said inclosure shall be provided with a standard fire door; all window frames and sash to be metal covered and all glass to be wired glass.

(4) The roofs over all enclosed elevators shall be made of fireproof materials, with a metal skylight at least three-fourths the area of the shaft, the glass to be not more than one-eighth of an inch thick and covered below with strong wire netting set in iron frame, but wired glass shall not be used in skylight over elevator inclosures.

(5) When the shaft does not extend to the bottom of the cellar or lowest story, the lowest end shall be enclosed in fireproof material. The bottom of every elevator shaft shall be fireproof.

(6) When the inclosure of an elevator has an opening to accommodate machinery for operating same, such as shafts, pulleys, drums, cables, etc., said machinery shall be inclosed in a similar manner to the shaft. Doors to be fire doors.

The door at the sidewalk level of the said elevator or lift shall be of sheet metal.

SECTION 73.

Stairway Enclosures.

(1) In all fireproof buildings exceeding thirty-six feet six inches in height and all buildings of Class E the stair halls shall be inclosed on each story with fireproof material the same as required for elevators, to form an inclosure, the floor area of which shall be not more than three times the total area of the floor openings for the elevators and stairs in each enclosure in each story.

All stairwells, elevator wells, halls and corridors shall be inclosed and separated from the rest of the floor space by fireproof enclosures, with floor surfaces of stone, cement, tiling, rock asphalt or other approved incombustible material, and approved metal or metal covered doors, trim and sash, having wire glass, where glass is used.

(2) The stairs and staircase landings shall be of brick, terra cotta, stone, Portland cement, concrete, iron or steel.

SECTION 74.

Dumbwaiter Inclosures.

(1) Dumbwaiter shafts in dwelling houses, to a height of two stories above basement or cellar floor, may be built throughout of wood studs filled in solidly with bricks, blocks, or approved incombustible material, above lowest story to be covered on all interior surfaces, and on lowest story to be covered on all interior and exterior surfaces with metal with plastered metal lath, or plastered approved plaster board strongly secured. If over the above three stories in height, and in all buildings other than dwellings, to be constructed as for fire-proof partitions, Section 103, of this code.

Note.—For reasons of fire safety, construction as per Section 103 is commended in all cases.

If extended to top story said partitions or walls shall also extend at least three feet above the roof and be roofed over with fireproof materials and with a skylight at least three-fourths the area of the shaft, made with metal frames and glazed with glass not more than one-eighth of an inch thick and covered below with strong wire netting, set in iron frames, but wired glass shall not be used in skylights over dumbwaiter enclosures.

(2) All openings in the inclosure walls or construction shall be provided with self-closing standard fire-doors, and fireproof jambs and trim.

(3) When the shaft does not extend to the floor level of the cellar or lowest story, the bottom of the shaft shall be constructed of fireproof material.

(4) When the shaft does not extend through the top story the top of the shaft also shall be constructed of fireproof material.

SECTION 75.

Light and Vent Shafts.

(1) In every building hereafter erected or altered, except frame dwellings, all the walls or partitions forming interior light or vent shafts, shall be built in accordance with sections 72 and 74 of this Code. The walls of all light or vent shafts whether exterior or interior hereafter erected, shall be carried up not less than three feet above the level of the roof and the walls shall be coped as other parapet walls. When the shaft is covered by a ventilating skylight of metal and glass the walls need not be carried more than two feet above the roof. When metal louvres are used for ventilating purposes, the louvres or slats shall be riveted to the metal frame.

(2) Vent shafts not more than twenty square feet in horizontal area in private dwellings may be built of wood studs filled and covered as for dumbwaiter inclosures, provided they do not extend through more than two stories and are carried above the roof, and covered with a ventilating skylight of metal and glass. If of greater area, and more than two stories in height, then to be constructed as per Section 103 of this code.

CHAPTER XIX.

Mansard Roofs, Roofings, Cornices, Gutters, Metal Fronts, Tanks, Pent Houses, Bulkheads and Scuttles, Skylights and Floor Lights.

SECTION 76.

Mansard Roofs.

If mansard or other roofs of like character, having a pitch of over sixty degrees be placed on masonry buildings within the fire zone over thirty-six feet six inches high, they shall be constructed of iron or steel frames, and metal lathed on the inside and plastered with two coats of mortar of good material, and if of wood on frame building, shall be filled with fireproof material not less than three inches thick. The outside of all such roofs shall be covered with metal, slate or tile.

Roofings Within the Fire Limits.

The planking and sheathing of the roofs of buildings shall not in any case be extended across the side or party wall thereof, every building and show tops of every gable and dormer window thereon shall be covered and roofed with brick, tile, slate, tin, copper, iron or plastic slate, asphalt, slag or gravel may be used, provided such roofing shall be composed of not less than five layers of roofing felt, cemented together and finished with not less than ten gallons of coal-tar, pitch or asphalt to each one hundred square feet of roof or such other quality of fireproof roofing as the Inspector of Buildings may authorize, and the outside of every gable and dormer window hereafter placed upon any building shall be covered with sheet metal or some other fireproof material. For repairs to existing roofings see section 10.

SECTION 77.

Cornices, Gutters and Metal Fronts.

(1) On all buildings hereafter erected within the fire limits the exterior cornices, including of those on show windows, and gutters, shall be of sheet metal or other fireproof material. All such cornices shall be well secured to the walls with metal anchors, independent of any woodwork. The tops of cornices shall not extend above the tops of the walls to which they are attached.

All exterior wooden cornices or features within the fire limits which by the operations of fire, or the elements, require renewal to the extent of one-half, shall be taken down, and, if replaced, shall be constructed of sheet metal or other fireproof material. If not damaged to the extent of one-half, the same may be repaired with the same material of which they were originally constructed.

(3) One story store fronts with show window may be built of wood, if sheathed or celled and covered with metal strongly secured, provided suitable fire stops are placed between both adjoining buildings. Metal fronts over one story high shall be framed and constructed of steel forms, all interstices filled with incombustible material, and may be sheathed and bracketed with wood, provided that all wood work is thoroughly covered with sheet metal strongly secured, and effective fire stops against adjoining buildings are provided.

SECTION 78.

Roof Leaders.

All buildings shall be provided with proper metallic leaders for conducting water from the roofs in such manner as shall protect the walls and foundations of said building from injury. In no case shall the water from the said leaders be allowed to flow upon the street or sidewalks but the same shall be conducted by proper pipe below the surface of the sidewalk to the street gutter, or to dry wells made of broken stone or brick.

SECTION 79.

Tanks.

Tanks containing more than five hundred gallons of water or other fluid hereafter placed on any story, or on the roof of any building now or hereafter erected, shall be supported by steel beams of sufficient strength to safely carry the same; and the beams shall rest at both their ends on masonry walls or on steel girders or iron or steel columns or piers of masonry. Underneath any said tank or on the side near the bottom of the same, there shall be a short pipe or outlet, not less than four inches in diameter, fitted with a suitable valve having a lever or wheel handle to same, so that firemen or others can readily discharge the weight of the fluid contents from the tank, in case of necessity. Such tanks shall be placed where practicable at one corner of a building, and shall not be placed over or near a line of stairs. Covers on top of water tanks placed on roofs, if of wood, shall be covered with sheet metal. Tanks made of wood shall be coopered with metal hoops round in section. All roof tanks shall be cleaned and inspected semi-annually and kept in proper repair, and the cover on same shall be securely locked.

SECTION 80.

Pent Houses, Bulkheads and Scuttles on Roofs.

(1) Upon the roof of every building more than fifteen feet high there shall be a scuttle or bulkhead, with stairs or substantial iron ladder leading thereto, which shall be easily accessible to all occupants. All non-fireproof scuttles shall be covered on the top and edges with sheet metal or other approved fireproof materials, and shall be at least two feet by three feet.

(2) All bulkheads, including those used as inclosures for tanks, elevators or elevator machinery, and the pent houses and bulkheads of all buildings, more than fifty-nine feet in height, hereafter erected or altered, excepting frame buildings, shall be constructed fireproof in accordance with section 103 of this Code, and covered on all outside surfaces with approved incombustible weatherproof material, including all surfaces and edges of doors and jambs. Where door jambs are blocked out from the fireproofing the space between the jamb and the fireproofing shall be filled in solid with incombustible material, or in lieu of same the back of jamb shall be metal covered.

Where built of studding the studs to be filled with brick or clay blocks set in cement, all exterior surfaces and both sides of doors and jambs to be metal covered.

SECTION 81.

Skylights.

(1) All skylights placed on or in any masonry buildings shall have the frames and sash thereof constructed of metal and glazed. All skylight frames and parts thereof shall be riveted or otherwise securely fastened, in addition to any necessary soldering.

(2) All openings in roofs for the admission of light other than elsewhere provided in this Code over elevator, stair, dumbwaiter shafts and theatre stage roofs, shall have metal frames and sash, glazed with wire glass not less than one-quarter inch thick, or with glass protected above and below with wire screens, of not less than number eight galvanized wire, and not more than one and one-half inch mesh, set in seven-eighth inch channel iron frames, sections to be securely butted together and set in a one and one-quarter inch angle iron outside frame.

(3) All skylights hereafter erected within the fire limits, shall be of metal as above, but without said limits may be of wood.

Skylight and Roof Protection.

(4) If the walls of any building are carried up higher than the roofs of adjoining buildings, it shall be the duty of the owner of the building to be erected or altered, to cause the protection by proper means, of the skylights and roofs of such adjoining buildings until the work of construction has been completed.

(5) Should any owner of any adjoining premises refuse permission to have such roofs and skylights protected, such refusal by said owner shall forthwith be reported in writing to the Inspector of Buildings. Such notice shall relieve the owner of the building in course of construction or alteration from any responsibility for damage done to persons or property on or within the premises affected.

Floor Lights.

Floor lights, used for transmission of light to floors below, shall be constructed of metal frames and bars or plates, or reinforced concrete or other approved fire-proof material. Glass shall in no case be less than three-quarters of an inch in thickness, and if any glass in same measures more than sixteen square inches, the glass shall be provided with a mesh of wire, either in the glass or under the same, and the floor lights shall be of the same proportional strength as the floors in which they are placed.

No opening in any floor or roof shall be without a solid covering or an inclosure as provided in this Code, to prevent the communication of fire from story to story, excepting as otherwise provided in this Code, for certain staircase openings which are not required to be inclosed.

CHAPTER XX.

SECTION 83.

Light and Ventilation.

In any building hereafter erected every sleeping room shall be provided with a window or windows opening directly upon a street, yard or open court. The total window area shall be not less than twelve square feet between stop beads and shall be so arranged that it can be opened to the extent of about one-half its area. Such sleeping room shall be for three-fourths of its area not less than eight feet in height from the finished floor to the finished ceiling, and shall be not less than seven feet in width and not less than seventy superficial feet in area, except in hotels, which shall be not less than eighty superficial feet in area.

No sleeping room shall hereafter be placed in a cellar, the ceiling of which is less than two feet above the curb.

In all buildings hereafter erected, provision shall be made for providing natural light to all rooms to be used or occupied by one or more persons.

CHAPTER XXI.

Sheds Over Sidewalks, Outside Scaffolds.

SECTION 84.

Shed Coverings for the Protection of Pedestrians.

Whenever buildings on the street building line shall be erected or increased to over thirty-six feet six inches in height, upon or along any street, the owner erecting or altering such buildings shall cause to be erected and maintained during such construction or alteration, a shed over the sidewalk in front of the premises. The shed shall extend from area line to curb for the full frontage of the building, and the roof thereof shall be strong and tight, so as to protect persons using such streets. The street side of such covered way shall be left open for a height not less than six feet above the curb. Said sheds and enclosures shall be subject to the inspection of the Inspector of Buildings.

SECTION 85.

Outside Scaffolds.

Whenever outside mason scaffolds are used on buildings on the street building line over thirty-six feet six inches in height, whether the same be constructed of poles, thrust-outs or suspended scaffolds, there shall be erected on their outer ends and ends an enclosure of substantial wire netting of not over two-inch mesh, or of boards not less than seven-eighths of an inch thick, placed not over one and one-half inches apart, well secured to uprights not less than two inches by four inches fastened at bottom to planks or timbers of the outer edges and ends of the scaffolding and braced by diagonal stays fastened to platform and top of uprights. The said enclosure shall extend three feet above the working platform of the scaffold.

Timber thrust-outs shall be not less than three inches and as much larger as may be required for the load to be carried. They shall be thoroughly braced and secured.

The flooring of all scaffolds shall be tightly constructed with plank. Where poles, put-logs or thrust-out scaffolds are used, the floor and enclosure shall not be removed until a like floor and enclosure are prepared and in position on the story above.

CHAPTER XXII.

Structural Steel and Iron.

SECTION 86.

Steel Columns.

(1) No part of a rolled steel column shall be less than five-sixteenths of an inch thick.

No rolled steel column shall have an unsupported length of more than forty times its least lateral dimensions or diameter except as modified by section 31 of this Code.

(2) The ends of all columns shall be faced to a plane surface at right angles to the axis of the columns, and the connections between them shall be made with splice plates.

When the section of the columns to be spliced are such that splice plates cannot be used, a connection formed of plates and angles may be used, designed to properly distribute the stress.

(3) No material (whether in the body of the column or used as lattice-bar or stay-plate) shall be used in any steel column of less thickness than one-thirty-second of its unsupported width measured between centres of rivets transversely, or one-sixteenth the distance between centres of rivets in the direction of the stress.

(4) Stay-plates are to have not less than four rivets, and are to be spaced so that the ratio of length to the least radius of gyration of the parts connected shall not exceed forty; the distance between nearest rivets of two stay-plates shall in this case be considered as length.

(5) Steel columns shall be made in one, two or three-story lengths, and the materials shall be rolled in one length wherever practicable to avoid intermediate splices.

(6) Where any part of the section of a column projects beyond that of the column above, the differences shall be made up by filling plates secured to column by the proper number of rivets.

(7) Shoes of iron or steel, as described for cast iron columns or built shoes of plates and shapes may be used.

SECTION 87.

Cast Iron Columns.

(1) All cast-iron columns shall be of good workmanship and material. The thickness of metal shall not be less than one-twelfth of the greatest lateral dimensions of cross section, nor less than three-quarters of an inch.

(2) Cast-iron columns shall not have a smaller outside diameter or side than five inches, nor shall they have unsupported length of more than twenty times their least lateral dimension or diameter, except as modified by section 31 of this Code.

(3) Seats and lugs shall be cast with the column and shall be of ample strength, reinforced by fillets and brackets; they shall be not less than one inch in thickness when finished.

(4) All columns shall be machine faced at the ends to a true surface perpendicular to the axis.

(5) Where square or rectangular cast-iron columns are placed one on top of another, the top flange shall project not less than three inches from the outer surfaces of the column on all sides, and the shape and dimensions of bottom flange of the column immediately above shall be the same as those of the top flange of the column below. If the column is round or many sided, the top flange shall project not less than three inches at its least projection from the outer surface of the column, and be square or rectangular in shape, and the bottom flange of the column immediately above the same shall be of the same shape and dimensions as the top flange of the column below. Each flange shall be reinforced with brackets cast centrally on the column, and with fillets on both the bracket and flange. In case the column is placed on the lot line, the flanges on that side only may be omitted, if approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

(6) Between the joints of cast-iron columns placed vertically over each other there shall be a solid steel plate not less than one-half inch in thickness, of the same dimensions as the flanges of the columns, and true on both sides. The columns shall be bolted together with bolts not less than three-quarters of an inch in diameter, passing through the two flanges and the intermediate plate, the bolts being of sufficient length to allow the nuts to be screwed up tightly, and as each column is placed in position the bolts shall also be placed in position and the nuts shall be tightly screwed up. One bolt shall be placed at each corner of the plate and flanges, and the number of bolts shall be never less than four. The holes for these bolts shall be drilled to a template.

(7) Where cast-iron columns are placed vertically one on top of the other, the diameters of sides shall not be decreased more than one inch for each story.

(8) If the core of a column below a joint is larger than the core of the column above, steel, iron, blue stone or granite template so designed as to properly distribute the load over the masonry, excepting that for beams not exceeding six inches in depth, placed, not more than thirty inches on centres, no templates shall be required.

SECTION 92.

Framing and Connecting Structural Work.

(1) Steel girders, columns, beams, trusses and other steel work of floors and roofs shall be well and firmly connected together, and to the walls.

(2) All beams framed into and supported by other beams or girders shall be connected thereto either by angles or knees of a proper size and thickness, and have sufficient bolts or rivets in both legs of each connecting angle to transmit the entire weight or load coming on the beam to the supporting beam or girder; or a seat sufficiently strong to carry the full load with a side angle or knee to hold the beam in place may be used.

(3) In no case shall the shearing value of the bolts or rivets or the bearing value of the connection angles, provided for in section 27 of this code, be exceeded.

SECTION 93.

Riveting of Structural Steel.

(1) The distance from centre of a rivet hole to the edge of the material shall be not less than—

⅞ of an inch for ½ inch rivets.
1 inch for ⅝ inch rivets.
1¼ inches for ¾ inch rivets.
1½ inches for ⅞ inch rivets.
1¾ inches for 1 inch rivets.

Wherever possible the distance shall be equal to two diameters.

(2) All rivets, wherever practicable, shall be machine driven. Rivets shall be proportioned and placed to suit the stresses. The pitch of rivets shall never be less than three diameters of the rivet, nor more than six inches. In the direction of the stress it shall not exceed sixteen times the least thickness of the outside member. At right angles to the stress it shall not exceed thirty-two times the least thickness of the outside member.

(3) All holes shall be punched accurately, so that, upon assembling, a cold rivet will enter the hole without straining the material by drifting. Occasional slight errors shall be corrected by reaming.

(4) The rivets shall fill the holes completely; the heads shall be hemispherical and concentric with the axis of the rivet.

(5) Wherever required gussets shall be provided of sufficient thickness and size to accommodate the number of rivets necessary to make a connection.

SECTION 94.

Bolting of Structural Steel.

(1) Where riveting is not practicable, connections may be made by bolts, which shall be of wrought iron or mild steel, with United States standard threads. The threads shall be full and clean, the nut shall be truly concentric with the bolt, and the thread shall be of sufficient length to allow the nut to be screwed up tightly.

(2) When bolts go through bevel flanges, bevel washers to match shall be used so that head and nut of bolt are parallel.

(3) When bolts are used for suspenders, the working stresses shall be reduced for steel to twelve thousand pounds per square inch of net area, and the load shall be transmitted into the head or nut by washers, distributing the pressure evenly over the entire surface of the same.

SECTION 95.

Trusses.

(1) Trusses shall be so designed that the stresses in each member can be calculated.

(2) All trusses shall be held rigidly in position by efficient systems of lateral and sway bracing, struts being spaced so that the maximum limit of length to least radius of gyration, established in Section 31 of this code, is not exceeded.

(3) Any member of a truss subjected to transverse stress, in addition to direct tension or compression, shall have such stresses added to the direct stresses coming on the member, and the sum of these stresses shall not exceed the working stresses stated in this code.

SECTION 96.

Riveted Steel Trusses.

(1) For tension members the actual net area only, after deducting rivet holes, one-eighth inch larger than the rivets shall be considered as resisting the stress.

(2) The number of rivets shall be determined as prescribed in Sections 27 and 93 of this code.

(3) If the axes of two adjoining members do not intersect within the line of chords, sufficient area shall be added to chords to take up the bending stresses, or the web members shall be connected by plates so arranged that the axes of the web members prolonged will intersect on the centre of gravity of the chord.

(4) No bolts shall be used in the connection of riveted trusses, excepting when riveting is impracticable, and then the holes shall be drilled or reamed.

SECTION 97.

Steel Pin-Connected Trusses.

(1) All compression members in pin-connected trusses shall be proportioned, using seventy-five per centum of the permissible working stress for columns. The heads of all eye-bars shall be made by upsetting or forging. No weld will be allowed in the body of the bar. Steel eye-bars shall be annealed. Bars shall be straight before boring.

(2) All pin-holes shall be bored true and at right angles to the axis of the members, and must fit the pin within one-thirty-second of an inch. The distance of pin-holes from centre to centre for corresponding members shall be alike, so that when piled upon one another pins will pass through both ends without forcing. Eyes and screw-ends shall be so proportioned that upon test to destruction fracture will take place in the body of the member. All pins shall be accurately turned.

(3) Pin-plates shall be provided wherever necessary to reduce the stresses prescribed by this code. These pin-plates shall be connected to the members by rivets of sufficient size and by number to transmit the stresses without exceeding the allowable working stresses.

(4) All rivets in members of pin-connected trusses shall be machine-driven. All rivets in pin-plates which are necessary to transmit stress shall be also machine driven.

(5) The main connection of members shall be made by pins. Other connections may be made by rivets. If there is a combination of riveted and pin-connected members in one truss these members shall comply with the requirements for pin-connected trusses; but the riveting shall comply with the requirements of Section 96 of this code.

SECTION 98.

Painting of Metal Structural Work.

(1) Where surfaces in riveted work come in contact with each other, they shall be painted before assembling.

(2) Structural metal work shall not be painted when it is to be thoroughly imbedded in concrete or cement grout, but when surfaces in riveted work come in contact with each other, they shall be oiled with boiled linseed oil.

(3) All metal structural work that is not to be thoroughly imbedded in concrete or cement grout shall be cleaned of all scales, dust, dirt and rust, and thoroughly coated with at least one coat of suitable paint; after erection all such work shall be painted at least one additional coat, of a different shade.

(4) Cast-iron columns shall not be painted or covered until after inspection by the Bureau of Buildings.

(5) All iron or steel used under water shall be imbedded in concrete.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Fireproofing and Fireproof Buildings, Floors, Fire Proofing Columns, Girders, Etc., and Fire Proof Partitions.

SECTION 99.

Skeleton Construction.

(1) Columns built in walls and protection of Wall Columns and Girders.—Where metal columns are used to support steel girders carrying enclosure walls, or where columns are built in walls and used to support floors only for skeleton structures, the said columns shall be of cast-iron or rolled steel, computed as per section 27 of this code, and shall be protected on their exposed outer and inner surfaces against fire by having a casing of masonry not less than eight inches in thickness on the outer surfaces, and not less than four inches in thickness on the inner surfaces, and all bonded into brickwork of the enclosure walls.

(2) Metal ties between columns used to support floors, at each story, shall not be imbedded in the masonry but shall be set clear of it on the interior.

(3) The exposed sides of the steel girders shall be similarly covered in with masonry not less than four inches in thickness on the outer surfaces and tied and bonded, but the extreme outer edge of the flanges of beams, or plates or angles connected to the beams, may project to within two inches of the outside surface of the brick casing.

(4) The inside surfaces of girders shall be similarly covered with brickwork, or if projecting inside of the walls, they shall be protected by metal lathing as specified in section 103, terra-cotta, concrete of other standard fire-proof material.

(5) Girders for the support of the inclosure walls of skeleton structure shall be placed at the floor line of each story.

(6) Buildings constructed of reinforced concrete posts and girders, with exterior walls of clay blocks or brick, and otherwise throughout as per clause one of section 100, shall be deemed of skeleton fireproof construction.

SECTION 100.

Fireproof Buildings.

(1) Every fireproof building hereafter erected or altered shall be constructed with walls of brick, stone, hard clay blocks or Portland cement concrete, in which wood beams or lintels shall not be placed, and in which the floor and roofs shall be constructed of incombustible materials as provided for in sections 17, 99, 104 and 105 of this code.

(2) The stairs and staircase landings shall be constructed of brick, stone, Portland cement concrete, iron or steel, or a combination of these materials.

(3) No woodwork or other combustible material shall be used in any of the roofs, partitions furring or ceilings in any such fireproof buildings except rough framing for interior doors and windows and ground bucks for fastening trim in place, nailing blocks and wood sleepers for nailing wood flooring where it is used. When the height of the building does not exceed one hundred feet, the doors and windows and their frames and trims, casings, the interior finish with wainscoting filled solidly at the back with fireproof material, and the floor boards and sleepers directly thereunder may be of wood, but the entire space between the top of the fireproof floor, arch or slab, and any combustible floor finish shall be solidly filled with cement concrete mixed in the proportions of one of cement to ten of steam boiler anthracite cinders or other incombustible aggregates.

(4) In all fireproof buildings hereafter erected, when the height exceeds one hundred feet, the floor surfaces shall be finished with stone, cement, tiling, rock asphalt or similar incombustible materials in which a wood nailing strip not exceeding three inches in width and one inch thick may be imbedded. All outside window frames and sash shall be of metal or of wood covered with metal. Inside window frames, sash and doors, trim and other interior finish shall be of metal, or of wood covered with metal, or of concrete or other approved incombustible material. All window frames made of wood covered with metal before being installed shall be standard and approved.

SECTION 101.

Floors.

(1) The fireproof floor and roof construction between the steel beams may be in the form of flat arches or slabs. All floors shall be designed to safely carry the loads to be imposed. All arches to have a rise of not less than one inch for each foot of span between the beams.

(2) Mixes of Portland cement concrete shall be not less than three and one-half inches in thickness at the crown for spans of five feet or less, and four inches for spans over five feet. The concrete shall consist of one part Portland cement, two and one-half parts of sand, and five parts of crushed stone, gravel, clean steam boiler cinders, slag, brick or tile passing through a one-inch ring. These arches shall in all cases be reinforced with steel rods or bars, reticulated or meshed steel or similar steel metal weighing not less than one-third pound per square foot of floor arched. Such reinforcing metal shall in no case be less than three-quarters of an inch from the lower side of the concrete arch. If the reinforced metal is in the form of rods or bars, they shall be spaced not over three times the minimum thickness of the arch, centre to centre, and if in the form of mesh it shall have no openings smaller than twenty-four square inches.

(3) Brick arches shall have a thickness of not less than four inches for spans of five feet or less, and eight inches for spans over five feet and up to eight feet. Such brick arches shall be composed of good, hard, common or hollow brick or porous terra cotta without cellular spaces, the brick to be laid to a line on the centres and properly and solidly bonded. Each longitudinal line of brick shall break joints with the adjoining lines for eight (8) inch arches. The arches shall spring from suitably designed solid skewbacks made of the same material as the arches, and be properly keyed. The brick shall be well wetted before laying, and the joints filled in with Portland cement mortar consisting of one part cement and three parts of sand.

(4) Hollow tile arches of hard burnt clay, semi-porous or porous terra cotta, which shall be of uniform density and hardness of burn, shall have sufficient depth between the top and bottom surfaces to carry the load to be imposed thereon without stressing the material beyond its safe working load, but such depth shall in no case be less than six inches for spans of five feet or less, and eight inches for greater spans and all blocks shall have at least two cellular spaces in said minimum depth.

The shells and webs of all arch blocks shall be not less than three-quarters of an inch thick, with rounded fillets at all interior intersections. Skewbacks of side construction shall be used with all forms of hollow tile arches. They shall be of such form and section as to accurately fit the beams and properly receive the thrust of the arches, and shall have shells and webs not less than three-quarters of an inch thick. Such arches shall be laid in Portland cement mortar and shall be properly keyed. The shells and webs of all end construction arch blocks shall abut one against the other.

(5) Flat slabs of reinforced Portland cement concrete shall consist of the same materials, be mixed and constructed in the same manner as specified in paragraph two of this section, as to metal. If made with crushed stone or gravel no slab shall be less than three and one-half inches in thickness. If made with cinders, broken slag or brick no slab shall be less than four inches in thickness.

General conditions of making and using to be as per Section 22 of this Code.

SECTION 102.

Fireproofing Columns, Girders, Etc.

(1) All metal structural members supporting loads or resisting strains, and which are not covered by brick or stone masonry to a thickness of four inches shall be fireproofed as follows: The columns and girders shall be protected by concrete as defined for floors filled solidly around them two inches thick, or of brick set solidly in Portland cement mortar. The extreme outer edges of lugs, brackets and similar supporting metal may project to within one inch of the outer surface of the protection. Columns may also be protected by hollow tile blocks, not less than one inch in thickness, with the space between the blocks and the column filled solidly with Portland cement concrete. The concrete and the blocks shall be not less than two inches in thickness and anchored with interior steel anchors.

(2) Columns may also be protected by a layer of metal lath and concrete and plaster as follows: The columns shall be wrapped with metal lath weighing not less than five ounces per square foot, corrugated or with metal furring so as to offset the metal lath at least two inches from the surface to be protected. Portland cement concrete same as for floors shall then be applied, filling the space solidly between the metal lath and column. The brown coat and the finishing coat may be of similar material as is used in the finishing of other portions of the building. All protective column coverings to extend from floor to ceiling.

(3) Where the fireproofing of columns is exposed to damage from the trucking or handling of merchandise, such fireproofing shall be jacketed on the outside for a height of not less than four feet from the floor with a suitable metal covering.

(4) The members of all metal trusses and the webs of all floor beams projecting above or below the arches shall be protected by not less than two inches of the arch material. The soffits of all floor beams shall be protected by not less than two inches of the arch material. Said soffit protection, if of concrete, shall be secured in place by interior steel anchors, as defined below, or by meshed metal or metal in other forms weighing not less than one-half pound per square foot; the said metal shall be anchored by extending the ends at least two inches in the fireproof protection of the webs above. If of tile the protection shall consist of lugs forming part of the skewbacks, and extending around the lower flange of the beam and meeting at the centre; or of tile slabs held in position by dovetailed lugs projecting from the skewbacks; or the soffits of floor beams may be protected with metal lath and plaster to a thickness of one inch as follows: The metal lath shall weigh not less than five ounces per square foot, and shall be wrapped around the soffits of the beams so as to be offset three-quarters of an inch from the surface to be protected, with the ends of the lath secured by extending them at least two inches in the concrete protection of the webs above. Plaster gauged with twenty-five per cent. of Portland cement shall then be applied to a thickness of one inch in a single coat, filling the space solidly between the metal lath and the soffit of the beam. No exposed metal clips or clamps of any character shall be used to support the soffit protection. Lintels and other lesser structural members supporting loads or resisting strains shall be protected in the same manner as the soffits of floor beams.

(5) The fireproof protection of all the above structural members shall be securely held in position by suitably designed interior steel anchors hooked around the flanges or angles of the structural members and spaced not over sixteen inches apart, horizontally and vertically. These anchors to be made with hooked ends from steel stock weighing not less than one-half of a pound per linear foot and extending to within one inch of the outside surface of the concrete or brick protection.

SECTION 103.

Fireproof Partitions.

(1) All hall and permanent partitions between rooms in fireproof buildings shall be built of fireproof material. The heights in feet to which partitions of different materials may be built, and their corresponding minimum thickness, shall be as follows:

	Feet.
Brick, 8 inches thick	30
Brick, 3½ inches thick	18
Reinforced concrete, 6 inches thick	30
Reinforced concrete, 4 inches thick	24
Reinforced concrete, 2 inches thick	20
Metal lath and plaster, 4 inches thick	20
Metal lath and plaster, 2 inches thick	12
Hollow blocks of hard burned clay or porous terra cotta, concrete or other incombustible compositions, 6 inches thick	20
Hollow block or hard burned clay or porous terra cotta, concrete, or other incombustible compositions, 4 inches thick	16

(2) Hollow blocks for partitions shall not be less than four inches in thickness, un-reinforced. If reinforced by metal studs and ties, they shall not be less than two inches in thickness, to be approved by the Inspector.

(3) The reinforcing metal or studs of all concrete or other partitions shall be rigidly secured or anchored at the top and bottom to incombustible material. Metal studding for all metal lath and reinforced concrete partitions shall average not less than one-half pound in weight for each square foot of partition surface, and shall not be spaced over two feet apart. Metal lath for partitions shall weigh not less than five ounces per square foot.

(4) Fireproof partitions shall in all cases have sufficient bearing on the fireproof floors, supporting steel, or other incombustible material, to carry the weight of said partitions. Their weight shall in no case be supported by wood sleepers or floor boards. In buildings where flat metal lath and plaster ceilings are employed the partitions shall be built only to the under side of the metal lath ceilings.

(5) All brick and block partitions shall be built with Portland cement mortar.

(6) The sides and top of interior door and window openings may be of wood frames sufficient for securing the wood jambs and trim thereto, but the wall material over such openings must be wholly supported by arch or metal of such capacity and bearings as may be approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Reinforced Concrete Construction, and Tests of Fire Proofing.

SECTION 104.

Reinforced Concrete.

(1) The term reinforced concrete shall mean an approved concrete mixture reinforced by steel of any suitable shape. The concrete is to be considered only for compression and shearing stresses, and is not to be figured for tension.

This steel is to be considered for tension and also to assist the concrete in shear and compression where necessary.

(2) Concrete to be reinforced shall consist of one part of Portland cement, two parts of sand, and five parts of broken stone or gravel, materials to be measured, and shall be what is usually known as a "wet" mixture.

(3) All sand used shall be as per section 18, and all cement used shall be Portland cement as per section 20, the manner of working and handling, the construction of forms and centering and the removal of same as per section 22, all steel as per section 27, and all floors as per section 101 of this code.

(4) Buildings of reinforced concrete, when designed and built in accordance with the requirements of this section shall be deemed to be fire proof construction.

SECTION 105.

Working Stresses and Requirements.

(1) Reinforced concrete shall be so designed that the stresses in the concrete and the steel shall not exceed the following limits:

	Pounds
Extreme fibre stress on concrete in compression, per square inch	700
Shearing stress in concrete, per square inch	75
Concrete in direct compression, per square inch	500
Tensile strength in steel, per square inch	16,000
Shearing stress in steel, per square inch, mild steel	10,000
Hard steel	12,000

(2) The ration of the modull of elasticity of concrete and steel shall be taken as one to fifteen.

(3) The following assumptions shall guide in the determination of the bending moments due to the external forces. Beams and girders can be figured as continuous to the extent of WL-10 in the middle, if the negative moment be taken care of by steel. This applies only to cases where the rods can be continued into the adjacent beams or girders far enough beyond the point of maximum negative moment to properly distribute the stresses to the concrete. Floor slabs, when constructed continuously and when provided with reinforcement at top of plate over the supports, may be treated as continuous beams, the bending moment for uniformly distributed loads being taken at not less than WL-10 the bending moment may be taken at WL-24 in the case of rectangular floor slabs which are reinforced in both directions and supported on all sides, where the sides are not over sixteen feet average and do not differ more than fifty per cent. in length, this moment can be considered as existing in the middle third. Proper reduction can be made elsewhere.

(4) The moment of resistance of any reinforced concrete construction under transverse loads shall be determined by formulae based on the following assumptions:

(a) The bond between the concrete and steel is sufficient to make the two materials act together as a homogeneous solid.

(b) The stress in any fibre is directly proportionate to the distance of that fibre from the neutral axis.

(c) The modulus of elasticity of the concrete remains constant within the limits of the working stresses fixed in this section.

(5) No allowance shall be made for the tensile strength of concrete.

(6) When the shearing stresses developed in any part of a reinforced concrete construction exceed the safe working strength of concrete, as fixed in this section, a sufficient amount of steel shall be introduced in such a position that the deficiency in the resistance to sheer is overcome. In any case shearing bars must be provided with a maximum spacing equal to the working depth of the beam or girder.

(7) When the safe limit of adhesion between the concrete and steel is exceeded, provision must be made for transmitting the stresses from the one material to the other.

(8) All reinforcement in beams, girders and columns shall be so secured that there can be no displacement of the same in the concrete.

(9) Where girders or beams are connected with columns, the reinforcement of girder shall penetrate the column and be secured to it.

(10) All reinforcement shall be completely encased in concrete. The thickness of concrete outside of the reinforcement shall not be less than three-quarters of an inch in floor slabs, partitions or walls, not less than one and one-half inches for all beams, girders and columns, and not less than three inches in footings.

(11) Reinforced concrete may be used for columns in which the ratio of length to least side or diameter does not exceed fifteen; but in no case shall the effective cross section of the column be less than sixty-four square inches.

(12) All reinforced concrete columns shall have longitudinal reinforcements of a total cross sectional area equal to at least one per cent. of the effective cross sectional area of the concrete; provided, however, that the total sectional area of the reinforcing steel shall not be less than one square inch, and that no rod or bar be of less diameter or smaller dimensions than one-half inch. Flat steel may be used if of equivalent area and spacing. All longitudinal reinforcement rods shall be tied together by wire at least one-quarter of an inch in diameter at intervals not exceeding the diameter of columns. All vertical reinforcing rods or bars shall extend upward or downward into the column above or below, lapping the reinforcement of the column above or below to the extent of at least thirty diameters of the rod or bar of the larger section. Rods for compression only to have suitable sleeves at joints.

(13) Reinforced concrete columns may be stressed to five hundred pounds per square inch of the effective area.

(14) Vertically reinforced columns must not exceed an average stress of 800 pounds per square inch on the cross section.

(15) Spandrel walls supported entirely on reinforced concrete or steel girders shall have a minimum thickness of six inches, and shall be reinforced with not less than one half pound of steel per square foot of wall.

SECTION 106.

Tests of Fire Proofing.

(1) Whenever required by the Inspector of Buildings, the contractor, at his own expense, shall make load or other tests to determine the efficiency of the fireproof construction. The floors shall, in all cases, develop a strength in thirty days equal to five times the live load for which the supporting steel work is designed. The loads shall consist of such materials and be so placed as to form a uniformly distributed load over the entire area to be tested and without arching and transmitting the loads to the supports, and in case sand or similar material is to be used for loading, it shall be in bulk and loose and not in sacks or packages of any kind. The section to be tested shall be not less than a square, one side of which is equal to the distance between the beams; the test section shall be cut apart from the rest of the flooring before the load is applied. Fireproof floors failing to develop the strength herein required shall be condemned by the Inspector of Buildings and shall be replaced by the contractor by floors of the required strength.

(2) On all reinforced construction the contractor shall be prepared whenever required by the Inspector of Buildings, to make load tests, at his own expense, on any portion of a reinforced concrete construction within thirty days after completion of that portion. The test shall show that the construction will sustain a load twice the live load for which it was designed without a deflection of more than one-thirtieth of an inch per foot of span. Tested portions failing to develop the strength herein required shall be replaced by members of the required strength.

(3) In case it is desired to use other or new materials or employ same in a different manner than herein provided for fireproof construction, the manufacturer or representative thereof shall, at his own expense, make a comparative fire and water test under the direction of the Inspector of Buildings, side by side with one of the approved methods herein described, or obtain dispensation as per section 25 of this code.

CHAPTER XXV.

Timber Construction and Woodwork.

SECTION 107.

Wood Beams.

(1) Every wood beam and timber in any wall of every building built of stone, brick or concrete, shall be separated from any other beam or timber in the wall by at least four inches of solid masonry. Such separation may be obtained by corbeling or by staggering the beams.

(2) Minimum Thickness for Wood Beams.—No wood floor beams or wood roof beams used in any building, hereafter erected, shall be of a less thickness than two inches.

(3) Trimmer and Header Beams.—All wood trimmer and header beams shall be proportioned to carry with safety the loads they are intended to sustain and must be properly framed; if over four feet in length they must be hung in suitable metal stirrups.

(4) Bearings for Wood Beams—Every wood beam, except header and tail beams, shall rest at each end four inches in a wall, or on a girder, corbel, beam or column.

(5) Bevel Ends for Wood Beams.—The ends of all wood floor and roof beams, where they rest on brick walls, shall be cut to a bevel of three inches in their depth.

(6) Ends of Beams Not to Rest on Stud Partitions.—In no case shall either end of a floor or roof beam be supported on non-continuous stud partitions, except in frame buildings.

(7) Cross Bridging for Beams.—All wood floor and wood roof beams shall be properly bridged with cross bridging, and the distance between bridging or between bridging and wall shall not exceed eight feet.

(8) Beams Near Flues.—All wood beams shall be trimmed away from all flues and chimneys whether the same be a smoke, air or any other flue or chimney. The trimmer beam shall be not less than eight inches from the inside face of a flue and five inches from the outside of a chimney breast, and the header beam not less than two inches from the outside face of the brick or stone work of the same.

Except that for the smoke flues of boilers and furnaces where the brick work is required to be more than eight inches in thickness, the trimmer beam shall be not less than four inches from the outside of the brick work and the header beam shall be not less than four inches from the outside of the brick-work.

(9) The header beam, carrying the tail beams of a floor and supporting the trimmer arch in front of a fireplace shall be not less than twenty inches from face of the chimney breast.

(10) The safe carrying capacity of timber beams shall be determined by their resistance to bending and shear in accordance with the unit stresses fixed by section 30 of this code.

(11) If outside sheathing is omitted on any wood frame construction, provision must be made for safe proportional increase of timber sizes and bracing to the satisfaction of the Inspector of Buildings.

SECTION 108.

Anchors and Straps For Wood Beams and Girders.

(1) Each tier of beams shall be anchored to the side, front, rear or party walls at intervals of not more than six feet apart, with good strong steel or wrought iron anchors of not less than one and one-half inches by one-quarter of an inch in size, well fastened to the side of the beams by three or more nails made of wrought iron at least one-quarter of an inch in diameter. Said anchors shall extend into brick work eight inches.

(2) Girder Straps and Anchors.—Where the beams are supported by girders, the girders shall be anchored to the walls and fastened to each other by suitable iron or steel straps.

(3) Beam Straps.—The ends of wood beams resting upon girders shall be abutted together end to end and strapped by steel or wrought iron straps of the same size as the wall anchors, and shall be fastened in the same manner as said wall anchors. Or they may lap each other at least twelve inches and be well spiked together or bolted together where lapped.

(4) Pier Anchors.—Every pier and wall front or rear, shall be well anchored to the beams of each story, with the same size anchors as are required for side walls, which anchor shall hook over the third beam.

SECTION 109.

Wood Columns and Posts and Timbers for Trusses.

(1) All timber columns and posts shall be squared at the ends perpendicular to their axes.

(2) To prevent the unit stresses from exceeding those fixed in this code, timber or iron cap plates or pintles and base plates shall be provided.

(3) Where the cap plate of a wood column or post supports a wood girder, and directly on top of the girder is an iron or steel base plate of the wood column or post above, the said cap and base plates shall be connected by pintles of metal passing through the girder; these pintles may be of round bars of steel of proper size and not less than four in number, or a hollow cast-iron pintle of proper thickness may be used, in all cases adequate to transmit the load.

(4) Additional iron or steel cheek plates shall be placed between the cap and base plates, and bolted to the girders when required to transmit the loads with safety.

(5) Timber Trusses.—When compression or tension members of trusses are of timber they shall be stressed in the direction of the fibre only.

The working stress in timber struts of pin-connected trusses shall not exceed seventy-five per centum of the working stresses established in section 33 of this Code.

(6) Bolts and Washers for Timber Work.—All bolts used in connection with timber and wood beam work shall be provided with washers of such proportions as will reduce the compression on the wood at the face of the washer to that allowed in section 30 of this Code, supposing the bolt to be strained to its limit.

SECTION 110.

Stud Partitions.

(1) In all buildings where stud partitions are set at right angles to wood floor beams and rest directly over each other, they shall run down between the floor beams and rest on the top plate of the partition below, and shall have the studding filled in solid between the uprights, to the depth of the floor beams, with approved incombustible materials.

(2) All pipe and wire lines to be so laid out as to require a minimum cutting of supporting members and beams of wood. Special framing and reinforcement to be done wherever directed by the Inspector of Buildings.

SECTION 111.

Wainscoting.

When waiscoting is used in buildings hereafter erected or altered, the surface of the walls or partitions behind said wainscoting shall be plastered flush with the grounds and down to the floor line.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Frame Structures; Builders' Huts, Stagings, Sheds, Outhouses, Fences, Signs, Piazzas, Balconies, Bay Windows, Spires and Towers.

SECTION 112.

Frame Structures Within the City Limits Only Under Permit From the Inspector.

(1) Temporary Structures—Builders' Huts.—Temporary one-story frame buildings within the City limits may be erected for the use of builders within the limits of lots thereon or adjacent to where buildings are in course of erection, said structure to be used only for the purpose specified.

(2) Stagings—Temporary stagings, platforms or floorings for seating or standing purposes may be constructed of wood, upon approval as to location by the Mayor and filing of plans and permit from Inspector.

(3) All temporary structures of wood are to be demolished or removed by their owners upon the completion of time and purpose specified.

(4) Permanent Structures—Sheds.—Frame sheds open on at least one side, not more than fifteen (15) feet in height nor more than two thousand five hundred (2,500) square feet in area, no fence being used as any side, entirely covered with incombustible material, may be built within the fire limits.

(5) Foundations for sheds only, of brick or concrete piers, or chestnut posts, with footing course three (3) feet below grade, computed according to this Code, may be approved by the Inspector, provided that structure is enclosed to grade.

(6) Outhouses.—To be used only for privies, wood or coal houses, not exceeding ten (10) feet in height, nor fifty (50) square feet in area, may be built within the fire limits.

(7) Fences of wood shall not be over ten (10) feet in total height.

(8) Signs of wood shall not be erected over two (2) feet high on any building.

(9) Piazzas or balconies of wood, not to extend in height more than three (3) feet above the second story floor beams, may be erected upon any dwelling house.

(10) One wooden bay or oriel window may be built of wood upon any face or front of any building, if but one (1) story in height and not more than one-third of the width of said face or front.

If but two stories in height and of said proportionate width, it may be constructed of wood but shall be faced with metal or other approved incombustible material.

If of any greater height or dimensions, or more than one is desired on any one side or face, it or they shall be wholly built of fire proof material.

(11) For all roofings of above structures in entire fire zone see section 10.

(12) Wood spires or towers less than sixty (60) feet in height shall be roofed with approved incombustible material, and if over sixty (60) feet in height shall be of fire proof material throughout.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Frame Buildings Within the Fire Limits

SECTION 113.

Frame Buildings Raised, Lowered or Altered.

(1) Within the fire limits it shall not be permitted to raise any frame building to a height in excess of thirty-six feet six inches, and when so raised it shall comply with all the requirements and provisions of this code relating to frame buildings and the stresses in the material thereof shall be kept within the safe limit of stresses prescribed in Section 30.

(2) Within the fire limits, buildings must exceed twenty-five feet in height to the peak of the main roof before raising. This shall not prohibit, however, increasing one-story and basement frame dwelling houses one additional story in height. In increasing the height of any such building the entire area which the building covers may be raised to a uniform height. An extension of less width than the main building may be increased to the full width of the main building, which may also be extended on the front or rear, or both, all new outside walls to be of masonry, said extensions not to be higher than the roof or peak of original frame structure.

(3) A frame building more than two stories in height now or formerly used as a residence building, hereafter raised or altered shall be used only as a residence or for stores on the first floor. If any such building shall have been built before the street upon which it is located is graded, or if the grade is altered, such building may be raised or lowered to meet the requirements of the grade.

(4) Frame Buildings Damaged Within the Fire Limits.—Every wood or frame building with a brick or other front, which may hereafter be damaged to an amount not greater than one-half of the immediately previous value thereof, exclusive of the value of the foundation, at the time of such damage, may be repaired or restored, provided that the original height and area of same is not increased. But if such damage shall amount to more than one-half of such value, exclusive of the value of the foundation, then such building shall not be repaired or restored, but shall be demolished.

(5) The immediately previous value of such building and the proportion of such damage, the extent of re-use of any wall or walls or parts without repair, and the amount of repairs or restoration may be determined by the Inspector, subject to appeal as hereinafter provided. Upon the written demand of the owner or owners of such premises, to be sent to the Common Council; they shall appoint one appraiser and one appraiser shall be selected by said owner or owners. They shall at once examine the said premises, and if they agree their decision is to be stated separately in writing and sworn to, and shall be final and conclusive. Should these two appraisers not agree, they shall select a third appraiser or umpire to take part in such impartial and disinterested examination and verdict. The joint decision of any two of them is to be stated separately in writing and sworn to and shall be final and conclusive. Each appraiser is to receive ten ($10) dollars for such service, to be paid by the owner or owners of said building before said report is filed, and no repairs or alterations except to the extent necessary to make safe as directed by the Inspector of Buildings, shall be made or begun until said report is filed and permit obtained.

(6) Fire Inquests.—Said report is also to include a separate detailed statement in writing as to the causes or probable causes of damage, and of the general or special conditions making favorable thereto in each case, and may also include the suggestions of the appraisers as to effective future remedy and prevention. These reports are to be kept carefully filed by the Inspector of Buildings in a special docket to be known as the Fire Inquest docket.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

SECTION 114.

Frame Buildings Outside of Fire Limits.

(1) The provisions of this section shall apply to frame or other buildings hereafter erected outside the fire limits, as the same are now or hereafter be established in portions of the City of Plainfield, where streets are now or where they may hereafter be legally established.

(2) Frame buildings may be altered, extended, raised or repaired, provided the new portions fully comply with all the provisions of this Code, and all new buildings are to comply with requirements of construction hereinbefore given, also all plumbing, electric and other Municipal ordinances and regulations.

(3) Whenever frame construction is of wood, even if partially or wholly covered with veneer of brick or stone it shall be deemed a frame building.

(4) No frame building shall be built or occupied as a stable, workshop or manufactory if over forty (30) feet in height above foundation.

(5) Frame buildings hereafter erected or altered shall not exceed forty-five feet in height nor more than three stories and roof.

(6) Frame dwellings shall not exceed four thousand square feet in area. Frame stables shall not exceed two thousand square feet in area.

(7) No other frame building shall exceed 5,000 square feet in area.

(8) The combined area of frame buildings, sheds and outhouses located on any lot shall not exceed eighty per cent. of the lot area. In no case shall a frame building be erected within three feet of the side or rear line of a lot, unless the nearest wall be built of brick or other fireproof material.

(9) When stud partitions separate frame buildings the division studding shall be built with all sills, posts, girts, and filled solidly with brickwork or other approved fireproof materials, extending from the sill to the under side the roof boards. All openings between outside and partition studding shall be filled tightly with not less than seven-eighths inch (⅞") material. Also see Section 110.

(10) The ends of floor and roof beams shall be so separated that four inches of brick or concrete shall be between the beams where they rest on the wall. Also see Section 107.

(11) Posts of locust or other hard wood and wood girders may be used instead of brick fore and aft partitions, in cellars of frame buildings.

(12) All frame or wood buildings, exceeding a height of fifteen (15) feet shall be not less than four inches thick plates and rafters of suitable size and properly framed and braced with suitable studs, or planks set at a proper distance apart. Floor beams and rafters shall not be less than two inches in thickness.

(13) For all buildings included in this Section all stress in materials shall be computed as per Section 27 of this Code.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Places of Public Amusement and Assemblage.

SECTION 115.

Requirements for Public Safety.

(1) In all buildings or parts of buildings of Classes A, B, E and F, and also hotels and clubhouses, occupied for purposes of assembly, amusement or instruction, other than theatres and opera houses, which are provided for in section 116, where large numbers of people may congregate, the halls, doors, stairways, seats, passageways and aisles, and all lighting and heating appliances and apparatus shall be arranged as the Inspector of Buildings shall direct to facilitate egress in case of fire or accident, and to afford adequate security.

(2) Buildings or parts of buildings of Classes C and D, except hotels and clubhouses, shall be not occupied as places of public amusement or assemblage, and the Inspector of Buildings shall have the power to vacate such buildings for violating this provision.

(3) All aisles and passageways in buildings or parts of buildings used for public and private amusement or assemblage shall be kept free from campstools, chairs, sofas and all other obstructions, and no person shall be allowed to stand in or occupy any of said aisles or passageways during any performance or service, exhibition, lecture, ball, concert or any public assemblage. The Inspector of Buildings may at any time serve a written or printed notice upon the owner or lessee or manager of any of said buildings, directing any act or thing to be done or provided in or about the said buildings, and the several accessories and appliances therewith connected, such as halls, doors, stairs, windows, seats, aisles, fire walls and fire apparatus, and fire escapes, as he may deem necessary.

Theatres and Places of Public Amusement.

(1) Every theatre or opera house or other building intended to be used for theatrical or operatic purposes or for public entertainment of any kind, hereafter erected for the accommodation of more than three hundred persons, shall be built to comply with the requirements of this section. No building which, at the time of the passage of this Code, is not in actual use for theatrical or operatic purposes, and no building hereafter erected not in conformity with the requirements of this section, shall be used for theatrical or operatic purposes, or for public entertainments of any kind, until the same shall have been made to conform to the requirements of this section. And no building hereinafter described shall be opened to the public for theatrical or operatic purposes, or for public entertainments of any kind, until the Inspector of Buildings shall have approved the same in writing as conforming to the requirements of this section.

(2) Every such building shall have at least one front on the street, and in such front there shall be a foyer or vestibule not less than twenty-five feet in width.

(3) In addition to the aforesaid entrances and exits on the street, there shall be reserved for service in case of emergency an open court on the side not bordering on the street, where said building is located on a corner lot; and on both sides of said building, where there is but one frontage on the street as hereinafter provided. The width of such open court or courts shall not be less than eight feet where the seating capacity is more than three hundred and not more than eight hundred people, and ten feet in width where the seating capacity is more than eight hundred people.

Said open court or courts shall begin on a line with the proscenium wall and shall extend the length of the auditorium proper.

Where said emergency courts do not open directly on a street a separate and distinct corridor shall continue to the street, from each open court, through such structure as may be built on the street with continuous walls of brick, or masonry fireproof materials on each side the entire length of said corridor or corridors, and the ceiling and floors shall be fireproof. Said corridor or corridors shall not be reduced in width to more than three feet less than the width of the open court or courts, and there shall be no projections in the same; the outer openings shall be provided with doors or gates opening outwards. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the continuing of the said courts to the street of the reduced width of the corridors. Where any exit or entrance, emergency or otherwise, does not open directly on a street, and where such egress or ingress to a theatre, opera house, etc., is through a non-fireproof building in order to reach shall extend at least four feet above the stage roof, or the auditorium roof, if the latter be the higher, and shall be coped. Above the proscenium opening, there shall be an iron girder of sufficient strength to safely support the load above, and the same shall be covered with approved fireproof materials to protect it from the heat. Should there be constructed an orchestra platform over the stage, above the proscenium opening, the said platform shall be placed on the auditorium side of the proscenium firewall, and shall be entered only from the auditorium side of said wall.

(17) The molded frame around the proscenium opening shall be formed entirely of approved fireproof materials. The proscenium opening shall be provided with a fireproof metal curtain, or a curtain of asbestos, or other fireproof material approved by the Inspector of Buildings, sliding at each end within iron grooves, securely fastened to the brick wall and extending into such grooves to a depth of not less than six inches on each side of the opening. Said fireproof curtain shall be raised at the commencement of each performance and lowered at the close of said performance, and be operated by approved machinery for that purpose. The proscenium curtain shall be placed at least three feet distant from the foot-lights at the nearest point. No doorway or opening through the proscenium wall, from the auditorium, shall be allowed above the level of the first floor, and such floor openings shall have approved fireproof doors on each side of the wall, and the doors shall be hung so as to be opened from either side at all times.

(18) There shall be provided over the stage metal skylights of an area or combined area of at least one-eighth the area of said stage with sliding sash and double sheet glass, and each pane thereof measuring not less than three hundred square inches, the whole of which skylight shall be so constructed as to open instantly on the cutting or burning of a hempen cord, which shall be arranged to hold said skylight closed, or some other equally simple approved device for opening them may be provided. Immediately underneath the glass of said skylights there shall be wire netting, but wire glass shall not be used in lieu of this requirement.

(19) All that portion of the stage not comprised in the working of scenery, traps and other mechanical apparatus for the presentation of a scene, usually equal to the width of the proscenium opening, shall be built of concrete or of iron or steel beams filled in between with approved fireproof material, and all girders for the support of said beams shall be of wrought iron or rolled steel. The fly-galleries entire, including pin-rails, shall be constructed of concrete or of iron or steel, and the floors of said galleries shall be composed of concrete or of iron or steel beams, filled with approved fireproof materials, and no wood boards or sleepers shall be used as covering over beams, but the said floors shall be entirely fireproof. The rigging loft shall be fireproof.

(20) All stage scenery, curtains and decorations made of combustible material, and all woodwork on or about the stage shall be painted or saturated with some approved non-combustible material or otherwise rendered safe against fire, and the finishing coats of paint applied to all woodwork through the entire building shall be of such kind as will resist fire to the satisfaction of the Inspector of Buidlings.

(21) The roof over the auditorium and the entire main floor of the auditorium and vestibule, also the entire floor of the second story of the front superstructure over the entrance, lobby and corridors, and all galleries and supports for the same in the auditorium shall be constructed of concrete or of iron or steel and approved fireproof materials, not excluding the use of wood floorboards and necessary sleepers to fasten the same, but such sleepers shall not mean timbers of support, and the space between the sleepers, excepting a portion under the stepping in the galleries, which shall be properly fire-stopped, shall be solidly filled with approved incombustible material up to the under side of the floorboards.

(22) The fronts of each gallery shall be formed of approved fireproof material, except the capping, which may be made of wood. The ceiling under each gallery shall be entirely formed of approved fireproof materials. The ceiling of the auditorium shall be formed of approved fireproof materials.

(23) All lathing, whenever used, shall be of wire or other metal.

(24) The partitions in that portion of the building which contains the auditorium, the entrance and vestibule and every room and passage devoted to the use of the audience shall be constructed of approved fireproof materials, including the furring of outside or other walls.

(25) None of the walls or ceilings shall be covered with wood sheathing, canvas or any combustible material. But this shall not exclude the use of wood wainscoting to a height not to exceed six feet which shall be filled in solid between the wainscoting and the wall with approved fireproof materials. The walls separating the actors' dressing rooms from the stage and the partitions dividing the dressing rooms, together with the partitions of every passageway from the same to the stage, and all other partitions on or about the stage, shall be constructed of fireproof material approved by the Inspector of Buildings. All doors in any of said partitions shall be fireproof.

(26) All shelving and cupboards in each and every dressing room, property room or other storage rooms shall be constructed of metal, slate or some approved fireproof material. Dressing rooms may be placed in the fly-galleries provided that proper exits are secured therefrom to the fire escapes in the open courts, and that the partitions and other matters pertaining to dressing rooms shall conform to the requirements herein contained, and stairs leading to the same shall be fireproof. All dressing rooms shall have an independent exit leading directly into a court or street, and shall be ventilated by windows in the external walls; and no dressing room shall be below the street level.

(27) All accessible windows shall be arranged to open, and none of the windows in outside walls shall have fixed sashes, iron grills or bars.

(28) All seats in the auditorium, excepting those contained in boxes, shall be not less than thirty-two inches from back to back, measured in a horizontal direction, and firmly secured to the floor. No more than twelve seats shall be placed in any box. Boxes shall be divided by partition or rail, and shall lead to an aisle which connects with an exit or corridor. No seat in the auditorium shall have more than six seats intervening between it and an aisle on either side. No stool or seat shall be placed in any aisle.

(29) All platforms in galleries formed to receive the seats shall be not more than twenty-six inches in height of risers, nor less than thirty-two inches in width of platform. All aisles on the respective floors in the auditorium shall be not less than three feet wide where they begin, and shall be increased in width toward the exits in a ratio of one and one-half inches to five running feet.

(30) The foyers, lobbies, corridors, passages and rooms for the use of the audience, not including aisles spaced between seats, shall on the first or main floor where the seating capacity exceeds five hundred or more, be at least sixteen feet clear, back of the last row of seats, and on each balcony or gallery at least twelve feet clear of the last row of seats.

(31) Gradients or inclined planes shall be employed instead of steps where possible to overcome slight difference of level in or between aisles and passages.

(32) Every theatre accommodating three hundred persons shall have at least two exits; when accommodating five hundred persons, at least three exits shall be provided; these exits not referring to or including the exits to the open court at the side of the theatre. Doorways of exit or entrance for the use of the public shall be not less than five feet in width, and for every additional one hundred persons or portions thereof to be accommodated, in excess of five hundred, an aggregate of twenty inches additional exit width must be allowed. All doors of exit or entrance shall open outwardly and be hung to swing in such manner as not to become an obstruction in a passage or corridor, and no such door shall be closed and locked during any representation, or when the building is open to the public. Distinct and separate places of exit and entrance shall be provided for each gallery above the first. A common place of exit and entrance may serve for the main floor of the auditorium and the first gallery, provided its capacity be equal to the aggregate capacity of the outlets from the main floor and the said gallery.

(33) No passage leading to any stairway communicating with any entrance or exit shall be less than four feet in width in any part thereof.

(34) All stairs within the building shall be constructed of approved fireproof material throughout. All stairs to have treads of uniform width and risers of uniform height throughout each flight. Stairways serving for the exit of fifty people shall be at least four feet wide between railings or between walls, and for every additional fifty people to be accommodated six inches must be added to their width. The width of all stairs shall be measured in the clear between hand-rails. In no case shall the risers of any stairs exceed seven and one-half inches in height, nor shall the treads, exclusive of nosings, be less than ten and one-half inches wide in straight stairs. No circular or winding stairs for the use of the public shall be permitted.

(35) Where the seating capacity is for more than one thousand people, there shall be provided at least two independent staircases, with direct exterior outlets for each gallery in the auditorium, where there are not more than two galleries, and the same shall be located on opposite sides of said galleries.

(36) Where there are more than two galleries one or more additional staircases shall be provided, the outlets from which shall communicate directly with the principal exit or other exterior outlets. All said staircases shall be of width proportionate to the seating capacity as elsewhere herein provided. Where the seating capacity is for one thousand people or less, two direct lines of staircase only shall be required, located on opposite sides of the galleries, and in both cases shall extend from the sidewalk level to the upper gallery, with outlets from each gallery to each of said staircases.

(37) At least two independent staircases, with direct exterior outlets, shall be provided for the service of the stage and shall be located on opposite sides of the same. All inside stairways leading to the upper galleries of the auditorium shall be inclosed on both sides with walls of approved fireproof materials. Stairs leading to the first or lower gallery may be left open on one side, in case they shall be constructed as herein provided for similar stairs leading from the entrance hall to the main floor of the auditorium. In no case shall stairs leading to any gallery be left open on both sides.

(38) When straight stairs return directly on themselves, a landing of the full width of both flights, without any steps, shall be provided. The outer line of landings shall be curved to a radius of not less than two feet, to avoid square angles. Stairs turning at an angle shall have a proper landing without winders introduced at said turn. In stairs, when two side flights connect with one main flight, no winders shall be introduced, and the width of the main flight shall be at least equal to the aggregate width of the side flights.

(39) All stairs shall have proper landings introduced at convenient distances. All inclosed staircases shall have, on both sides, strong hand-rails firmly secured to the wall, about three inches distant therefrom and about three feet above the stairs, but said hand-rails shall not run on level platforms and landings where the same are more in length than the width of the stairs.

(40) All staircases eight feet and more in width shall be provided with a centre hand-rail of metal, not less than two inches in diameter, placed at a height of about three feet above the centre of the treads, and supported on wrought metal or brass standards of sufficient strength, placed not nearer than four feet nor more than six feet apart, and securely bolted to the treads or risers of stairs, or both, and at the head of each flight of stairs on each landing the post or standard shall be at least six feet in height, to which the rail shall be secured.

(41) Every steam boiler which may be required for heating or other purposes shall be located outside the building, and the space allotted to the same shall be inclosed by walls of masonry on all sides, and the ceiling of such space shall be constructed of approved fireproof materials.

(42) All doorways in said walls shall have fireproof doors. No floor register for heating shall be permitted. No coil or radiator shall be placed in any aisle or passageway used as an exit, but all said coils and radiators shall be placed in recesses formed in the wall or partition to receive the same. All supply, return or exhaust pipes shall be properly incased and protected where passing through floors or near woodwork.

(43) Standpipes four inches in diameter shall be provided with hose attachments on every floor and gallery as follows: One on each side of the auditorium in each tier, also on each side of the stage in each tier, and at least one in the property room and one in the carpenter's shop, if the same be contiguous to the building. All such standpipes shall be kept clear from obstruction. Said standpipes shall be separate and distinct, receiving their supply of water direct from the power pump or pumps, and shall be fitted with the regulation couplings of the Fire Department, and shall be kept constantly filled with water by means of an automatic power pump or pumps, of sufficient capacity to supply all the lines of hose when operated simultaneously, and said pump or pumps shall be supplied from the street main and be ready for immediate use at all times during the performance in said building. In addition to the requirements contained in this section, the standpipes shall also conform to the requirements contained in section 70 of this Code.

(44) A separate and distinct system of automatic sprinklers, with fusible plugs, approved by the Inspector of Buildings, supplied with water from a tank located on the roof over the stage and not connected in any manner with the standpipes, shall be placed on each side of the proscenium opening and on the ceiling or roof over the stage at such intervals as will protect every square foot of stage surface when said sprinklers are in operation. Automatic sprinklers shall also be placed, wherever practicable, in the dressing rooms, under the stage and in the carpenter shop, paint rooms, store rooms and property rooms.

(45) A proper and sufficient quantity of two and one-half inch hose, not less than one hundred feet in length, fitted with the regulation couplings of the Fire Department and with nozzles attached thereto, and with hose spanners at each outlet, shall always be kept attached to each hose attachment as the Fire Chief may direct. There shall also be kept in readiness for immediate use on the stage, at least four casks full of water, and two buckets to each cask. Said casks and buckets shall be painted red.

(46) There shall also be provided hand pumps or other portable fire extinguishing apparatus and at least four axes and two twenty-five-foot hooks, two fifteen-foot hooks, and two ten-foot hooks on each tier of floor of the stage.

(47) Every portion of the building devoted to the uses or accommodation of the public, also all outlets leading to the streets and including the open courts or corridors, shall be well and properly lighted during every performance, and the same shall remain lighted until the entire audience has left the premises. All gas or electric lights in the halls, corridors, lobby or any other part of said buildings used by the audience, except the auditorium, must be controlled by a separate shut-off, located in the lobby and controlled only in that particular place.

(48) Gas mains supplying the building shall have independent connections for the auditorium and the stage, and provision shall be made for shutting off the gas from the outside of the building. When interior gas lights are not lighted by electricity other suitable appliances, to be approved by the Inspector of Buildings, shall be provided.

(49) All suspended or bracket lights surrounded by glass in the auditorium, or in any part of the building devoted to the public, shall be provided with proper wire netting underneath. No gas or electric light shall be inserted in the walls, woodwork, ceilings, or in any part of the building, unless protected by approved fireproof materials. All lights in passages and corridors in said buildings, and wherever deemed necessary by the Inspector of Buildings, shall be protected with proper wire network. The footlights, in addition to the wire network, shall be protected by a strong wire guard and chain, placed not less than two feet distant from said footlight, and the trough containing said footlights shall be formed of and surrounded by approved fireproof materials.

(50) All border lights shall be constructed to the approval of the Inspector of Buildings, and shall be suspended for ten feet by wire rope. All ducts or shafts used for conducting heated air from the main chandelier, or from any other light or lights, shall be constructed of metal and made double, with an air space between.

(51) All stage lights shall have strong metal wire guards or screens not less than ten inches in diameter, so constructed that any material in contact therewith shall be out of reach of the flame of said stage lights, and must be soldered to the fixtures in all cases.

(52) The standpipes, gas pipes, electric wires, hose, footlights, and all apparatus for the extinguishing of fire or guarding against the same, as in this section specified, after being installed, shall be in charge and under control of the Fire Department, and the Chief of said Department is hereby directed to see that the arrangements in respect thereto are carried out and enforced. A diagram or plan of each tier, gallery or floor, showing distinctly the exits therefrom, each occupying a space not less than fifteen square inches, shall be printed in black lines in a legible manner on the programme of the performance. Every exit shall have over the same on the inside the word "Exit" painted in legible letters not less than eight inches high.

(53) The provisions of the foregoing shall not be construed to mean or made to apply to any theatre, opera house, or building intended to be used for theatrical or operatic purposes, now erected or for which plans have heretofore been approved by the Inspector of Buildings.

CHAPTER XXX.
Elevators and Hoistways.

SECTION 117.

(1) No elevator or hoist shall hereafter be erected in any building before the owner or his agent, architect or contractor shall file a plan and description of the proposed construction, equipment and mode of operation of the hoistway, and obtain the approval of the Inspector of Buildings therefor, nor shall it be operated until such approval is had.

(2) Certificates of inspection shall be issued and be good for one year unless an unsafe condition or function is discovered, when such elevator or hoistway shall remain unused until thorough repair and re-inspection and test shall permit its renewed operation.

(3) All elevators throughout to be of an approved make and equipped with cages, doors and locks, counter weights and machinery, full safety, limit and break devices, and overhead gratings, to secure fullest immunity from danger or accident to passengers thereon.

(4) All hand power elevators shall be provided with an approved brake made to operate on the outside rim of the rope wheel, and the weight by which the brake band is balanced shall be secured by an auxiliary chain or rope.

(5) Machinery of hand sidewalk lifts shall be equipped with a substantial brake, easily applied, and protected by dog operating on the gear wheel.

(6) All elevators shall be provided with approved means for locking the operating control levers or wheels when released by the operator.

(7) Where basement or sidewalk lifts are installed, an approved guard shall be provided at the first floor or street level. If at the street level, the hatch doors when open shall be protected by chains or bars, and when inside the building, the unprotected sides of the hatch shall be protected by a solid or slat inclosure at least seven feet high, with lifting gates at the loading sides; these gates shall be operated by the action of the car.

(8) Every power-driven sidewalk elevator shall have at the street level a removable railing. The car shall also be provided with a substantial guard or bow to open the sidewalk doors far enough in advance of the car to prevent catching anyone between the elevator car and the sidewalk doors.

(9) At the top and bottom of all elevator shafts there shall be placed over and under the strongest parts of the elevator car approved buffer springs and rubber buffers.

(10) Every elevator car and all counterweights shall be suspended by metallic cables. There shall be not less than two cables independently connected to the car and to each set of counterweights.

Shaftways, Hatchways, Inclosures, Grilles, Etc.

(11) Every shaft hereafter constructed for all power operated elevators having a higher rise than two stories, up to a speed of three hundred feet per minute, shall provide for a car travel of at least four feet above and below the upper and lower terminal landings. A clear space not less than four feet in depth and the full-size of the shaft, shall be provided between the bottom of the shaft and the lowest point of the underside of the car when the car is at the limit of its descent. The distance between the underside of the platform or grating at the top of the elevator shaft, and the top of the crosshead of the car when at the limit of its ascent, shall not be less than four feet.

(12) Every existing freight elevator shall have the hatches on every floor protected by vertical gates and inclosures. The fixed inclosures shall be not less than six feet in height, and the gates as nearly six feet in height as the conditions at the building shall warrant. Wood gates and inclosures shall be made of vertical strips with space not wider than two inches. Should the stories be so low that the gates cannot be at least five feet in height, with a space under the same of eighteen inches, vertical collapsing gates shall be installed.

(13) Wherever carriage or automobile hoists are installed, hatchways on all floors except the lower one shall be inclosed on the unprotected sides by slat work or solid inclosures of wood at least six feet high, and at the loading ends the approaches shall be protected by a balanced drop bar.

Overhead Construction.

(14) All overhead beams, sheaves and supports shall be of steel or iron, and all overhead beams shall be supported at their ends on brick walls or on steel construction, or steel construction resting on masonry.

(15) All overhead machinery shall be supported on a substantial wrought-iron or steel frame or beams, and where it is necessary to hang bearings underneath the supporting frames, these bearings shall be supported by wrought-iron or steel straps bolted to and through the supporting frame or beam.

(16) At the top of the shaft, and under the suspension sheaves and beams of all elevators, there shall be built a substantial working platform or grating or open construction of iron or steel having not more than one and one-half inches space between any two members of said grating and made so as to sustain a load of one hundred and fifty pounds to the square foot; said platform or grating shall be securely supported, independent of the overhead construction carrying the sheaves and other overhead appliances.

SECTION 118.

Existing Actions and Liabilities.

Nothing in this Code contained shall be construed to affect any action or proceeding now pending in any court, nor any right accrued, nor liability incurred, nor any cause or causes of action accrued or existing under any acts or ordinances repealed hereby. Nor shall any right or remedy of any character existing or accrued be lost, impaired or affected by this Code.

CHAPTER XXXII.
Definitions.

SECTION 119.

Building Terms.

(1) Wherever the word "lot" is used in this Code, it shall be construed to mean the entire area devoted to one building including all yards, courts, lights and vent shafts.

(2) Wherever the word "curb" applying to the heights of buildings, or to the definition of a basement or a cellar or to an excavation is used, it shall be construed to mean the curb level at the centre of the front of the building, in the case of a building fronting on one street only; in the case of a building fronting on two or more streets the curb level at the centre of the front facing on the highest curb shall be taken.

(3) The height of a building is the perpendicular distance measured in a straight line from the top of the highest point of the roof beams in the case of flat roofs and from the average height of the gable in the case of roofs having a pitch of more than twenty degrees with a horizontal plane downward to the curb level. When a building does not adjoin the street, the measurements for height shall be taken to the average level of the ground adjoining such buildings.

(4) In measuring the height of a wall the height of the parapet wall down to the top of the roof beams shall not be included.

(5) The length of any building shall be its greatest horizontal dimension.

(6) The width of any building shall be its next greatest horizontal dimension.

(7) Wherever referred to, the width of the street shall be taken as being the distance between the street building lines on opposite sides of the street, measured at right angles to the centre line of the street at the middle of the lot.

(8) A story is that part of any building comprised between any floor and the floor or roof next above. In case any floor or the combined area of floors at any one level extends over less than twenty per cent. of the horizontal area included within the outside walls at that level the same shall not be considered as a floor for the purpose of determining story heights.

(9) A cellar is a story more than one-half below the level of the curb, but it shall not be considered as a story in determining the height of buildings.

(10) A basement is a story, partly, but not more than one-half below the level of the curb, but it shall not be considered as a story in determining the height of buildings unless more than one-half above the curb.

(11) A yard is an open and unoccupied space on the same lot with a building, between the extreme rear line of the building and the rear line of the lot.

(12) A court is an open and unoccupied space other than a yard on the same lot with a building. A court not extending to the street or yard, is an inner court; a court extending to the street or yard, is an outer court, if it extends to the street, it is a street court, if it extends to the yard it is a yard court.

(13) A public hall is a hall, corridor or passageway for the use of the general public.

(14) A stair hall shall include the stairs, stair landings and those portions of the public halls through which it is necessary to pass in going between the entrance floor and the roof of any building.

(15) A shaft includes exterior and interior shafts whether for air, light, elevator, dumbwaiter or any other purpose.

(16) Bulkhead—A bulkhead is a structure erected on the roof of a building only for the purpose of enclosing staircases to roofs, elevator machinery, water tank, ventilating apparatus and exhaust chambers or any other necessary machinery required to be at that level. Bulkheads when used only for the above mentioned purposes and when they are only of sufficient height and area to properly enclose any of the above apparatus, equipment or stairs, may be erected on the roof of any building and need not be considered in determining the height of the building.

(17) Pent Houses—A pent house is a structure, other than a bulkhead, erected on the roof of a building and not exceeding ten feet in height nor more than twenty-five per centum of the area of the roof at the level at which it is built, said twenty-five per centum not to exceed in any case two thousand five hundred square feet. A pent house shall not be used for sleeping accommodations.

A pent house as defined above may be erected on the roof of any building and need not be considered in determining the height of a building. Any structure erected on the roof of a building not complying with the above or with the definition of bulkheads shall be included in the height of the building.

(18) Skylights.—The term skylight shall be taken to mean and include flat, hipped, lantern, monitor, turret, dome, vertical or pitched, saw-toothed construction and all other covers placed over openings on roofs for the admission of light.

Walls and Partitions.

(19) A Bearing Wall shall be taken to mean one on which a beam, girder, truss, column, or other interior load of a building rests.

(20) A Non-Bearing Wall shall be taken to mean one which supports no other load than its own weight.

(21) A Retaining Wall shall be taken to mean one constructed to resist the thrust of earth, water or other substances.

(22) A Foundation Wall shall be taken to mean any wall or pier built below the curb level, or nearest tier of beams to the curb, or average ground level, to serve as a support for walls, beams, girders, trusses, columns, floors, or other vertical load of a building.

(23) A Party Wall shall be taken to mean a wall used, or built to be used, in common by two or more buildings.

(24) An Enclosing Wall shall be taken to mean every outside wall, or vertical enclosure of a building, other than a party wall.

(25) Exterior Wall (see enclosing wall).

(26) Enclosure walls shall be taken to mean non-bearing walls built between steel columns and supported wholly or in part by steel girders.

(27) A Division Wall shall be taken to mean any wall, other than an exterior wall or a party wall, which extends the full height of a building and to the roof.

(28) A Partition Wall shall be taken to mean any interior wall other than a divison wall.

(29) A Curtain Wall shall be taken to mean any non-bearing wall between columns or piers.

(30) A Fire Wall shall be taken to mean any wall built for the purpose of resisting fire.

(31) A Parapet Wall shall be taken to mean that portion of any wall which extends above the roof line.

Buildings.

(32) Frame Building—A frame building is a building or structure of which the exterior walls or a portion thereof shall be constructed of wood. Such buildings partially or entirely covered with not more than four inches of brickwork, concrete or stucco, shall be deemed to be frame structures. Wood frames covered with metal shall be deemed to be frame buildings or structures.

(33) Theatres and Opera Houses, etc. See section 116.

(34) Churches.—A church is any building or portion thereof designed or intended for or used solely as a place of assemblage of a number of people for the holding of meetings or gatherings of a religious character.

(35) Amusement Hall.—Any building or portion thereof that is designed for, intended or used as a place of recreation, or amusement, or as a concert hall, ball room, or as a place of public assemblage other than theatres, opera houses, shall for the purposes of this Code be defined as and referred to as an amusement hall.

(36) Exhibition Buildings—An exhibition building is any building or part thereof, that is intended or designed to be used for fairs and exhibition purposes, or as a tower for observation purposes, or for any similar use or occupancy, whether temporary or permanent in character.

(37) Hotel.—A hotel is any building, or portion thereof, intended, designed or used for supplying food and shelter to residents or guests, and having a general public dining room and containing also more than ten sleeping rooms above the first story.

(38) Lodging Houses.—A lodging house is any house or building, or portion thereof, in which persons are harbored or received or lodged, for hire for a single night, or for less than a week at one time, or any part of which is let for any person to sleep in, for any term less than a week.

(39) Tenement House. Definition of.—A tenement house is any building or house occupied by three or more families living separately from each other, but having a common right in the halls and stairways.

(40) Apartment House.—An Apart-House shall be construed as a tenement house and shall be subject to the same laws.

(41) Boarding House.—For the purposes of this Code, a boarding house shall be classed as a "Dwelling," provided that not more than ten sleeping rooms in any one building shall be used for the accommodation of boarders. If more than ten sleeping rooms in any one building shall be used for the accommodation of boarders, it shall be classed as a "Hotel."

(42) Dwelling.—A dwelling is a residence building intended or designed for, or used as, the home or residence or not more than two separate and distinct families.

(43) Stable.—A stable is any building, or portion thereof, that is intended or designed for or used for the sheltering or harboring of horses or live stock, or for the storage of vehicles not driven by their own power.

(44) Garage.—A garage is any building, or part thereof, in which any power driven vehicle is kept, whether for use, repair, rental, storage or demonstration purposes.

(45) Temporary structures may be taken to mean and include platforms, stands, tiers of seats election and other booths temporary buildings and circus tents.

(46) Shed.—A shed is a roofed structure open on one or more sides that is used for storage or for the shelter of workmen or materials.

(47) Outhouses.—Outhouses shall be construed to mean and include all structures built of wood not more than ten feet in height nor more than fifty square feet in area.

EASTER FESTIVALS

'Day of Resurrection' Celebrated in the Churches and Sunday Schools.

ELABORATE MUSIC IS HEARD.

Edifices Beautifully Decorated—Pastors Make Addresses On the Meaning of the Feast.

Easter was observed in all the churches yesterday. Following are some of the celebrations:

Children's services in the Church of the Holy Cross, the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Grace church, yesterday, were most impressive. At Holy Cross church, Rev. George A. Warner addressed the little ones upon the significance of life as exemplified by the budding flower, the bursting egg shell and the bunnies emerging from their burrows in the ground, illustrating by his talk the immortal life. The story was interesting and kept the attention of the children upon the rector's earnest remarks. The service was held at 9:45 in the morning and consisted of the singing of carols in which the full vested choir participated, under the direction of William S. O'Brien, the organist.

Grace Episcopal.

At Grace church the children's service was held in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, the church being full. It was followed by an organ recital given by S. Frederick Smith, the organist, and the usual evensong and address. Here, as in Holy Cross, the mite box offerings of the children were received and a considerable sum given.

Heavenly Rest.

Rev. C. H. Mallery spoke to the children at the Church of the Heavenly Rest interesting them greatly in the meaning of Easter. The church resounded with the carols of the children. Immense audiences attended all the services in these churches.

Crescent Avenue Presbyterian.

The children's services, which included both departments of the home Sunday-school, held their exercises at noon in the main edifice. The church was filled with the children and their parents and the Easter carols and recitations were delightfully rendered. In the evening a special musical service was rendered by the quartet under the direction of Alexander Russell, organist and choirmaster.

Selections from Gounod's Redemption were sung with feeling and expression by the choir, which consists of Miss Lillian Vernon Watt, soprano; Miss Grace J. Carroll, contralto; Howard Pratt, tenor, and A. E. Betteridge, bass.

Temple Baptist Church.

The principal Easter service at the Temple Baptist church was held at the Temple Baptist church, last night, under the auspices of the Sunday-school. L. W. Randolph, the superintendent, was in charge of the program, which is as follows:

Opening anthem, choir; Scripture reading, Frank Stewart; prayer, U. B. Crane; carol, "Rejoice, Rejoice;" Easter greetings, Wells Rose; recitations, "Alive Again," Harold Wilson, Clara Moore; song, Richard Mellick; anthem, choir; carol, "Praise Ye the King," school; recitation, "A Message," Marjorie Emmons; recitation, "Are You," Florence Boughton; recitation, "He Loves Best," Euphemia Gulberg, Catherine Wurgler, Christine McGinnis; solo, Edith Jones; recitations, "A Happy Easter Thought," Jessie Campbell; "My Daffodill," Marie Meyers, Richard Mellick; solo, Paul Jones; recitation, Eva Cartright; recitation and song, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," "Holy, Holy," "All Hail," Lillian Ryno; recitation, "Something," Kenneth Boughton; recitation, "I Am Happy," Harry Winn; solo, Miss Ruth D. Sadler; remarks, Miss Nettie Beeching; song, "Everywhere," school.

At the morning service there were anthems by the choir and an Easter sermon by Rev. Frank Fletcher, of this city. The usual session of the Sunday-school was held in the afternoon.

Monroe Avenue M. E. Church.

The morning service in the Monroe Avenue church was devoted to exercises by the primary and kindergarten departments of the Sunday-school. They were in charge of Assistant Superintendent Edwin H. Beekman, Superintendent McGee being absent in Europe. Beside Easter carols and hymns sung by the entire assemblage the program was as follows:

Exercise recitation, "The Eternal Life," eleven children, Ethel Wilson, Ethel Martin, Jeannette Bell, Caroline Randolph, Elizabeth Beekman, Cornelia Lyle, Junior Marshall, Lester Symonds, Clifford Randolph, Mabel Peck and Helen Egel; recitation, Florence Meyers; singing, ten primary pupils, John Martin, Clifford Randolph, Elizabeth Beekman, Lester Symonds, Jurior Marshall, Edith

LOWRY TABLET MADE BY A LOCAL CONCERN

The Craftsmen's Art Company, which executed the order for the Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry memorial tablet unveiled at the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night, is a local organization composed of men prominent in business and professional affairs. It was incorporated a year ago and the following are the present officers: President, William N. Runyon; vice president, John H. Cose; secretary and treasurer, Thomas Hanna; special represenative, Elmer D. Cutting; board of directors, James B. Guttridge, Thomas M. Muir, William Mazzocco, Gyula de Festetics and the officers. The offices of the concern are located at 221 Park avenue.

Mr. de Festetics is the company's designer and modeller and is one of the most expert in the country. He was for many years employed by the largest art bronze establishments both here and abroad. Since associating himself with the local concern he has designed several large tablets which have been accepted and are now being made. Mr. de Festetics is especially expert in portrait work, as may be seen in the Lowry tablet, and the Craftsmen's Art Company makes a specialty of this class of bronzes. The Lowry portrait is in bas-relief, standing out but half the raising in ultra-relief, oftimes preferred.

The Great John Ganton.

One of the standard and high class productions to be presented by the Myrkle-Harder Company at the Plainfield theatre during its engagement here is "The Great John Ganton," which has never before been presented outside of the great cities of New York and Chicago. Believing that the proper staging of a play contributes in no small measure to its assured success, Mr. Harder has equipped "The Great John Ganton" with a wealth of realistic scenic environments and electrical effects, making it most complete in every detail.

'FLYER' KILLED 3

Express Hurled Elderly Women and Man From Tracks at Elizabethport.

ON JERSEY CENTRAL RAILROAD.

Baggageman Had Gone to Women's Aid and all Three Lose Their Lives on Easter Day.

The Elizabeth Avenue station of the Jersey Central Railroad at Elizabethport was the scene of a tragedy last night when a Lakewood "flyer" on the New Jersey Central, in charge of Conductor G. H. Van Nott and Engineer W. F. Hartman, rushed through a line of waiting passengers, killing three and bringing on a panic.

The flyer, which was a special, followed the local train due at Elizabethport at 9 o'clock and rushed upon the waiting crowds without warning.

E. L. Saunders, the baggage master of the local, heard the rumble of the approaching train and was killed while trying to warn the waiting passengers. Those killed were Mrs. Hannah Cosgrove, of Belford, and her mother, Mrs. Ann Eliza Stone, eighty-seven years old, of Riverhead. Mrs. Stone had been visiting her grandson, Christopher Cosgrove, of First avenue, Elizabeth, and was awaiting the train to take her to Riverhead.

Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., is assisting Prosecutor C. Addison Swift, in making an investigation of the accident. The train crew was arrested.

It was said last night that the flyer was not running as a regular train and that the signalman at the 'Port crossing had not been informed of the added number to the schedule. According to witnesses of the killing the special was running at about fifty-five miles an hour and could not be stopped in time to avert the accident. It was one of many specials run by the Central Railroad to Lakewood yesterday.

The accident occurred at a point in the track where many other tragedies have been seen.

PRIZES FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL COMPETITION

The annual report of J. D. Macnab, secretary of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church, presented at the Easter services, yesterday afternoon, was of interest, especially as it showed a gain of 117 in the membership of the school, the present total number being 684. During the year twenty-one were baptized, six received by letter and six by experience.

The cradle roll has a membership of fifty-six, the beginners' department, thirty-one; primary, thirty-seven; junior department, seventy-two; intermediate department, thirty-one; adult department, 342, and the home department, 117. The average attendance was 251. The largest attendance was on February 19, when 343 were present and the smallest one Sunday in April when only 125 were out.

Miss Edna Moffett's class had a perfect attendance and especial attention was called to the growth of Dr. Norman H. Probasco's class with a membership of sixty-nine. The receipts and disbursements for the year were about $1,200. The collection yesterday for The Day Nursery amounted to about $50. During the year contributions have been made to the Children's Home, as well as The Day Nursery. Fifty-three members of the school had perfect attendance.

An officer of the school has made an offer to the boy or girl bringing in the greatest number of new members, not identified with any other school, by July 1. The boy who wins this contest can have his choice of a full membership in the Y. M. C. A., or a two weeks' vacation at the Y. M. C. A. State camp or at Silver Bay, N. Y. The girl who wins the contest will have her choice of a two weeks' vacation at Northfield or Silver Bay. It was announced that Miss Jennie E. Whitney had been appointed superintendent of the home department. All of the committees were announced for the year.

Must Support Family.

Daniel Olsen, fifty years of age, a Swede, was put under $500 bonds this morning to furnish $9 per week for the support of his family. Judge DeMeza was severe with Olsen because of his continued failure to support his family. The complaint was made by Overseer of the Poor Alexander Ayers.

BOOTBLACK FINED $50 FOR ASSAULTING PATRON

Tony Ciraeus, a Greek bootblack on Somerset street, near Front street, assaulted Jacob Marcus, a customer of his bootblack stand on Saturday night, when the latter tendered a payment of a small debt. Marcus handed the Green a ten dollar bill from which he was to take twenty-five cents. When the bootblack handed back $9 without the rest of the change Marcus objected and in a minute there was a fracas.

Ciraeus seized a club and played a tatoo on Marcus' head, breaking the scalp and causing wounds which required several stitches. Judge DeMeza fined Ciraeus $50, with the alternative of spending the next sixty days in the county jail. This is the heaviest fine yet imposed by Judge William G. DeMeza.

SODA BOTTLE EXPLODES MAN MAY LOSE EYE

Without warning and with the noise of an exploding bomb, a soda water bottle in the hands of William Pfeister, a bartender in the employ of Henry Windham, proprietor of the Waldorf Hotel, exploded Saturday evening, scattering the broken glass in all directions. One of the fragments struck Pfeister in the right eye, cutting a deep gash.

Pfeister was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital and Dr. W. C. Ard called to attend him. Inquiry at the hospital this morning disclosed the fact that Pfeister is liable to loose the sight of one eye and that the injury to the scalp may be more serious than was at first supposed.

Dr. Ard was not prepared to say that the wounded eye could be saved. Pfeister lost a great quantity of blood and was very weak when taken to the hospital.

WIFE DESERTER HONE IN UNION COUNTY JAIL

Richard T. Hone, the alleged deserter of his wife, is safely locked up in Elizabeth, after making strenuous efforts through his counsel to evade extradition from New York, where he has been held in the Tombs for the past month.

Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr., accompanied by Chief of Police Kiely appeared before Justice Greenbaum, in the Supreme Court, in New York Saturday morning and secured possession of Hone, notwithstanding his attempts to block the efforts of the assistant prosecutor. Hone had engaged Abe Rubenstein, a noted criminal lawyer, to defend him and when the case was put before Justice Greenbaum, he decided that the call of New Jersey was valid and ordered Hone's deportation. Governor Dix refused to interfere after learning the status of the case. Hone will probably be tried some time during June next.

STOLE TWELVE DOLLARS FROM KUSSEL SACHAR.

Kussel Sachar, a grocer at 521 West Third street, reported to the police yesterday, that his store had been entered and the cash drawer rifled. Twelve dollars was missing when Mr. Sachar opened the drawer yesterday morning.

Detective Sergeant Flynn made an investigation, but could discover nothing that would lead him to believe that entrance had been forced. It is believed that whoever got in the store used a key as there were no marks on doors or windows which would indicate the use of a jimmy.

The will of Samuel Lloyd, the puzzle man, who died at his home in Brooklyn, April 10, was filed for probate on Saturday. The petition is signed by the widow, Mrs. Addie J. Loyd, Samuel Loyd, a son, and Mrs. Emma Campbell, a daughter. The son is made sole executor, without bond. It is estimated that Mr. Loyd left an estate valued at $1,000,000. Among the relatives left is a brother and two sisters, the Misses Loyd, who reside in North Plainfield.

Celebrated Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Cormick McDonough, of Fairview avenue, quietly celebrated their wedding anniversary at their home, yesterday, receiving the congratulations of a few relatives and friends.

UNVEIL BRONZE TABLET IN MEMORY OF REV. DR. LOWRY, WRITER OF HYMNS

In loving memory of Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry, founder and first pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, the congregation unveiled a beautiful bronze tablet in the main auditorium last night. The attending praise ceremony was one of the most impressive ever held in the edifice and was participated in by a record-sized gathering. The main part of the church was filled to its capacity and even the Sunday-school room which was pressed into service was barely able to accommodate the late comers.

The program was in charge of the pastor, Rev. Gabriel Reed Maguire, who had the assistance of Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Rev. Frank Fletcher, former City Judge William N. Runyon, all of this city, and Henry Pegram, of New York.

The Rev. Dr. Lowry Memorial Tablet.

The musical numbers were all hymns which Dr. Lowry composed, the congregation singing them with enthusiasm and fervor. They included several of his best known compositions, notably "Shall We Gather at the River," "Where is my Wandering Boy Tonight?" "I Need Thee Every Hour," "Low in the Grave He Lay," "We're Marching Onward to Zion," "One More Day's Work for Jesus," "All the Day My Savior Leads Me," and "Follow On." "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" was effectively sung as a tenor solo by Elmer D. Cutting, assisted in the chorus as a quartet by William J. Tallamy, John J. Campbell and William Smith. The rendition was beautiful and deeply impressive.

The program in detail was as follows:

Foreword, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire; hymn, "Something for Jesus;" Invocation; prayer, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich; hymn, "Follow On;" scripture reading, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss; offertory, "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" hymn, "We're Marching to Zion;" address, "Lowry, the Fraternity Man," Mr. Henry Pegram; hymn, "One More Day's Work for Jesus;" address, "Lowry, Founder and Pastor," W. N. Runyon; unveiling of Memorial Tablet, Miss Edith Lowry; hymn, "Shall We Gather at the River"; address, "Lowry, the Hymn Writer," Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire; hymn, "Low in the Grave He Lay;" address, "Lowry, the Fellow Worker," Rev. Frank Fletcher; hymn, "All the Way My Saviour Leads Me;" prayer; hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour;" ordinance of baptism; benediction, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire.

In his address, "Lowry, the Fraternity Man," Mr. Pegram related instances of the departed pastor's great interest in the Phi Kappa Psi, the membership in which had brought them together. Dr. Lowry was so attached to the "frat" that at a banquet given in his honor by members in New York in 1896 he made the request that a number of them sing at his funeral. When his death came three years later his wish was fulfilled.

The main address of the evening was given by William N. Runyon, "Lowry, Founder and Pastor." He began his reminiscences by going back to the time in 1876, when only a very small boy he had seen the pastor for the first time in the Second Baptist church at Second street and Central avenue, now known as Reform Hall. He remembered him more particularly, he said, because of his kindly nature and the way he made the children feel at ease. Judge Runyon then detailed the organization of the Central Baptist congregation in 1876, of its first services held in the old Seventh-Day Baptist church and then the erection of its present house of worship in 1879, the corner stone being laid by Dr. Lowry. The name was changed to the Park Avenue Baptist at that time. Judge Runyon was baptized by Dr. Lowry and he went on to tell of numerous occasions when he had enjoyed his presence and noted his devotion to the church which he had founded.

In conclusion, the speaker described in detail the tablet which had been prepared as a loving memorial and then asked Miss Edith Lowry, a grand daughter of the reverend pastor and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lowry, to come forward and unveil the memorial. It is attached in a conspicuous place to the right of the pulpit. As the covering was withdrawn, a brilliant light shed its rays upon the face of the bronze and made it plainly visible to the entire gathering. Immediately after the first glimpse, the organ pealed the strains of what is considered one of Dr. Lowry's greatest hymns, "Shall we Gather at the River?" The gathering caught up the refrain and sang it through in a manner long to be remembered.

Rev. Mr. Maguire followed with an address on "Lowry, the Hymn Writer." At the outset he said he could not speak from a personal point of view, as he never knew the pastor, but he did know his songs. He told how his mother sang "Shall We Gather at the River?" to him when he was a boy, how he had heard it in the Dublin University during the great revival of Moody and Sankey, and again in the African jungles when he went there as a missionary.

"They are singing it everywhere," said Mr. Maguire, "in the fashionable churches, in the Indian tepees and behind the walls of China. Throughout the length and breadth of this and other nations, it has been sung and will be sung as long as the world lasts. The sod has closed over Dr. Lowry, but his melody will never never die.

Mr. Maguire also told of an instance in Cleveland, O., where the singing of "Where is my Wandering Boy" had rescued a wayward son from a drunkard's grave and restored him to his family; also the influence that other of Dr. Lowry's compositions had wielded upon erring ones.

Rev. Frank Fletcher gave the closing address, "Lowry, the Fellow-worker." Mr. Fletcher and the doctor were fellow members of the Long Island Baptist Association for many years and later when Mr. Fletcher became pastor of the New Market Baptist church, they were in almost daily contact for a long time. The speaker paid a glowing tribute to the fellow-worker who had gone, but who had not labored in vain, and closed with a touching reminiscence of the last time they had met.

After the singing of the closing hymn, the ordinance of baptism was administered to the following young people by Mr. Maguire; Irene Moy, Edith Naylor, Anna Horne, Russell Hunt and David and Thomas Fitch, the last two being sons of Rev. St. John Fitch.

The tablet was designed by Gyula

ROAD BUILT OVER THE SEWER SITE

Bound Brook's Committee With 46 Laborers Work on Easter Day to Frustrate Plans.

In disregard of the Sunday laws, the citizens' committee of Bound Brook, with a gang comprising forty-six laborers, assisted by a number of property-owners, worked all yesterday opening up the new road through North Plainfield township, whereby they hope to defeat the borough's plans of locating sewage disposal beds on the Zvolnck farm. Henry G. Opdycke, chairman of the committee, himself an engineer, directed the operations, which attracted a large number of spectators from Bound Brook and the surrounding towns.

William J. Buttfield and Councilman W. L. Smalley, Jr., of North Plainfield, were among those who visited the scene of operations and watched the progress of the work for awhile. Mr. Buttfield remarked to Mr. Opdycke in fun that if the men did not stop work he would summon Sheriff Frank Mobus and have them all arrested. Mr. Opdycke thought that this would add interest to the situation and courted such action.

It was an interesting sight to witness the property-owners working alongside of the laborers, but they were so anxious to push the improvement that the social inequality cut no figure. Among those who gave a hand were William Chevanni, a New York wine merchant; Garet Garret, financial editor of The Evening Post; William Mariette, Lieut. Palmer, U. S. N., and Henry G. Opdycke. During the day bridges were built, drains placed in position and trees were cut down.

Mr. Opdycke still blames Senator Frelinghuysen for not keeping his hands off, as he promised, and giving North Plainfield aid in its plans. However, he declares that Bound Brook has some good things in reserve which will surprise North Plainfield at the proper time.

The new road has several angles to it and it is doubted very much whether the Board of Freeholders will accept the thoroughfare. A prominent citizen of the borough, in speaking of the project yesterday, said that any one can see the purpose for which the road was built; that the original stakes have not been followed and that it is plain to all that it was opened to block the sewer scheme. In view of these facts, it is the opinion of North Plainfielders that neither the State Board of Health nor the courts will sustain Bound Brook.

The improvement is being paid for by the property-owners, who have also given the right of way for the thoroughfare. Mr. Opdycke says that the townships of Bridgewater, Warren and Piscataway, the Bound Brook Council and Board of Trade are organized under the head of the citizens' committee and will go the limit to defeat the sewer scheme.

The State Board of Health will meet tomorrow, when it is expected that a decision favorable to North Plainfield will be given and the borough will then go ahead with its project, condemning the land needed for sewage disposal beds.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY'S DANCE WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

The committee on arrangements for the Holy Name dance to be held next Wednesday evening in the Saengerbund Hall for the benefit of St. Joseph's new church, has secured six pieces of music for the orchestra for the main floor. An Irish piper, assisted by two violinists, will furnish music for all those who wish to enjoy the jigs, reels and lancers. The committee of the Holy Name society follows: Thomas Meany, Vincent Meany, William McCullough, Cornelius Guinee, James Tobin, Thomas Hurley, Martin Whalen, Jr., William Daly, William Laffert, Robert McCormack, Patrick Jennings, Patrick McDonough, John Connelly, Edward Conshay. The committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary follows: The Misses Katie Keogh, Molly Lyons, Molly F. McCann, Ellen Mulkeen, Mrs. Bimble, Mrs. Trindle and Miss Katherine McGrath.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Junior C. E. Society gave an Easter cantata entitled "The Lord Is Risen," in the First Baptist church last night. The choir of the Juniors was assisted by John Mann and Archibald La Rue, of Bound Brook, violins, and Miss Hannah Nelson, piano. The young people marched in carrying flags and lilies and formed in the shape of a cross, making a very impressive spectacle. The cantata comprised solos, duets, trios and choruses. A large congregation attended.

The pupils of the borough schools resumed their studies today after a vacation since Thursday. The Easter holidays are shorter than in most other places but the local schools close earlier in June in order to balance up.

The members of Defender Fire Company are already at work on the arrangements for the social and dance to be held in Junior Hall on Friday night, May 10. It promises to be a gala occasion.

Mrs. Laura Tunison has returned to her home in Glen Gardner after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. John Fenner.

George Margintino has returned to the borough after a three months' sojourn at New Britain, Conn.

Miss Anna Ace is enjoying a visit with friends in Philadelphia and Wilmington, Del.

Mrs. Max Plishet has returned home after a week's visit with friends in New York.

Herbert I. Benward has traded his house on Front street for a property in Brooklyn.

A barn is being erected in the rear of the William G. Giles residence on Main street.

Lester Kratzel has taken a position as clerk in Harry B. Kirchhoff's pharmacy.

Mrs. Firman H. Gise has been spending the past week in Trenton.

Rapelyea; benevolent funds, James Todd; clerk, Garret Van Cleaf; committee on grounds and buildings, Daniel Beekman, J. Thompson and H. Auten; committee on pulpit supplies, Philip Coal and Harry Smith; committee on music, Nelson J. Dungan, chairman.

The new officers of the Somerset County Anti-tuberculosis Association are as follows: President, John Osbourn; secretary, Dr. William H. Merrill; treasurer, Dr. Mary E. Gaston; executive committee, Mrs. George H. Brown, Mrs. Charles J. Smith, Miss Deborah Corle, James L. Griggs, George A. West and Drs. A. L. Stillwell and John B. Hecht. A public meeting will be held in the assembly room of the high school on April 21, when Everett D. Eastman, of Newark, will address the meeting.

The following officers were elected on Thursday evening at the annual meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church: President, James H. Masder; vice president, Mrs. C. F. Hoppins; treasurer, Mrs. J. Adelaide Coddington; recording secretary, Claremont Masker; corresponding secretary, Miss Minnie Coddington; pianist, Miss Henrietta King.

Mrs. Michael White, of Bayonne, spent Easter with Mr. and Mrs. John Purcell, on Anderson street.

Miss Ruth Bateman is spending her Easter vacation with her aunt, Mrs. Knowles, at Pennington.

Miss Maud Holcombe, of Philadelphia, is visiting Mrs. J. C. Thatcher, at East Millstone.

Philip T. Hickey has purchased the property of Andrew Cassidy, on Somerset street.

Miss Miriam Hodge, of West Cliff street, is a guest of relatives in Washington.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Young People's Society of St. Mary's church, Stony Hill, will hold a euchre and dance tonight in Excelsior Hall. Tickets have sold well and an enjoyable time is looked forward to by the members and their friends.

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews led the B. Y. P. U. meeting last night at the Baptist church. "The Spirit of the Resurrection" was the topic and there was a large attendance of members.

Yesterday could hardly be called an ideal Easter day—snow squalls and overcoats still held the front of the stage and fashions had to take a back seat.

Frederick Hetsick, a former resident here, but now of East Orange, was the guest Saturday of friends in town.

WESTFIELD.

A large party of Westfield people left town Saturday morning to attend the ceremonies of launching the new ferryboat of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, Westfield, at the Wilmington ship yards. Miss Frances Lee, daughter of Walter J. Lee, was selected by Mayor John Alston Dennis to christen the new boat.

The report of the Westfield Council investigation committee has been completed, and will be submitted to the council at the meeting tonight. The nature of the report has been very jealously guarded, as not even a rumor as to what the committee will have to say has leaked out.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Netherwood Reformed church will hold a cake sale in the church Saturday, April 29.

Plans are progressing favorably for the boy choir to be organized at the Netherwood Reformed church by Horace J. Martin, Sr.

The mid-week prayer meeting at the First Baptist church Wednesday night will be in charge of the Men's Bible Conference Class.

The Junior Mission Band of the First Baptist church will meet Friday afternoon, and the Boys' Battalion will meet in the evening for drill.

A reception will be given to Miss Sara Curry in the lecture room of the First Baptist church Monday evening, April 24, in the interest of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will meet Friday afternoon. Mrs. Allen Vanderhoef will speak on the subject: "The Sabbath Keeper."

The Standard Bearers of the Monroe Avenue church will entertain the recently organized branch of the Standard Bearers from the Dunellen Methodist church tomorrow night.

The Dutch Arms, Men's Association, will meet at the Netherwood Reformed church this evening, to complete arrangements for the supper to be given at the church Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will hold a "Stunt Social" in Vincent chapel Friday night. Everyone attending will be expected to do some "stunt." Refreshments will be served during the evening.

The Women's Home Mission Society of the First Baptist church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. F. T. Ostrom will read a paper on "Porto Rico Missions," and Mrs. S. T. Wilson will lead the devotional exercises.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue church will entertain the Epworth Leagues in the Plainfield group Thursday night. Rev. Thomas McDonald, pastor of St. Luke's church, Newark, who is said to be a very able speaker, will make an address.

HOME-MADE BAGS FOR OPERA GLASSES

Why not give the girl friend a home-made opera bag for a birthday present? She is sure to be delighted—it can be used for small bits of handwork also—and you will enjoy the making.

The opera bag can be made with or without the oval stiff bottom. The first is more difficult to construct and cannot be so well adopted to fancy work purposes.

Among the newest bags are those cut rather small, pointed at the bottom with the top above the cord finished in scallops. The two sides are cut alike and the seams sewed on inside, or, if finished on outside, is covered with narrow galloon.

Sometimes the tops are cut in points like the bottom. Another shape is on the order of the old-fashioned reticule, like a very much bulged pear. The top is finished to draw into a casing.

The worked in tooled leather can make a stylish and servicable bag by cutting an oval bottom seven inches long and three and a half wide. To this is sewed two sraight pieces nine and a half inches long and seven inches high.

The ends of the pieces are sewed in a seam and the bag lined with a plain color silk velvet to match one of the tones in the leather decorations. The bag is sewed to the bottom without fulness.

The top is drawn into a wide box plait on each side by means of four eyelets an inch apart and a half inch below the top. A narrow strip of wood two inches and a quarter long, with holes to correspond to the two central eyelets, is placed on each half of the bag. This is held to the leather by the cord run through two slits in the leather between the central eyelets and corresponding holes in the wood. The lacers are then run in opposite directions and drawn up firmly and easily.

The handwork bags are made up in white or delicate toned satin or moires—a bit of brocade left from some of the new bridal frocks is just the thing. The lining may be of contrasting color or in gold or silver tissue.

The more elaborate bags are spangled in fancy patterns, some of them covered solidly with overlapping sequins to resemble glittering scales. Often beadwork plays a prominent part in the decorations, or ribbon embroidery and sequins combined.

A handsome bag is of Alice blue velvet, cut with the point top and bottom. It is embroidered in gold thread and several tones of blue to form an outlining border, which deepens, and the points. A medallion in the center of gold thread and blue sequin embroidery leaves a space for a monogram in gold thread.

A more servicable bag is in soft ecru tone, with a border in colored beadwork forming a band of dull pink and lavender roses.

JOHN DAVIDSON DEAD.

Well-Known Lawyer Prominent in Republican Politics.

Elizabeth, April 17.—John Davidson, aged 74 years, died Friday at his home, 754 Salem avenue. He had been ill for the past ten days and recently underwent an operation for abdominal trouble.

Mr. Davidson was born in Berwickshire, Scotland, on March 1, 1837. He came to America when he was 10 years old. He was educated in the College of the City of New York and later studied law with William R. Stafford, a Newark attorney.

Mr. Davidson was admitted to the bar in 1859 and practiced in New York for thirty years. His splendid work in New York soon gave him a prominent standing. He moved to this city forty-seven years ago and made his home at 754 Salem avenue, where he resided until his death.

Mr. Davidson was for many years active in Republican politics. He was once defeated for the Congressional nomination by Cornelius Walsh. Mr. Walsh secured one vote more than he in the State convention. About forty years ago, when Wyoming was a territory, President Grant offered Mr. Davidson the governorship of the territory. Wishing to continue in private life, Mr. Davidson declined the honor. For many years Mr. Davidson was interested in philanthropic work.

In 1860 Mr. Davidson married Miss Adelia S. Wait, of Perth Amboy. They had three children.

In addition to these he is survived by two brothers, Robert Davidson, of this city, and George Davidson, of Vineland, one sister, Mrs. George E. Dinsmore, of New York, and three grandchildren.

Sewing Chatelaine.

The lightest and most convenient of sewing cases is a chatelaine formed of a long, narrow ribbon matching the shade of the working dress and threaded through a chain of gilt or ivory rings. The ribbon is finished with clusters of narrower ribbon bows, from which hangs scissors, thimble, pin and emery cushions, needlecase, piercer, loops of embroidery silk, etc. It is a pretty gift from the embroider to the receiver. Think of it when Christmas rolls around and make it of cheerful red ribbon, with green-tinted ivory rings.

UNVEIL BRONZE TABLET

de Festetics, a member of the Craftsmen's Art Company, of this city, and is a handsome and representative piece of work. In dimensions the bronze is forty by thirty inches and is finished in two colors, old gold on the base, and a patenized wreath encircling it. Dr. Lowry's portrait in bas-relief is in the centre and in the lower right hand corner is a group of hymnal leaves, showing the titles and a few bars of three of Dr. Lowry's most widely sung compositions: "Shall We Gather at the River?" "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" and "I Need Thee Every Hour." At the top is a surmounting crown and just beneath the inscription: "In Loving Memrorty of Robert Lowry, D. D., 1826-1899; Founder and first pastor of this Church. He was scholar, poet and teacher, faithful ever to the truth and one of God's great messengers of song."

Dr. Lowry was born in Philadelphia, but came to Plainfield to live in 1875. He had been engaged in pastoral work in New York, but practically retired from active work. Soon after coming here he became interested in pastoral duties again and the Park Avenue Baptist congregation resulted. He served as pastor for nine years and again retired in 1885. He died on November 25, 1899, and was buried in Hillside cemetery.

"Ladies' Night" at Trinity.

The Dutch Arms, men's association of Trinity Reformed church, will hold a "ladies' night" affair at the church this evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Walter David, of New York, will entertain the men and their friends. Mrs. David, who is a harpist of rare ability, will give a number of selections, while her husband, who is a fine elocutionist and impersonator, will tell some good stories. There will be no admission, but an offering will be received.

Miss Goodwin Will Speak.

Miss Elizabeth H. Goodwin, of Greenwich, Cumberland county, State secretary of the Young People's Branch of the W. C. T. U., will speak in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. Christian Endeavors and Bible school members and high school pupils are especially invited.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Kindly permit me to explain more plainly regarding my action for which I was prosecuted. I wish to say that I used my automobile for my convenience such as to go to lunch, going home, to carry bicycles to and from my New Brunswick store, 206 Neilson street, and pleasure riding as well, and when not used I pay monthly storage at Thompson's garage. In so doing I was arrested and after having a five minute trial was thrown in a cell. I asked for permissiou to explain more. The reply was that the case was finished, and I was removed to a cell and locked up. As I am not familiar with such cases, I would kindly ask you should a citizen of a perfect reputation of honesty and purity be turned in a cell as mentioned? Should such one be insulted by officers? Should such one be refused to use telephone at his own expense?

Editor, The Daily Press:

One of the pleasant recollections of my life is the gathering of the ministers of Plainfield once a month in one of our homes. A paper would be read and then an informal discussion of great interest would follow. Dr. Lowry would sit close to the reader of the paper, which would be the text for a most unique criticism. He could hear nothing of what the other ministers were saying but that only gave him the opportunity to meditate on the theme and when his turn came to speak, we all wondered at his rich and varied erudition. The Park Avenue Baptist church has been particularly blessed in having such a man as its founder. He left a deep impression on the ministers of Plainfield and upon all who knew him.

Easter Sunrise Meeting.

The Easter sunrise service held at Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning was attended by sixty-three Endeavorers from the various societies in the city. The service was held under the auspices of the Trinity church society and F. H. Andrews was the leader.

The B. Y. P. U., of the Calvary Baptist church will be held Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. The topic will be "Sabbath Benefits," and will be opened by Mrs. G. W. Bailey.

Twenty-four shut-ins and sick of Trinity Reformed church were remembered with Easter flowers on Saturday.

CONSIDERATE.

The Thoughtful Host Desired to Spare His Guest the "Unpleasant Little Detail."

Two friends, one a prosperous looking business man and the other at least well dressed, chanced to meet not long ago, and the second gentleman remembered that it was his turn to "buy the dinner," so they were soon repairing to a fashionable restaurant. Their orders were generous, and they lingered long over the good things, not forgetting cigars at the end.

When they felt that they really had to leave or else pay rent the host showed a bit of fidgetiness and requested that the other go outside and wait for him, for there was an "unpleasant little detail" he wished to discuss with the proprietor and could not think of embarrassing his friend by having him overhear it. The friend did as requested, stepping outside and waiting at the nearest corner.

He had been waiting only about five minutes when of a sudden the door of the restaurant flew open, and his erstwhile host shot through it as from a catapult, followed by some most uncomplimentary terms.

"What's wrong?" was the first inquiry of the waiting friend.

"Oh, nothing much," was the answer, "except that the 'unpleasant little detail' I had to discuss with the proprietor was that I had no money to pay for the dinners."—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

A FAMOUS GOOSE.

Peter, the Pet of the English Coldstream Guards.

Possibly the most remarkable creature ever attached to a regiment was Peter, the ever famous goose of the Coldstream guards. This curious pet was presented to the Coldstreamers when they were in Canada by the late Hon. Adolphus Graves, and soon it acquired a fame which eclipsed that of all rivals in the way of pets in the army.

When the guard was mounted of a morning Peter always marched off with them. It is recorded that one night the goose saved a sentry's life by flying in the face of a rebel who was just going to fire at the soldier. Peter's timely aid disconcerted the rebel, who fired at random. The sentry immediately responded by shooting the rebel dead.

When the guards came home and were quartered in London one of the sights when the regiment marched out was to see Peter strutting at the head of the battalion till they passed the barrack gate, when the goose returned. Unhappily Peter's fate was unheroic. His end was ill in accord with his martial career, for he was run over and killed by a cab, and that not even a taxicab. It was a poor kind of an end for a bird with such a record.—London Telegraph.

Old English Laws About Buttons.

Buttons have engaged the attention of legislators even more frequently than hats. Five acts have been passed to protect the button industry of England, and some of these are still unrepealed. An act of George I. inflicts a penalty of 40 shillings on any person using or selling "buttons made of cloth, serge, drugget, frieze or camlet."

This law, says the London Daily Mail, was a source of intense annoyance to foreign visitors, and the author of "Le Parisien a Londres," a guide written in 1789, is careful to explain its provisions at considerable length. He adds, however, that foreigners "who are able to prove that their clothes were made in their own country escape the penalty when first summoned on the understanding that they change their buttons within twenty-four hours."

Lively Times In Billville.

"Well, sir," said the Billville citizen, "ef they ain't a power o' confusion in the skies after awhile I'll give it up!"

"What's the trouble?" he was asked.

"Well, over yander is Deacon Jones prayin' fer rain, an' jest 'crost the way is Elder Brown pertitionin' fer dry, an' the whole poperlation's crowdin' roun', bettin' which'll win. An' the high sheriff's done sarved notice to all of 'em to appear in court an' answer to the charge o' gamblin' in futures, an' he says he'll git enough cash out o' the gang to finish the artesian well an' paint the town hall."—Uncle Remus' Magazine.

Guarded His Beard.

As Sir Thomas More laid his head on the block he begged the executioner to wait a moment while he carefully placed his beard out of reach of the ax, for, he said, "it hath not committed treason," which reminds one of the story of Simon Lord Lovat, who the day before his execution on Tower hill bade the operator who shaved him be cautious not to cut his throat, as such an accident would cause disappointment to the gaping crowd on the morrow.—English Magazine.

DYNAMITE AND ICE.

A Rather Strenuous Day In the Arctic With Peary on the Roosevelt.

I think that none of the members of the Peary expedition will ever forget the 30th of August. The Roosevelt was kicked about the floes as if she had been a football. The game began about 4 o'clock in the morning. I was in my cabin trying to get a little sleep with my clothes on, for I had not dared to remove them for a week. My rest was cut short by a shock so violent that before I realized that anything had happened I found myself on deck—a deck that inclined to starboard some 12 to 15 degrees. I ran, or, rather, climbed, the deck to the port side and saw what had happened. A big floe rushing past with the current had picked up the grounded berg to which we were attached by the hawsers and dashed it against the Roosevelt and clear along her port side as if that thousand ton berg had been a toy. The berg brought up against another one just aft of us, and the Roosevelt slipped from between the two like a greased pig.

As soon as the pressure was relaxed and the ship regained an even keel we discovered that the cable which had been attached to the floe berg at the stern had become entangled with the propeller. It was a time for lightning thought and action, but by attaching a heavier cable to the parted one and taking a hitch around the steam capstan we finally disentangled it.

This excitement was no sooner over than a great berg that was passing near us split in two of its own accord, a cube of some twenty-five or thirty feet just missing our quarter by only a foot or two. "Bergs to the right of them, bergs to the left of them, bergs on top of them." I heard somebody say as we caught our breath at this miraculous escape. The ship was now quite at the mercy of the drifting ice, and with the pressure from the outer pack the Roosevelt again careened to starboard. I knew that if she were driven any higher on to the shore we would have to discharge a large part of the coal in order to lighten her sufficiently to get her off again, so I decided to dynamite the ice.

I told Bartlett to get out his batteries and dynamite and to smash the ice between the Roosevelt and the heavy floes outside, making a soft cushion for the ship to rest on. The batteries were brought up from the lazaret, one of the dynamite boxes lifted out with caution, and Bartlett and I looked for the best places in the ice for the charges. Several sticks of dynamite were wrapped in pieces of old bagging and fastened on the end of long spruce poles, which we had brought along specially for this purpose. A wire from the battery had, of course, been connected with one of the primers buried in the dynamite. Pole, wire and dynamite were thrust down through a crack in the ice at several places in the adjacent floe. The other end of each wire was then connected with the battery, every one got away to a respectful distance on the far side of the deck, and a quick, sharp push on the plunger of the battery sent the electric current along the wires.

Rip! Bang! Boom! The ship shook like a dish of jelly, and a column of water and pieces of ice went flying a hundred feet into the air, geyser fashion. The pressure of the ice against the ship being thus removed, she righted herself and lay quietly on her cushion of crushed ice, waiting for whatever might happen next.—Commander R. E. Peary in Hampton's Magazine.

MacMahon and Grevy.

In Paris in the revolution of 1830 a law student was soundly kicked by one of the king's officers for tearing down a copy of the ordinances placarded on the wall. The officer was armed, the student was not, so the latter ran away. Nearly a half century later, in 1879, the officer called upon the student to bid him goodby, having just resigned the presidency of the French republic on account of a radical difference with the majority of the national assembly on questions of state policy. He combined with his adieus also a graceful word of congratulation on the student's election to succeed him in the presidential chair. The student was Jules Grevy; the officer was Patrice de MacMahon, who died ripe in years and honors.

The Falkland Islands.

The Falkland islands are among the least known and most out of the way corners of the widely scattered British empire. They form a sort of British suburb of the south pole, some 500 miles from the antarctic end of America, Cape Horn. A former governor of the Falkland islands, the late Sir William Robinson, used to say that he would have committed suicide while there if he could have found a tree tall enough to hang himself on.—London Standard.

MAIMED CERVANTES.

Bravery In Battle of the Famous Author of "Don Quijote."

An incident of the battle of Lepanto, which broke the power of the Turks in Europe, has an interest for students of literature. "In the Marquesa galley"—we quote from Commander Currey's "Sea Wolves in the Mediterranean"—"was lying in his bed, sick of a fever, a young man twenty-four years of age, a Spaniard of Alcala de Henares, the son of honorable parents, we are told, although these parents were poor. When this young man heard that a battle was imminent he rose from his bed and demanded of his captain, Francisco San Pedro, that he should be placed in the post of greatest danger. The captain and others, his friends, counseled him to remain in his bed. 'Senores,' replied the young man, 'what would be said of Miguel de Cervantes should he take this advice? On every occasion up to this day on which his enemies have offered battle to his majesty I have served like a good soldier, and today I intend to do so in spite of this sickness and fever.' He was given command of twelve soldiers in a shallop and all day was to be seen where the combat raged most fiercely. He received two wounds in the chest and another which cost him the loss of his left hand. To those to whom he proudly displayed them in after years he was accustomed to say, 'Wounds in the face or the chest are like stars which guide one through honor to the skies.' Of him the chronicler says, 'He continued the rest of his life with honorable memory of this wonderful occurrence, and, although he lost the use of his left hand, it added to the glory of his right.' How glorious was that right hand is known to all readers of 'El Ingenioso Hidalgo Don Quijote de la Mancha.'"

RELIC OF ANTIQUITY.

The Seal That Is So Often Used on Legal Documents.

A most absurd thing connected with legal business is the little piece of red, green or blue paper or daub of sealing wax which we often place at the end of a signature to a deed, will or other important document.

It is a very small thing in size, but one to which a great deal of importance is frequently given. It is a relic of antiquity, and no plausible excuse can be invented for continuing its use.

Some of the more progressive states have practically abolished its use by legislation, which deprives it of any technical legal significance. In others, however, it is still used with all seriousness and solemnity, and an almost magical value is given to it by dignified judges that is little less than ridiculous.

A man died years ago leaving part of his estate to another to enjoy while he lived, with the privilege of devising it at his death to others whom he might select by a writing under his "hand and seal." A writing was executed so devising the property, but it was contested by others claiming the property upon the technical ground that the paper contained no seal after the signature and the devise was therefore void.

A wise Philadelphia judge closely scrutinized the signature and after carefully listening to the arguments of lawyers decided that at the end of the signature there was an extra scroll or flourish made with the pen with which the signature was made and that this was sufficient in law to constitute a seal.—Case and Comment.

Be Yourself.

Insist on yourself; never imitate. Your own gift you can present every moment with the cumulative force of a whole life's cultivation, but of the adopted talent of another you have only an extremporaneous, half possession. That which each can do best none but his Maker can teach him. Where is the master who could have taught Shakespeare? Where is the master who could have instructed Franklin or Washington or Bacon or Newton? Every great man is unique. Do that which is assigned to you and you cannot hope too much or dare too much.—Emerson.

Help For the Electrician.

If you are ever puzzled in working with electric wires as to which is positive and which is negative or whether the current is alternating there is no simpler method than the use of a potato. Cut the vegetable in half and insert the ends of the wire into the fresh body. About the positive wire a green stain will at once appear, due to dissolved copper. If the current is alternating the ends of both wires will be surrounded by dark colored stains. —Chicago Tribune.

Whittier's Safeguard.

When an overtimid visitor from the city once commented to the poet Whittier upon the insecurity that seemed inseparable from so many doors opening out from all sides of the large old country home the master of the house strove gently to restore confidence by pleading that most of them were locked at night.

Financial Worries.

"So your debts are bothering you?"

"Yes."

"Walking the floor because you can't pay 'em?"

"No; because I can't make 'em any larger."—Exchange.

ABDUL THE TIMID.

The Crafty Turkish Despot Wore a Crown of Terror.

HIS PALACE LIKE A PRISON.

Yildiz, a Place of Mystery, Was the Production and the Abode of Fear Unutterable—His Dread of Assassination and His Horror of the Dark.

For long years Abdul Hamid had been haunted and tormented by the nightmare of death. In every shadow he seemed to see an assassin. All his vast power could not bring him one moment of peace and happiness. Not for one moment was Turkey's monarch at ease.

Year by year his fears had been growing upon him. He had a terror of the dark. At night Yildiz always blazed with lights. His sleep had become restless, and he would waken at the slightest sound. Sometimes he would come out of his sleep with a start, frightened by a nightmare, and that would mean hours of wakefulness. At such times he would find the solitude of his room unbearable, and he would send for a sorcerer, who would explain the dream, or a slave, who would read to him from one of his favorite books, those giving detailed accounts of assassinations, executions and other horrors.

He was always armed. His clothes were lined with enormous pockets, which served him both as arsenals and archives and bulged with pistols and rolls of spies' reports.

Everybody at Yildiz was afraid of being shot by him. He was likely to fire at the slightest action that might seem to him suspicious. There is a story that one day a gardener working in the park of Yildiz, on seeing the sultan approach, rose quickly from a stooping posture to assume a respectful attitude. Abdul Hamid, startled by his sudden appearance and suspecting some evil motive, at once fired at him. The man fell dead. Later, as no weapon was found on his body, it had to be acknowledged that a blunder had been committed. Such is the tale told by the son of the late Prince of Samos, who was one of the sultan's ministers.

Yildiz, scene of innumerable horrors, had been built by Abdul Hamid himself, and he had made it more like a labyrinth than a palace. It was the production and the abode of fear unutterable. Surely no sane mind planned it. To guard against conspirators getting a plan of his residence its master was continually changing its internal arrangements, walling up doors, opening new ones, narrowing passages, dividing rooms by partitions, making windows and closing them again. It was a constantly changing maze.

To spare himself the danger of crossing the graveled path that separated his apartments from his harem he had linked his residence by flying bridges to the harem on the one side and to the imperial theater on the other. This theater was a gloomy little place, where the monarch would sit entirely hidden from view in his box while actresses and singers from Paris and other European cities entertained him. He never came into view, never applauded, and the visible audience consisted of a few members of his family.

The building used by Abdul Hamid as his private residence looked more like a prison, for all the lower windows were securely barred and the heavy iron doors were of great strength and capable of being firmly bolted inside.

Every room in the palace was provided with a couch on which the sultan could sleep if he felt inclined. Nobody ever knew in what room he would sleep on any given night. Before retiring to rest he would sometimes call his attendants and say to them: "Keep a good lookout. I am going to sleep tonight in this room." But he would invariably sleep somewhere else.

On the roof of the imperial apartments was an astronomical observatory which had been fitted up with an exceedingly good telescope by a Parisian firm. This observatory was a favorite place with the sultan, yet he took not the slightest interest in astronomy. The telescope was there to serve his own purpose of espionage, for he used it almost exclusively for the purpose of watching the residence of Prince Yusuf Izzedin, eldest son of Abdul Aziz and heir presumptive to the throne. Its glass was never turned upon the heavens.

But sometimes from his lonely lookout the monarch saw stranger things than the residence of Prince Yusuf, things that no other human being had ever dreamed of. There were times when his morbid imagination played curious pranks with him.

It was on the day following an attempt upon his life by one Ali Souavi and a revolt at Teheragan, both of which incidents greatly upset him, that Abdul Hamid hurried down from his observatory with a wild look in his eyes and called his first secretary, who at that time was Ali Fuad Bey. He led the secretary to a window, and pointing to the sublime porte some miles away, he said, trembling with fear:

"Did you see them? They have met yonder to proclaim my downfall!"

"Who?" asked the startled secretary.

"My ministers," exclaimed the sultan. "My own ministers are now in the act of dethroning me. Can't you see them?"

This statement was quite unfounded and it was a long time before the secretary could calm his frightened master.—Philadelphia Ledger.

EXPERT PITCHERS.

The Curious Way They Serve Bread at Meals in Yucatan.

At school, if we remember aright, says the author of "The American Egypt," the bread throwing was an offense punishable with the sixth book of the Aenid to write out and the loss of a half holiday as the minimum penalty. In Yucatan it is all the fashion in the highest circles.

No sooner had we taken our places at the table than an Indian maid brought in, holding them in her brown hands, a towering pile of soft white doughy tortillas, each about as big as a large biscuit. These she placed at the side of our hostess, who at once began to throw them to us all.

It was so adroitly done that before you had recovered from the amazement with which the mere act filled you, you found yourself admiring the exquisite dexterity of the gentle thrower.

A tortilla whizzed circling across the table under your very nose and landed with delicate softness like a tired dove at the side of your host's plate! Whiz, whir, here comes another! Why, it's like boomerang throwing, for this last, you'll declare, circled round you before it sank nestling under the edge of the plate of steaming pork stew in front of you. The air is thick with these doughy missiles.

Nobody is the least surprised except us, and we become quite absorbed in watching the friendly bombardment. Our host engages us, as the newspapers say, in "animated conversation," inquires the purposes of our tour, and our theories as to the origin of the Mayan people.

It is hard to give him our whole attention, for we feel that we are losing all the fun. The tortillas are whizzing over the table now and round it just like boomerangs, and then the hostess' supply is exhausted. But here is a plump Indian maid with a fresh supply, snowy white and softly fluffy, such as would fill a London muffin man's heart with envy. It is all very funny.

MADE THEM REMEMBER.

Customs of the Old English Court of Forest Regarders.

The great forests of England were for centuries royal property. They were kept from settlement and encroachment by the strictest laws and the severest penalties. To enforce the laws a great number of officials were appointed. There were warders, verderers, foresters and regarders, and there were special courts to try cases of trespass, poaching and like offenses. It is of the regarders that Mr. Norway writes in his "Highways and Byeways in Yorkshire." He is dealing with Sherwood forest of Robin Hood fame:

"I know not with any certainty what may have been the boundaries of this forest in ancient times, for that excellent custom of the court of the regarders has gone out of use, which was wont to impress the bounds so firmly on the memories of those who dwelt in the neighborhood.

"The regarders used to take a survey of the forest every third year, and in their train went a number of boys collected willy nilly from the immediate vicinity. The boys were chosen because it was held that the memories of the young are good. Yet it was found to be desirable to impress them firmly with the actual limits lest any wandering fancy should distract their attention at the important moment, and so the boys were bumped heavily upon the ground whenever the boundary was reached, or if the limit were a stream that was much better, for the urchins were thrown in and 'paddled about' until their attention was awake.

"'Is that stream the boundary?' one of these witnesses was asked in his riper age.

"'Ees,' he answered hastily, 'ees, that 'tis. I'm sure o't by the same token that I were tossed into't and paddled about there like a water rat till I were haafe deead.'"

When Not to Smoke.

By exhausting the salivary secretion smoking before meals prevents the physiological action of the saliva on starchy foods. Smoking just before going to bed is often followed by insomnia, because the stomach contains a quantity of unneutralized juice, which irritates the mucosa and gives rise to a sensation of hunger. This distressing consequence may be averted by taking either some light food or a little bicarbonate of soda before retiring to rest in order to neutralize the secretion.—London Lancet.

Justification.

"You admit, then, do you, O'Shaughnessy, that you assaulted your friend?" asked the judge.

"Sure an' Oi do that, yure honor," replied O'Shaughnessy. "Oi gev him a couple o' good wans. He called me a dommed fool, yure honor."

"And did you consider that an insult?" demanded the judge.

"Naw, sorr," said O'Shaughnessy. "Oi t'ought it was a gross betrayal uv confidence, sorr."—Harper's Weekly.

Duty.

Duty is a power which rises with us in the morning and goes to rest with us at night. It is coextensive with the action of our intelligence. It is the shadow which cleaves to us, go where we will, and which only leaves us when we leave the light of life.—Gladstone.

Predestination.

Ted—You know money is your best friend. Ned—Yes, and the trouble is that the best of friends must part.—Judge.

PAPUAN COURTESY.

Husbands Beat Each of Their Wives With a Different Club.

The marriage customs of the Papuans are somewhat similar to those of many other savage races. The ceremony is largely a matter of purchase. The men marry when they are about eighteen years of age and the girls at fourteen or even earlier.

When a young lake man desires to get married he visits the father of his prospective bride and puts forward his personal belongings as an inducement to the father to consent to the union.

If a man has a gun he is a great personage and can demand anything, but besides their bows and arrows and spears most of the the Papuans have very little. Even agricultural produce is scarce, the only cultivation undertaken being on a very primitive scale.

A little clearing is made by both men and women, and the women then grow bananas and sweet potatoes. The men are always armed, and when the women go to the patch to attend to their crops or gather the produce the men go with them as a protection. The women, however, do the work.

Many families have a bundle of ancient Portuguese cloth centuries old, and when a young man is seeking a bride one of these heirlooms is generally part of the deal. The youth and the girl's father haggle over the marriage until eventually they agree to terms, and then the thing is done. The men are not limited to one wife, and once a girl is married she is subject to her husband in everything and is practically his slave.

"In another part of New Guinea," says a writer in the Wide World magazine, "I remember a distinctly strong confirmation of the custom which places a woman at the entire mercy of her husband. At one house I visited I saw standing outside the doorway three huge stone clubs, each large enough to fell a bullock.

"On making inquiries I found that they tallied with the number of wives owing allegiance to the householder. The clubs were used by the man to beat his wives with if they annoyed him. The quaint part of it was that while the women seemed to raise no objection to being flogged unmercifully by their lord and master they would not be beaten with the same weapon as that used on another woman, so the native kept a separate club for each wife."

DEATH IN THEIR WORK.

Dangers That Beset Those Who Toil In Alkali Factories.

Do you like your work?

When you are inclined to be discontented with it think of the alkali workers. They die by inches from the moment they enter the factories. Things are not so bad now as they once were, but they are bad enough still.

In what is known as the "black ash" department in chemical works big open vats of caustic are used. The splashing of this caustic sends drops of the burning fluid flying through the air. A drop falling upon naked flesh causes a bad burn. A drop in the eye will blind it forever if the stuff is not removed within a few seconds.

A black ash worker in a Welsh alkali factory, toiling at the caustic pots, received an invisible globule of this deadly spray in his eye. There was no water at hand with which to wash out the caustic. It seemed that he must surely go blind. But one of his mates seized on the injured man, who was quite frantic with pain, lifted his eyelid with forefinger and thumb and with his tongue licked out the caustic. He burned his tongue badly, but he saved the other poor fellow's sight.

Another of the dangers that beset the alkali worker—and the worst of them all—is poisoning by chlorine acid gas. This gas, which comes off the lime in thin green fumes, is known to the men and joked about as "Roger." A full indraft of the gas kills a man in an hour.—Pearson's Weekly.

End of the Trail.

"I lost a pocketbook with a roll of bills in it a few weeks ago," Charlie Gibson told us. "I didn't make a fuss about it and tell the papers, but it was more than I could afford to lose. So I put a detective on it. He asked a lot of questions, looked wise and said he'd report in a day or two. Well, about three days later I found that pocketbook where I had mislaid it. I rejoiced exceedingly, and then I called up the detective agency to confess. The sleuth seemed disgusted.

"'Mighty careless of you,'" he said. 'And I'd just found a darned good clew too!'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sydney Smith's Criticism.

The story is told in Mr. Barry O'Brien's book on John Bright how on one occasion Sydney Smith, while looking critically at the unfinished portrait of a celebrated nonconformist divine, said to the artist, "Do you not think you could throw into the face a stronger expression of hostility to the established church?"

Conscience.

SHAVING IN ITALY.

The Barber Must Have Used a Crosscut Saw on This Victim.

Italy may be the land of the flea, but it is not the home of the shave.

The barbers there are generally recruited from the ranks of the butchers or the medical students. They must be able to stand the sight of blood. In the early days of medicine physicians called in barbers to do their bleeding for them.

In Italy a physician now does his own bleeding—if he visits a barber shop first.

Everything is done in an orderly manner in the Latin kingdom. The man who yearns to open a tonsorial parlor appears before the municipality to request his license. No influence is required. He does not have to have a pull. No, he cultivates that later.

"Are you qualified?" demand the city fathers.

"Signori," responds the applicant reproachfully, "does not my father own a horse, and have I not curried it every Sunday? Besides, I have worked in the stockyards."

"Bene," reply the license givers. "You are indeed suited in every way. Here are your shaving papers. Go forth and scrape acquaintance with the strangers within our gates, but cut only distant acquaintances. To cut your friends is bad form and bad for 'em."

Then, if the happy neophyte has the tin, he opens up a dissecting parlor. The tin is necessary for razor blades.

One Italian traveler was heard to remark: "I now believe that the martyr St. Luke was skinned alive. I know the man who skinned him. He shaved me this morning." Twelve good men and true looked at his face and then gave their verdict. He was a truthful man.

When a customer enters an Italian barber shop he is escorted politely to an operating chair. The back of the chair is stationary, but the headrest lets down to a remarkable degree. The result is that while the applicant's hips and knees are bent to an angle of ninety degrees his neck stretches so that his head makes an acute angle with his back, his chin pointing directly at the ceiling. It requires long practice for stout gentlemen to become comfortable in this position.

Then the operator dips his brush in ice water and brushes it lightly across the soap. He then, with a playful air, dampens his customer's beard as if to say, "This is really unnecessary, but I yield to the prejudices of a stranger." No, he never rubs the soap in—he might produce a lather. Then comes the major operation. Afterward the face is washed with a shaving brush full of cold water, and then the powder is applied; no, not talcum powder—powdered alum.

When the damages have thus been temporarily repaired the victim raises his head—if he is still able—and has a coat of brilliantine applied to his hair. He then totters home and, after his wife has fainted at sight of him, resolves to raise a mustache, sideburns, galways and a full beard. The barber, meanwhile having washed up the gore, seats himself in front of his shop and smiles benignly on the passerby. No, Italy is not the land of the shave, although it may be the home of the flea.—New York Sun.

His Advice Not Wanted.

"My dear," says the doctor to his wife, who is cuddling their new boy, "you should not feed the baby oftener than every three hours, you should not take it up every time it cries, it should sleep practically all the time, it should not be shown to every one who calls, your mother and father should not be permitted to dandle it, you should not chuck it under the chin that way, it should sleep in a room without heat and with the windows wide open, its clothing should be simple—none of those lacy, embroidered things—and—and"—

"Humph!" interrupts his wife. "You go and tell that stuff to people that pay you $5 a visit. I don't want any of your old advice about this baby."—Life.

The Big Wind In Ireland.

The night of the big wind in Ireland was Jan. 6 and 7, 1839. It seems to have served for some seventy years as the era point of no little chronology. The gale was by no means confined to Ireland. A score of persons died in Liverpool in the crash of buildings, and the force of the wind was felt through Cheshire, Warwick and Stafford. In Limerick, Galway and Athlone more than 200 houses were blown down and as many more were burned. In 1898 Dublin was swept by a gale quite as great and half the trees in the Phoenix park were put down.—New York Sun.

She Loved Him.

This was after the quarrel. "I can never forgive you," he cried. "Last night you said I was a lobster."

"But you know," she replied, and her tone was conciliatory—"you know how dearly I love lobsters."

With a glad cry he folded her to his breast.—Philadelphia Record.

THE DIVA'S RUBY

BY

F. MARION CRAWFORD

AUTHOR OF "SARACINESCA," "ARETHUSA" ETC. ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY F. MARION CRAWFORD

"I asked him, just like that, in a friendly way, and he thought a moment and made an effort to recollect, and then he seemed quite pleased to remember that I'd been 'Fanny' and he'd been 'Levi Longlegs,' and that he used to whistle things out of 'Parsifal' by the fire of an evening."

"Well—but in that case—" Margaret stopped with an inquiring look.

"Just so," continued Van Torp, nodding. "Did you ever attend a trial and hear a witness being cross-examined by a lawyer who wants him to remember something, and he wants to remember it himself, but can't because he never heard of it before in his life? It's quite funny. The lawyer makes steps for him and puts his feet into them so that he gets along nicely, unless the judge happens to wake up and kick, and then the little game stops right there, and somebody laughs. Well, my talk with Kralinsky was like that, only there was no judge, so he went away happy; and we're old friends now, and punched cows on the same ranch, and he's coming on my yacht. I only wonder why he was so anxious to remember all that, and why he thought it would be kind of friendly if I called him Levi Longlegs again, and he called me Fanny Cook. I wonder! He says he's still very fond of 'Parsifal,' and came on purpose to hear it, but that he's completely forgotten how to whistle. That's funny, too. I just thought I'd tell you, because if you come on my yacht and he comes, too, you're liable to see quite a good deal of one another."

"Did you tell him that Mrs. Rushmore and I would come?" Margaret asked. "And Lady Maud?"

"Why, no. You've not promised yet, any more than you did last night when we talked about it, so how could I? I forgot to mention Lady Maud to him, or else I thought I wouldn't—I forget which. It doesn't matter."

"No." Margaret smiled. "Not a little bit!"

"You seem amused," observed Mr. Van Torp.

"By your way of putting it and your pretending to forget such a thing."

"It wasn't quite true that I forgot, but I wanted to, so I didn't say anything about her. That's why I put it in that way. I don't choose to leave you any doubt about what I say, or mean, even in the smallest things. The moment you feel the least doubt about the perfect accuracy of anything I tell you, even if it's not at all a downright lie or anything resembling one, you won't trust me at all, in anything. Because, if you trust me, you'll end by liking me, and if you don't trust me you'll go back to thinking that I'm the Beast out of Revelation, or something, as you used to."

"I'm Not Sure He Was Ever in the West."

"I've forgotten all about the Beast," Margaret said.

"Thank you," answered Mr. Van Torp. "To change the subject—I've got a little scheme to propose. Maybe you'll think well of it. Anyhow, as it's a mere matter of business connected with your career, you won't mind my explaining it to you, will you?"

"No, indeed!" Margaret was interested at once. "Do tell me!" she said, leaning forward a little.

"Well," he began, "I've looked around this place a good deal since I've been here, and I've come to the conclusion that it's not very well done, anyhow, except 'Parsifal.' That's what most of the people really come for. I'm informed that they give all the other operas better in Munich, with the advantage of being in what you may call a Christian town, compared with this. Is that correct, do you think?"

"Yes, I believe so."

"It is, you can depend upon it. Now, what I want to know is, why you and I shouldn't go into a little business partnership, and do this kind of thing brown, as it ought to be done." Margaret opened her handsome eyes wide. "Because," continued Mr. Van Torp, as coolly as if he were explaining a new plan to a board of directors, "we've got the capital and the ability between us, and there's a demand in New York for what I propose to do. It'll fill a want, I know, and that means success and money. Why don't we build a theater together? When I say a theater, I mean a first-class opera house and not a barn. We'll employ the best architects to build it, and, of course, I'd leave everything about it to you. I've got a block in New York just about in the right place, and it won't take long to build. I'll give the land and put up the money for the building, if you'll undertake the management. You'll put in any money you like, of course, and we'll share the profits. Maybe they'll be quite handsome, for we'll lease the theater to other people outside of the season. We'll have the best talent in Europe, and pay for it, and the public will pay us back. We'll call it the Cordova Opera, if you like, and you'll run it according to your own ideas, and sing or not, whenever you please."

"Are you in earnest?"

Margaret had some difficulty in pronouncing the words clearly. Was there ever a great soprano who did not dream of having the most perfect theater of her very own, and who could receive unmoved the offer to build one from a man who could build 20 if he chose? Very rarely in her life had she been aware of her bodily heart, but she could feel it now, beating like a hammer on the anvil.

"I'm in earnest," Van Torp answered with perfect calm. "I've thought the whole thing over in all its aspects, just as I would a railroad, or a canal, or a mine, and I've concluded to try it, if you'll help me, because it's going to be a safe investment. You see, Miss Donne," he went on slowly, "there's no artist on the grand opera stage now who's so well equipped for the business as you are. I'm not flattering you, either. In your own kind of parts you've simply got no rival. Everybody says so, and I suppose you won't play kitty and deny it. Let's start fair, now."

"It would be silly to deny that I'm one of the first," Margaret admitted.

"That'll do, thank you. One of the first, and the first is one of them, and you're it. Besides, you've got before you what's behind most of them. You're young. I'm not talking about your personal appearance, but that's just one more item in the assets. Another big one is that you're a first-class musician, whereas half these singers can only bang the box like great, thundering overgrown schoolgirls. Allow that?"

"I suppose I must 'allow' anything," laughed the prima donna.

"Well, now, I've told you. You've got the name I need, and you've got the voice, and the talent, and you've got the science and culture. I suppose you'll let me say that I've got the business ability, won't you?"

The iron mouth smiled a little grimly.

"Rather! I fancy some people have wished you had less!"

"And the money's here, for I always have a blank cheque in my pocket. If you like, I'll fill it in, and we'll deposit it wherever you say, in the name of the 'Cordova Opera Company,' or 'Mme. da Cordova, Rufus Van Torp & Co.' We can make out our little agreement in duplicate right here, on the corner of the table, and sign it; and before we leave here you might go around and speak to the best singers about an engagement in New York for a Wagner festival, a year from next Christmas. That's business, and this is a purely business proposition. If you'd like to think it over, I'll go and take a little walk before dinner."

"It sounds like a dream!" Margaret answered, in a wondering tone.

"Money's an awful reality," Van Torp remarked. "I'm talking business, and as I'm the one who's going to put up most of the capital, you'll do me the credit to believe that I'm quite wide awake."

"Do you really, really, really mean it?" She spoke almost like a child.

It was not the first time in his life that the financier had seen the stunning effect of a big sum, projected with precision, like a shell, at exactly the right moment. He was playing the great game again, but for a prize he thought worth more than any he had yet won, and the very magnitude of the risk steadied his naturally steady brain.

"Yes," he said quietly, "I do. Perhaps I've startled you a little, and I shouldn't like you to make a decision till you feel quite ready to. I'll just say again that I've thought the whole thing out as a genuine venture, and that I believe in it, or I wouldn't propose it. Maybe you've got some sensible lawyer you have confidence in, and would like to consult him first. If you feel that way, I'd rather you should. A business partnership's not a thing to go into with your eyes shut, and if we had any reason for distrusting one another, it would be better to make inquiries. But so far as that goes, it appears to me that we've got the facts to go on, which would make any partnership succeed. You've certainly got the musical brains, besides a little money of your own, and I've certainly got the rest of the funds. I'd like you to put some money it, though, if you can spare it, because that's a guarantee that you're going to be in earnest, too, and do your share in the musical side. You see I'm talking to you just as I would to a man in the same position. Not because I doubt that if you put your name to a piece of paper you really will do your share as a partner, but because I'm used to working in that sort of way in business. How does that strike you? I hope you're not offended?"

"Offended!"

There was no mistaking the suppressed excitement and delight in her voice. If he had possessed the intelligence of Mephistopheles and the charm of Faust he could not have said anything more subtly pleasing to her dignity and her vanity.

"Of course," he said, "it needn't be a very large sum. Still it ought to be something that would make a difference to you."

She hesitated a moment, and then spoke rather timidly.

"I think perhaps—if we did it—I could manage a hundred thousand pounds," she said. "Would that be too little, do you think?"

The large mouth twitched and then smiled pleasantly.

"That's too much," he said, shaking his head. "You mustn't put all your eggs in one basket. A hundred thousand dollars would be quite enough as your share of the capital, with option to buy stock of me at par, up to a million, or so, if it's a success."

"Really? Would that be enough? And, please, what is 'stock' in such a case?"

"Stock," said the financier, "is a little plant which, when well watered, will grow like the mustard seed, till all the birds of Wall street make their nests in its branches. And if you don't water it too much, it'll be all right. In our case, the stock is going to be that share of the business which most people sell to raise money, and which we mean to keep for ourselves. I always do it that way, when circumstances allow. I once bought all the stock of a railroad for nothing, for instance, and sold all the bonds, and let it go bankrupt. Then I bought the road one day, and found all the stock was in my own pocket. That's only a little illustration. But I guess you can leave the financial side in my hands. You won't lose by it, I'm pretty sure."

"I fancy not!" Margaret's eyes were wide open, her hands were clasped tightly on her knee, and she was leaning forward a little. "Besides," she went on, "it would not be the money that I should care about! I can earn more money than I want, and I have a little fortune of my own—the hundred thousand I offered you. Oh, no! It would be the splendid power to have the most beautiful music in the world given as it could be given nowhere else! The joy of singing myself—the parts I can sing—in the most perfect surroundings! An orchestra picked from the whole world of orchestras, the greatest living leaders, the most faultless chorus! And the scenery, and the costumes—everything as everything could be, if it were really, really the best that can be had! Do you believe it is possible to have all that?"

"Oh, yes, and with your name to it, too. We'll have everything on earth that money can buy to make a perfect opera, and I'll guarantee it'll pay after the first two seasons. That is, if you'll work at it as hard as I will. But you've got to work, Miss Donne, you've got to work, or it's no use thinking of it. That's my opinion."

"I'll work like a Trojan!" cried Margaret enthusiastically.

She had enough experience in herself, and enough knowledge of the conditions to believe that her own hard work, combined with Van Torp's unlimited capital, could and certainly would produce such an opera house, and bring to it such artists as had never been seen and heard, except perhaps in Bayreuth, during its first great days, now long past.

Then, too, he had put the matter before her so skillfully that she could look upon it honestly as a business partnership, in which her voice, her judgment, and her experience would bear no contemptible proportion to his money, and in which she herself was to invest money of her own, thereby sharing the risk according to her fortune as well as giving the greater part of the labor. She felt for some weak place in the scheme, groping as if she were dazzled, but she could find none.

"I don't think I shall need time to think this over," she said, controlling her voice better, now that she had made up her mind. "As I understand it, I am to put in what I can in the way of ready money, and I am to give my time in all ways, as you need it, and my voice, when it is wanted. Is that it?"

"Except that, when you choose to sing, the company will allow you your usual price for each appearance," answered Van Torp in a business-like manner. "You will pay yourself, or we both shall pay you, just as much as we would pay any other first-class soprano, or as much more as you would get in London or New York if you signed an engagement."

"Is that fair?" Margaret asked.

"Why, certainly. But the company, which is you and I, will probably rule that you mustn't sing in grand opera anywhere in the states east of the rockies. They've got to come to New York to hear you. Naturally, you'll be free to do anything you like in Europe outside of our season, when you can spare the time."

"Of course."

"Well, now, I suppose we might as well note that down right away, as a preliminary agreement. What do you say?"

"I say that I simply cannot refuse such an offer!" Margaret answered.

"Your consent is all that's necessary," he said, in a matter-of-fact tone.

He produced from an inner pocket a folded sheet of foolscap, which he spread on the corner of the table beside him. He took out a fountain pen and began to write quickly. The terms and forms were as familiar to him as the alphabet and he lost no time; besides, as he had told the prima donna, he had thought out the whole matter before hand.

"What if Mrs. Rushmore comes in just as we are signing it?" asked Margaret.

"We'll tell her, and ask her to witness our signatures," replied Van Torp without looking up. "I judge Mrs. Rushmore to have quite a knowledge of business."

"You seem able to write and talk at the same time," Margaret said, smiling.

"Business talk, yes." The pen ran on swiftly. "There. That's about all, I should say. Do you think you can read my writing? I don't suppose you've ever seen it."

He turned the page round, and handed it to her. The writing was large and perfectly legible, but very different from the "commercial" hand of most American business men. Any one word, taken at random, might have seemed unformed, at first sight, but the appearance of the whole was oddly strong and symmetrical. Margaret read the clauses carefully. She herself had already signed a good many legal papers in connection with her engagements and her own small fortune, and the language was not so unfamiliar to her as it would have been to most women.

"Shall I sign first?" she asked, when she had finished. "My own name? Or my stage name?"

"Your own name, please," said Van Torp without hesitation. "The other's only binding in your profession, because you appear under it, and it's your 'business style.'"

She wrote "Margaret Donne" at the foot of the page in her large and rather irregular hand, and passed the paper back to Van Torp, who signed it. He waved the sheet slowly to and fro, to dry the ink.

"It's only a preliminary agreement," he said, "but it's binding as far as it goes and I'll attend to the rest. You'll have to give me a power of attorney for my lawyer in New York. By the by, if you decide to come, you can do that in Venice, where there's a real live consul. That's necessary. But for all matters of business herein set forth, we are now already 'The Mme. da Cordova and Rufus Van Torp Company, organized for the purpose of building an opera house in the city of New York and for giving public performances of musical works in the same, with a nominal capital hereafter to be agreed upon.' That's what we are now."

"The Company, Which Is You and I, Will Probably Rule—"

He folded the sheet, returned it to his inner pocket and held out his hand in a cheerful, business-like manner.

"Shall we shake hands on it?" he asked.

"By all means," Margaret answered readily, and their eyes met; but she drew back her hand again before taking his. "This is purely a matter of business between us," she said, "you understand that? It means nothing else?"

"Purely a matter of business," answered Rufus Van Torp, slowly and gravely.

Easter Day is Not the Only Day Women Don New Hats

Thousands will appear today in new finery and new hats—if the weather proves propitious. As many thousands defer wearing the new things until after Easter Day. Many women have looked after the children and neglected themselves, but their turn will come now—and we will be amply prepared for them with

A MULTITUDE OF HATS AT PLEASING PRICES.

The latest fashions in hats in European capitals, as well as in the Metropolis, are reflected accurately in the hats on view in our Millinery Salon.

Our trimmers, experts not only in copying the best of the foreign ideas, merge their own thoughts with those of the Parisians and evolve hats that have a distinctive character, and that set a standard for Hahne & Co. millinery difficult to approach.

This skill in trimming enters into not only the higher priced hats running from say $50 to $100, but is seen in the most modestly priced of our specialty lines.

Take, for instance, the hats we sell at $4.75. It is truly wonderful what beautiful hats can be produced at this price. They have much of the style of the higher-priced hats, and often are taken to be hats that cost double the money. Many new ones will be ready at $4.75 tomorrow, fresh from our millinery gardens.

Pluck them while they may be had.

At $7.75 we specialize hats that are still more beautifully trimmed than the $4.75, having a little more distinctive character and trimmings of a finer sort.

At $9.95 a still better line of hats, beautifully trimmed with finer materials and in a variety of shapes and color effects, most pleasing, indeed.

If you choose to pay $12.50 to $15 for a hat you will find a wide variety to choose from, and you can secure hats full of originality and beauty.

Untrimmed Hats in seemingly endless variety at prices beginning at 95c.

Mowen, Ethel Wilson, Ethel Martin, Caroline Randolph and Helen Egel; recitation, "Joys of Easter Time," Constance Durant; recitation, Evelyn Stine; recitation, "Everything Is Happy Now," Elsie Vail; recitation, "The World Keeps Easter," Dorothy Durant. Following a song by the entire school, Rev. Charles S. Kemble gave an address on "The Wonders of An Egg."

The Epworth League conducted a sunrise service which was well attended. John McCormick was in charge. In the evening at 8 o'clock the pastor preached an appropriate Easter sermon on the subject, "What Is the Use of Believing In a Resurrection?"

First Baptist Church.

Elaborate Easter services were held at the First Baptist church, and the decorations were undoubtedly the finest yet witnessed there. A solid bank of flowers was displayed in front of the pulpit platform, including azaleas, palms, lilies and other beautiful flowers, all from the conservatory of C. W. McCutchen. In addition potted plants were placed in each window. A feature of the morning service was the reception of thirty-four new members, including several by letter. Twenty-two were on confession. They were given the hand of fellowship by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss. The Easter music by the chorus choir, with solo numbers by Miss Ruth Harris, soprano ;Miss Hazel Hatfield, contralto; William Holmes, baritone, and George W. Smith, tenor, under the direction of Howard Case, organist, was greatly enjoyed. Following the reception of members the communion service was held.

The Sunday-school held its Easter service at 3 o'clock in the afternoon in charge of James E. Church, superintendent. Howard Case presided at the organ; Mrs. A. L. Kennelly at the piano, while Miss Florence Wohlfert played the violin. The program also included the teaching of the Easter lesson by Miss Marie Bell Coles, of New York, who is a specialist in Sunday-school work. The program follows:

Prelude, Le Deluge, Saint-Saens, violin, piano and organ; carol, The Conqueror, school; invocation, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss; responsive reading, led by Assistant Superintendent F. W. Jones; quartet, Near the Cross; song, The Risen Saviour, junior department; recitation, Craig Holder; carol, Easter, Joyons Easter, school; recitation, Emily Pilger; semi-chorus of young women, Resurrection Morn So Fair; offertory, Romance, violin and piano; carol, The Bells of Hope, school; lesson, Miss Marie Bell Coles; song, Do You Know the Easter story?, primary department; song, Memories of Galilee, school; carol, Let Us Sing for Joy, school; carol, Brighter Are the Sunbeams, school; benediction, postlude.

St. Stephen's Church.

At St. Stephen's the children's service was held in the afternoon and after an address by the rector, Rev. Elory G. Bowers, the customary distribution of plants took place, each child receiving a potted plant to care for in remembrance of the day.

The ordinance of baptism was administered to two children, Margaret Scrowl, on Saturday evening, after the sermon and Florence Adelmann, yesterday morning. The kindergarten was well represented at the afternoon service, twenty-eight children of this department of the Sunday-school being present. The offering was nearly double of that of last year.

Rev. Mr. Bowers' address was a plain dissertation on the resurrection, taken from the Apostles' Creed "The Resurrection of the body." His talk not only interested the children but the parents as well. The testimony of the disciples was used to prove that Christ did rise from the dead.

Park Avenue Baptist Church.

In the Park Avenue Baptist church the entire morning service was given up to the children, the program of which was published in full in Saturday's Press. A noteworthy featur" of the service was the splendid playing by the orchestra under the direction of A. S. Mosher. Another pleasing number was "The Palms," sung by Miss Edith Bechtel, who has a promising voice. The carol singing by the Sunday-school indicated careful training. George E. Hall, superintendent of the Sunday-school, was in charge of the exercises, assisted by Miss F. G. Hawkins, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Elmira Runyon, Mrs. Ada Cuming, Mrs. Charles VanWinkle and Miss Mary Clark. The exercises by the elementary department were arranged by their superintendent, Miss Elmira Runyon, assisted by Mrs. Frank Schuyler, who played the piano.

Two pleasing feautres aside from those noted above were the recitations, "A Child's Thought of Jesus," by Sarah Johnson, and the three-part recitation, "An Easter Offering," by Eleanor Peddie, Orrice Chamberlain and Hilda Gerlash.

Judge William N. Runyon was the recipient of a bunch of carnations from his class. Superintendent Hall made the presentation speech in which he congratulated the judge upon the success attained by his class in Bible study. Judge Runyon responded happily and with deep feeling. His class numbers fifty-three young men.

Miss Florence Meredith delighted the audience with her Swiss Bells, on which she played a number of appropriate selections. Her music added much to a fine program of music. Easter lilies predominated in the floral decorations, while many potted palms, the gift of Mrs. Charles VanWinkle, helped to make the decorative scheme one long to be remembered.

After the evening service the plants were sent to the homes of the sick, being taken by the members of the flower committee of the church.

Grace M. E. Church.

Grace M. E. Sunday-school, noted for its excellence in special anniversary work, maintained its reputation yesterday. The church was crowded and beautifully decorated. After the usual opening exercises and singing of Easter anthems, the children delighted the large audience by their songs and recitations. Conspicuous among these was that given by Marie Jennings, who made a bouquet from a lapful of flowers, and gracefully presented it to the superintendent, W. J. Conroy. Little Robert and Ruth Winckler, little gardeners, "with rake and hoe," also deserve the credit given them. "Spring," personified by Elizabeth Voorhees, found much that was interesting in opening her Easter mail from the birds, the bells and flowers. The exercise, "Among the Dandelions," proved how interesting these flowers can be when personified by children. The exercises concluded with a "Floral Harp," seven girls entering to music, with festoons, which later proved to be harp strings, and were fitted into a frame forming a harp such as was used in the time of David. An address by the new pastor, Mr. Cain, followed. Those taking part were Ruth Nichols, Ruth and Robert Winckler, Helen and Grace Bolen, Elizabeth Voorhees, Minerva Neidig, Florence and Elizabeth Hoagland, Mildred Harden, Marian Jones, Edna Mantz, Helen Nelson, Madeline Walker, Ruth and Grace Conover, Adelande and Edna Jones, Elva and Marie Jennings, Andrew Vanderbeek, Albert Monk. The exercises were conducted by Miss Mary G. Steiner. Miss Voehl was chairman of the decorating committee.

Netherwood Reformed Church.

At the Netherwood Reformed church in the evening, the pastor, Rev. Royal A. Stout, addressed the little ones on the meaning of Easter and held the interest of the children until the last work was spoken. The pulpit and rail were beautifully decorated with white flowers, mostly of the Easter variety, including lilies and the special choir, under the direction of Horace Martin, St., rendered special music. The decorations were by J. .W Pitt and were greatly admired.

Rev. S. T. Carter, for thirty-three years pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Huntington, L. I., occupied the pulpit in the morning and in the evening J. D. Loizeaux spoke to the children on "Naaman, the Syrian."

Rev. Mr. Stout was unable to speak owing to a severe attack of the grip.

Hope Chapel.

The pupils of all departments at Hope chapel assembled in the main Sunday-school room and enjoyed Easter exercises, yesterday afternoon. Superintendent G. Herbert Condict was in charge and beside the singing of carols by all, a program was presented by the primary and intermediate departments. The former was in charge of Miss Flora Griffin and comprised these numbers: Song, "I Have a Little Light," Fred Weber and Jessie Ross, Miss Eunice Eckert, pianist; beginners' song, "Spring Is Coming;" motion song, "Fly Little Birds," eight girls, Helen Brown, Fanny Gray, Emily Chamberlain, Elsie Hunter, Edith Hughes, Elizabeth Crookshank and Edith Williams; recitation, "Little Blossoms," Marshall Acken, Elizabeth Crookshank and Edith Hughes. The junior choir of mixed voices sang several carols. In conclusion the pastor, Rev. Frederick L. Greene, gave an Easter talk.

The floral decorations were very pretty, the platform being banked with palms, plants and cut flowers.

Trinity Reformed Church.

Easter day was happily celebrated at Trinity Reformed church. There were large congregations at all the services, as well as at the Sunday-school session in the afternoon. There were attractive decorations of lilies, palms and potted plants arranged abou t the pulpit platform which added interest. In the morning the quartet choir, under the direction of Arthur L. Titsworth, rendered a number of beautiful anthems which were the finest ever, especially a solo by Miss S. Etta Raybert, soprano. Rev. J. Y. Broek, the pastor, in his Easter sermon told the story of the resurrection in an entertaining way. His text was John 20:14. Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, of New Brunswick, who was present, was invited to make the prayer, in which he touched the hearts of many. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor-emeritus, was also present and pronounced the benediction.

The Sunday-school service in the evening attracted a large congregation, and Horace J. Martin, Sr., acted as precentor in the singing of the attractive Easter carols, while the quartet choir also assisted by rendering the offertory anthem. The greatest interest, however, was in the program by the children. The little folks acquitted themselves in a praiseworthy manner, showing careful training by Miss Mabel Wilson, junior superintendent; Mrs. J. M. Tier, primary superintendent, and Mrs. H. E. Gayle, beginners' superintendent, and their assistants. The program:

Song by school, "What Do the Lilies Say?" recitation, "How the Flowers Tell Easter," Marjorie Van-Emburgh and Helen Willett; recitation, "Mother's New Bonnett," Alfred Cadmus; recitation, "Earth's Awakening," Alma Allegar; recitation, "The Touch of Jesus," Dorothy Seader; exercise, "He Loved Us Best," Gemimi Harrison, Willetta Ord and Helen Foster; exercise, "Jesus Lives," Albert Baker, Donald Willett, George Fruehoff, Gertrude Rittenhouse, Gladys Bye, Alva Hansen; recitation, "Resurrection," Marjorie Dufford; song by school, "Happy Days;" solo, "The Lily Song," Dorothy Ross and Carmen Trembath. Edna Schleif, of the beginners' department, extended the greetings and the following represented Easter flowers: Dorothy Giles, Viola Pawson, Evelyn Krymer, Caroline Bell, Doris Bittenbender and Ruth Gulick, all of the beginners' department. Margaret Macintyre gave her first recitation entitled "The Little Piece."

Song, "Message of Easter," junior department; exercise, "The Chosen Day," Edna Smith, Esther Kellogg, Adele Freeman, Phebe Herrmann, Eleanor Doner; song, "Easter Bells," junior department; trio, "Risen," Adele Freeman, Ruth Freeman, Mildred Clark; exercise, "Messages," Charles Todd, Russell Sears, Howard Willett, Harry Schleif, Arthur Laury, George Sheing, Millard Bach, Elmer Saums and Harold Gulick.

During an intermission, Rev. J. Y. Broek made a short address, telling an interesting story which interested both young and old. The quartet choir sang the offertory selection.

A feature of the music was an orchestra comprising E. D. Young and G. H. Bennett, cornet; W. Y. Bellerjeau, violin, and Miss Lillian A. Force, piano, which made the singing more spirited than ever. Miss Lucy Coriell played the piano for the primary department singing and Miss Harriett Randall presided at the piano for the singing by the junior department. The attractive decorations were in charge of a committee comprising Mrs. J. Beekman, chairman; Mrs. George W. Cole, Mrs. Edward J. Cooley, Mrs. Julius Williams and Mrs. L. B. VanCamp.

First Presbyterian Church.

The quartet choir of the First Presbyterian church, under the direction of Clifford A. Braider, organist, rendered fine Easter programs at both the morning and evening services, yesterday, assisted by Miss Edith Rubel, violinist. The anthems were unusually attractive and well sung; also the solo parts. The church was decorated with potted oflwers, lilies, palms, etc.

At 10 o'clock the Sunday-school enjoyed a special program of Easter carols, together with a short address by the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring. Rev. Dr. Gilbert Reid, a missionary to China, who is stopping in this city for a time, made a short address in the evening on "The Resurrection," which was listened to with much interest.

Calvary Baptist Church.

Rev. Dr. G. W. Bailey delivered an Easter sermon on the topic: "The Resurrection," at the morning service at the Calvary Baptist church, yesterday. The Sunday-school had a special service in the evening in charge of Mrs. George Miller. There were solos, duets, dialogues, recitations and selections by a choir with remarks by the pastor and the superintendent, Louis Brinkley.

The Willard Loyal Temperance Legion, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thomas, presented a special Easter program at the W. C. T. U., yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock before a large congregation. Miss Marie Karling, of Brooklyn, presided at the piano and Miss Rosalie Karling rendered a piano solo. Mrs. Henry Thomas opened the exercises with prayer. This program was given by the children.

Recitations, "Bunch of Easter Violets," Harriet Thomas; "Eastertide," Robert Dowe; exercise, "Jesus Lives" Harriet Thomas, Clara Moore, May Cooper, Dorothy Keiderling; song, "Spring is Here," junior department; song, "With Hearts Rejoicing;" recitation, "A Basket of Easter Eggs," Dudley Richardson; recitation, "Easter," Francis Grieves, Ida Richardson, Josephine Kiederling, Lucy Dress, Eleanor Francisco, Catherine Spring; recitation, "Little Gardeners," Nelson Grieves, Freddie Grieves, song, "Raindrops Falling;" recitations, "Glad it is Easter," Eleanor Francisco; "The Young Crusader," Howard Richardson; song, "Wake Up" boys and girls; recitations, "Do You Know," Francis Gueres, Ida Richardson; "The Robber," Lucy Dress; song, "Temperance," boys and girls; duet, Miss Minnie Thomas and Henry Thomas; recitation, "Spring Call" Eleanor Francisco Ellen Kiederling Violet Sutton Josephine Kiederling; recitations, "Easter Gifts," Grieves; "Easter Tidings," Dorothy Keiderling; songs, "Jesus is Risen Today;" "Welcome the Morning," five girls; recitation, "Take up the Cross," Grace Vail, Bella Godown, Hazel Godown, May Richardson and Lena Grieves.

Song, "Morn of Peace and Joy;" missionary exercise, "Tell the World," Ruth Compton, Ethel Brown, Ida Richardson; dialogue, "The Voice of Jesus," Grace Vail and May Richardson; song, "Golden Harps," with violin accompaniment, Miss Burnet; motion song by school, "Turn Our Glasses Upside Down."

Marconnier Chapel.

The Easter exercises at Marconnier chapel, South Plainfield, took place last evening and consisted of recitations and carols by the younger children. The proceedings were enlivened by a cornet solo by S. R. Brash, and piano solos by Miss Florence Frazee. Each pupil of the Sunday-school was presented with a basketful of candy eggs, the gift of Mrs. Charles Schwenck, wife of General Charles Schwenck, who because of the illness of her husband was unable to be present for the first time since the chapel was built. These children took part: Marie and Johanna Christensen, Anna and Velma VanCourt, Mary and Laura Lansdale, Flossie Randolph, Vernon Bayles, Arthur Holmes, Marie Maxwell, Gertrude Campbell, and others.

First M. E. Church.

The Sunday-school of the First M. E. church held its exercises in the afternoon, the program being in charge of Superintendent James R. Joy. The exercises were given for the most part by members of the primary and beginners' departments. The former were in charge of Mrs. Thomas MacDonald and gave these numbers: "A Child's Thought of Jesus," Janet Marchant; recitation, "The Choice," Howard Fisher; exercise, "He Loved Us Best," Margaret Evans, Hayward Webster, Gertrude Joy; recitation, "A Touch of Jesus," Thelma Dawson; recitation, "Pray and Give," Lois Beekman; chorus, "The Flowers, Call," primary choir, Thora Vail, Russell Huff, Janet Marchant, Arthur McVoy, Lois Beekman, Ralph Williamson, Margaret Dunavan, Elvira Davis, Carrie Creager, Mildred Dunn, Russell Lynn, Margaret Heideloff, Warren Moyer, Alvord Larrabee and Ellsworth Runyon

The beginners' department was in charge of Miss Edna French, Miss Mattie Humble and Mrs. Goodenough and gave the following: Recitation, Herbert Hooker; duet, Hazel McVoy and Clawson Lynn; recitation, Emily Goodenough; recitation, Jane Laird; recitation, Marion Carpenter; recitations, Phyllis Hooker, Daisy and LeRoy Pope.

Dr. S. J. Herben, of Chicago, made an address and before the close the older children were presented with carnations and the juniors with packages of seeds. An instrumental quartet assisted in the singing.

In the Borough Court.

The following cases were disposed of in the borough court this morning: James Long, of South Bound Brook, for running his auto on the wrong side of the road, fined $5; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vandevoort, disorderly conduct, fined $2 each; Benjamin Antoneri, disorderly conduct, fined $3; William Daley, d. and d., sentence suspended.

PLEA FOR CLOSING POSTOFFICE SUNDAYS

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, made a plea for Sunday closing at the postoffice at the morning service, yesterday, urging the people to give their support to the movement started by the Government. Dr. Herring spoke as follows:

"While our minds are centered on the great event that this day symbolizes, let us not forget that we are told to be "risen with Christ' in newness of life. Instead of living on the lower plane of selfishness, let us live on the higher plane of brotherly helpfulness.

"Let us think of the other fellow and give him a chance. The other fellow I would have you think of is the postman. He works hard for you all the week. Now give him his Sunday. Don't do anything that will make the government think they had better go back to the old system. Forget the mail, go to church, and let the postman go to church and you will feel more like doing the work of the coming week.'

FIRE IN CLOTHES CLOSET CAUSES CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE

A member of the family at the home of A. W. Kenworthy on Willow avenue, struck a match in a clothes closet early Saturday evening to locate something. A garment caught accidentally and a fire followed that caused several hundred dollars damage. A quantity of valuable clothing that could not be gotten out was destroyed.

The borough fire department responded to an alarm and made short work of the flames. The house was slightly damaged. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

Local Realty Deals.

Albert Lederer, the real estate broker, has completed several realty deals within the past few days, including the sale of William J. Tallamy's apartment houses on Arlington avenue to William Abbott, and the property at Arlington avenue and West Fourth street, owned by B. F. and L. V. Tallamy, to Thomas Cantor. He has also sold to William Tallamy the tract of land at Woodland and Putnam avenues, 200 x225, formerly owned by the Thomas Minford estate.

Mary Jeannett Dickson.

Mary Jeannett Dickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dickson, of Westfield, died yesterday at the parents' residence. She was in her sixth year. The funeral will be held at her late home on Radley road, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock and burial will be in Hillside. The family resided on Fairview avenue, the borough, and also on Duer street.

PITCHER ADDIE JOSS OF CLEVELAND DEAD.

Toledo, O., April 17.—Adrian C. Joss, better known in the baseball world as "Addie," well known pitcher of the Cleveland American League baseball team, died at his hame here at 1:45 o'clock Friday morning. Death was due to tubercular meningitis, from which he had been a sufferer since last Sunday. Joss was thirty-one years old. He is survived by a widow and two children. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine.

The Cleveland American League team was here last Sunday, and at that time Joss made it known to Charles Somers, owner of the Cleveland club, that he was not feeling well. At that time it was thought that Joss' condition was not serious.

Joss joined the Cleveland American League club in 1902, under the management of William R. Armour, present owner of the Toledo club. He became one of the premier pitchers of the country and had the honor of pitching a no-hit, no-run game against the Chicago White Sox in 1908, his opponent being E. Walsh.

To Keep Tabs On Drunkards.

Mayor Moy has issued an order to the police department requesting the patrolmen to observe intoxicated patrons of saloons and hotels as they emerge from the entrances of these places. Nothing is stated in the order that would indicate the mayor's purpose.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Johnson, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Marguerite Johnson, of New Brunswick, were the guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, of Sandford avenue, and A. L. Force, of Duer street.

DUTCH ARMS TREAT

Mr. and Mrs. David Splendidly Entertain Trinity Men's Association.

HARPIST AND IMPERSONATOR.

Large Audience Hugely Enjoys Superb Program—Miss S. Etta Raybert Sings Two Soprano Solos.

Mrs. Walter David, harpist, and Walter David, impersonator, have appeared in this city a number of times, and have given several entertainments at Trinity Reformed church, but their program of last night under the auspices of the Dutch Arms, men's association, of Trinity church, was perhaps the most enjoyable of all. These artists are great favorites with the people of Trinity church, and they were greeted by an unusually large audience.

Both Mr. and Mrs. David were very generous giving encore after encore, following their regular sections, and all of them, with one or two exceptions, were new to the audience and called forth hearty applause. Mrs. David, who is an artist of high degree, gave renditions of harp music seldom heard in this city. All her numbers were of the sort that appealed to those present, and her encores were of the popular order. Her imitation of a music box was unusually fine.

Twice she accompanied Mr. David in his selections, setting the number to music, which added greatly to the pleasure of their rendition. The program was so uniformly good that it would be difficult to make any comparisons. The audience was given a surprise, when Frederick S. Cutter, who had the entertainment in charge announced that Miss S. Etta Raybert, soprano, would sing "The Rosary," and "Annie Laurie," with harp accompaniment. She was received with great applause and was obliged to respond to an encore, giving that favorite selection, "In the Gloaming." She sang in perfect voice and with much effect.

Mr. David's work was, as usual, delightful. He has natural talent as a story-teller, while in his impersonations he convulsed the audience with laughter. Perhaps, his best numbers were the first, "The Little Girl," a play in one-act by Richard Harding Davis, and a sermon, "Old Mother Hubbard," which was exceedingly funny. The program closed with one of Riley's selections, "O, Heart of Mine," with harp acompaniment.

Mr. David in conclusion referred to the warm personal friendship existing between Plainfield friends and the delight he always felt in being with a Plainfield audience; he also took occasion to remark that it was the anniversary of his wedding and he thanked the audience for the hearty reception and hoped that he would again have an opportunity of meeting those present. The program:

"Autumn," Thomas; "Mazurka," Verdalle, Mrs. Walter David; recital, "The Littlest Girl," a play in one act, Richard Harding Davis, "A Down the River," with harp accompaniment, Walter David; song, "The Rosary," "Annie Laurie," "In the Gloaming," Miss S. Etta Raybert; "Menuett," Beethoven; "Marguerite at the Spinning Wheel," Zabel; "Music Box," Mrs. Walter David; recital, "The Boarding House Keeper," Fisk; "A Waterlogged Town," F. Hopkinson Smith; "The Hero of Waterloo," anon; "At the Golden Gate," and "Harelipped Hiram," Walter David; "The Last Rose of Summer," "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms," Handel's "Largo," Mrs. Walter David; sermon, "Old Mother Hubbard," and "O Heart of Mine," Riley, Walter David with harp accompaniment by Mrs. David.

MARIA DENANGO SURPRISES HER UNCLE.

John Denango's niece arrived in this city last night, but he didn't know she was coming. Her name is Maria and she is pretty. When the conductor assisted her to alight at the North avenue station she was unable to make known her destination because she cannot speak English, but a tag attached to the bodice of her dress plainly told the story.

Mr. Denango, who lives in the east end, was sent for by the police and after considerable talk was satisfied that the girl was his niece and took her home. She came from Italy alone.

GLEE CLUB CONCERT PROVED ENJOYABLE

A small but delighted audience heard the Ursinus College Glee Club and quartet at Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening. Especially fine were the quartet numbers sung by Detwiler, Wisner, Kerschner and Robinson. These young fellows know how to sing and the entire club provides a splendid entertainment.

The hit of the evening was made in the second part of the program, when Messrs. Detwiler, Wismer and Quay gave an imitation of grand opera as viewed by the average college man. The imitation was a scream from beginning to end. The entire club joined in the choruses.

The director, J. M. Jolls and Manager, Charles H. Behney, have promised to bring the club to this city again next year.

The program consisted of piano and violin solos, glees and readings. Harry A. Sykes was the accompanist.

WAGON HITS TROLLEY DRIVER BADLY HURT

A. B. Ryno, aged 55 years, of Dunellen, was severely injured and the horse he was driving which belonged to J. G. Burdick, sash and blind manufacturer, of West Fourth street, was considerably bruised and cut, as the result of a collision between the wagon and a main line trolley car on West Front street, near Rock avenue, last night. Mr. Ryno was taken to his home, Dr. T. H. Platt, of Dunellen, was summoned, and he was obliged to take several stitches to close a scalp wound. It is believed that Mr. Ryno is injured internally.

At the time of the acident Mr. Ryno was on his way to Dunellen with a load of window sashes and plate glass doors. The roadway is being opened up at the point of the accident where new rails are being laid. Mr. Ryno saw the approaching car and drove from the right to the left side of the road to let it pass. Before the wagon cleared the tracks, the car hit the rear wheels, wrecking that part of the wagon and allowing it to drop. The horse was also dragged a considerable distance and Mr. Ryno was cut by the broken glass; also suffered shock from the impact. The responsibility for the accident has not been determined.

MOOSE BALL MEETS WITH GREAT SUCCESS

One of the largest crowds that has been in Saengerbund Hall this season was noted last night when Plainfield Lodge, No. 310, Loyal Order of Moose, conducted its first grand annual ball. Fully 500 people were on the floor, during the early part of the evening, while scores of visitors thronged the balconies.

The decorations were really superb. The stage was a mass of palms and plants in which were placed statuette electroliers and colored bulbs. Electric lights and Moose insignia were suspended at vantage points all about the hall. The decorations were arranged by John Shroop and the electric effects by A. Stryker.

Suhr's Imperial orchestra furnished a program of twenty eight numbers. James T. McCarthy was in charge of the floor and he had as assistants Fred Wilbur, George Egel and Charles Paglinca.

The committee of arrangements was composed of John J. Conway, chairman; Charles Paglinça, assistant chairman; Lewis Feiring, secretary; Charles L. Holstein. There was also a reception committee composed of J. T. Carroll, chairman; A. Stryker, Michael Griffin, F. Erbeck, A. Robinson, G. York, J. McCormack, Frank Connors and William Messler.

Beside the local people in attendance there were delegations from Elizabeth, Newark, New Brunswick and other places.

Talks on Tariff.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield Democratic Club, beginning tomorrow night, Albert H. Atterbury, will deliver a series of addresses on "Does a Protective Tariff Raise Wages." The talk will be given on successive Wednesday nights at Y. M. C. A. Hall. Open discussion will follow each speech. The meetings open at 8:15 o'clock promptly.

Congregational Men's Club.

This evening at 7:45 o'clock Alfred Douglas Flinn, department engineer of the New York Board of Water Supply, will illustrate with stereopticon views the $300,000,000 Catskill water supply undertaking. All men are welcome.

GRIEG AND SINDING

Norwegian Composers Discussed at Monday Afternoon Club Meeting.

MISS COREY READS A PAPER.

Her Remarks Illustrated on Piano and Violin—The Large Audience Delighted With the Program.

The Monday Afternoon Club congratulated itself yesterday afternoon on the delightful program presented at the Hartridge auditorium for the entertainment of the members and their guests. The paper of the day on "Grieg and Sinding" was given by Miss Susan Corey and was illustrated by Miss Jeanie R. May, of New York, Mrs. Edward Caldwell Moore, of Boston, pianists, and Miss Mary Henry, of New York, violinist.

Miss Corey's paper was a comprehensive analysis and comparison of the Norwegian composers, Grieg and Sinding, the former devoted to lyric and the latter to epic composition. The writer's enthusiasm and comprehension in the treatment of her subject made a fitting prelude to the rare performance of the artists who illustrated the contrasting works of the Norwegian composers. Miss May, who is musical instructor at the Plainfield Seminary on West Seventh street, and Mrs. Moore were brilliant performers on the piano and Miss Henry showed herself skilful in the witcheries of the violin. To the delight of the large audience the following program was rendered:

(a), Prelude, Sinding; (b), Nocturne, Grieg, Miss Jeanie May; (a), The Princess; (b), Solvejg5c Song; (c), Ich liebe dich, Grieg; (d), Penselije; (e), Creeds; (f), No Thoughts That Deceive, Sinding; songs arranged for violin—Miss Mary Henry; (a), Two Humoresken; (b), Norwegian Bridal Procession Passing By, Grieg—Mrs. Edward Caldwell Moore; Alte Weise, Sinding—Miss Mary Henry; (a), Papillon; (b), Dance Caprice; (c), Berceuse, Grieg; (d), Fruhlingerauschen, Sinding—Mrs. Edward Caldwell Moore; Sonata in F Major for violin and piano, Opus 8, allegretto and finale, Grieg—Miss Henry and Miss May.

'GREAT JOHN GANTON' AT THEATRE TONIGHT

The two large audiences which attended the performances at the Plainfield theatre yesterday afternoon and evening given by the Myrkle-Harder Company, were satisfied that they had witnessed two productions of a high order by first-class actors. The members of the company were compelled to respond to many curtain calls last night. Miss Emma Myrkle made a distinctly favorable impression as the heroine in "His Last Dollar."

The company has made a good impression and is above the average of stock companies.

The first production of "The Great John Ganton" outside of New York city and Chicago will be given by this company at the Plainfield theatre tonight.

By special arrangements with the Shuberts and at a large royalty, Mr Harder prides himself on his success in being able to give the theatregoers of this city this, the most powerful of all modern dramatic successes. "The Great John Canton," a play that every newspaper critic gave columns to as an artistic success. The play in construction is absolutely different from all others and its heart-interest is strictly human and shows a worldly business man, who in his great strength and will power absorbs all his vitality to accumulate wealth. Unfortunately the only good he sees in life is through his success in his business. Through circumstances he is slowly but firmly convinced by a Miss May Keating whose father, Jim Keating, "The Great John Canton," was crushed in a business deal and later committed suicide.

Throughout the play runs a thread which demonstrates how the labor unions of the Chicago stock yards, where the play is enacted, are defrauded by their treacherous leaders and agitators whose greed for bribes overshadows their devotion to the welfare of their unions. The production will be staged with a wealth of scenic environments and electrical effects and the smallest detail has not been overlooked. There will be no advance in prices for this big production.

MAYOR'S EXPERIENCE WITH A COUNCILMAN

Another chapter has been added to the story of the strained relation between the Mayor and the Common Council, Mayor Moy and Councilman Herbert Buxton figuring in an exciting episode in the mayor's law office last night. The climax came when, it is asserted, Mayor Moy asked Mr. Buxton to leave his office. The incident was the chief topic of gossip on the streets this morning.

Mayor Moy says that Mr. Buxton, who is chairman of the Councilmanic finance committee, came to his office and asked permission to see the Meeker claim bill against the city, which had been passed over Mayor Moy's veto by the city fathers. Howard Williams was engaged in conversation with his honor, the latter says when he noticed Mr. Buxton apparently about to write something on the bill.

Cutting the conversation short, Mayor Moy says he made a demand for the return of the paper and when it was not promptly returned, he turned to Mr. Williams. "Mr. Williams," the Mayor is alleged to have said, "I appoint you a special officer and I order you to get that paper from Mr. Buxton." The paper was handed to Mr. Williams.

When Mr. Buxton was asked about the matter today he laughed but declined to make any comment for publication.

NEIGHBORS 'SCRAP'; HEARING POSTPONED

Counselor Morris Gordon, of Elizabeth, who came to this city this morning prepared to defend Harry Berlowitz, of East Third street, who with Frank Marks, a colored man, is accused of breach of the peace and disorderly conduct, went away disappointed when he learned that Judge William G. DeMeza had postponed the hearing of the case until Thursday morning.

Berlowitz and Marks had an altercation in the former's back yard last Thursday morning and it is alleged that Marks threw a stone at Berlowitz, but his aim was bad. Mrs. Berlowitz, who was watching the dispute from a back door, was struck in the face by the missile and Marks was arranged before the City Magistrate next day. Both men were released on their own recognizance.

JOHN KERNOCHAN DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

John Kernochan, aged 71 years, father of Mrs. N. W. Currie, of Madison avenue, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, this morning, following a long illness from an incurable disease. He had been under treatment at the hospital since the forepart of April.

Mr. Kernochan resided at Searsville, N. Y., and was closely connected with the old Knickerbocker family of his own name, prominent in the Hudson River Valley section of New York State. He was of Scotch descent, and several ancestors fought in the Revolutionary War. Beside Mrs. Currie, he is survived by another daughter. He was a brother to Mrs. Alexander A. McWilliams and an uncle to Dr. J. Forsythe McWilliams, both of Somerville.

WALTER W. WILSON SUED FOR A DIVORCE

Walter W. Wilson is being sued for an absolute divorce by his wife, who was Edna Louise Craven. The proceedings are being held before Nelson Runyon, Special Master in Chancery. Robert Newton Crane is Counsel for the petitioner.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were married in November 1908, and have a daughter, Wilma. Mrs. Wilson alleges misconduct on the part of her husband and names three alleged specific instances in which she describes women whose names she does not know. The hearing began yesterday.

Van Wyck Brooks Engaged.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Van Wyck Brooks, son of Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, of East Seventh street, and Miss Eleanor Stimson, daughter of Mrs. John Ward Stimson, formerly of this city but now of Berkeley, California. Mr. Brooks is a graduate of Harvard, '08, and is the author of several books. He is now connected with the University of California at Berkeley. The marriage will take place shortly.

NOVEL MONOPLANE

Howard Colby a Backer of Umbrella Type Steam Power Flyer.

SAFETY PRINCIPAL FEATURE.

Great Things are Predicted for Air-Machine Now Being Experimented With in Texas.

Howard A. Colby, of Evergreen avenue, brother of former State Senator Everett Colby, returned today from San Antonio, Texas, where he has been for the past few months interesting himself in an airship which promises to be a great success, especially for commercial use. The device is a monoplane of the umbrella type, driven by engine power, and Mr. Colby predicts great things for the ship which is the invention of William S. Romme, of New York city.

Harold McCormack, of Chicago, and Mr. Colby are interested together in the proposition and have provided Mr. Romme with means for promoting the success of his invention. Mr. Colby said that he had just received word from Mr. Romme that in a trial trip on Friday, the monoplane ran into a fence and was damaged and it would take some time to fix the machine.

Contrary to published reports, Mr. Colby said that the machine had not yet left the ground and no flights had been made. He appeared to be sanguine as to the final results and said that the inventor had sacrificed speed and everything else for safety. If anything should happen while in the air, the operator could just shut off his power and gradually come down without the slightest fear of being injured or killed.

While in Texas Mr. Colby had an exceptional opportunity to see the United States Army and representatives from other nations, and he declared it to be the most wonderful sight he had ever witnessed.

'BUFFALO' JONES WILL GIVE A LECTURE HERE

"Buffalo" Jones with a remarkable series of movine pictures showing the wild animals of Africa in action, will appear at the High School auditorium, Tuesday night, April 25, at 8:15, under the auspices of the Woman's Exchange. What Roosevelt and his party did with rifle, another has done with lasso and camera. "Buffalo" Jones, trained as a cattle puncher on the plains of the west, official custodian of the great park of the Yellowstone Valley, turned his attention to Africa shortly after Col. Roosevelt. The one went for sport, the other went to bring specimens of African life animated with the spirit of the jungle. He had his sport, but without the wanton shedding of blood.

With his lasso, "Buffalo" Jones captured hundreds of animals, among them a wild boar, a giraffe and a full grown lioness. While he subdued the prey, his followers worked with the camera. Never since the invention of fire-arms have hunter and hunted met on such equal terms, but his fame is not built on a single campaign in Africa.

Years ago, this man, Charles J. Jones, saw the American bison disappearing from the face of the earth. The sight touched him. It appealed to his patriotic nature because in the extinction of the bison he saw the passing of a great American symbol.

The government was approached and urged by Col. Jones and the public was educated and at last awakened. Great National preserves were finally created and the American bison was saved to posterity. Charles J. Jones became "Buffalo" Jones.

Col. Jones has spoken at many clubs and has also lectured under the auspices of the New York Woman's Exchange. Tickets for the lecture may be secured at Armstrong's drug store.

Will Give a Tea.

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. has issued invitations to a tea to be held at the home of Mrs. George L. Babcock, 209 West Eighth street, Friday afternoon, April 28, from 3 to 6 o'clock. There will also be a sale of useful articles and home made cake and candy. There will be a musical program at 4 o'clock. A silver offering will be received at the door.

Wed in Elizabeth Tonight.

William Flanders, of North Plainfield, will act as best man at the wedding of Harold R. Thompson and Miss Ethelwyn Wardell in Elizabeth at 7:30 o'clock this evening. Harry DeMeza will be one of the ushers.

SCHOOL GIRLS' CLUB EASTER EGG HUNT

Under the auspices of the School Girls' Club, recently formed under the direction of the Y. W. C. A., held an Easter egg hunt and rolling at the association building yesterday afternoon. There were forty-eight present, chiefly from the borough and city schools, and all had a fine time. First there was an egg hunt in the building, eggs being hidden in every room.

After the eggs were found, all adjourned to the gymnasium, where the young women enjoyed an exciting rolling contest. The winner received a suitable prize and a booby prize was also awarded. At the conclusion of the program all returned to the association rooms where refreshments were served. The affair was voted to be one of the most enjoyable yet held. Later on two short plays will be given under the same auspices and the direction of Miss Margaret McCutchen.

HART COACHES CAST FOR 'THE HENRIETTA'

Under the stage direction of Edgar Hart, the new coach secured by the Park Comedy Club rehearsals of "The Henrietta," will be resumed this week. The play will be given on May 18 and 19 as formerly announced and while the sudden and sad death of the former coach, Frederick C. Patterson was a severe blow to the entire cast, the members of the club will endeavor to bring to a successful finish the work begun by him.

Members of the Anti-Tuberculosis League, under whose auspices the play is to be given, are working hard in their endeavor to make every detail of the play fitting the time and scene of the Broadway production. Special attention will be given all the stage settings and arrangements have been made to import the scenery of two of the three act from New York.

Several new members of the comedy club will be seen in the cast of this play namely DeWitt P. Brokaw, Mrs. Charles Barlow, John Valiant, Miss Annie Johnston, Miss Isabel Ashwell and E. P. Sharrets. Those who have seen rehearsals of the play say that all these are well in line with their older associates in the club and some new "stars" will be made on the evenings of the performance.

TUBERCOLSIS LEAGUE PICKS VICE PRESIDENTS

Vice presidents and executive committeemen were selected at a meeting of the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis League last night at the headquarters in the Babcock building. The vice presidents chosen were United States Senator James E. Martine, President of the State Senate, E. R. Ackerman, Charles W. McCutchen, Alexander Gilbert, Mayor G. W. V. Moy, Mayor N. B. Smalley, Mrs. Dexter Tiffany and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson.

The executive committee selected consists of H. W. Marshall, Hugh F. Fox, Dr. F. E. DuBois, Dr. B. vanD. Hedges, Miss Phillips, Dr. Clara Krans, William S. Tyler, Mrs. Joost, Dr. Fred Hughes, J. Hervey Doane, Alexander Milne, William Newcorn, J. P. Murray, C. B. Tyler and Leighton Calkins. President Tyler presided at the meeting and among those who discussed the work were Father Bogan and Mr. Marshall. Arrangements were discussed for "Tuberculosis Sunday," April 30. Two physicians will speak at the Seventh-day Baptist church service on the preceding day. David E. Titsworth invited the league to address the men at the Potter Press Works on its work.

In addition to those already mentioned, present at last night's meeting were Mrs. H. M. Maxson, Rev. G. A. Warner, G. L. Babcock, Miss Holly, Mrs. Frank Jones, G. M. Holstein, J. W. Gavett and Allen Laing.

Delegates to Classis.

The elders of Trinity Reformed church consistory has elected A. L. Force as primaris delegate and F. E. Smith, secundus, to attend the Spring session of the Classis of Newark, at the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, Newark, tomorrow.

Announce Appointments.

Captain Harry B. Kitchell, of Co. K, has announced the following appointments to date from February 13: Quartermaster Sergeant George L. Apgar to be first sergeant; Sergeant J. Arthur Dow to be quartermaster sergeant.

PLAN FOR AUTO FIRE APPARATUS

Robert H. Woodhouse Outlines His Scheme to the Councilmanic Fire Committee.

On the invitation of the Councilmanic fire committee, Robert H. Woodhouse appeared before that body last night, and presented facts and figures for automobile apparatus for the fire department. Among those present were Mayor G. W. V. Moy, Chief T. O. Doane and Councilmen Duncan W. Taylor, C. C. Randolph, F. E. Mygatt and W. W. Wilson comprising the fire committee.

A summary of Mr. Woodhouse's plan follows:

"The first step would be the purchase of a combination chemical engine, with 600-gallon pump and body capacity for 1,500 feet 2½-inch hose, one 20 foot ladder, one 12 foot ladder, two 3-gallon extinguishers, hooks, axes, etc. Cost $8,500. The sale of engine house No. 1 and the removal of steamer and hose wagon to headquarters. This house should bring $10,000. Send supply wagon at headquarters to Netherwood house No. 4.

We now have at headquarters: One hook and ladder, one chemical engine, one steamer (to be held in reserve), one hose wagon No. 1 (to be held in reserve), one combination chemical automobile apparatus to be known as No. 5; one chief's automobile. Hose wagon No. 2 now being of no use, should be disposed of at best price obtainable which would probably be $100. Assuming that there is a team for this hose wagon, the same should be disposed of and would probably bring $350.

We will now take up the cost of these changes. We have spent $8,500 for a new automobile apparatus, No. 5. We have received for sale of engine house No. 1, $10,000; for hose wagon, $100; for team disposed of $350. This total, $10,450, which leaves us with a balance in our favor after purchasing new automobile No. 5, of $1,950, which will go toward helping to defray expenses on improvement No. 2.

We will arrange the alarm system as follows: No. 5 automobile apparatus at headquarters answers all alarms. This gives us in the districts covered by No. 3 and No. 4 companies, the following equipment to extinguish a fire: Three 35 gallon chemical tanks; 2,500 feet of 2½-inch hose; one 600 gallon auto driven pump; two 20 foot ladders; one 12 foot ladder; four three gallon extinguishers; also all necessary hooks, axes, door jimmies, etc.

"Assuming all men are on duty it will give seven men of the regular force at each fire. As the automobile apparatus will stand without hitching, all men are available to do the necessary work with the exception of one man to hold the team on hose wagon. As the alarms are answered from these districts at the present time, you have one combination chemical ,one hook and ladder, one hose wagon and one steamer. Four men of this force are required to stand by teams until relieved by bystanders. In the new arrangement you have 2,500 feet of hose as against 2,000. You have three chemical tanks as against two. One piece of your apparatus has arrived in one half the time at present consumed, and you have gained the service of three men. In the first instance you have all the ladders necessary and in the second you have more than are ever used in this district.

"Nos. 2 and 1 districts shall be combined and will be answered by headquarters. This will give an available force in the centre of the city as follows: No. 5 automobile apparatus, No. 1 chemical engine, No. 1 hook and ladder. This will give the following force, equal to the present one and leave a good reserve in headquarters for emergency: one 55 gallon chemical tank; one 120 gallon chemical engine; one 600 gallon pump; hook and ladder; 1,500 feet of hose; all necessary hooks, axes and tools.

"In reserve you have one 600 gallon steamer and one hose wagon with 1,000 feet of hose. This reserve is ready to answer a second alarm or can be sent to cover districts No. 3 and No. 4 should an alarm be turned in from those districts during a fire in districts one and two. Hook and ladder No. 1 and steamer No. 1 will also answer a second alarm from districts No. 3 and No. 4.

"The second step in the improvement will be the purchasing of a five-passenger automobile to be used by the chief. This will cost $1,200. Deducting this from our balance on hand we have still in reserve $550.

"We will now convert No. 3 and

WASH THAT ITCH AWAY.

It is said there are certain springs in Europe that give relief and cure to Eczema and other skin diseases. If you knew that by washing in these waters you could be relieved from that awful itch, wouldn't you make every effort to take a trip to Europe at once. Would you not be willing to spend your last cent to find the cure?

But you need not leave home for these distant springs. Relief is right here in your own home town.

A simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients as compounded only in D. D. D. Prescription will bring instant relief to that terrible burning itch, and leave the skin as smooth and healthy as that of a child.

Best possible wash for pimples and all skin impurities.

If you have not already tried it, get at least a 25 cent bottle today. We assure you of instant relief.

L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Easter was observed Sunday at All Saints church, Scotch Plains. At 9 o'clock there was holy communion and at 10:15, the pastor, Rev. Edward Gabler, preached on "The Resurrection." There was also special music. "I am the Resurrection and the Life," was the subject of the sermon by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, at the First Baptist church in the morning. At the close of the service ten candidates were baptized. At the Methodist church the congregation met for the first time its new pastor, Rev. C. E. Rorkey at the morning service. He is an able speaker and his sermon was much enjoyed. The floral display at each church was elaborate.

The B. V. S. Society of St. Mary's Catholic church, Stony Hill, held a successful euchre and dance last night in Excelsior Hall, the friends of the parish being out in force to enjoy the first of the after Lenten social events. Naylor's orchestra furnished the music for dancing, which was continued until the 1.30 trolley car left for Plainfield.

James Lindsley, who has been visiting his friend, Henry Demarest, of Front street, has returned to his home at Plainfield.

Miss Harriett M. Squiers is spending her Easter vacation with her sister, Miss Francis Squiers, at Albany, N. Y.

Arm Chairs, Arm Rockers, Side Chairs, Small Rockers, Reclining Chairs, Swings, Tables, Settees, Couches, Tabourettes, Costumers, Steamer Chairs, Stools, Cots.

ROCKERS—Strongly built chairs; flat, comfortable, broad arms; flat slats in the back; finished in natural color, also green, a very popular style that we sell hundreds of; priced low at $2.50; extra special Tuesday at.....$1.75

ARM CHAIRS—Maple frame; natural finish shellac and green; closely woven seat; all joint work is strongly put together; a mighty comfortable chair and a good one at our low price, which is only $2

COMFORT CHAIRS—All the woodwork is smoothly machined and all corners rounded; entire frame is finished with two coats of good varnish; cloth seat is of heavy canvas attached at top and bottom by means of a slot and spline instead of being simply tacked; making it much stronger and less liable to tear loose; no tacks to tear clothing; price $1.25

COMFORT SWING CHAIRS—The most popular type for Summer use. They are strongly built with black japanned metal frame; the chair seat is of blue and white heavy duck; they can be adjusted to any position, so that you can sit up straight, recline or lie flat; the chair answering to your every desire, shaping itself to the slightest pressure of the body; never sold for less than $4.25; extra special Tuesday $3.75

LARGE ARM CHAIRS—Made of round and flat reeds, substantially interwoven; has a broad comfortable arm and an easy sitting seat and back; on the side is a pocket used for books or magazines; two finishes, fumed oak and green; regular price $10.50; special for Tuesday and Wednesday..$9

These are appropriate for furnishing Cottages and Bungalows in City, Country, Mountain or Shore, Golf and Field Clubs, Yachts, Motor Boats, Boats, Boat Houses, Sanitariums, Mountain Lodges, and all are suitable for Verandas, Lawns or inside furnishing as well.

Finishes include—Pompeian Green, Verdi Antique, Nature Green, Baronial Brown, Enameled, Natural and Stained Colors. These are some of the pieces we specialize.

PORCH ROCKERS—A style of which we have sold many carloads. These are made of hard maple; the seats are of closely woven reeds and they are finished in natural color and green; our low price is 75c

PORCH TABLES—Good for either inside use or veranda; round top with shelf underneath; trned legs; woven reed is used on the top and shelf; in three finishes, shellac, green and fumed oak; made in two sizes, one having a 22-inch top; regular price of 22-inch top, $3.00; Tuesday and Wednesday price $2.50

Regular price of 30-inch top, $5.25; Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday price.....$4.50

ANDREW JACKSON ROCKERS—Made of genuine rustic hickory; hewn from the forest with the natural color and the beauty of the bark preserved; bent into shapely angles and graceful curves; unadorned by paint or varnish; has that finish which nature alone can give, and, of course, is the strongest of our native woods.; Comfortable back and seat woven of thin strips of hickory. Our regular price for this season will be $3.75; for the days Tuesday and Wednesday, we will sell it at only $3

REED ROCKERS—High-class reed rockers; has low and yet comfortable back and a roll extending down the front; made of round reed; nicely woven; all framework is maple; all parts neatly shellacked, natural finish; may also be had in fumed oak; regular price $15, special price for Tuesday and Wednesday $10

Rube Waddell has won two games for Minneapolis in five days.

Bugs Raymond amused the fans at Wiedenmayer's Park Sunday by batting out fungoes. Raymond sent the ball over the left field on several occasions and had the Giants' fielders chasing the horsehide in practice.

Christopher Kenny, of the Nagle Athletic Club, of New York, while playing ball at the Harlem River Park Sunday saw two children fall off a raft into the river just as he banged out a safe drive. Kenny ran by first, jumped over the fence and dove into the river and rescued the two children,a boy of six years and a girl of four.

King Brockett, of the Yankees, who was on the mound Sunday, held the Jersey City team to three bingles. The King also had a pair of strikeouts to his credit.

Manager William J. Clark, of the Albany New York State League team, resigned Sunday. Clark is said to have a contract to coach the Princeton University team for three years.

Charles Somers, owner of the Cleveland club, has decided to have a "Joss Day" in May in memory of Pitcher Addie Joss, who died last week. The entire receipts will be turned over to the family of the player.

Johnson put up a great game in the field for the Yankees Sunday. While he failed to make a hit he succeeded in stealing four bases and accepted eight chances in the field.

Big Ed Walsh, of the Chicago White Sox, twirled against the St. Louis Browns Sunday. While he was touched up for seven hits he was invincible with men on the path. The spitball curveologist fanned eight of the Browns during the nine stanzas.

Merkle set a mark for sluggers Sunday when he whaled the ball to the left field fence for a home run.

GOLF.

The Upper Montclair Country Club has arranged its season schedule to begin on May 6 and continue until Thanksgiving Day. Eight Class A and B competitions will be run off, and in addition to the usual prizes points will be awarded to the contestants in each event, as follows: First 8 points; second, 5 points; third, 3 points; fourth, 2 points, and fifth, 1 point. At the end of the season the players in each class having scored the greatest number of points will be awarded medals presented by the golf committee.

In view of the increased agitation in favor of more public links in this country, a few facts regarding the progress made throughout Great Britain in this direction will be of interest. The following town Councils have either provided or taken over golf courses:

London County Council, Troon and Bournemouth, two courses each; Brighton and Nottingham, one each; Edinburgh, ten, and Glasgow, three. The cost of laying out has been as follows: Bournemouth, $22,000; Brighton, $5,000; Glasgow, $122 per green, and Troon, $10,500. The cost of maintenance is stated as being: Bournemouth, $3,700 and $3,728; London County Council, $428 and $1,095; Glasgow, $2,600, $1,680 and $735, and Nottingham, $2,433, while Troon averages $1,480 per course.

The financial results are given as follows: Bournemouth—Income, $5,412; expenditure, $14,429. Glasgow—Income, $5,548; expenditure, $4,477. Troon—Income; $4,594; expenditure, $4,477. Statistics from Brighton are not given, but merely reported "satisfactory."

THE DAILY PRESS.
Plainfield, N. J., April 18, 1911.

PLAN AUTO APPARATUS

No. 4 combination chemicals into automobile apparatus. This can be accomplished by mounting the present bodies on automobile chassis. This will cost about $5,000 each, and will increase their efficiency about 100 per cent. owing to the time saved in answering an alarm. By mounting this apparatus this way a saving of about $2,000 would result over the price for new apparatus of equal efficiency. We will dispose of the four horses and they should bring about $200 each or a total of $800.

"The difference in cost of maintaining this apparatus as now rebuilt over the cost of maintaining the teams will be annually $1,330. These figures are based on the experience of the Passaic fire department, which shows the annual cost of upkeep to be about $55 per machine, and the cost of keeping two teams per year as based on Plainfield's experience is $1,440.

"We now have the following summing up: The new apparatus costs us $10,000; cash on hand, $550; received from sale of horses, $800; annual saving in upkeep, $1,330. This total in receipts, $2,680, which deducted from the $10,000 expended, leaves us in debt $7,320.

"We will now purchase another apparatus similar to No. 5 automobile combination. The steamer shall be disposed of together with chemical engine, No. 1 hose and the six horses used to draw them. We will call the new apparatus No. 7. This has cost us, assuming the price to remain the same as the first $8,500. We have realized from the sale of old apparatus and horses, probably the following: Six horses at $200 each, $1,200; steamer, $500; No. 1 hose wagon, $100; No. 1 chemical engine, $400; difference in cost of upkeep for one year, $2,038. The total reecipts will therefore be $4,238.

"Assuming that this improvement took place a year after step No. 3, there should be added to the above amount the saving in the cost of the maintenance of teams formerly used on apparatus No. 3 and No. 4. This would add to receipts $1,330. We therefore have $5,568. We have a debit balance left from Step No. 3 of $7,320; we have expended on step No. 4, $8,500; which makes our total indebtedness $15,820. From this we will deduct our receipts which will still leave us in debt to the sum of $10,252.

"We will convert truck No. 1 into an automobile apparatus by removing the front wheels and placing a chassis in their place similar to those now being used in the New York City fire department. This will cost about $6,000. We will sell the team for about $400. We have therefore expended the sum of $5,600 for this improvement. We will add this to our indebtedness and we have $15,852. But we must deduct from this amount the former cost of maintaining the teams on the old apparatus for the period of one year. This amounts to $4,088. We also have two supply wagons which we have no use for, and these should bring $150. There are also three old horses which have not been accounted for. These could bring, if sold now, $300. Their feed for one year would amount to $1,080. Summing this up we have: Sum saved by doing away with horses, $4,088; sale of supply wagons, $150; sale of old horses, $300; saving in keep of old horses, $1,080; which totals, $5,618.

"This deducted from the total indebtedness leaves $10,234 to be raised by taxation, and this taxation covering a period of four years. In other words an annual expenditure of $2,558.

"You will observe that I have not included the chief's present automobile among the assets. This is done for two reasons, the first being that it would not bring over $150 if sold, the second that the chief of police, being without an auto, I would suggest giving it to him.

"We will now consider the department analitically. We have added two new pieces of apparatus costing $9,700. This amount will have to be expended whether you follow my scheme or not. Therefore your department has been brought up to a very high standard of efficiency by the expenditure of only $534 more than you will have to spend anyway, and in addition all of the apparatus is self propelled instead of only part, as would be the case were some other program followed."

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In last night's issue you published a rather plaintive letter from one Philip Mechanik, who claimed that his arrest and prosecution in the city court last week was unjust, and in this connection we wish to state that Mr. Mechanik maintained what amounted to a public nuisance in the form of an automobile which he allowed to stand in front of his store day and night with large signs on either side and a motorcycle standing on a platform erected over the seat of the car. This advertising scheme was also a menace to public safety, many horses being frightened by it. Had the police not taken the initiative in this case, we would have made formal complaint against Mechanik. We were represented at the proceedings in the city court, and there was nothing unjust about the disposition made of the case by Judge DeMeza. Mechanik is at present maintaining a nuisance by storing motorcycles on the sidewalk, from which quantities of oil flows over the pavement, to be traced for a considerable distance on either side of his store by those who are obliged to walk through it.

Yours truly,
K. M. DALY & CO.

Mr. and Mrs. Miles Wilson, of West Fourth street, are the parents of a ten pounds boy born to them on last Thursday.

Carl Williams.

Carl Williams, aged 45 years, a native of Poland, died yesterday afternoon at his home on Grove street, following a short illness with pneumonia. He had been a resident of this city for a long time and for the past fifteen years was employed as engineer at Smalley Brothers' stone quarry. He was a steady and faithful workman. He is survived by a wife and several children. The funeral will be held at St. Joseph's church, Thursday morning, and the burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

BURGLARS GET FUNDS AT HOME OF CHARLES IRBY.

A burglary which baffles the police department occurred last night between 9:30 and 11 o'clock. Chas. Irby, colored, of 601 East Third street, was the victim and Detective Sergeant John Flynn is investigating.

Irby says that funds of the church of which he is treasurer, amounting to $100 were taken besides money belonging to the colored lodge of Odd Fellows, between $18 and $25 is also missing. Two revolvers that were in the strong box in his room and two masonic books cannot be found.

Irby was attending a lodge meeting when the burglary took place and his wife and four children did not hear the intruder.

CAMP BOWSER'S NINE WALLOPS CITY HIGH

Camp Bowser's baseball team took the local High School team into camp yesterday afternoon by a score of 11 to 6. It has been customary for the Bowser boys to win their first game here rather easily, but it was not such a cinch as the score would indicate. P. H. S. lacked a good twirler and Grisley and VanDeventer had all they could do to hold the visitors to a low score.

The Bowser boys took the lead in the opening inning and were never headed. They lined up thus:

High School—Grisley, Nash Mills, Hanrahan, Clarke, Ricketts, VanDeventer, Good, Runyon, Barone and Carty.

Camp Bowser—Walker, Glenny, Dumont, W. Schoonmaker, Gray, R. Schoonmaker, Daniels, Overton and Coyle.

Score by innings:

	R.	H.	E.

C. Bowser	2 0 0 0 5 3 0 0 1	11	10 5

Somerville will be the opponents of the local boys tomorrow afternoon on Crescent Oval. These teams always provide a stirring contest and it is believed tomorrow's game will be no exception to the rule.

MISS HANNAH CROCKER PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY.

Miss Hannah Crocker, who, for the past thirty-five years, has made her home with Dr. Sarah D. Keeney, of West Fourth street, died yesterday from a complication of diseases. She was born at Haverhill, N. H. Both of her parents were school teachers, dying when she was nine years of age. She then made her home with an uncle until 1857 when she moved to Sullivan, Ill., where she became a teacher.

Miss Crocker also lived at Madison, Wis., until after the Civil War and then went to live with an uncle at Oil City, Pa. While preparing for the profession of a trained nurse in New York, she met Dr. Keeney and the two became fast friends. They removed to this city 1872. The funeral services will be held at the home of Dr. Keeney, 126 West Fourth street, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Announce Engagement.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Rudolph Bleyer, formerly of this city, but now of Germany, and Miss Anna Eckstein, also of Germany. The wedding will take place in June. Mr. Bleyer is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Boehm, of the borough and formerly worked in this city.

Hope Minstrels Tonight.

The opening performance of the Hope minstrel troupe will be given at the chapel tonight. The curtain is scheduled to rise at 8:15. Other preformances are to be given tomorrow and Friday nights.

EASTER DANCE HELD BY THE PARK CLUB

The Easter dance was given at the Park Club, last night, and was one of the most successful in the history of the club. The clubhouse was attractively decorated with potted plants, palms, and other flowers of the Easter season. Mueller, of Brooklyn, furnished the music. There were about 200 members of the club and their friends persent.

The patronesses for the affair were Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. J. L. Watson, Mrs. George T. Rogers, Mrs. A. W. Kleinecke and Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen. At midnight refreshments were served.

MISS RAE RECOVERS DIAMONDS AND JEWELS.

That Mrs. Marion D. Rae is not the loser of $1,000 worth of diamonds and other jewelry is due to the honesty of a maid in the employ of one of Atlantic City's big hotels. Mrs. Rae spent Easter at the resort and when she returned to her home on Berkely avenue yesterday discovered that her jewelry was missing from her trunk.

A telegram to the hotel proprietor was quickly answered by the statement that the jewels had been found by the maid and turned over to the hotel clerk. The jewelry has since been returned to Mrs. Rae.

HOME BUILDING LOAN HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING.

The Home Building and Loan Association held the annual meeting last night and elected the following officers: President, George H. Batchelor; vice-president, George E. Stillman; secretary, Arthur E. Crone; treasurer, William F. Arnold; attorney, John H. Van Winkle; auditor, two years, Asa F. Randolph; directors, three years, William H. Sampson, William A. Craig, George L. Eager and Ira N. West.

A new series, the 167th, was opened and several loans were passed upon. The reports presented showed a very satisfactory condition of affairs.

Announce Summer Schedule.

Following the annual custom a number of Plainfield merchants have announced that during July and August they will close their places of business on Saturday afternoon and evening during July and August, thereby giving their employes that time off for recreation. The merchants who have agreed to do this include A. M. Griffin, Powlison and Jones, the Gayle Hardware Co., S. C. Peck and Joseph W. Gavett.

Charles Varden, aged about 50 years, of 1424 West Front street, fell at Seventh street and Monroe avenue, last night, receiving contused wounds of the face. The police were notified and the ambulance was summoned to remove the man to the hospital. Today he was reported as improving.

RECEIVES WORD OF ONLY BROTHER'S DEATH.

Charles M. Raybert, of East Second street, received word yesterday of the death of his only brother, George Raybert, of San Francisco. He passed away in the soldier's home at that place on April 8, and burial was made there. He is survived by one daughter, who lives in San Francisco and a son in Newark. Charles Raybert the seventh son of the family is the sole survivor.

The Raybert family resided at Brookdale, above Bloomfield, and at the outbreak of the Civil war, five of the boys enlisted. George and one other brother joined in the First N. J., brigade and served in the Army of the Potomac, two others were in the engineering corps at Morris Island, S. C., while the fifth was in the navy, under Farragut. All served with distinction and returned home at the close of their enlistment. One of the boys died soon after, from illness contracted at Morris Island. Charles Raybert was not in the war because of his youth.

Red Stars Won.

The Red Stars defeated the Washington street Stars on the Richmond street grounds, this morning by a score of 7 to 6, ten innings. Johnson and Force formed the battery for the winning team and O'Loughlin and Shirley for the defeated nine.

Baptized at Home.

Julia Davis Huenke, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Huenke, of 1085 Arlington avenue, was baptized Easter Sunday at her home, by Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church.

Sidewalk Improvements.

A fine concrete walk is to be laid on the Park avenue side of the hotel property, now undergoing extensive alterations. The walk will extend from the building to the curb line.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter David, who gave such a fine entertainment at Trinity Reformed church, last evening under the auspices of the Dutch Arms, were entertained while in town by Mr. and Mrs. F. Cutter, of Sandford avenue.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The fifty-seventh anniversary of the Baptist church at Newport was observed Sunday.

Lee T. Hallock, of Clayton, is preparing for an automobile trip to California. He will start early in June.

While the renovation is hardly completed at St. Peter's P. E. church, Clarksboro, the edifice was reopened Sunday and the parishioners were highly gratified.

Apoplexy caused the sudden death in Camden Sunday afternoon of Gustave Gittinger, forty-two years old, a baker, of 417 Webster street.

In a statement just issued Postmaster Yard shows that the net profits of the Trenton Postoffice for the past year have been $151,162.05. The total receipts amounted to $249,251.44.

Sustaining injuries to the face and arms in a fall downstairs, Mrs. Susan Walsh, forty-nine years old, of 246 Mt. Vernon street, Camden, was taken to Cooper Hospital, Sunday afternoon.

William Flanigan, an aged resident of Lindenwood, who has been missing several days, was found in Gloucester Sunday with his mind practically a blank. Relatives were notified and he was taken home.

Bursting in upon a fantan game in full swing at 1610 Atlantic avenue, Atlantic City, Sunday night a squad of police, under the direction of Chief Woodruff, captured seventeen Chinese, who were playing for high stakes. Gathering up the money on the table, amounting to several hundred dollars, the police bundled the prisoners into the patrol. At the city hall four of the prisoners offered to turn State's evidence and they were released on their own recognizance to appear and testify. The gambling den is located in the rear of a laundry conducted by Wah Kee, the "Mayor of Chinatown," prior to his death recently.

PERSONAL.

Miss Grace Convery, of Mt. St. Mary College, is spending the Easter vacation at Trenton.

Miss Emma Verschuur, of Prospect place, is spending a few days with relatives at Bath Beach, L. I.

Miss Margaret VanDeventer, of East Fifth street, is spending the Easter vacation with friends in New York city.

Mrs. L. E. Woolley and daughter, Miss Helen Woolley, of The Bristol, are spending the week with friends in Brooklyn.

Miss Mary O'Connor, of Fairview avenue, has returned home after spending several days with her mother, in New York.

Thomas Carty, Jr., of Orchard place, who has been detained at home for the past two weeks with rheumatism, is improving slowly.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newton Crane entertained Mr. and Mrs. John Bennett and Mrs. John Woodenbury, of Brooklyn, at their new home on Leland avenue, Sunday.

The One Thing Forgotten.

The Mother—"I feel sure that we have forgotten something for tonight's christening."

The Father—"Well, have you asked the minister?"

"Oh, yes; a week ago."

"Ordered the ice cream and cake."

"Oh, yes; that's all attended to."

"Get out the company silver?"

"Sure, did that this morning."

"Well, what else is there?"

"Oh, I know! We haven't yet decided on a name for the baby!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Proctor's New Show.

Anthony Smith & Co., will present their comedy sketch, "The Extravagant Mrs. Bulger," at Proctor's today, and Vail's Hour Glass, a decided novelty will be on the excellent bill. The Shelley Trio, three good dancers and singers, will appear in their latest songs and Dr. Will Davis, physician to the people who have the blues, will complete the bill.

Netherwood Juniors Win.

The Netherwood Juniors defeated McLean's Colts on the South and Leland avenues grounds, yesterday morning, by a score of 7 to 3. The Colts did not appear to know the rules of the game very well and had "to be shown" from the rule book. Dunn pitched a good game, but received poor support, while Denny pitched winning ball.

Hat Flowers.

Flowers on the new hats are mostly of silk or velvet but some are of cambric and yet others of chiffon or linon, with the material slightly gathered into acorded edge. Leaves are made of cretonne, each leaf being cut out separately from a large-flowered pattern.

Highlanders Defeated.

The Fairview Cycle Club defeated the Highlanders yesterday morning by a score of 11 to 4, on the Fairview avenue grounds. Harper pitched a good game while his opponent, McDonough, weakened in the last few innings.

Rode Bike on Sidewalk.

For riding a bicycle on the sidewalks, H. A. Herbmann, who was caught by Patrolman Saunders paid two dollars fine in court yesterday.

DIAGNOSING A JOKE.

It Seemed Easy at First, but the Case Proved Hopeless.

The name of the author of the following story is better known for poetry than prose. However, here is what S. E. Kiser perpetrated at a convention of American humorists:

Paw and maw were sitting in the sitting room one evening, and pretty soon paw began to laff.

"What's wrong?" maw ast.

"This is one of the best joaks I ever saw," paw says.

"Lissen and I'll read it to you: 'Why is the mistake of a dockter not as bad as that of a dentust? Do you know?" paw ast.

"No," maw told him.

"Becoz," paw red, "one fills six feat and the other fills an aker."

"How do they do that?" maw ast.

'Becoz they made A mistake," paw ansered.

"Which does?" maw says.

"Both of them," paw told her. "That's why the mistake of the dockter izzent as Bad as the dentust's."

"Why not?" says maw.

"The dockter only fills Six feat," paw told her, "and the dentust fills An aker."

"I don't understand About the feat." maw sed. 'Why does he Fill six of them and What does he fill them with?" Paw began to look kind of glassy out of his eyes, and he Red the joak again to himself So he would be sure he Didn't make enny mistake. Then he says:

"Why, you see, if a dockter would make a mistake it mite be fatle, and so he would fill six feat of earth with a man, because the man would Be about six feat tall, you no."

"I don't see mutch to laugh a bout such a joak," maw told him. "May be it miten't be a man at all, Or he mite be short."

"Oh, well," paw says, "they just pretend He would be a six footer so as to Make it come in with the aker."

"Why do they want to do that?" maw ast.

"That's the joak," paw says.

"Which is?" maw told him.

"Why, the aker," paw ansered.

"Where are they enny Joak about that?" maw ast.

"The dentust fills it, you no," paw sed, but he Didn't seme to be very sure about it By that time.

"Yes," maw says, "but you red that he made A mistake."

"Don't you know what an aker is?" paw ast. "A tooth that You fill is an aker, and They have akers of ground."

"But where does the mistake come in?" maw sed.

"Why, he Fills the rong one," paw answered, Wiping his forrid and kind of looking Around like if he was trying to see if the escape was all cut off.

"Well, then, how does He fill the aker," maw ast, "if the tooth he Fills is the rong one And duzzent ake?"

Then paw got up and tore the Almannick in two and Threw it in the waist basket and sed:

"They are no use Trying to bring enny sunshine into This fambly. Let's drop the subject. The man that rote the joak Was a fool and the one that printed it was a worse one, but I'm not going to rong Either one of them by unjust suspishens. Mebby they didn't every try to tell it To a woman."—New York Post.

He Ate the Hay.

There are still some mighty eaters left. Not long ago a Berlin market porter undertook for a wager to put away at one sitting six mutton chops, twelve eggs, a goose, a duck, six pounds of potatoes and twenty-two pounds of hay. Difficulties were anticipated with the last course, and large sums were laid against the accomplishment of the feat. The ingenious porter solved the difficulty by calling for a cigarette after he had finished the duck. He then set light to the hay, pounded the ashes up with the potatoes and swallowed the lot. After a heated discussion the referee declared him the winner.—London Globe.

Heavy Rollers at St. Helena.

If the sea were to break on the shores of Coney Island in time of calm weather with the same force as it does on the shores of St. Helena sections of South Brooklyn would be uninhabitable in all likelihood. They have at St. Helena what are known as calemmas, or heavy rollers. These rollers are particularly bad in time of calm weather. They strike the island with such tremendous force that the spray is sent over Goat Pound ridge, which is several feet above sea level. Scientists are of opinion the calemmas are caused by seismic disturbances beneath the ocean.—Exchange.

His Record Not Clear.

Charles Smith, a jovial negro, was arraigned before Judge Fawcett in the county court, Brooklyn, on a minor charge.

"Smith," asked the court, "did you ever commit a crime before?"

The negro pondered for a moment.

"Well, yo' honah," he answered slowly, "Ah can't zactly say, but Ah done got married one time."—New York Times.

Plenty of Company.

"Yes, she went crazy over bridge."

"A sad case."

"Oh, no great harm done. They put her in a fashionable sanitarium, and she is playing a better game than ever now."—Washington Herald.

The Last Hole.

Figg—That was a mighty appropriate text the parson took for poor Brassie's funeral sermon. Fogg—What was it? Figg—"He has finished his course."—Boston Transcript.

Happiness is not the end of life; character is.—Beecher.

POLICE OF PARIS.

Their Methods Effective Even if Sometimes Dramatic.

TESTING A MAN OF COURAGE.

The Secret Service Knew More About His Own Affairs Than He Did Himself and Proved It In a Most Startling and Conclusive Manner.

The police of Paris have always made it a rule to keep closely in touch with the criminal element, the spies and secret officials of the department posing as criminals among the real criminals when necessary to learn their secrets. The following incident, in which the national impulse for dramatic effect crops out, will serve to illustrate how well at times they do their work:

At the beginning of the French revolution the chief of the police of Paris had upon his register the names of no fewer than 2,000 suspected and depraved characters whose pursuits were known to be of a criminal nature.

A merchant of high respectability in Bordeaux had occasion to visit Paris upon commercial business, carrying with him bills and money to a very large amount. On his arrival at the gates of the French metropolis a genteel looking man opened the door of the carriage and addressed him to this effect:

"Sir, I have been waiting for you some time. According to my notes, you were to arrive at this hour, and, your person, your carriage and your portmanteau exactly answering the description I hold in my hand, you will permit me to have the honor of conducting you to M. de Sartine."

The gentleman, astonished and alarmed at this interruption and still more at hearing the name of the chief inspector of the police mentioned, demanded to know what M. de Sartine wanted with him, adding that he had never committed any offense against the laws and that the police could have no right to detain him.

The messenger declared himself ignorant of the cause of the detention and said that when he had conducted him to M. de Sartine he should have executed his orders. After some further explanations the gentleman permitted the officer to conduct him to the police official.

M. de Sartine, the chief of police, received him with great politeness and, after requesting him to be seated, to his astonishment described his portmanteau and told him the exact amount in bills and cash which he had brought with him to Paris, where he was to lodge, his usual time of going to bed and a number of other circumstances which he had conceived were known only to himself.

Having thus excited his attention, M. de Sartine asked him:

"Sir, are you a man of courage?"

The gentleman, still more astonished at the singularity of his interrogatory, demanded the reason why such a question was put to him, adding that no man had hitherto doubted his courage.

"Sir, you are to be robbed and murdered this night," replied M. de Sartine "If you are a man of courage you must go to your hotel and retire to rest at the usual hour But be careful not to fall asleep Neither will it be proper for you to look under your bed or into the closet which is in your chamber You must place your portmanteau in its usual situation near the bed and betray no suspicion Leave what remains to me. If you do not feel your courage sufficient to bear you out I will procure some one who will personate you and go to bed in your stead."

The merchant, being convinced that M. de Sartine's information was accurate in every particular, refused to be personated and resolved to follow literally the directions he had received.

He accordingly drove to the hotel and went to bed at his usual hour, 11 o'clock. At half past 12—the time mentioned by M. de Sartine—the door of his bedchamber was quietly forced open, and three men entered with a dark lantern, daggers and pistols. The merchant, who pretended to be asleep, perceived one of them to be his own servant. They rifled his portmanteau undisturbed and discussed and settled the plan of putting him to death.

Hearing all this and not knowing by what means he was to be rescued, the merchant was under great perturbation of mind during such an interval of suspense.

Just at the moment the villains were preparing to take the merchant's life four police officers, who were concealed under the bed and in the closet, rushed out and seized the offenders in the very act of attempting murder and with the stolen property in their possession. The law made short work of the criminals, and the police congratulated the merchant on his courage and coolness.

An Excellent Reason.

"You girls are beyond me," said the father as he tied the ribbon of his daughter's shoe. "Why don't you wear buttoned shoes that won't come unfastened instead of these confounded things that are untied half the time?"

"Because, papa," said Gladys sweetly, "I'd rather have a bow than get the hook."—Harper's Weekly.

THE RUBY

BY

F. MARION CRAWFORD

AUTHOR OF "SARACINESCA," "ARETHUSA" ETC. ETC.

...IL ...GHT, 1907, BY F. MARION CRAWFORD

CHAPTER XII.

On the morning after the transaction last described, Van Torp's attention was arrested by a sensational "scare-head' about a thief and a ruby worth $50,000. Some disaffected colleague in London had known, or cleverly guessed, where the stone was that had been stolen from Mr. Pinney's, and had informed the police; the nice-looking young fellow who spoke like an English gentleman had walked directly into the arms of the plain-clothes man waiting for him on the pier in New York, the stone had been found sewn up in his waistcoat, and his pleasant career of liberty had ended abruptly in a cell.

Mr. Van Torp whistled softly as he read the account a second time. Then he neatly cut the column out of the paper, folded it with great precision, smoothed it with care and placed it in his pocket-book next to a cheap little photograph of Mme. da Cordova as "Juliet," which he had bought in a music shop in New York the day after he had heard her for the first time, and had carried in his pocket ever since.

He took up the mutilated newspaper and looked up and down the columns, and among other information which he gathered in a few moments was the fact that Logotheti's yacht had "passed Capt Saint Vincent, going east, owner and party on board." The previous telegram had not escaped him, and if he had entertained any doubts as to the destination of the Erinna, they vanished now. She was certainly bound for the Mediterranean. He remembered having heard that many steam yachts coming from England put into Gibraltar for coal and fresh provisions, coal being cheaper there than in French and Italian ports, and he thought it very probable that the Erinna would do the same; he also made some deductions which need not be explained yet. The only one worth mentioning here was that Logotheti would be likely to hear in Gibraltar that the ruby had been found and was on its way back to England, and that as he would know that Margaret would be anxious about it, since he had already given it to her, he would hardly let the occasion of communicating with her go by. As for writing from Gibraltar to any place whatsoever in the hope that a letter will arrive in less than a week, it is sheer folly. Mr. Van Torp had never tried it, and supposed it possible, as it looks, but he was tolerably sure that Logotheti would telegraph first, and had perhaps done so already, for the news of his passing Cape Saint Vincent was already 24 hours old.

This was precisely what had happened. When Mr. Van Torp opened his door, he came upon Margaret and Mrs. Rushmore on the landing, on the point of going out for a walk, and a servant had just brought the prima donna a telegram which she was reading aloud, so that the American could not help hearing her.

"'Cruising till wanted,'" she read quickly. "'Ruby found. Address, yacht Erinna, Naples.'"

She heard Van Torp close his door, though she had not heard him open it, and turning round she found herself face to face with him. Her eyes were sparkling with anger.

"Very sorry," he said. "I couldn't help hearing."

"It's of no consequence, for I should have told you," Margaret answered briefly.

He argued well for himself from her tone and manner, but he chose to show that he would not force his company upon her just then, when she was in a visible rage, and instead of stopping to exchange more words he passed the two ladies hat in hand, and bowing rather low, after his manner, he went quietly downstairs.

Margaret watched him till he disappeared.

"I like that man," she said, as if to herself, but audibly. "I can help it."

Mrs. Rushmore was more than lighted, but had tact enough not make any answer to a speech whi had probably not been meant for h ears.

"Perhaps," she said, "you wou rather not go out just yet, my dear."

Margaret was grateful for the su gestion, and they turned back in their rooms.

Meanwhile Van Torp had reache the door of the hotel, and found La Maud standing there with her paras up, for the sun was streaming in.

"I was waiting for you," she sai simply, as soon as he reached he side, and she stepped out into the street. "I thought you would com down, and I wanted to speak to you for I did not get a chance last night They were both watching me, probably because they thought I was ill, and I had to chatter like a magpie to keep up appearances."

"You did it very well," Van Torp said. "If I had not seen your face at the window when I got out of the automobile yesterday I shouldn't have guessed there was anything wrong."

"But there is—something very wrong—something I can hardly bear to think of, though I must, until I know the truth."

They turned into the first deserted street they came to.

"I dare say I can give a guess at what it is," Van Torp answered gravely. "I went to see him alone yesterday on purpose, before he started, and I must say, if it wasn't for the beard I'd feel pretty sure."

"He had a beard when I married him, and it was like that—just like that!"

Lady Maud's voice shook audibly, for she felt cold, even in the sunshine.

"I didn't know," Van Torp answered. "That alters the case. If we're not mistaken, what can I do to help you? Let's see. You only had that one look at him, through the window, is that so?"

"Yes. But the window was open, and it's not high above the ground, and my eyes are good. He took off his hat when he said good-by to you, and I saw his face as distinctly as I see yours. When you've been married to a man"—she laughed harshly—"you cannot be easily mistaken about him, when you're as near as that! That is the man I married. I'm intimately convinced of it, but I must be quite sure. Do you understand?"

"Of course. If he's really Leven, he's even a better actor than I used to think he was. If he's not, the resemblance is just about the most extraordinary thing! It's true I only saw Leven three or four times in my life, but I saw him to look at him then, and the last time I did, when he made the row in Hare court, he was doing most of the talking, so I remember his voice."

"There's only one difficulty," Lady Maud said. "Some one else may have been killed last June. It may even have been the pickpocket who had stolen his pocket-book. Such things have happened, or do in books! But this is certainly the man you met in New York and who sold you the stone you gave me, is he not?"

"Oh, certainly. And that was at the end of July, and Leven was killed late in June."

"Yes. That only leaves a month for him to have been to Asia—that's absurd."

"Utterly, totally, and entirely impossible," asseverated Mr. Van Torp. "One of two things. Either this man is your husband, and if he is, he's not the man who found the rubies in Asia. Or else, if he is that man, he's not Leven. I wish that heathen girl had been here yesterday! She could have told in a minute. She'd better have been here anyway than cutting around the Mediterranean with that fellow Logotheti!"

"Yes," Lady Maud answered gravely. "But about myself—if Leven is alive, what is my position—I mean—I don't really quite know where I am, do I?"

"Anybody but you would have thought of marrying again already," observed Mr. Van Torp, looking up sideways in her eyes, for she was taller than he. "Then you'd really be in a bad fix, wouldn't you? But as it is, I don't see that it makes much difference. The man's going under a false name, so he doesn't mean to claim you as his wife, nor to try to get a divorce again, as he did before. He's just going to be somebody else for his own good, and he'll get married that way, maybe. That's his business, not yours. I don't suppose you're going to get up in church and forbid the banns, are you?"

"I would, like a shot!" said Lady Maud. "So would you, I'm sure! Think of the other woman!"

(To be Continued).

Y.M.C.A. BASKETBALL TEAM'S SEASON IS CLOSED

Y. M. C. A. Basketball Team. —Photo by Stone

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team, which has just closed its season, did remarkably well considering the fact that the material was all practically green and played for the first time together this season. Under the coaching of the physical director, Thomas Gordon Whittaker, the players showed up well, although they only won five game out of seventeen played. They defeated Hudson City, Elizabeth and Belleville and played close games with Montclair, Orange and Newark.

The fine work of Captain John Fritts is noteworthy; also the individual work of "Ted" Gavett and the spectacular playing of Ricketts. Newmiller, Manley, Stein and Naylor also performed well. It was not until the latter part of the season that the team struck its proper gait and the finish was a decided improvement over the work of the early season.

The names of those in the accompanying picture are, reading from left to right: Top row—Albert Newmiller, guard; Physical Director Thomas Gordon Whittaker; G. C. M. Smith, chairman athletic committee; Bergen Naylor, guard; second row—Alfred Manley, centre; Captain John Fritts, centre and forward; Herbert Stein, forward.

The dinner to be given this evening by the Philathea class of the Temple Baptist church will take place between 5 and 8 o'clock in the Sunday-school room.

HOW WILL YOU DECIDE WHICH CAR TO BUY?

SOME HORSE SENSE ABOUT AUTOMOBILES

It must be hard for the man interested in motor cars to know just which car to buy. So many claims, confusing because they are so much alike, are made by the various companies that it must be difficult to sift them and locate the car most worthy of investment.

One company advertises that it has 20,000 owners "all satisfied."

Another company advertises that it has 25,000 also "all satisfied."

One company advertises that it has 27 acres of factory floor space. Another says that it has 31 acres—therefore you should buy its car rather than the product of the other concern.

One company employs 5,000 men; and another company employs 5,001 men. These are cited as reasons for buying one car rather than other.

Every car, according to the advertisements, has the "most up-to-date design," "the finest materials money can buy." And in the building of every one of them there was employed nothing but the "highest grade of workmanship."

Analyze Puzzling Claims.

The man who reads these claims must be puzzled to know what to do. The advertisements would lead him to think that all cars are equally worth his money, that he might as well simply close his eyes and choose one.

And yet this does not seem quite reasonable. In any group of half a dozen makes, selling at about the same price, there must be one, or possibly two, which are better than others. Moreover, there must be cars which have greater value in proportion to the prices asked than other cars have in proportion to the different prices asked for them.

Different groups of men engaged on similar tasks will inevitably produce different results. One group will produce better results than the others.

Railroads and the trains which run on them are made of the same materials. They all charge the same rates of fare. Yet nothing is so plain as that some railroads are vastly better than others. The difference comes in the way the materials are handled.

It takes more than a set of specifications, blue prints, a mass of steel, wood and rubber, and buildings filled with machinery, to make a first-class automobile, just the same as it takes more than a right-of-way and engines and cars to make a first-class railroad.

Advertising Claims Don't Make Good Cars

Further, it takes more than advertising claims to make a first-class automobile. Anyone can write an advertisement. No doubt a great many people can write better advertisements than this one. As to whether anyone else can—or does—build at the price as good a motor car as this advertisement aims to tell about, is another question—one which you, as a buyer, must settle for yourself.

Advertising never added one iota to the value of any automobile. All that advertising can do is tell of the good points of an automobile, if it has them, or lie about them if it has them not.

Good automobiles are the result of right specifications; right materials; right parts put together in the right way, and tested in the right way; the whole finished in the right way, and all of it backed up by a good organization that is in the business to stay and give service.

We once heard of a man who wrote a book. He submitted the book to a critic with the remark that it ought to make him famous because he had used the same number of words Shakespeare used in his plays—namely, 12,000. However, the critic decided the author hadn't put the words together quite the same way Shakespeare did, so the book was never heard of again.

Taking a group of automobile builders, how will you find out which has got the best results out of the materials and the capital at his disposal? How will you decide which car to buy?

Suppose you try this method once: Ask yourself what it is you can get in one car which you can't get in any other?

To be specific, what is there that you can get in a Chalmers "30" which you cannot get in any other car of the $1500-$2000 class?

There are many things. Here are a few which you should consider:

What You Can Get Only in the Chalmers

First of all, you can get in a Chalmers "30" more than in any other car, simplicity of design which has been proved. A few other cars, with features patterned after the Chalmers, claiming equal simplicity, have not been put to the test of use by thousands of owners.

The Chalmers "30" was the first American car to have all such advanced features as en bloc cylinder casting, two-bearing crank shaft, unit construction of clutch and transmission, single pedal control, double drop frame.

Something More Than Theory Needed.

But, as we said above, making a good automobile is more than just mechanical design. A car could have all the up-to-date features found in the Chalmers and still be a failure. The vital organs of all men are much the same, yet some men are in all respects superior to others. You do not take a chance when you buy a Chalmers.

Something else you get in a Chalmers and in no other car is the appearance—the looks peculiar to this car.

Many "designers," hearing the praise of the public, have copied the lines of the Chalmers car. But a copy never equals the original, and so the Chalmers has remained in a class alone for good looks and style and distinction.

Appearance is one of the most important standards for judging a car. In every person there dwells a liking for beautiful things. You see your car dozens of times a day. If it has graceful lines and fine finish, it will please you all the more from month to month and year to year.

Horses and Motor Cars.

Most automobile buyers have owned horses, and they understand what we mean when we say that there is the same difference in appearance between the Chalmers and many other cars as there is between the thoroughbred horse and one of common stock. You can tell the difference in the horses a long way off as they come down the street. And you can tell it in automobiles the same way.

In a Chalmers you get a degree of comfort and safety which you cannot get in any other car at anywhere near the same price. The Chalmers "30" has a long wheel base—115 inches. It has a heavy frame, 34-inch wheels, and long, three-quarter elliptic rear springs. The seats are tilted and perfectly upholstered. There is no car at any price which gives more comfort under all conditions than the Chalmers "30." You can prove this for yourself. No one has ever ridden in this car without praising its excellent riding qualities.

The Factors of Safety in a car are Wheels, Frame, Steering Connections and Brakes. We make the statement, and stand ready to have you investigate it, that in no car at the price can you get the same size and quality in these all-important Factors of Safety.

You cannot get any other car with such a performance record as the Chalmers "30" boasts. Many companies advertise vaguely that their cars have won "scores of motoring contests." What were they? Little local events, mostly, or self-appointed endurance runs.

This monogram on the radiator stands for all you can ask in a motor car

An Unequalled Record.

What has the Chalmers "30" done? For two seasons it was entered in every road race of national prominence for light cars, and it won in every one of them.

This is the car which won the Indiana Trophy Race, starting last and finishing first in a field of nineteen—the best field of light cars ever in an American road race.

This is the car which won first and second in the Jericho Sweepstakes. It was the Chalmers "30" which won the National Light Stock Chassis Race at Lowell, and the famous Santa Monica Race in California.

And it was a Chalmers "30" which won the Massapequa Trophy in the Vanderbilt and set a world's speed record for cars of this class—a record which still stands, in spite of many efforts to better it.

This is the car which was given the title of "Champion car" because it won a higher percentage of contests entered than any other.

This is the car which proved itself as good in touring contests as in road races by winning the Glidden Trophy in the longest and hardest touring contest ever held. It was the first car costing less than $4,000 to win this honor.

This is the car which has never been defeated in a motoring contest by a car of its own price and power class.

When anyone talks about contests, ask them to show you a record like the Chalmers "30." When you buy a Chalmers, you buy a duplicate of the car which won the Glidden Tour. You cannot get this record of performances with any car which competes with the Chalmers in price.

There's Everything in a Name.

Another thing you get in a Chalmers which you can get in no other car, is the medallion on the radiator—the trade-mark—the Chalmers name. This trade-mark is your insurance that the car which bears it was designed by Chalmers' engineers; constructed of material which has come up to the Chalmers inspection standard; built by the Chalmers organization in the Chalmers factory; tested by the Chalmers inspection department; and backed by the guarantee of Chalmers service.

The Chalmers Company was the first company to build a real automobile to sell at a $1500 price. That was three years ago. That car immediately took the lead among cars of this class, and it has steadily maintained that lead ever since.

The Chalmers Company is capitalized for $3,000,000. It has a factory which is not surpassed by any in the industry. The Chalmers Company builds all important parts. It builds enough cars so that it gets the full advantage of quantity production, yet it does not try to make production records. It builds for quality rather than quantity.

The Chalmers Policy.

The Chalmers Company is free of debt. It is not hampered by "entangling alliances." Its policy is now just what it has always been, namely, the best car at the price, only a fair profit to itself, and service guaranteed.

These are some of the things you can get in a Chalmers and in no other car. We have stated them strongly because we want to impress upon automobile buyers the desirability of getting away from glowing advertising claims and getting down to the cars themselves—to an examination of what is really in them and of what stands back of them.

We are not "knocking." There are other good cars besides the Chalmers. But where there is another as good, there are a dozen we know not as good—and it is the dozen we have in mind when we say—study the cars.

Our contention is that the Chalmers is the "best buy"—the finest dollar for dollar value. If we can't prove it, we can't hope to get your order; but we want a chance to prove it and ask you to come soon to see the car, or let us know when we may bring the car to you.

MAY BE PERJURY

Judge DeMeza Adjourns Berlowitz--Marks Assault Case Until Next Tuesday.

W. L. SMALLEY IS ANGERED.

Councilman Tolles, Dr. Marcus Clawson and Others Testify in Case of Alleged Attempted Shooting.

Charges of perjury, it is asserted, may be brought as a result of testimony given before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, in the trial of Harry Berlowitz and Robert Marks, colored, in which counter charges of assault have been made. Among the witnesses examined were City Councilman Ralph Tolles, Borough Councilman William L. Smalley, Patrolman Baeder, Dr. Marcus Clawson, Harry Vail, Simeon Giles, James Ross, colored, and one of the defendants, Robert Marks.

The alleged assault took place last Thursday morning when Marks, who is a driver for the Union Beef Company, went through the yard of the premises occupied by the Berlowitz family, on East Third street, adjoining the beef company's building.

According to the witnesses for Marks, the latter had occasion to enter the yard as is customary when work calls him there and while passing through Berlowitz ran out from the house threatening to shoot him for trespassing. Marks declared on the stand that he was not looking for trouble, but that when Berlowitz threatened to shoot him he picked up a piece of brick and let it fly in the general direction of Berlowitz's head. Mrs. Nettie Berlowitz, mother of Harry, intercepted the brick with her face and as a result, Dr. Clawson had to take a stitch in her lip.

Several other wounds were alleged to have been made on the person of the elder Mrs. Berlowitz which Marks denies having inflicted. The entire Berlowitz family testified as to their view of the occurrence and as their stories agreed there was a reasonable doubt in Judge DeMeza's mind as to the real facts. In order to get further at the truth of the fracas the court adjourned the case until next Tuesday morning, saying that he would make a full investigation of the case before rendering a decision, in the meantime Councilman Tolles will produce other witnesses of the affair which it it believed will bolster up the story told by the negro, Marks.

Mr. Tolles said in his testimony that Berlowitz and his father had hired the premises with the distinct understanding that the employees of the Union Beef Company should have the privilege of ingress and egress from the yard whenever their business called them there.

William L. Smalley declared that he heard Berlowitz threaten to shoot or blow out somebody's brains if they did not keep out of the yard and he was there when the alleged assault took place. He tried his best to prevent a fight. Harry Vail told the court that Berlowitz had threatened to shoot "Jim, Bob or Charlie," if he found them in the yard and Mr. Giles corroborated Mr. Smalley's testimony.

Those who testified for Berlowitz were his wife, Jennie, his three sisters, Lena, Etta and Sarah and Morris Berlowitz, the father. The latter alledeg that Marks had some trouble with Mrs. Berlowitz over a bill for groceries and that he believed that the debt was at the bottom of the trouble.

Berlowitz in his own defense said that he merely threatened to "fire" Marks out of the yard. The testimony of the family did not compare favorably with that given by Marks' witnesses which caused Judge DeMeza to halt the proceedings and adjourn the case until Tuesday. All the testimony of the Berlowitz family was directly in opposition to that given by Mr. Smalley, Mr. Giles, Mr. Tolles and Mr. Vail.

When Berlowitz was on the stand he declared that Mr. Smalley had not told the truth, which brought an exclamation from the latter that looks ominous for Berlowitz. The court had to rap several times for order and finally put one man out of the room.

Patrolman Baeder told the story of the arrest. S. S. Swackhamer appeared for Berlowitz.

Burned Rubbish on Street.

Norman Rhodis and William Shubert, of the west end, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning, charged with burning rubbish in the street. Both were given suspended sentences.

Former State Senator and Mrs. Everitt Colby, who are sojourning in Switzerland, are reported to be greatly improved in health. They will not return home until next September.

EVENING OF MUSIC WAS MUCH ENJOYED

A delightful evening of music was held at Truell Court, last night, and notwithstanding the inclement weather a large and appreciative audience of music lovers gathered to hear a program of rare excellence. The parlors were attractively decorated with Easter ilies, crimson ramblers and other spring flowers, making the scene one of beauty. The affair was planned and arranged by Mrs. Wilkinson and Miss Mabel A. Maxson, guests of the Court.

The program opened with Rossini's "Stabat Mater," arranged for two pianos and played by Miss Jessie Utter and Miss Maxson. Mrs. J W. Schermerhorne, a professional lyric soprano of New York, sang exquisitely a group of beautiful songs. A trio, composed of Ernest Schultze, violin; Elmer Wheeler, flute and, Miss Maxson at the piano, rendered a number of beautiful selections by Gounod, Nevin and Grieg.

Charles Jones, baritone soloist of St. John's church, of Yonkers, was never heard to better advantage. Mr. Schultze merited much praise as a soloist and in the ensemble and obligato work, Miss Maxson was equal to the occasion as accompanist and soloist. The affair proved a great success and pleasure to all present.

MISS HUFF THE BRIDE-ELECT OF JEREMIAH GRIFFIN

Miss Edith Huff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huff, of Lincoln place, and Jeremiah Griffin, of George street, will be married in St. Joseph's church at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Father Miller, in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. The only attendants will be Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kearns, as matron of honor and best man.

Miss Huff will be attired in a traveling suit of champagne serge and will carry bride roses. Her attendant will carry pink carnations. The bride will be given away by her father.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Griffin will leave for a wedding trip up the Hudson River. They will visit Albany, Troy and Green Falls, retunring in a wek or ten days. They will then be accorded a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple will go to housekeeping in their own home on George street.

Mr. Griffin has been employed in the local gas department of the Public Service for the past six years. He enjoys a wide acquaintance in both the city and borough as does his bride.

PANTOMIMES GIVEN FOR CHARITY'S SAKE

Three delightful and amusing pantomimes, "Bluebeard," "Cindrella," and "The Parson's Fee," were given at the home of Mrs and Mrs. John B. Cottrell, on West Sixth street, last evening, for the benefit of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield. Despite the stormy night the young folks made $5.50 for the worthy cause.

Those taking part were Beatrice Cottrell, Elizabth Chickering, Mary Simons, Stephana Shaw, Irene Moy and Ruth Voorhees. The three pantomimes, together with piano solos by Beatrice and Celia Cottrell and recitations by Mary Simons and Jean Cottrell combined to afford a pleasant evening for all. There was also a sale of home-made candy.

Discussed Home Missions.

Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman read an interesting paper on "Mission Heroes in Africa and What They Had Accomplished," at the meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. G. H. Campbell presented a report of the recent Presbyterial meeting at Dunellen and Mrs. Edgar Williams also read a paper on home missions. Mrs. Edward G. Read presided and Mrs. I. C. Pierson led the devotional exercises.

A Collision.

While a delivery wagon belonging to James A. Smith & Brother, was crossing the corner of West Fourth street and Central avenue yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, a trolley car in charge of Conductor Frank Diehl and Motorman Joksohn, collided with the wagon, throwing Joseph Plum, the driver to the ground. Plum was not injured, but the wagon was battered up. No arrests were made.

LOST IN ASSEMBLY

Brodhead's Bill to Abolish Registrar of Deeds Office Defeated.

VICTORY FOR LLOYD THOMPSON.

Exciting Half Hour in Democratic House—Sentiment in County Overwhelmingly Against the Bill.

Union county's representatives in the House at Trenton took opposing sides yesterday when Assemblyman Brodhead's bill, abolishing the office of registrar of deeds in this county was placed on third reading. The measure was defeated, but Mr. Brodhead changed his vote for the purpose of having it again brought on the floor of the House.

Mr. Brodhead and Mr. McLaughlin, both Democrats, had united forces against Mr. Thompson, Republican, in their advocacy of a bill that would oust Republican County Chairman Frank H. Smith from an office on the public payroll. The debate was one marked by rapidfire retorts and the vigorous presentation of arguments held the attention of the House for at least three-quarters of an hour.

It was in the interest of economy, Mr. Brodhead asserted, that he had drawn the bill. The county clerk, he alleged, should do the registrar's work and save the county $10,000 a year. Mr. Thompson asserted that public sentiment had been aroused within forty-eight hours after it was published such a bill had been introduced and that the members of the House were swamped with letters protesting against the passage of the bill. The Elizabeth Democratic Mayor, the Democratic City Attorney and the Assistant Attorney were named as opposing the measure. Property owners, representing a million and a half dollars, protested against the bill, he said, and told of delays in his personal experience that were met before the office was estblished. He said the offices of county clerk and registrar were costing only $2,100 a year and asked that the present system be not upset, averring that the county clerk has enough to do already.

Mr. McLaughlin compared the expenses of the county offices and said the registrar of deeds was costing $15,000 a year. He read from reports to substantiate his statements and said that while the holder of the office at present is " a prince of good fellows," the people, who get their money by the sweat of their brow should not be required to go down into their pockets and contribute $2,000 to him. Mr. Brodhead said the Elizabeth Mayor had told him the measure was a good one and that many had written letters of protest had repudiated them in conversation with him, and said they had written them as a favor. He then compared the population of the counties and said that the receipts were greater in Mercer and Bergen counties,but there was no registrar of deeds in either place. He challenged Mr. Thompson to say that the county clerk was not able to attend to the work and Mr. Thompson replied that experience of ten years led him to say that the clerk is not in a position to assume the duties. Mr. Brodhead said he introduced the bill of his own volition and in the interests of his constituents.

HOPE MINSTRELS AGAIN DELIGHT LARGE AUDIENCE.

Despite the scandalous weather that prevailed last night, the second performance of the W. N. Runyon Association minstrel troupe at Hope chapel was witnessed by a large and appreciative audience. The show ran smoother than at the opening and several new numbers were added. Edward J. Harding, Jr., sang "Good Bye, My Love, Good Bye" in a pleasing manner, and Miss Dorothy Sender, a little girl of nine years, gave cornet selections in the olio. She plays celeverly for one of her age and received enthusiastic applause. William Baker, the efficient stage manager, added a new efature to the first part closing tableau, "The Grand Old Bill."

The troupe will rest tonight and the final performance will be given tomorrow night. New verses will be added to Tom Muir's topical song, "If I Had The Mayor's Job for Just a Day," fresh jokes will be sprung by the end men and in other ways the final appearance of the troupe will be a top-notcher.

The Misses Hedges Entertain.

The Misses Beatrice and Lelia Hedges, of Watchung avenue, entertained a number of their friends at the Park Club, Tuesday evening. There were about one hundred young folks that enjoyed the dance. Prior to the dance the Misses Hedges gave a dinner party at their home, covers being laid for about ten.

CALLED AS PASTOR

Temple Baptist Church Extends Invitation to the Rev. E. C. Conover.

CONGREGATION IS UNANIMOUS.

Minister at Present in Charge of Pemberton Baptist Church—Believed That He Will Accept the Call.

Rev. E. C. Conover, pastor of the Baptist church at Pemberton, was given a unanimous call to the pastorate of the Temple Baptist church at a congregational meeting of the latter church last night. It is expected that Mr. Conover will accept, and while there is no official announcement of the fact, it is the belief that he will come to Plainfield in the early summer.

Preceding the regular meeting of the church las night, there was an hour's prayer service led at intervals of a half-hour by L. W. Randolph, Edward Baker, Jr., U. B. Crane and Frank Stewart. This was in preparation for the business session to follow, the prayer being that the church would be divinely led in its decision.

The business session was called by W. A. Conger, clerk of the church, and U. B. Crane was chosen moderator. The purpose was stated and all the details leading up to the proposed action was related, it being the conviction that the pulpit committee was directed to Pemberton and to recommend the call of Mr. Conover. A vote was then taken and the call was made unanimous.

Mr. Conover has been pastor of the Baptist church at Pemberton for the past few years. He was graduated from Crozier Theological Seminary in the class ahead of Rev. J. W. Musson, who he has been calld to succeed. The church of which he is now pastor was the charge of Rev. Dr. J. C. Buchanan for many years. The latter also gives Mr. Conover the highest recommendation as pastor and preacher. Mr. Conover is married and has one son about eight years of age.

The pulpit committee of the Temple Baptist church comprises Frank Stewart, U. B. Crane, W. A. Conger, Clarence L. LaRue and Edward Baker, Jr. The church considers itself fortunate in being able to make a choice of a pastor within a month of the time that Mr. Musson resigned.

ELECTION REFORM BILL SIGNED BY GOVERNOR

Governor Wilson at 6 o'clock last night signed the Geran election reform bill, the most radical election measure ever passed in this State, and thereby completed the accomplishment of second great victory in behalf of good government and the fulfillment of another of the pledges he made in the last campaign. The Senate at about the same time passed the most radical corrupt practices act ever introduced in the New Jersey legislature, and this, together with an agreement between the House and the Senate on a radical public utilities act, would seem to insure final adjournment at the close of the present week. A digest of the Geran bill will be found on page six of this issue.

Both houses worked until late in the afternoon, when they adjourned until this morning, the disposition of Senators and Assemblymen alike being to avoid night sessions so far as possible.

The corrupt practices act is a combination of the bills introduced by Senator Prince and Assemblyman Simpson. It follows the lines reported at Tuesday night's conference and prohibits absolutely the expenditure of money by candidates for office except through their authorized agents or treasurers. The maximum amount that each candidate is to spend is also specified. During the debate on the bill Mr. Leavitt suggested an amendment allowing the hiring of wagons or autos to transport voters to the polls and he finally secured the adoption of an amendment for the transportation at public expense of aged and infirm voters. The bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 0, Fitzherbert, Bradley, Cornish, Fielder, Gaunt and Plummer being absent.

Violated Ordinance.

George Gildersleeve, of 435 East Sixth street, was arrested charged with riding his bicycle on the sidewalk. Judge DeMeza suspended sentence this morning with a warning.

home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles E. Piper, of West Peachtree street, Atlanta, Ga. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. C. Breckenridge Wilmer, rector of St. Luke's church, Atlanta.

The bride was gowned in white marquisette over white satin. She wore a tulle veil and carried a bouquet of bride roses. Mrs. Charles E. Piper, sister of the bride, was matron-of-honor, while Charles Piper was the best man. After the reception, the bridal couple tarted on an extensive trip through the south. Upon their return they will reside on East Seventh street. The house was decorated with pink azaleas, carnations and palms, presenting an attractive picture, the floral scheme was also effectively carried out in the dining-room.

The bride is a descendant of Samuel Washington, a brother of President Washington, while her mother is a member of the well-known Carter family of Virginia. Mrs. Clay is also a native of Virginia. Mr. Clay is associated with former Judge Dillon, of New York, in the practice of law, the firm being Dillon, Thomson & Clay and have offices at 195 Broadway, New York. Mr. Clay is a vestryman of Grace church; also one of the trustees and secretary of the Plainfield Country Club and an active golfer. Serving his second term as a member of the Common Council, he takes a deep interest in city affairs and is admittedly a model city father. He is also a director of the State Trust Company.

TRAMP SLEPT IN WAGON; AWOKE WITH BROKEN WRIST.

James Wilson, aged 47 years, who says that his home is in Detroit, Mich., was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital this morning in the police patrol, suffering from a broken wrist. He came to town last night and found sleeping quarters in one of the delivery wagons belonging to the Woodhull & Martin company at the stables on Washington avenue. The accomodations proved to be so comfortable that Wilson slept on long after the sun rose; in fact he was not awakened until he found himself lying on the stable floor and suffering intense pain. He had fallen from the wagon.

The police were notified and after an examination decided to take the man to the hospital for treatment. Wilson says that "he is just a wanderer," and his general appearance would indicate this. Wilson will not be detained at the hospital more than a few days.

Neglectful Father Missing.

Patrick Doyle, for whom Judge William G. DeMeza issued a warrant yesterday afternoon, has disappeared from his home and left no trace behind him. Doyle is accused of neglecting his child, an eleven-year-old boy. The complaint is made by the public school authorities.

HOLY NAME DANCE DRAWS LARGE CROWD

Although the elements were anything but favorable, the dance given by the Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's church in Saengerbund Hall last night was attended with considerable success. A good sized crowd was present and everyone appeared to have a good time.

Paroubek's orchestra furnished music for the round dances in the main hall while below stairs Pat Tuohey, piper, and Tom O'Rourke, fiddler, of New York, gave lively tunes for Irish jigs and reels. Each form of dance had its devotees and the variety afforded was greatly appreciated. The proceeds will be added to the building fund of St. Joseph's church.

The committee in charge of the dance was composed of Thomas Meany, Vincent Meany, William McCullough, Cornelius Guinee, James Tobin, Thomas Hurley, Martin Whalen, Jr., William Daly, William Laffert, Robert McCormack, Patrick Jennings, Patrick McDonough, John Connelly, Edward Conshay, assisted by this committee from the Ladies' Auxiliary No. 1: The Misses Kate Keogh, Molly Lyons, Molly F. McCann, Ellen Mulkeen, Mrs. Bimbie, Mrs. Trindell and Miss Katherine McGrath.

POLLY OF THE CIRCUS HERE MONDAY NIGHT

Frederic Thompson's "Polly of the Circus" comes to the Plainfield theatre on Monday night. One of the most realistic scenes ever shown on the stage comes in the last act, for which Frederic Thompson, the young wizard of Luna Park and the Hippodrome, New York city, may be thanked, in that which shows the circus. There are three scenes in this act, the first showing the performer's quarters just outside the main tent, with clowns, acrobats, bareback riders, riding masters, trained animals, horses, dogs and elephants, and all the beings of the circus hurrying to and fro in the haste incident to the performance. The second act shows the inside of the big tent and a remarkable bit of stagecraft it is. It is practically a three ring show given in the confines of a stage. There is the ring with a genuine bareback act in progress with the funny clowns prancing around, just as we saw it on the lot many, many years ago. In another ring a family of European acrobats and equilibrists give their remarkable feats and in another one trained mules and ponies go through their performance. Mr. Thompson has succeeded in placing a circus on the stage of a theatre and the grown-ups have a chance to go and see it with comfort and without resorting to that venerable excuse, "We're going just to take the children."

WATCHUNG HUNT ENJOYS FINE CHASE

Notwithstanding that the weather conditions were not of the best, the Watchung Hunt Club had a fine chase after the hounds, yesterday afternoon, covering about ten miles over a good stiff country. The riders met the hounds at Melrose Manor, the scent being picked up on the Suydam farm. From that point the hounds led the huntsmen a lively chase, circling back of Metuchen and finishing at Potter's Crossing. There were no accidents and all the riders finished.

The riders were Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., Schuyler Casey, John Butler, Jr., George Rose, J. J. O'Donohue, Stanley Bellows, Peter Phillips, C. E. S. Bellows and Henry Watkins, huntsman.

MORE BICYCLE THEFTS REPORTED TO POLICE.

Two wheels were reported missing to the police yesterday afternoon, one belonging to Henry Nischwitz, taken from in front of the Woodhull and Martin building and the other belonging to Michael O'Keefe, which was stolen from in front of St. Joseph's church, in North Plainfield, yesterday afternoon. Both were Iver-Johnson wheels and were practically new.

Detective Sergeant John Flynn has a good description of the fellow who took Mr. Nischwitz's wheel, but is uncertain about the thief who got away with O'Keefe's bicycle. Both will probably be apprehended today.

BORO UNDISMAYED

Disposal Plant Decision Only Beginning of Fight Says Mayor Smalley.

ANSWERS BOARD'S ARGUMENT.

Impossible for Water Company's Supply to be Contaminated by Sanitary Plant Says North Plainfield Executive.

That North Plainfield is not disheartened by the decision of the State Board of Health refusing permission to that borough to locate its sanitary sewage disposal plant at Greenbrook was evident today when Mayor Newton B. Smallye declared that the fight is only begun and that North Plainfield will triumph in the end. The ground upon which the ruling was made that the proximity of the proposed sewage beds to the Watchung Water Company's wells was branded as a far-fetched argument by the fighting mayor.

"My understanding is that the State Board of Health has nothing to do with location," said the Mayor today in discussing the subject. "Their power is over the system to be adopted. Our system is the most improved type and is similar to the one the State board approved of for Trenton. The contention that the affluent would get into the water company wells is absurd from every point of view. Our pipe would be water tight and would not pass within several hundred feet of the water plant. The sewage would be emptied into water tight filtration beds. The affluent from the beds would be carried into the Raritan giving it no possible chance to contaminate wells at any point. If the board ruled because of fear of contaminating water supplies the basis of that ruling is absurd.

"If the State Board is satisfied to allow Bound Brook to empty its sewage in the crude state into the Raritan River, North Plainfield is perfectly willing to follow that example and thereby save $100,000 which would be spent in installing a sanitary system."

FUNERAL SERVICES OF CARL WILLIAMS HELD.

The funeral services of Carl Williams were held this morning at St. Jospeh's church, Rev. W. H. Miller, pastor of the church, officiating. There was a large atendance of relatives and friends, including representatives from the Holy Name Society and the John III. Sobieski Society, of which he was the oldest member.

There was a large display of floral tributes from the societies and individuals. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. The bearers were members of the Holy Name Society and the John III. Sobieski Society, and in addition, Mayor N. B. Smalley, for whom Mr. Williams worked for sixteen years.

PLAINFIELD VETERANS MARCHED WITH OLD SEVENTH.

John W. Murray and Stephen R. Struthers, of this city, who are the only Plainfield survivors of the old Seventh Regiment, New York, took part in the parade in New York yesterday. They enjoyed the reunion of the old veterans.

It was reported that there are about 150 members of the old Seventh Regiment veterans surviving and they were accorded great honor. Mr. Struthers says that the celebration was more like a memorial, everyone appearing to be deeply impressed with the true sentiment of the occasion.

CHARGED WITH LARCENY; HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Charged with larceny, Annie Sabina and Angelina Lusaga, of Watson avenue, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the City Court this morning and were held to await the action of the grand jury in sums of $50 each. They were accused of stealing some wearing apparel from Lizzie Mrnek, a Polish woman, of 333 Johnston avenue, on April 17.

Both of the accused women had infants in their arms when led before the court this morning and both pleaded not guilty to the charge.

In General Collins' Honor.

A banquet complimentary to Democratic State Committeeman Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, will be held in Turn Hall, Elizabeth, on May 3. Preeparations have been going on for some time and the sale of tickets is reported to be large. Invitations have been sent out to prominent Democrats and the affair is expected to take on a semi-political aspect.

Feet So Sore Couldn't Walk Down Stairs—

TIZ Cured Her Quick.

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crockett, of Jeffersonville. TIZ DID IT. Mr. Crockett says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs one foot at a time. She has not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years, except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use TIZ. It's different. It acts right off. It cures sore feet to stay cured. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25c per box, or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

The funeral of Reginald W. Payne, son of the late sheriff, George W. Payne, was held at Millville yesterday afternoon. Mr. Payne has been ill since the death of his father, and was removed to a hospital at Vineland, but did not rally. He is survived by a widow and one child.

The body dragged from the Delaware River, near Pennsgrove, Monday, in a shad fisherman's net, has been identified as that of Private Edward H. Howell, a member of the Thirty-sixth Company, Coast Artillery, stationed at Fort du Point, who fell from the government tug General Howe, while on his way to Wilmington a few days before Christmas. Another soldier in the party jumped overboard and attempted to rescue him, but failed. Howell came from Illinois, and the body has been shipped to his home.

WESTFIELD.

Farmers of Clark Township whose lands adjoin the reservoir of the Middlesex Water Company are complaining of the action of the company in placing a flashboard on top of the spillway by the pumping station. Placing this board on the top of the spillway raises the water in the reservoir about eighteen inches, and they claim that this sends the backwater flooding land outside that of the company. The water in the reservoir is higher now than it has ever been since the dam was built. Foster M. Voorhees is looking after the interests of those who consider themselves aggrieved.

500 Ostermoor Mattresses $12.50

ON SALE TWO DAYS, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

The celebrated Ostermoor Mattress is known the world over as one of the most remarkable mattresses ever produced; it is built of especially selected Ostermoor sheets, all hand laid; the cotton is first subjected to such a process as evolves an entirely different fabric, just as cloth is produced from wool; the sheet or layers of cotton are 2½ inches in thickness, wonderfully soft and elastic, impervious to moisture, proof against vermin; permanently elastic, does not mat, pack, lump or bunch; evenly tufted; closed within ticking entirely by hand; edges are carefully stitched; all covers are matched; the tickings are beautifully mercerized French Art Twills of the best quality, in green, tan, drab, pink, blue and the good old fashioned blue and white stripe; sizes are 4 ft. 6, 4 ft., 3 ft. 6 and 3 ft.

Our regular selling price is $18—a regulated and restricted price by Ostermoor; by special permission these will be sold at a cut price on account of the coverings being very slightly soiled—so slightly that it will be hard to detect it; Friday and Saturday....$12.50

Mail and telephone orders accepted.

News and Notes

BASEBALL.

Truly Warner, the hatter, has written to Walter C. Walsh, manager of the Newark branch store, giving him permission to close the establishment today on account of the opening of the Eastern League season in Newark. Mr. Warner is a great admirer of Manager Joe McGinnity, of the Indians, and wishes him and his team success from the start. He adds that he hopes to see the employes of the Newark store enjoy the contest and make a good showing at the game.

Rube Marquard held Bad Bill Dahlen's Superbas to four scattered hits. The big southpaw had eight strike-outs to his credit, fanning three of the Infants in the ninth stanza.

Eddie Grant, the third baseman, who was one of the men in the trade last winter between the Reds and the Phillies, batted at a great clip Tuesday against the St. Louis Cardinals. The former Phillie made three bingles, including a drive for three-quarters of the circuit.

Oscar Strange, who is likely to do the bulk of the catching for Detroit this season, is batting the ball at a lively clip to date. In the game against the Naps Tuesday he poled out two hits out of four times up. He also accepted four chances in the field without a miss.

George Stallings' Bisons defeated the Lynn New England League team Tuesday in a heavy hitting game at Lynn by a score of 12 to 4. The Buffalo players poled out seventeen safe drives, while the New Englanders broke into the "H" column fourteen times. Merritt and Corridon were on the mound for the Eastern Leaguers.

Nap Lajoie, the big Frenchman, who covers the keystone bag for the Naps, was put out of the game Tuesday at Detroit for disputing a decision of Umpire Sheridan. It is likely that the Nap will draw a three-day suspension or a fine.

Pitcher "Tiny" Leonard, First Baseman Eddie Wilkinson, and Outfielder Norman Lynch, of the St. Mary's College team, left Oakland, Cal., Tuesday for New York to join the New York American League team.

It is likely that Jimmy Jones, who played with Montreal last year, will perform on the New York State League this season. Manager Monte Cross, of the Scranton team is trying to purchase the outfielder from Eddie McCafferty.

Tom Hughes, of the Senators, stopped the winning streak of the Yankees Tuesday. The curveologist of the Senators held the New Yorkers to four scattered hits and shut them out by a score of 2 to 0.

Left Fielder Schaefer, of Washington, poled out three hits Tuesday, out of four times up. All of his drives were singles.

Milan robbed Sweeney, of the Yankees, of a home run drive Tuesday by making a spectacular catch in deep right field. Had the ball got by him the score would have been tied, as Cree had previously tripled.

Earl von Ohl, the southpaw pitcher of the St. Louis Americans, who is a resident of Philadelphia and the son of John von Ohl, the secretary of John Shibe, of the Athletics, was married in Detroit on April 14 to a wealthy Michigan girl, Miss Helen Newbold Garrison, who is well known in the Western city. Ohl may give up baseball.

GOLF

Although W. D. Robinson is no longer connected with the Country Club, of Atlantic City, in the capacity of professional golfer, he has not forgotten how to reel off the rounds in low figures. In a match there on Sunday "Robie" took the measure of his successor, J. J. McDermott. They had two eighteen-hole contests, and Robinson won both. A short time ago McDermott defeated his rival, and now a third meeting is being arranged. Robinson left Atlantic City to take charge of the course at the Spring Lake Country Club. Both he and McDermott are honorables. Last season McDermott achieved fame by getting into a triple tie for first place in the national open championship tournament at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, and later in the season the former Merchantville caddie attracted almost as much attention by finishing second in the metropolitan open at Deal.

Among close followers of the game McDermott's hump of self-esteem is as well known as his ability as a player. The Irish-American will tell any one who cares to listen that he is a fine player, and if the listener should be skeptical the "pro" always stands ready to give a demonstration. He has his own ideas how the shots should be made, and he is really a closer student of golf than many suppose.

Raymond V. Brokaw, of the borough, has returned to Wesleyan University where he is a sophomore, following recovery from injuries received while at college.

APPOINTED DELEGATES TO THE GENERAL SYNOD

Rev. Dr. Albertus Broek was elected president at the Spring meeting of the Classis of Newark, convened at the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, Newark, of which he is pastor, yesterday morning. Rev. J. Tucker Lansdale, of Marconnier chapel, was the next in order for the office, but not being present at the time of convening, Dr. Broek was chosen, being next in rotation.

All the churches in the Classis were represented and with one exception, The Franklin, submitted very gratifying reports. They were read by the retiring president, Rev. F. B. Pullan. The Netherwood Reformed church asked for and was granted assistance from the Domestic Board of Missions, the amount being $100 less than last year. Marconnier was also granted the same amount as last year.

Those present from Plainfield were Rev. J. Y. Broek and Elder A. L. Force, of Trinity Reformed church; Rev. Royal A. Stout and Elder J. C. Hansen, of the Netherwood Reformed church and later in the session Rev. J. T. Lansdale, of Marconnier chapel, arrived. Routine business was rapidly, but systematically transacted at the morning and afternoon sessions by the able ruling of President Broek and at 4:30 the Classis adjourned. Rev. Royal A. Stout opened the afternoon session with prayer.

A well served course dinner took place at Davis' restaurant on Broad street. The Classis in appointing delegates to the General Synod at Asbury Park in June, honored Plainfield by selecting Rev. J. Y. Broek and A. L. Force. The president of Classis and Rev. Dr. Bishop were also selected as delegates to synod. The Fall session of Classis will be held in October in Trinity church, Newark.

CHAPEL CONGREGATION REVIEWS YEAR'S WORK

The congregation of Warren chapel held the annual business meeting in the Sunday school rooms last night, for the purpose of hearing reports and electing officers. All the departments were represented and a most satisfactory condition of affairs was shown to exist. The chapel as a whole had a successful year.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey was in charge of the meeting and the reports from each organization was made by a representative. It was stated that the church membership at this time last year was 250. Twenty-eight had been added, but eight had been lost by death and dismissal, making a net gain of twenty. The total amount raised by the combined departments was $3,598.94, while the total receipts from all sources, including the balance from the previous year, was $5,817.65. The various organizations paid off $700 on the chapel mortgage since the last annual meeting.

The report from the Sunday school showed that the enrollment is 429 with an average attendance of 242. In the home department there are seventy-two and on the cradle roll 52. In the past twelve months the school raised $467.30. The Junior Christian Endeavor Society with a membership of fifty also made a good report.

One of the most interesting accounts of the evening came from the signal corps. Twenty-six boys belong to it and all are uniformed and equipped with carbines. DeWitt Brokaw is the leader and drill master. The corps held an entertainment in the Park Club during the year and raised $151 for its fund. A great deal of interest is manifested in the work and the organization contributes no small part to the spiritual welfare of the boys in the chapel.

Another interesting report came from the sewing school in charge of Miss Laura Lovell. It has three departments for instruction in plain sewing, cooking and dressmaking. There are eighty children enrolled and the attendance averages fifty-five. In the past seven years it has graduated 125 children.

The Wednesday evening missionary meeting showed good results for the year. The attendance was very good and $300 was contributed to home and foreign missions. The Christian Endeavor Society, with a membership of 36, raised $365.41 during the year. The total amount given for benevolence by the church altogether for the year was stated to be $960.

The election of officers resulted as follows: R. O. Stewart, clerk of the church for two years; Charles F. Bryant, treasurer of Wednesday night missionary meeting; finance committee, Charles P. Wheeler, treasurer; Andrew J. Stiglitz, R. S. Louis, Joseph W. Gavett and William Demarest; ways and means committee, George M. Hoagland and E. Gibson Smith for three years; Horace E. Bunker and William J. Boyd, two years; L. A. Haring and George B. Zimmer, one year. Joseph W. Gavett is superintendent of the Sunday school.

PRINCETON STADIUM EXPECTED IN TWO YRS

Predictions are being made that Princeton University will have an athletic stadium within two years. The Princeton Alumni Weekly offered the following feasible plan recently:

"Raise funds by subscription from alumni and friends of the university and let the athletic association pay into the general funds of the university an annual interest of 5 per cent. on the funds thus raised, and in addition pay to the university an annual installment of $12,500 on the principal, thus adding the entire $250,000 to the university's endowment at the end of fifteen years."

At the regular spring meeting of the graduate council, held April 7, Director of Athletics William Roper, '02 indorsed this plan in a communication which embodied his report as Director. Mr. Roper's report stated that the attendance at the Yale-Princeton football game had increased steadily; in 1900 the attendance was 13,000, in 1910 28,000, the full capacity of the stands. He said that there was an increasing demand for seats, and that with the Harvard game the demand would also increase.

JERSEY MASONS HOLD THEIR COMMUNICATION

The annual communication of the Grand Lodge Free and Accepted Masons of New Jersey began yesterday morning in Masonic Temple hall, Trenton, with an attendance of several hundred representatives from all parts of the State. Grand Master Alton H. Sherman presided. The day's session was taken up with presentation of reports of the officers and committees. Last evening the annual grand master's dinner took place in the Trenton House, covers being laid for more than one hundred.

Today the election of officers takes place, and it is expected that Deputy Grand Master Leslie A. Burritt, of Bayonne, will be elected grand master, and the other officers advanced in rotation. Deputy Grand Secretary Benjamin F. Wakefield, of Trenton, is practically certain of re-election. Grand Secretary W. D. Rutan, of Newark, is slated for re-election, as is Grand Treasurer William F. Burk, of Trenton.

The various committees met in Masonic Temple last evening and transacted considerable routine business. District deputies will be named at today's session.

At yesterday's session Grand Master Sherman spoke of the inability of representatives to the session to obtain hotel accommodations, owing to the rooms being taken by the legislators. He suggested that the next communication be held either at Asbury Park or Atlantic City, which cities have plenty of hotels. It is hardly likely that the proposition of moving the grand lodge about the State will prevail.

LIBRARY COMMISSION TO HOLD AN INSTITUTE

The New Jersey Public Library Commission, which has arranged for an institute of library science at Asbury Park from Monday, May 1, to Saturday, May 6, inclusive, has prepared an attractive program. It will be under the direction of Miss Sarah B. Askew and Miss Edna B. Pratt, the commission's organizers. The course will be open to librarians-in-charge and to library assistants.

The program for the morning session will include the following lectures: "Psychological Aspects of Reading for Boys and Girls Between the Ages of Twelve and Thirteen," by G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark University; "Social Forces in Children's Literature," by Montrose J. Moses; "The Art of Printing and Social Progress," by Dr. J. P. Lichtenberger, professor of sociology in the University of Pennsylvania; "Literary Values," by Hamilton W. Mabie. The lecture of Mr. Mabie will include a discussion of the following questions: The responsibility of the library to the community on the question of morals; how far can we go in offering inferior books? What constitutes a real book?

Other features of the morning sessions will be a lecture on "Shakespeare," by Dr. Nathaniel Schmidt, professor of Semitic languages in Cornell University, and an illustrated lecture on "Child Welfare Work," by E. H. Anderson, assistant director of the New York Public Library.

In the afternoons there will be lectures and round-table talks on a number of selected subjects. These will include: "Book Buying," by Frank P. Hill, director of the Brooklyn Public Library; "Publishers," by Adam Strohm, librarian of the Trenton Public Library; "Book Ordering," by F. W. Jenkins, of Scribner's "Cataloguing," by Miss Theresa Hitchler, head of the cataloguing department of the Brooklyn Public Library; "Children's Work," by Miss Annie Carroll Moore, supervisor of children's work in the New York Public Library.

Besides these subjects there will be afternoon discussions on "Government Documents, Their Care and the Material to Be Found in Them," by Miss Jane Donnelly, director of the Drexel Institute Library and Library School, and Miss Adelaide R. Hasse, in charge of governmental document work in the New York Public Library; "Book Selection," by Arthur L. Bailey, of the Wilmington Institute Free Library; "Reference Work," by W. P. Cutter, librarian of the Technical Library of the United Engineering Societies of New York City.

Other features will include lectures on "Bookbinding," by Cedric Chivers, and "Book Mending," by Miss Murray, who is in charge of that work in the New York Public Library.

Other permanent exhibits at the institute will include a model children's room, furnished by the library bureau, and containing from other sources picture bulletins, picture books and comparative editions of children's books; all kinds of library supplies, loan collections of books and supplementary pictures, an exhibit of magazine binders, a series of cuts showing the evolution of an illustration, photograph collections in use in various libraries, "The Physical Book," loaned by the Newark Public Library; various aids to librarians in the way of regular and occasional publications and a demonstration of economic book buying.

The Young Ladies' Aid Society of the Evangelical Lutheran church, will meet this evening at the home of Miss Emily Eckhart, 33 Regent street, the borough.

Members of the City Union of The King's Daughters are reminded of the annual meeting to be held Thursday afternoon, May 4, in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Frederic Thompson's great success, "Polly of the Circus," will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night, April 24. The story, telling of a pretty circus rider, by profession and heredity, compelled by an injury to remain in the house of a young country preacher until the pruderly-ridden yokels making up his congregation are aflame with narrow rage against the pair, and her subsequent flight back to the tents to make his lot easier, is one which grasps and retains the interest. The second scene of the play, which finds Polly in the parson's home telling him of her circus life and later when he reads to her from the Bible of Ruth's devotion of Naomi, the little girl's first glimpse of what the book contains reaches a point apart from the ordinary things of the stage. And then there is a happy and logical ending to it, all of which the audience finds agreeable.

The Myrkle-Harder Company, which is the attraction at the Plainfield theatre this week will present for the first time tonight at popular prices, the western character play, "Texas." Although western, it is not a cheap blood and thunder of the order that authors had ideas years ago of the west, but a pretty story told of human beings that live out in the west, their costumes, habits, love, dislikes and manner of living, etc. In recent years authors have entirely changed the writings of the west and "Texas" is a refined, dignified characterization of the golden west. The comedy is of that good, wholesome kind that grip you and not shock you. The characters are noble and loyal and not overdrawn. The play is almost a musical comedy, as it has its own songs, incidental music, etc. This production is carried complete by the Myrkle-Harder Company and is one of their feature bills.

—Robert Murray, the auctioneer, will conduct an auction sale tomorrow, Friday, at Elizabeth, the furnishings of a 12-room house, modern and antique furniture will be sold at 26 Caldwell place. **

MEASURE TO RESTRICT THE USE OF FIREARMS

Another bill aimed at greater protection against the promiscuous carrying of revolvers was introduced in the Senate at Trenton yesterday afternoon by Senator Silzer, of Middlesex county. It provides that it shall not be lawful to sell, barter, hire or loan to any person, except the prosecutor of the pleas, sheriff or deputy, or public officer or detective, any pistol or revolver, unless such person shall have a written permit from the mayor of the city or town. A $5 license is provided. Permits last for one year. Persons selling firearms must keep a record of sale, giving name of purchaser. Violations of this act shall be considered a misdemeanor.

Senate No. 358, introduced by Mr. Gaunt, amends the insurance act so as to permit employers to form insurance companies for the purpose of insuring employes in the event of both death and accident.

C. L. Gulick New Organist.

Charles L. Gulick, of New York, who presided at the organ at the Slocum-Daniel wedding at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Tuesday evening, will succeed Alexander Russell, as organist of the church May 1, having been engaged by the music committee of the church. Mr. Gulick has had considerable experience as a church organist and comes highly recommended. Mr. Russell will take a position in Brooklyn. The new tenor has not been engaged yet. The other member of the quartet remain.

Attended Consecration Services.

The Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of New Jersey, Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and Rev. Dr. Cooder, of Rahway, were the only representatives of the New Jersey Diocese that attended the consecration services held at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York, yesterday. Mayor G. W. V. Moy, of this city, was among the specially invited guests, and was deeply impressed with the services.

Brightside Circle of The King's Daughters will hold an "Evening of Music," at the home of Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, of Fairview avenue, this evening. The public is invited.

TALKS ON TARIFF

A. H. Atterbury Gives First of Series of Addresses on the Republican Principle.

BURDEN ON THE CONSUMER.

America's Oldest Political Question the Theme of an Interesting Discussion by a Prominent Lawyer.

A rather slim audience greeted Albert H. Atterbury at Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening, when the first of a series of talks on Free Trade and the tariff was given. Mr. Atterbury has made a careful study of economics with special reference to taxation and in his talk last night, impressed those who heard him with facts concerning the present high cost of living and the reason for it. He said in part:

"The tariff is the oldest political question in our history and has survived slavery and free silver. It is important just now because people blame it as one cause for the high cost of living and many persons who were indifferent ten years ago are now forced to give it attention.

"It is curious how few persons understand the question. Most people think it is very complicated and can only be understood by special students but it is really very simple and depends on a few simple principles. The tariff arose out of the need to raise money to carry on the government, and the easiest way to do this was to tax imports.

"A nation must have foreign trade for one nation is fitted to produce on thing, and another nation another, and when each does what it can do best and exchanges its surplus product for the surplus of other nations, we will have the maximum production, and each nation will get the greatest possible amount of the good things of life. But in so far as trade is hampered and restricted just so far is production lessened. It is just the same in private life where each man sticks to his own trade and exchanges his surplus product for the surplus of other workers. Now as all our foreign trade comes through a few ports it is easy to impose a duty or tax on all imported goods because the stuff is right there and the owner must pay the duty before he can get his goods.

"But when things are imported for profit the importer adds the duty to the cost when he sells to the wholesaler, and he adds it on when he sells to the retail merchant, and the latter adds it on when he sells to the consumer. Each one passes it on till it gets to the consumer and he is at the end of the line and must pay it. Mr. Atterbury pointed out that the same thing happens with local taxes on real estate. A house renting for $15 a month is taxed about two months rent or $30. The landlord pays this in the first place, but he adds it to the rent and passes it on to the tenant and the tenant is the one who really pays it. In the same way the importer is merely a collecting agent for the government and the tax falls finally on the consumer. Protectionists seldom refer to this feature of a tariff, they speak freely of its beneficent features, but never talk about its burdens.

"It was impossible to evade or avoid these taxes; they must be paid just like the butcher or the grocer. If an imported article is increased in price by a tariff a domestic article will be increased also; there cannot be two prices in the same market, and the highest price paid will be the ruling price, too. If the price of an English coat is raised $3 by a duty the American coat will also go up $3. This is not well understood; even Mr. Carnegie in an article in the "Century" asserted that the only persons affected by a tariff tax were the people who bought the imported articles."

After the address the audience spent about half an hour in asking questions and expressing their views on the subject, and they found this a novel and interesting feature.

The next meeing will be held next Wednesday evening and the topic will be the burden of the tariff; who pays it and who gets it and its affect on wages.

FUND FOR COUNTY SHOW BALANCE OF $838,623.

The Auditing Committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders have examined the account books of County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt. This examination is made quarterly by the committee. The committee found that since January 1, the collector's receipts have been $996,406.33; disbursements, $838,623.42, leaving a balance on hand of $157,782.01. This balance is in deposit in nine different banks throughout Union county, three of which are in Elizabeth.

The rate of interest the county receives from the banks outside of Elizabeth is three per cent., but from the Elizabeth banks the county receives two per cent. This is done on account of the fact that when the County Collector wants to borrow money in anticipation of taxes, he gets it from the Elizabeth banks at a lower rate of interest than he would were he to receive the three per cent. for deposits in the Elizabeth banks. Mr. Leavitt's books show that since January he has received $1,629.29 as interest on depostis.

The Auditing Committee of the Board of Freeholders is composed of S. P. T. Wilbur, Charles A. Smith and Bradford Jones.

PLUMBING ORDINANCE VIOLATION ALLEGED.

Following a complaint made by Health Officer John O'Brien, Jr., Lambert R. Edmunds, of 680 West Front street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning charged with violating the plumbing ordinance, relating to smok tests in new plumbing.

According to testimony by both Mr. O'Brien and Inspector William Addis, Edmunds had neglected to comply with orders of the Board of Health relative to an addition to a building occupied by W. Seabacher, on Rahway road. The building has been occupied since last July and the plumbing work was inspected by Mr. Addis and certain of his recommendations were not carried out, so it was alleged.

Judge DeMeza reserved decision in the case until next Saturday morning.

MRS. SARAH NELSON STRICKEN BY APOPLEXY.

Miss Sarah Nelson, formerly of West Front and Liberty streets but who has been living with Mrs. Jeremiah Manning on Myrtle avenue for the past year, is critically ill, having suffered a stroke of apoplexy on Tuesday. Since then she has been unconscious and the physician in charge gives no hope for recovery. Miss Nelson's sister, Mrs. Nelson Gardner, of Boston, has been summoned and is expected today.

Miss Nelson was engaged with some work in the kitchen when stricken on Tuesday, and had to be assisted by members of the household. The attack was sudden, and a great surprise for Miss Nelson had been in the best of health. She is a sister of the late Edward Nelson, who for many years was ticket agent at the North Avenue Station.

Samuel Y. Clark.

Samuel Y. Clark, father of Samuel W. Clark, formerly of this city, but now of New York, died this morning at the home of his son, 610 Riverside Drive, New York, following a short illness from complications. Mr. Clark formerly lived at Westfield for many years. His wife died about a month ago. Mr. Clark is survived by the one son, who is a son-in-law of James P. Homan, of this city. The funeral will be held Saturday morning at 10:30 at the late residence in New York and the burial will be at Westfield.

S. C. Ryder, of Brooklyn, a former resident of this city, is visiting his son, E. B. Ryder, of Central avenue.

The congregation of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will give their pastor, Rev. C. S. Kemble, a reception on Thursday evening, April 27.

VISITORS ENTERTAINED BY ROYAL COUNCIL.

Royal Council Sr., O. U. A. M., at its meeting, last night, enjoyed a fraternal visit from several officers prominent in the order and a delegation from Relief Council, of New Brunswick. Among those present were State Councilor Asay, of Mt. Holly; former National Councilor Charles, of New York; State Council Deputy Townley, of Elizabeth; State Vice-Councilor James E. Church, of this city, and District Deputy DeHart, of Milltown.

There was no special program arranged, but a number of excellent talks for the good of the order were heard by the members, showing the rapid growth and progress in membership and interest not only in the State, but throughout the country. During a social hour refreshments were served and a smoker enjoyed.

PROVISIONS OF GERAN MEASURE

Not More Than 400 Voters Permitted In District.

MAKES CHANGES IN BALLOT.

Bill Fixes Method of Choosing Election Officers, Delegates and Candidates For Office, the Holding of Primaries and Conventions and System For Recording Votes.

Section 1 of the Geran bill provides that no election district shall contain more than 400 voters and the method for keeping each that size.

The county chairman of each political party which at the last election for assemblymen cast the largest and the next largest number of votes by section 2 shall by the 1st of May in each year transmit to the civil service commission a list of recommendations for election officers in his county. Five legal voters of one of the parties, all of the same district, may also nominate one election officer to the civil service commissioners by petition.

The county committee shall elect the county chairman on the first Tuesday after the primaries for a term of one year. The term of office of the members of the county committee heretofore elected shall expire on the first Tuesday after the primaries.

Each petition must be verified by the oath of one or more of the signers and certify that the signers voted at the last election for a majority of the candidates of their party, that they intend to do so at the ensuing election, that the person indorsed by them is of good moral character and qualified to be such election officer under the act. No person shall indorse more than one such petition. Each person so indorsed must certify under oath that he is qualified under the act.

Civil Service Examinations.

The civil service board must hold the examination in each county before Aug. 15. The examination shall determine whether the applicants possess the ability to distinguish readily the ordinary colors, such eyesight as to read, with or without glasses, nonpareil type and the English language readily, to add and subtract figures correctly, to write a legible hand with reasonable facility, a reasonable conception of the duties of election officer, health which would permit him to fill the office, that he is of good moral character, has resided in his district for one year and is a legal voter thereof.

By Aug. 15 of each year the civil service board shall certify to the common pleas judges and to the county election boards the applicants who have passed the examination and the party to which each belongs. For the expenses of the civil service board under the act $10,000 annually is appropriated.

By Aug. 25 of each year the county election board is to write each name so certified by the civil service board and the district in which he resides on a separate piece of paper, so folded as to conceal the name and district and of as near the same size, color and shape as possible.

In the presence of the county judge these papers are to be placed in a separate box for each party and the boxes well shaken. The county board or some person appointed by the judge shall publicly draw out the names separately until in each district an election board of two of each party has been provided. The county judge is given power to correct any error in the method of doing this.

Filling Vacancies.

Vacancies may be filled by the county judge, and they shall be without civil service examination. The term of the election officer is two years, and an applicant need be examined only once in six years. A voter who questions the regularity of an appointment can apply to the circuit or county judge, and if he establishes his objection under the act the judge can cancel the appointment and fill the vacancy. Municipalities shall bear the expenses under the act within their borders.

In municipalities of over 5,000 inhabitants each election officer shall receive for the primary election day $15, for mailing primary and election sample ballots $4, for each registry day $8 and for election day $15. In all other municipalities for each registry day and making the house to house canvass $4 in all districts having more than 200 voters and $3 for districts of less than 200, for primary day $9 in the districts having over 200 and $6 in the less than 200 voters district, for mailing the sample ballots $4, for election day $9 in the first and $6 in the second class of districts.

In the third section it is provided that all delegates and alternates to national conventions shall be chosen at the primaries. By May 1 100 citizens may nominate by petition to the secretary of state a candidate for delegate at large or alternate or of a congressional district where the district is larger than a single county. In other districts these petitions shall be filed with the county clerks. These candidates may have the candidate for president whom they favor placed opposite their names on the tickets.

Electing National Delegates.

Section 4 provides for the distribution by the municipal clerk of the books and stationery required for the election. Primaries for national delegates shall be held on the fourth Tuesday of May from 1 to 9 p. m. and shall be conducted under the present primary law as near as may be.

The election board by the Tuesday preceding the primary election must mail a copy of the official sample primary ballot of each party to each registered voter and must mail the same by noon of the Wednesday preceding the primary.

Each board shall return to said clerk the unused sample ballots and stamped envelopes with a written statement signed by all of the members of said board to the effect that the remainder of said sample ballots and envelopes were actually mailed or posted as provided in this act.

Each envelope shall have printed on its face "Sample Primary Ballot" and a notice of return to the clerk if not delivered in two days. All returned envelopes shall be kept by the municipal clerk for thirty days, open to public inspection, and sample ballots shall not be voted.

Colored Ballots.

These sample ballots are to be printed on paper different in color from the official ballot, and the clerk of the election board must post them in the polling place and five other public places.

Section 5 permits 1,000 voters of any party to indorse by petition to the secretary of state a candidate for president, whose name shall be printed upon the official primary ballot of their party. The petition must be verified by oath. The names so indorsed shall go on the primary ticket under the heading "Choice For President."

The first registry day, according to section 6, in municipalities of over 5,000 shall be on the second Tuesday of September, and on that day the election board shall place on the list all persons who appear upon the poll book as having voted in the district at the last preceding election, also the names of all persons who appear in person and on the primary registry list, but not on the general election registry list, all voters presented by affidavit, placing "R" opposite the names which appear in the Republican primary book and "D" opposite those on the Democratic book. Provision is also made for the furnishing by the municipal clerk a list of the voters whenever the poll book of the previous year has been lost or destroyed. The same provision as in the case of the primaries for delegates to the national convention is made for mailing sample copies of the primary ballot to each registered voter.

Meeting of Election Boards.

Section seven provides that the election boards in municipalities of 5,000 or less shall first meet on the first registry day on the second Tuesday in September and shall make up the registry by a house to house canvass as now provided by law and shall, on the primary day hereinafter fixed, use as a registry list for the said primary the registry list for the general election which the said boards are now required by law to prepare, and each of said boards shall cause the said registry list to be made up and open to inspection ten days prior to said primary day. Said list shall contain the letters "R" and "D," to be inserted therein in manner and form as hereinbefore provided.

The provisions of the general election law of 1898 applying to municipalities of less than 30,000 inhabitants shall hereafter apply only to municipalities of 5,000 inhabitants or less except as the new act shall otherwise provide.

The county board of elections shall sit on the Friday succeeding the first registry day, as hereinafter defined, for the purpose of revising and correcting the said primary registry list. The said county board shall have power to strike off the primary registry list the names of all persons who shall be shown, by evidence satisfactory to the board, not to be qualified to vote at the said ensuing primary election.

Dissatisfied Voters.

Any voter dissatisfied with such action of the county board may complain to the county judge, who may hear the complaint summarily and make such order as may be just and which the county and district board shall obey.

The second registry day in all municipalities shall be upon the fourth Tuesday of September in each year, and upon said registry day the district boards in each election district shall conduct the primary elections as provided by law from 7 o'clock a. m. to 9 o'clock p. m. Each voter offering to vote shall announce his name and the party primary in which he wishes to vote. If challenged he shall swear that he is a member of the party named; that he voted for a majority of its candidates at the last election and that he intends to support that party at the ensuing election.

Election of Senators.

At the request of a primary candidate the municipal clerk shall print opposite his name on the ticket a designation in not more than six words to indicate either any official act or policy to which the candidate is pledged or to distinguish him as belonging to a particular faction of his party. Several candidates, who so request, shall be bracketed together and such a designation printed opposite their names.

Each candidate for the nomination for senate or assembly shall file with his nominating petition a statement to the effect that he will vote for that candidate for United States senator who has received the highest number of votes in his party in the state at the primary election or this:

"During my term of office I shall consider the vote of the people for United States senator in congress as a recommendation which I shall be at liberty to disregard if the reason for doing so seems to me to be sufficient."

Section 9 declares that all candidates for governor and congressmen shall be nominated at the primaries. One thousand voters of a party may sign the nominating petitions for governor and 200 in a congressional district those for congressmen. The signers to these petitions may name three men in their petition as a committee on vacancies, who in case of the death of a person indorsed may file a new petition not less than fifteen days prior to the primaries indorsing a new candidate. The ballot to be used at the primaries is described, and the directions to the voter how to mark his ballot are set forth. There shall be no indorsement upon the back of any ballot, and the distribution and use of the official ballot shall be confined to the polling room exclusively.

Should any voter spoil the ballot given him when he goes to vote he shall receive another, but no more than two shall be furnished any voter except at the discretion of the board. If a voter marks his ballot for more candidates for any office than are to be selected therefor the ballot shall not be void as to the candidate for any other office.

Personal Registration.

In section 11 it is provided that in municipalities of more than 5,000 inhabitants a personal registration shall be required and no registration by affidavit shall be allowed. The third registration day therein shall be on Tuesday two weeks next preceding the general election. Directions for arranging the registry books in these municipalities of over 5,000 are also given. The leaves of the book shall be indexed from A to Z.

In the first column there shall be entered a number opposite each name at the completio of the registration on the last day. In the second and third columns the surname and Christian name respectively; in the fourth column the number and in the fifth the street of the voter's residence; in the sixth column the number of the floor or room occupied; in the seventh column the full name of the householder, tenant, subtenant or apartment lessee with whom the voter resides; in the eighth column the voter's age; in the ninth his length of residence by years in the state; in the tenth the country of his nativity; in the eleventh the name of the municipality from which he last registered or voted; in the twelfth if the voter is in business for himself or with others the name under which he is so in business or the name of his present employer. If he is not in business and has no employment there shall be entered the name under which he was last in business or the name of his last employer.

"Signature Copy."

These statements must be signed as true by the voter and shall be known as "signature copy." If the voter cannot write one of the board shall take down his answers to these questions: "What is your father's full name? Your mother's full name? Are you married or single? Where did you actually reside immediately prior to taking up your present residence? State floor and character of the premises."

These are to be known as identification statements for registery day, and the county clerk shall furnish five copies of them to the chief of police of the municipality to ascertain if the statements are true.

The chief's reports are to be kept for public inspection. On election in municipalities of over 5,000 similar questions are to be signed by the voter and the signatures compared. If the signatures appear to be the same a member of the board shall so certify in the poll book.

If the voter says he cannot read he is to be asked the questions he was asked when he registered and the answers compared. Any one who prompts him in these answers shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. This proceeding shall be in full view of the challengers and watchers who shall have the right to challenge. If the majority of the board decides against receiving the vote the voter shall swear it in.

Arrest of Voters.

Upon the demand of a member of the board or any other citizen the board shall issue forthwith a warrant for the voter and deliver to any peace officer, who shall forthwith arrest the voter. Transfers must be secured from the supreme court justice or the circuit or county judge of the county. In section 12 the ballot is described and directions for voting it given.

There shall be furnished to each election board twice as many official ballots for use of the voters in the polling places on election day as there are voters registered in said election district.

The same provision is made for the printing of the official sample ballots and mailing one to each registered voter as in the case of the sample primary ballots.

Section 13 provides the method of voting. Each voter shall first give his full name and address and shall sign the poll book. If found to be registered he shall be given a ballot numbered to correspond to the voter's number on the poll book allowing for spoiled ballots, if any. The ballot shall be folded so that no part of its face is observable. The voter shall then retire to the booth and prepare his ballot by placing an X in black ink or black pencil opposite the name of the candidate for whom he wishes to vote. Before leaving the booth the voter must fold his ballot so that no part of its face is visible and so as to display the face of the numbered coupon. The member of the board having charge of the ballot box shall tear off the numbered coupon and place the ballot in the box and the coupon on a string. The ballot shall be kept in full view of the voter and the election board until it is deposited in the box, and the voter may take hold of it until it is actually deposited in the box.

Care of Ballots.

No official ballots (other than official sample ballots) shall be distributed outside the polling place. When one ballot box is filled with ballots the board shall seal the same and provide another. No envelopes shall be used for inclosing the ballots on election day. Said coupons and all spoiled and unused ballots shall be placed inside the ballot boxes and returned to the municipal clerk therewith. If a voter marks more names than there are persons to be elected to an office or his choice cannot be determined, his ballot shall not be counted for such office, but shall be counted for such other offices as are properly marked. Ballots cast but not counted shall be marked "defective" on the outside thereof and shall be preserved like other ballots.

The same provision for assisting a voter to prepare his ballot is made as at the primary election, and no member of the board who renders such assistance shall reveal the name of any person for whom the voter has voted or anything that took place while such voter was being assisted.

State Convention.

The officer or body which now defrays the expenses of primary and general elections shall pay the additional expenses created by the act, and the board of freeholders shall have the aperture in the ballot boxes enlarged to three inches to half an inch, so as to receive the new ballot and remove from the boxes any marking and stamping devices. They may furnish new boxes if necessary.

Section 14 provides that there shall be a state convention of each party each year made up of the party candidates for the senate and assembly; the candidate for governor, and if no governor is to be elected the governor in office in the convention of the party to which he belongs; members of the senate whose successors are not to be elected that year and the members of the state committee. These conventions are to be held in Trenton on the Tuesday following the primaries and shall adopt a platform.

The State Committee.

At the September primaries of the year wherein a governor is to be elected a member of the state committee of each of said political parties shall be elected in each county in the same manner as is provided by the act for the election of chairman of the county committee. Members of the state committee shall serve for three years or until their successors are elected. Said state committee shall choose its chairman and the members of the national committee of their political party.

Section 15 provides that the chairman of the county committee of each political party shall be elected by the members thereof annually. The said county chairman shall be a member of and preside over the meetings of the county committee and shall perform the duties required by this act.

It is made a misdemeanor for any unauthorized person to print an official or sample ballot or on or prior to election day to have one in his possession or on any pretext whatever to carry one from the polling place. The act takes effect immediately.

AN ORDINANCE

To Amend an Ordinance Entitled "An Ordinance Establishing a Sanitary Code for the City of Plainfield," Adopted December 18, 1902.

The Board of Health of the City of Plainfield, by virtue of the provisions of the act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey entitled, "An Act to Establish in this State Boards of Health and a Bureau of Vital Statistics, and to define their respective powers and duties," approved March 31, 1887, the several supplements and amendments thereto, and of other acts, doth hereby ordain as follows:

That Article No. 5 of the Ordinance to which this is an amendment be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

ARTICLE NO. 5.

Stables and Manure.

Section 1. Every owner, agent, lessee, tenant, or occupant of any stable, stall, or apartment in which any horse or any other cattle shall be kept, or any place in which any manure or any solid or liquid discharge or excrement may collect or accumulate, shall at all times keep or cause to be kept such stables, stalls or apartments and the drainage yard and appurtenances thereof in a clean, healthful and wholesome condition. In all cases in which this Board shall by written notice, so require, all manure or excrement shall be removed from all stables and premises where it may accumulate, as often as once a week.

Section 2. Every stable or apartment in which any horse or any other cattle shall be kept shall be provided with a properly covered manure vault, or water-tight bin, of sufficient capacity to care for all manure which may accumulate in said stable or apartment, or on said premises; said vault or bin shall be made fly-proof and shall be properly ventilated. Manure shall not be allowed to accumulate except as provided above, without a written permit from this Board of Health.

Section 3. Any person or persons or corporation offending against any of the provisions of this article shall, on conviction thereof, forfeit and pay a penalty of ten dollars ($10) for the first offense, and for each subsequent offense the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25).

That Article No. 10 of the Ordinance to which this is an amendment be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

ARTICLE NO 10.

Concerning the Prevention of Spitting in Public Places.

Section 1. No person shall spit, expectorate or deposit any sputum, saliva, mucous, or any form of sputum, saliva or mucous upon the floor or upon any part of the interior, steps or platforms of any street railway car or other public conveyance, or upon the floors, staircases, or building or upon the steps giving access thereto from the exterior, or upon the sidewalks or cross walks of any street, alley, lane or public place in the City of Plainfield.

Section 2. Any person who shall violate the provisions of this article shall be fined for the first offense ten dollars ($10) and for the second or any subsequent offense twenty-five dollars ($25).

Section 3. Officials in charge or control of street railway cars or other public conveyances, or of any public building, shall post and keep posted, in a conspicuous place, one or more printed notices of the provisions of this article prohibiting expectoration, and the conductor or conductors of any such cars or other public conveyances, and the janitor or persons in charge of any such public buildings, shall call the attention of all violators of this article to such notice and shall immediately report to this Board of Heath any violations thereof, with a description of the person or persons offending this article, and any such person failing to post the notices required by this section, and to make the report herein provided for, for failure so to do, shall forfeit and pay a fine of five dollars ($5.00).

That Article No. 15 of the Ordinance to which this is an amendment be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

ARTICLE NO. 15.

An Ordinance Regulating Barber Shops, Manicuring, Hair Dressing, Shampooing and Chiropodist Establishments in the City of Plainfield.

Section 1. Every person or persons, or corporation, having, keeping, owning, letting or conducting a barber shop, manicuring, hair dressing, shampooing or chiropodist establishment in the City of Plainfield, shall procure a permit in writing from the Board of Health of the City of Plainfield, for which permit the sum of one dollar ($1.00) shall be paid. Even permit to be granted under the provisions of this article shall expire on the first day of June following the granting of the same; provided that if any person, persons or corporation so granted a permit as aforesaid or any of their employes, servants or agents shall violate any ordinance or rule of the Board of Health relating to the conducting of barber shops, manicuring, hair dressing, shampooing or chiropodist establishments, such permit may at the discretion of the Board of Health be revoked.

Section 21. The following rules and regulations must be strictly adhered to and enforced in all barber shops, manicuring, hair dressing, shampooing or chiropodist establishments in the City of Plainfield:

Rule 1. All floors must be swept or mopped every day and all furniture and woodwork kept free from dust and dirt.

Rule 2. Every barber shop, manicuring, hair dressing, shampooing and chiropodist establishment shall be well ventilated and provided with running hot and cold water.

Rule 3. Attendants must wash their hands thoroughly with soap and water before attending any person, and keep their finger nails short and clean.

Rule 4. Mugs and shaving brushes, razors, scissors, clipping machines, pinchers, needles, and other instruments, shall, after each separate use, be sterilized either by immersion in boiling water or in alcohol of 60 per cent. strength, or by other method approved by this Board. Combs and brushes shall be thoroughly cleaned after each separate use, with soap and water and then disinfected by some germicide approved by this Board.

Rule 5. No towel shall be used for more than one person without being thoroughly washed and sterilized.

Rule 6. Powder puffs and sponges may be used only when owned by the customer.

Rule 7. No alum or other astringent shall be used in stick form. If used at all, it must be applied in the form of powder on a clean towel or other clean cloth.

Rule 8. The use of any cosmetic, acid, solution or any article or material, any ingredient of which may be injurious to the skin or hair, is prohibited.

Rule 9. No barber shop, manicuring, hair dressing, shampooing or chiropodist establishment, shall be used as a sleeping place.

Rule 10. A copy of this article shall be posted in a conspicuous place in every barber shop, manicuring, hair dressing, shampooing and chiropodist establishment in the City of Plainfield.

Section 3. Any person or persons or corporation, offending against, or violating any of the provisions of this article shall, on conviction thereof, forfeit and pay a penalty of ten dollars ($10) for each such offense.

ARTICLE NO. 16.

Regulating the Keeping of Rabbits, Guinea Pigs, Goats, Pigeons, Chickens, Ducks, Geese and Other Fowl.

Section 1. No rabbits, guinea pigs, goats, pigeons, chickens, ducks, geese or other fowl, shall be kept within the City of Plainfield except under the following conditions:

Section 2. A permit shall be required therefor from the Board of Health, which permit shall be revocable at the pleasure of the Board, and must be renewed annually. Each permit to be granted under the provisions of this article shall expire on the first day of March following the granting of the same. A fee of twenty-five cents ($.25) shall be paid by the person receiving such permit.

Section 3. Under no conditions shall any of the above mentioned animals or fowls be kept or maintained in tenement houses or tenement house yards, except by written permission of this Board of Health.

Section 4. Such animals or fowls shall under no circumstances be allowed to run at large, but shall be kept confined in a suitable house or coop with an enclosed runway.

Section 5. Such house or coop shall be thoroughly cleaned at least once a week and more often if the Health Officer so require.

Section 6. No part of such house or runway shall be less than twenty-five (25) feet from the doors or windows of any building occupied by human beings, whether for dwelling or business purposes, except by written permission from this Board of Health.

Section 7. Any person, firm or corporation which shall be convicted of a violation of any of the above sections, shall forfeit and pay a penalty of not less than five dollars ($5) nor more than ten dollars ($10) for each and every offense.

Mr. Van Torp sat between her and Lady Margaret, while the two others walked. The deep-cushioned straw chairs stood round a low fixed table on which there had been coffee, and at Margaret's request the light had been put out, though it was only a small, opalescent one, placed under the awning abaft the wheel-house and bridge.

"We must be going very fast," said Lady Maud," for the sea is flat as a millpond, and yet there's a gale as soon as one gets out of the lee of things."

"She's doing 22, I believe," replied Van Torp, "and she can do 23 if pressed. She will, by and by, when she gets warmed up."

"Where are we going?" Margaret asked. "At this rate we are sure to get somewhere!"

"I don't know where we're going, I'm sure." The millionaire smiled in the gloom. "But as you say, it doesn't take more than five minutes to get somewhere in a ship like this."

"You must have told the captain what you wanted him to do! You must have given some orders!"

"Why, certainly. I told him to look around and see if he could find another yacht like this anywhere in the Mediterranean. So he's just looking around, like that, I suppose. And if he finds another yacht anything like this, we'll see which of us can go fastest. You see I don't know anything about ships, or where to go, so I just thought of that way of passing the time, and when you're tired of rushing about and want to go anywhere in particular, why, I'll take you there. If the weather cuts up we'll go in somewhere and wait, and see things on shore. Will that do?"

Margaret laughed at the vagueness of such a roving commission, but Lady Maud looked toward her friend in the starlight and tried to see his expression, for she was sure that he had a settled plan in his mind, which he would probably put into execution.

She rose. "Do you mind very much if I go to bed. I'm rather sleepy after the journey. Oh, I mustn't forget to tell you," she added, speaking to Margaret, "I always lock my door at night, so don't be surprised! If you want to come in and talk when you come down just call, or knock, and I'll let you in directly."

"All right," Margaret answered.

Lady Maud disappeared below, leaving the two together, for Mrs. Rushmore and Kralinsky had found a pleasant sheltered place to sit, further aft, and the Count was explaining to the good American lady the delicious Russian mysteries of "Borshtsh," "Shtshi," "Kasha," and "Smyetany," after extolling the unapproachable flavor of fresh sturgeon's roe, and explaining that "caviare" is not at all the Russian name for it and is not even a Russian word; and Mrs. Rushmore listened with intense interest and stood up for her country, on a basis of Blue Point oysters, planked shad, canvas-backs, and terrapin done in the Philadelphian manner, which she maintained to be vastly superior to the Baltimorian; and each listened to the other with real interest.

Van Torp and Margaret had not been alone together for five minutes since they had left Bayreuth on the previous day, but instead of talking, after Lady Maud was gone, the prima donna began to sing very softly and beautifully—nothing grand nor very difficult; not the waltz-song that had made her famous, nor the "Good Friday" music which she could never sing to the world, but sweet old melodious songs she had learned when a girl; Shubert's "Serenade" and "Ave Maria," and Tosti's "Malia," and then Beethoven's "Adelaide;" and Van Torp was silent and perfectly happy, as well he might be.

When she bid Van Torp good-night she pressed his hand frankly, as she had never done before, but he took no sudden advantage of what he felt in her touch, and he returned the pressure so discreetly that she was almost disappointed, though not quite, for there was just a little something more than usual there.

She did not disturb Lady Maud, either, when she went to her cabin, though if she had known that her beautiful neighbor was wide awake and restless, she would at least have said good-night and asked her if she was still so very tired.

But Lady Maud slept, too, at last, though not very long, and was the only one who appeared at breakfast to keep Van Torp company, for Margaret slept the sleep of a singer, which is deep and long as that of the healthy dormouse, and Mrs. Rushmore had her first tea and toast happily in her cheerful surroundings of pink and gilding. As for Kralinsky, his man informed Stemp and the chief steward that the count never thought of getting up till between nine and ten o'clock, when he took a cup of chocolate and a slice or two of sponge cake in his own room before dressing. So Lady Maud and Van Torp had the yacht to themselves for some time that morning.

"I fancy from what you said last night that your plan is to catch Logotheti and the Tartar girl at sea," said Lady Maud, when they were alone.

"I supposed you'd understand," answered Van Torp. "Do you see any harm in that? It occurred to me that it might be quite a drastic form of demonstration. How does it strike you? At all low-down?"

"No, frankly not!" Lady Maud was still incensed at Logotheti's conduct. "A man who does such things deserves anything that his rival can do to him. I hope you may overhaul the yacht, runalongside of her and show Margaret the two, making love to each other in Tartar on deck! That's the least that ought to happen to him!"

"Thank you. I like to hear you talk like that. Capt. Brown will do his level best, I think. And now, tell me," he lowered his voice a little more, "is that man Leven, or not?"

"I am sure he is," Lady Maud answered, "and yet I feel as if there ought to be a little doubt still. I don't know how to express it, for it's rather an odd sensation."

"I should think it might be! Is there anything I can say or do? I'll ask the man any question you suggest. I'm certain he's not old Levi Longlegs, and if he's not Leven, who on earth is he? That's what I should like to know."

"I shall find out, never fear! I know I shall, because I must, if I am ever to have any peace again. I'm not a very nervous person, you know, am I? But it's more than I can bear long, to sit opposite a man at table, again and again, as I shall have to, and not be sure whether he's my husband, come back from the dead, or some one else!" She paused, and her nostrils dilated a little, but Van Torp only nodded slowly and sympathetically. "I mean to know before I go to bed to-night," she said, with a little desperation in her voice. "I shall talk to him till I am sure of one thing or the other. At table, I cannot tell, but if we are alone together I know I can settle the question. If you see that we are talking at the other end of the deck, try to keep Mrs. Rushmore and Margaret from coming near us. Will you?"

To Mrs. Rushmore's amazement and Margaret's surprise, Lady Maud made a dead set at Kralinsky all that day, an attention which he seemed to appreciate as it deserved. Before breakfast was over, Van Torp had repeated to her what Kralinsky had said about having formerly been intimate with Leven, and Lady Maud took this statement as a basis of operations for finding out just how much he knew of her own life; she judged that if he were not Leven himself, he must soon betray the fact by his ignorance.

That was the strangest day she had ever passed. She found it very easy to talk to Kralinsky, as it always is when there has been long familiarity, even if it has been only the familiar intercourse of domestic discord. He knew many details of her life in London. That was clear after half an hour's conversation. She alluded to the idle talk there had been about her and Van Torp; Kralinsky knew all about that and had heard, as he said, some silly story about Leven having found her with the American in certain rooms in the Temple, and about an envelope which was said to have contained over four thousand and one hundred pounds in bank-notes. He politely scouted the story as nonsense, but he had heard it, and Lady Maud knew that every word of it was true. He knew of Leven's unsuccessful attempt to divorce her on that ground, too, and he knew the number of her house in Charles street, Berkeley square.

On the other hand, there were many things of which he knew nothing, or pretended to be ignorant, such as the names of her brothers and sisters, her father's favorite pursuits and the like. But she understood very well that if he thought she suspected his identity under the disguise of his beard, and if he wished to avoid recognition, he was just the man to pretend blank ignorance of some vital matters, after admitting his acquaintance with many others. He had been very intimate with Leven, to the last, he said; Leven had always written to him very fully about his life, very wittily sometimes, but always without balance! That was it; he had no "balance." Yes, he himself had been in Petersburg when Leven was killed and had seen him on the previous day. Within a week he had made a rapid trip to New York, whence he had now just returned. He had crossed on five-day boats both going and coming, and he named them.

"I am naturally interested in meeting any one who knew my husband so well," Lady Maud said, making a bold dash at a possibility. "We had many differences, as you seem to know, but I dare say that if he could come back to life and know the real truth, we should forgive each other."

She looked up to him with a gentle smile as she said this, for she had often felt it; and in that instant a flash of light came into his usually rather uncertain eyes. Her heart stood still; she looked at the sea again directly, for she was leaning against the rail; then she drew breath, as if from an effort. She had seen a look that could only mean recognition. Leven was alive and was standing beside her. But she had the courage to go on talking, after a moment, and she tried to change the subject, thought not very adroitly.

During the afternoon Mr. Van Torp had a revelation, sudden and clear, for he had watched Lady Maud and Kralinsky all day and had thought about them a good deal, considering how his mind was occupied with other matters even nearer to his heart than his best friend's welfare. As soon as the revelation came upon him he rang for his own man.

"Stemp, see here!" he began. "You've valeted around with all sorts of different looking men. How long does it take to grow a beard like Count Kralinsky's?"

"A year, sir. Not a day less, and longer with most gentlemen. If you were thinking of it, sir—"

"You don't believe it could be managed in three months, by taking an expert around with you to work on your face?"

"That's out of the question, sir. Gentlemen's beards that have shaved all their lives, as I suppose you have, sir, do grow faster, but I should consider a year a short time for such a fine one as the count's. Indeed I should, sir."

"Do you suppose you could stick it on fresh every day, the way they do for the stage?"

"Not so that it wouldn't show in broad daylight, sir."

"Well, that's all. I wasn't exactly thinking of trying a beard. I was only thinking—just like that. What I rang for was a cap. Got any more like this? You see I've managed to get a spot of ink on this one. Had it on the table when I was writing, I suppose. That's the worst of white caps, they spot so."

A little later, Mr. Van Torp was looking out for a chance to speak alone with Lady Maud, and as soon as he found his opportunity he told her what Stemp had said. Strangely enough, it had never occurred to him that such a remarkable beard as Kralinsky's must have taken a long time to grow, and that Leven, who had none, had not left London more than three months ago. He watched the effect of this statement on his friend's face, but to his surprise she remained grave and sad.

"I cannot help it," she said in a tone of conviction. "He must be Leven, whatever Stemp tells you about his beard."

"Well, then it's a false beard, and will come off," observed Mr. Van Torp, with at least equal gravity. "Stemp says that's impossible, but he must be wrong, unless you are."

"It's real," Lady Maud said, "and he is my husband. I've talked to him all day, and he knows things about my life that no one else could, and if there are others about which he is vague, that must be because he is pretending, and does not want to show that he knows everything."

Van Torp shook his head, but remained unconvinced; Lady Maud did not change her mind either, and was already debating with herself as to whether it would not be really wiser to speak out and tell Kralinsky that she had recognized him under his transparent disguise. She felt that she must know the worst, if she was ever to rest again.

Neither Margaret nor Mrs. Rushmore had ever seen Leven, and they had not the least idea of what was really going on under their eyes. They only saw that Lady Maud was making a dead set at the count, and if Margaret wondered whether she had misjudged her friend's character, the elder lady had no doubt as to what was happening.

"My dear child," she said to Margaret, "your friend is going to console herself. Widows of that age generally do, my dear. I myself could never understand how one could marry again. I should always feel that dear Mr. Rushmore was in the room. It quite makes me blush to think of it! Yet it is an undeniable fact that many young widows marry again. Mark my words, Margaret, your friend is going to console herself before long. If it is not this one, it will be another. My dear, I am quite positive about it."

When the sun went down that evening the yacht had passed Otranto and the cape, and her course had been changed to head her for Cape Spartivento and the Straits of Messina, having done in 24 hours as much as the little Italian mail steamers do in 48, and nearly half as much again as the Erinna could have done at her highest speed. As Mr. Van Torp had predicted, his engines had "warmed up," and were beating their own record. The gale made by the vessel's way was stronger than a woman could stand in with any regard to her appearance, but as the weather continued to be calm it was from dead ahead, and there was plenty of shelter on the promenade deck abaft the wheelhouse, on condition of not going too near the rail.

After dinner Kralinsky and Mrs. Rushmore walked a little, as on the previous evening, and Lady Maud sat with Margaret and Van Torp. But before the two walkers went off to sit down in the quiet corner they had found yesterday, Lady Maud rose, went half way aft, and deliberately placed herself where they were obliged to pass close to her at each turn, standing and leaning against the bright white side of the engine skylight, which was as high as the wheelhouse itself, and broke in aft, where the big ventilating fans were situated, making a square corner inward.

She stood there, and as it was not very dark in the clear starlight, Kralinsky saw in passing that she followed his face with her eyes, turning her head to look at him when he was coming towards her, and turning it very slowly back again as he came near and went by. It was impossible to convey more clearly an invitation to get rid of his companion and join her, and he was the last man in the world to misunderstand it.

But Mrs. Rushmore saw it too, and as she considered him a lion, and therefore entitled to have his own way, she made it easy for him.

"My dear count," she said blandly, after passing Lady Maud twice, "I have really had enough now, and if you will promise to finish your walk alone, I think I will go and sit with the others."

He left her with Margaret and Van Torp and went back to Lady Maud, who moved as he came up to her, made two steps beside him, and then suddenly slipped into the recess where the fanhouse joined the engine skylight. She stood still, and he instantly ranged himself beside her. They were quite out of sight of the others, and of the bridge, and even if it had been daylight they could not have been seen except by some one coming from aft.

"I want to speak to you," she said, in a low, steady voice. "Please listen quite quietly, for some of them may begin to walk again."

Kralinsky bent his head twice, and then inclined it towards her, to hear better what she was going to say.

"It has pleased you to keep up this comedy for 24 hours," she began.

He made a slight movement, which was natural under the circumstances.

"I do not understand," he said, in his oily voice. "What comedy? I really have no—"

"Don't go on," she answered, interrupting him sharply. "Listen to what I am going to tell you, and then decide what you will do. I don't think your decision will make very much difference to me, but it will make a difference to the world and to yourself. I saw you from a window when you brought Mr. Van Torp to the hotel in Bayreuth, and I recognized you at once. Since this afternoon I have no doubt left."

"I never saw you till last night," said Kralinsky, with some little surprise in his tone, and with perfect assurance.

"Do you really think you can deceive me any longer?" she asked. "I told you this afternoon that if you could come back from the dead, and know the truth, we should probably forgive each other, though we had many differences. Shall we?" She paused a moment, and by his quick change of position she saw that he was much moved. "I don't mean that we should ever go back to the old life, for we were not suited to each other from the first, you and I. You wanted to marry me because I was pretty and smart, and I married you because I wanted to be married, and you were better looking than most men, and seemed to have what I thought was necessary—fortune and a decent position. No, don't interrupt me. We soon found out that we did not care for each other. You went your way, and I went mine. I don't mean to reproach you, for when I say you were beginning to be tired of me I did nothing to keep you. I myself was tired of it already. But whatever you may have thought, I was a faithful wife. Mr. Van Torp had given me a great deal of money for my charity, and does still. I can account for it. I never used a penny of it for myself, and never shall; and he never was, and never will be, any more than a trusted friend. I don't know why you chose to disappear when the man who had your pocket-book was killed and you were said to be dead. It's not my business, and if you choose to go on living under another name, now that you are rich again, I shall not betray you, and few people will recognize you, at least in England, so long as you wear that beard. But you had it when we were married, and I knew you at once, and when I heard you were to be of the party here, I made up my mind at once that I would accept the invitation and come too, and speak to you as I'm speaking now. When I believed you were dead I forgave you everything, though I was glad you were gone; frankly, I did not wish you alive again, but since you are, God forbid that I should wish you dead. You owe me two things in exchange for my forgiveness: First, yours, if I treated you ungenerously or unkindly; and, secondly, you ought to take back every word you ever said to me about Mr. Van Torp, for there was not a shadow of truth in what you thought. Will you do that? I ask nothing else."

"Indeed I will, my dear Maud," said Count Kralinsky, in a voice full of emotion.

Lady Maud drew a long breath, that trembled a little as it left her heated lips again. She had done what she believed most firmly to be right, and it had not been easy. She had not been surprised by his patient silence while she had been talking; for she had felt that it was hers to speak and his to listen.

"Thank you," she said now. "I shall never go back to what I have said, and neither of us need ever allude to old times again during this trip. It will not last long, for I shall probably go home by land from the first port we touch, and it is not likely that we shall ever meet again. If we do, I shall behave as if you were Count Kralinsky, whom I have met abroad, neither more nor less. I suppose you will have conscience enough not to marry. Perhaps, if I thought another woman's happiness depended on it, I would consent to divorce you, but you shall never divorce me."

"No power could make me wish to," Kralinsky answered, still deeply moved. "I was mad in those days, Maud; I was beside myself, between my debts and my entanglements with women not fit to touch your shoes. I've seen it all since. That is the chief reason why I chose to disappear from society when I had the chance, and become some one else! I swear to you, on my mother's soul in heaven, that I thought of nothing but that—to set you free and begin life over again as another man. No thought of marrying has ever crossed my mind! Do you think I could be as bad as that? But I'm not defending myself—how could I? All the right is on your side, and all the wrong on mine. And now—I would give heaven and earth to undo it all and to come back to you!"

Lady Maud drew as far as she could into the corner where the fanhouse joined the engine skylight. She had not expected this; it was too much repentance; it was too like a real attempt to win her again. He had not seen her for more than three months; she knew she was very beautiful; his fleeting passion had come to life again, as he had. But her old repulsion for him was ten times stronger than when they had parted, and she shrank back as far as she could, without speaking. From far below the noiseless engines sent a quick vibration up to the ironwork of the skylight. She felt it, but could hardly tell it from the beatings of her own heart. He saw her shrinking from him and was wise.

"Don't be afraid of me!" he cried, in a low and pleading tone. "Not that! Oh, please not that! I will not come nearer; I will not put out my hand to touch yours, I swear it to you! But I love you as I never loved you before; I never knew how beautiful you were till I had lost you, and now that I have found you again you are a thousand times more beautiful than in my dreams! No, I ask nothing! I have no right to ask for what I have thrown away! You do not even pity me, I think! Why should you? You were free when you thought me dead, and I have come back to be a burden and a weight on your life. Forgive me, forgive me, my lost darling, for the sake of all that might have been, but don't fear me! Pity me, if you can, but don't be afraid of me! Say that you pity me a little, and I shall be satisfied, and grateful, too!"

Lady Maud was silent for a few seconds, while he stood turned towards her, his hands clasped in a dramatic gesture, as if still imploring her commiseration.

"I do pity you," she said at last, quite steadily, for just then she did not fear that he would try to touch even her hand. "I pity you, if you are really in love with me again. I pity you still more if this is a passing thing that has taken hold of you merely because you still think me handsome. But I will never take you back to be my husband again. Never. That is finished, for good and all."

"Ah, Maud, listen to me—"

But she had already slipped out of the corner and was walking slowly away from him, not towards the others, but aft, so that he might join her quietly before going back to them. He was a man of the world and understood her, and did what was expected of him. Almost as soon as he was beside her, she turned to go forward with her leisurely, careless grace.

"We've been standing a long time," she said, as if the conversation had been about the weather. "I want to sit down."

"I am in earnest," he said, very low.

"So am I," answered Lady Maud.

They went on towards the wheelhouse side by side, without haste, and not very near together, like two ordinary acquaintances.

PATCHING STOCKINGS.

As the hot summer months wear on one begins to plan all manner of labor-saving devices. One which will be found useful is the substitution of a patch instead of darning a very much-worn stocking, especially when the heel is worn threadbare by the rubbing of low shoes. An easy way to do this is to cut a piece from an old stocking, as near the same texture as the one to be mended as possible. Sew this smoothly around the stocking darner and slip the worn stocking into place over it. Turn on the wrong side, cut away all superfluous material, and lo! an ordinary half hour's work is accomplished in five minutes.

RAIN STOPPED GAME WITH SOMERVILLE NINE

Rain put a stop to the baseball game between Plainfield High School and Somerville High yesterday afternoon, at Crescent Oval, at the end of the seventh inning with the score a tie at 3 to 3. All the fans present were convinced that it was going to prove the best game of the season and so far as it went it was a good one. Exceptional form was shown by both teams and for the first four innings neither side scored. Terry was doing some good hurling and had the Somervillians buffaloed when men were on bases.

In the fifth session Somerville began to get the number of Terry and slammed several swats at different points in the outfield but the good fielding of the P. H. S. boys kept the visitors from scoring more than one at a time.

Umpire Coyle had his troubles but emerged from the game without any special fracas. It was the opinion of the fans that Plainfield had gotten off luckily. Henderson, the Somerville mound artist walked four men in the sixth session, forcing home a run and a couple of singles tied the score when Somerville had a lead.

Score by inning:

P. H. S.	0	0	0	0	0	2	1	—	3
Somerville	0	0	0	0	1	2	0	—	3

Time of game, 1 hour and thirty minutes.

TRAVELERS MEET

First Dinner, Dance and Fair of U. C. T. Council Well Attended.

HELD AT SEBRING'S HALL.

Dinner Cooked and Served by the Men—Women in Charge of Bazaar—Mayor Moy Makes an Address.

Under the auspices of Plainfield Council, No. 402, the Order United Commercial Travelers, a banquet, dance and fair was held in Sebring's Auditorium, last night. It was the first affair of the kind held by the local organization and was such a success that there is no doubt but that it will be repeated. The unique feature was that the men not only served the dinner, but cooked it as well and the result was beyond the most sanguine hopes of their many friends.

The large auditorium was filled with members and friends of the Plainfield Council, and the patronage was so large that all could not be accomodated at the first table. Two long tables were arranged on either side of the hall, with one at the head and they were attractively decorated. Several booths arranged about the room, also added interest to the affair. They were prettily decorated, the "U. C. T." flags and colors being conspicuous, while the members wore the familiar cap of the organization.

The dinner, a fine one, was the favorable comment of everyone present. It included bouillon, fish, roast, vegetables, pickles, olives, ice cream, cake coffee and fruit. Those who were responsible for the cooking and preparation of the dinner were Frank W. Weed, chef, assisted by Charles A. Sturtevant, Fred Kirch, and Peter H. Bennett. They were attired in regulation regimentals. The waiters were Fred Kling, Arthur Organ, A. S. Olmstead, Stryker Hoagland, Joseph D. Moon, Arthur E. Darby, John M. Lewin and Edward Ryder.

The entertainment committee comprised Fred Kling, chairman; Peter H. Bennett, Charles A. Sturtevant and Fred Kirch. Assisting the men in the fair, was Mrs. Frank W. Weed, chairman; Mrs. A. S. Olmstead, vice-chairman and Mrs. E. W. Poinier, treasurer. Charles Ketcham received the tickets at the door.

Those at the fancy booth were Mrs. Frank W. Weed, Mrs. Fred Kling, Mrs. J. C. Allen, Miss Gerda Kamp Hansen, Mrs. E. W. Poinier, Mrs. Arthur Organ and Mrs. A. S. Olmstead. Those at the candy booth were Mrs. Charles A. Sturtevant, Mrs. Lewis Skillman, Miss Elsie Organ and the Misses Kling. There was a Chinese laundry booth, where checks which were distributed were redeemed for a nominal sum Mrs. John M. Lewin, Mrs. J. C. Field and Mrs. Fred Warner were in charge.

During the serving of the dinner, Charles Suhr's orchestra rendered a fine program and later played for dancing. This was a feature.

Mayor G. W. V. Moy was present as an invited guest, and just following the dinner, he made a few informal remarks, in which he called attention to the organization under whose auspices the affair was held. He spoke of the characteristics which combine to make a successful traveling salesman, adding that he must be all things to all men, that he must necessarily meet all kinds of men and oftentimes put himself out to accomodate those whom he serves. He complimented the organization and the men who comprise its membership. The Mayor's remarks were well received and hearty applause was accorded. Among the other guests present was S. S. Swackhamer. As a result of the affair Plainfield Council will net a goodly sum for its treasury.

BRIDGE WHIST PARTY NETS A GOODLY SUM.

Under the auspices of St. Margaret's Guild, of St. Stephen's church, last night a bridge whist party was held at the parish house. The net result for the benefit of the guild amounted to about $85. Sixty-eight persons sat at the tables and enjoyed the games and refreshments.

Since the church has been under the ministration of Rev. Elory G Bowers the number of communicants has increased and there has been a steady growth in the Sunday school. Mrs. H. K. Tetsuka had charge of the arrangements for last evening's party and it was a success from every viewpoint.

AMERICA'S PLACE

Its Position Pre-Eminent Says Rev. Dr. McArthur in Picturing its Grandeur.

LINCOLN ITS GREATEST MAN.

This Country Leads In Manufacture and Industry—He Claims Its Diplomatgs Are the Best in the World.

The Panama Canal, the Pacific Ocean and Theodore Roosevelt were the chief topics in the lecture delivered last night by Rev. Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur in the Park Avenue Baptist church and incidentally the blood of the audience was raised to almost the cheering point when telling references to past achievements under the Stars and Stripes were mentioned by the speaker. Mayor George W. V. Moy introduced Dr. MacArthur telling of the minister's successful ministrations at the Calvary Baptist church in New York city.

"America's Place Among the Nations" was the doctor's topic and he rehearsed the history of this country from the beginning of events which led to its development until the present day. "We are living," he said, "in the greatest era that the world has ever known and ever since 1531 America has been growing to attain what the nations of the world must acknowledge to be its pre-eminence now.

"We need these references of the lapses of time and interventions of space to spread the true conception of this country's greatness. Our republic has grown and today sits crowned as queen among the congresses of the nations of the world. We have arrived at the place where we stand alone. There are other countries of greater area, but there is none with the wealth that we can command. Perhaps 100 years from tonight there may be told how Abraham Lincoln was the greatest man America ever produced as it is said of Oliver Cromwell, the greatest man England has ever shown. Washington was not an American, just a plain English country gentleman. He was English in all his attributes, but you must remember that all the good Englishmen were on this side of the Atlantic when Washington led his armies to victory for the greatest cause that man ever fought for."

Dr. MacArthur traced the history of the United States from the original thirteen States. He said there was no reflected glory in Thomas Jefferson's connection with the Louisiana Purchase as it was sold and paid for practically before he was aware of the transaction. "But," he said, "we Americans seldom stop to think of how much we owe to Napoleon Bonaparte, one of the most wonderful men the world has known. Too much stress cannot be laid on the part he took in the world's history nor how his influence extended across the seas to affect the future life of the United States."

Theodore Roosevelt, too, came in for a share of glory from Dr. MacArthur's lips. He said of of the former President: "God said, Theodore, get your spade," and Theodore got the spade and the result will be the completed Panama canal which will change the center of the world's activities from the Mediterranean to the Pacific." Dutch blood with a mixture of Scotch is the best combination yet made and produces the world's greatest patriots.

"America's place industrially is the highest we know of," he said. "It is looked upon by other nations as a big farm, but it is more than that. It is the greatest manufacturing nation in the world. Diplomatically it leads all other countries because of the splendid calibre of its statesmen. It is a shame that the flag has not become the leading emblem among the merchant shipping of the world, but we live in hopes that it, too, will eventually reach that exalted position."

There was not a very large audience, but those who heard the lecture were frank in their expressions of approval of the sentiments of Dr. MacArthur and would be glad to hear one of the other lectures to which he referred at intervals during his address.

Honor For Tuttle.

Chairman Moon, of the House Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, of the House of Representatives, at Washington, D. C., has appointed Representative Tuttle, of the Fifth New Jersey District, to the subcommittee on second-class mail and rural free delivery routes. These are regarded as important assignments, as under the head of second-class mail will come the consideration in detail of the problem of postage on magazines.

MRS. HABERLE DIED FOLLOWING OPERATION

Mrs. Frances E. Haberle, aged sixty-two years, widow of John G. Haberle, and a step-daughter of Bennett Britton, of West Front street, died this morning at Muhlenberg Hospital, where on Tuesday she underwent an operation for a complication of troubles. Mrs. Haberle was born in Cambridge, Mass., and had been a resident of this city about thirty years.

Mrs. Haberle's husband, who died ten years ago, was well-known here and for many years conducted a tobacco store on Somerset street. Mrs. Haberle was a member of the First M. E. church. She was first taken ill about six months ago and her condition became such that an operation was necessary.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Lillian Beekman and three sons, Sherman, John and Percy Haberle; also three brothers, James Richards and Frank Gray, of Ohio, and Thos. Gray, of New York city. The first named one is a step-brother. The funeral will be held at the late residence, 13 Chatham street, North Plainfield, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson will officiate. The burial will be in Evergreen cemetery.

MINISTERS APPROVE CLOSING P.O. SUNDAYS

The members of the Plainfield Ministers' Association at the monthly meeting, yesterday, adopted a resolution endorsing the movement to close the postoffice on Sunday for the delivery of mail at the delivery and other windows. The ministers, by the resolution stated that they desired to place themselves on record as heartily approving of the action and further hope and urge that the action be upheld by this Christian community and that so far as possible all persons refrain from calling for their mail on Sunday.

It was the only one of importance considered at the meeting. There was not a large attendance, in fact, there were just enough ministers present to make a quorum.

UNION CO'S W.C.T.U MEETS AT DUNELLEN

OPDYCKE'S VIEWS

Bound Brook Citizens' Committee Head Discusses Sewage Plant Decision.

GROUNDS EXPLAINED BY HIM.

Says Water Supply Wells Might Be Contaminated—Bound Brook to Build a Sanitary Sewer System.

Henry G. Opdycke, of Bound Brook, president of the Citizens' committee of that place, makes the following statement as to the recent action of the State Board of Health:

"We really think that after the expenditure of so much valuable time and thousands of dollars by all concerned that North Plainfield seems to have gained very little headway. The efforts of the private interests to be served so bountifully have resulted in neither the borough nor their representations gaining anything but an expression of resentment from the people. We don't propose to crow over our victory, but seriously desire to help 'the people' of North Plainfield to understand the situation and to secure relief from their dangerous condition, which in our minds, is mighty near criminal and certainly reprehensible.

"Of course, you know that the State Board of Health examined all of the facts in the case very carefully; made its own survey of the different available sites, personally viewed them and carefully considered all of the arguments brought before it, and after hearing the evidence of Mr. Whelan, president of the Water Co., a man whose absolute familiarity with questions of this character is undisputed, and having consulted the State Geologist to bear out the evidence heard, the board unanimously voted down this application, their attitude being that a sewage disposal plant thirty-five feet in elevation above a water supply, furnishing potable water to several communities, should not be located on a small farm several hundred feet apart.

"It was not the water-tight filtration beds, the iron pipe nor the effluent that was feared, but it was the unusual and bad engineering practice of carrying sewage for many miles in pipes with an average fall of only nine inches in each thousand feet, thus allowing the sewage to become stale and putrefied when it reached the sprinkling filters, and right here many things might happen, cracks in the concrete, freezing of the filter beds, etc., etc., which would release this putrefied and probably disease laden fluid into the water carrying veins feeding the wells of this water supply and result in the death of many people before it could be stopped. Certainly a board of intelligent men could not take the risk and responsibility of the approval of any such a proposition. Their decision on the matter is final as you have already reported.

"Senate bill No. 301, if passed in its present form cannot possibly solve their dilemma and the citizens of North Plainfield should resent the jokes in this bill as it clearly deprives them of their right of franchise as voters so far as this question is concerned and would permit the interested parties to spend any amount of money they wished to carry out their plans.

"The act of 1907 was clearly insufficient as it gave practically no one of the injured persons the right to be heard and our attempt to pass Senate No. 41, was simply to give the power of arbitration and location to the State Board and would prevent the 'great wrong' of the township committe compelling North Plainfield to spend many thousands of dollars uselessly. This bill would have been welcomed by the borough representatives had they been really seeking the interests of all of the taxpayers of the borough. However, with the assistance of our Senator the bill was killed.

"Bound Brook's disposal system is now being planned by engineers and will be eminently sane and satisfactory. They have a dilution of over a hundred times the quantity of the effluent, while North Plainfield's effluent will often exceed the dilution furnished by Green brook and furthermore sprinkling filters will not be resorted to.

"We are carefully watching the interests of our community as you well know and our activities in the past should be an evidence of our intention to protect ourselves fully.

"While not asked for advice still there may be enough people in North Plainfield anxious to know what their rights are to risk an expression of opinion and we advise them to select a reasonable site, a plant which would caused the minimum nuisance and get busy building it at once or risk the responsibility of that epidemic predicted by the representatives of the borough.

DEAD IN 79TH YEAR

George R. VanBoskerck Passed Away at Home Here This Morning.

PRODUCE EXCHANGE VETERAN.

Original Member of the Old Corn Exchange—Retired From Active Business Twenty-two Years Ago.

George W. VanBorkerck died htis morning at his residence, 542 West Seventh street. He was born in Hackensack, August 21, 1832. His father was John VanBoskerck and his mother Elizabeth Taylor. His grandfather, George VanBoskerck, of New York city, was of old Dutch colonial stock, and was a soldier in the Revolutionary Army.

Mr. VanBoskerck was one of the original members of the old Corn Exchange, which became the New York Produce Exchange, of which at the time of his death he was one of the oldest members, and where he had been engaged in the commission business for the past sixty years. He was a veteran of the Seventh Regiment, N. Y. N. G., of which he became a member in 1857, in the Sixth company, with which he saw active service during the "draft riots" in New York city at Webb's ship-yard. He was a member of the Sons of the Revolution in the State of New York.

Mr. VanBoskerck had been a resident of Plainfield for the past twenty-two years. He is survived by his widow, two sons and five daughters, the children being Thomas R. and George T. VanBoskerck, and the daughters, Mrs. William Bloodgood, of New York city; Miss Sarah M. VanBoskerck, Miss Maude VanBoskerck, Miss Edith VanBoskerck and Mrs. W. S. Tyler.

YOUTHFUL OFFENDERS ESCAPE REFORM SCHOOL

Andrew Judge, John and Edward Calder and James Cox, the four borough boys arrested for breaking into vacant houses and stealing lead pipe, were arraigned before Judge Clarence Case in the Somerset county court this morning. They were represented by Counselor Francis J. Blatz, who made an earnest appeal in their behalf for clemency.

In responding to the lawyer's address, Judge Case stated that if he followed his first impulses he would commit all but the Cox boy to the Reform School, but on second thought he would give them one more chance. He accordingly ordered all four placed in charge of the probation officer for two years. If at any time during this period there is the slightest bit of misbehavior, the offender is to be sent to Jamesburg Reform School without further ceremony. The boys were all severely lectured, while Judge, who is declared to be the leader of the quartet, was singled out for a particularly strong rebuke.

The trial of Egbert Scribner, the junk dealer, who purchased the lead pipe from the boys, and who was indicted by the grand jury was set down for next Monday.

CORRUPT PRACTISES ACT BECOMES A LAW

The Senate committee substitute for the Prince corrupt practises act, which passed the upper house Wednesday, went through the Assembly yesterday afternoon without a dissenting vote and was signed by the Governor last night. Assemblyman McCran rose to speak for the bill when it was called. He said that it gave him much pleasure to give way to Assemblyman Simpson, who had introduced in the House early in the session a corrupt practises measure, which died on the way to the satute books.

Democratic Leader Matthews spoke briefly for the bill. The vote was 42 to 0.

Engine Sparks Again.

For the third time in two weeks, locomotive sparks caused a fire on Joseph Harrigan's South avenue premises at noon today. This time the blaze was in a large chicken coop belonging to Richard Harrigan, Mr. Harrigan's son. It was totally destroyed together with six prize-winning hens and twenty little chicks. The loss is $100 with no insurance. No. 4 company from the Netherwood house responded to the alarm.

BORO BILL PASSES

Measnre Permits North Plainfield to Build Sanitary Sewer Plant.

AWAITS WILSON'S SIGNATURE.

Senate Bill No. 301, Introduced by Mr. Frelinghuysen, Went Through Assembly This Morning.

Senate bill, No. 301, permitting North Plainfield to carry out its plans for a sewerage disposal system, with the approval of the State Board of Health, was passed unanimously by the Assembly at Trenton this morning. There was not a dissenting vote against it, but Assemblyman LaMonte absented himself when the vote was taken and it is reported that he opposed the measure. The bill then went back to the Senate, when it was concurred in and later sent to Governor Wilson for his signature.

The text of the bill follows:

"1. Section ninety of an act entitled 'A general act relating to borougrs (revision of 1897),' be and the same hereby is amended so as to read as follows:

"90. It shall not be lawful for the council to construct or purchase any water-works or water-supply plant or plants, or sewers or system of sewerage or drainage, until, upon the written application of the owners of not less than one-fourth in value of the real estate in said borough, according to its assessed valuation, as shown by the latest preceding assessment for the purpose of taxation made in said borough, council shall, by resolution adopted by a majofity vote of the members thereof, cause at least thirty days' notice to be given by advertisements, signed by the borough clerk, posted in at least three public places in such borough, and printed once each week for at least three weeks in a newspaper published in the borough, if any such exists, or, if none, then in a newspaper published in the county wherein the borough is situate and circulating in the borough, of the intention of council to submit the question of the construction or purchase of any water-works or water-supply plant or plants, or sewers, or system of sewerage or drainage, to the voters of the borough at a general or special election to be held in the said borough; and if, after the adoption of such resolution, and filing of such application, and within sixty days after the date of the first publication of such notice of intention, a remonstrance against such construction or purchase of water-works or water-supply plant or plants, or sewers, or system of sewerage or drainage, signed by the owners of not less than one-half in value of real estate in the said borough, according to its latest assessed valuation as aforesaid, be filed with the borough clerk, no such election shall be called or held, and no further proceedings taken based on such resolution and application; but if no such remonstrance shall be filed, then it shall and may be lawful for the council to submit the question of such construction or purchase to the voters of the borough at any general or special election held in such borough. If such proposition is to be submitted to the voters at a special election called for that purpose, such special election shall be called and conducted in the manner herein provided for a similar election in the case of the proposed issue of bonds. If a majority of the ballots cast by the voters at any such election shall be in favor of the construction or purchase of water-works or water-supply plant or plants, or sewers or system of sewerage or drainage, then it shall be lawful for the council to construct or purchase the same; provided, however, that the council may, by ordinance, at any time before the commencement of the work, change or cause to be changed any plant for the treatment of sewage or polluting substance from which the effluent is to flow into any of the waters of this State in such manner and to such extent as may be necessary to conform to such conditions as the State Board of Health may be authorized to impose.

"2. This act shall take effect immediately."

Insulted White Woman.

Napoleon Wyatt, a colored man, was fined $10 this morning by Judge DeMeza for an alleged insult to a white woman on West Third street near Plainfield avenue, last night, at 10:30 o'clock. When arested by Patrolman Frank Sweeney, Wyatt resisted arrest and clawed Sweeney's hands with his nails.

Miss Gertrude Holmes, the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Delevan A. Holmes, of Rockview avenue, is convalescing from an attack of rheumatism.

MOTHER-IN-LAW AFTER HER WITH BIG KNIFE

Because she didn't like the way her mother-in-law was cutting up the greens for dinner shortly before noon today, Maria Disosa, a young married Italian woman of Cottage place, it is alleged, made a grab for the greens which she proposed to cut up herself. In just about two minutes there was a fight on and when Patrolman Nick Meyers approached the screaming women to find out what the trouble was all about, one was chasing the other with a carving knife in her hand.

According to what could be learned from the women, neither of whom could talk English, Assunta Tugliorina, the mother-in-law, tried to carve Maria Disosa, or vice versa. It was hard to tell who it was that tried to do the carving, because all the women and several children tried to talk at the same time.

Judge DeMeza was called to adjudicate the differences of the people and remanded the whole bunch until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The people in the neighborhood of Cottage place thought there was a riot in progress when the noise was at its height. The appearance on the scene of the police quieted the crowds.

MRS. CREGAR GIVES BRIDGE WHIST PARTY

Mrs. Peter Bodine Cregar, of Grant avenue, gave a delightful bridge whist party yesterday afternoon at the Park Club. There were fifteen tables used in the play, which was spirited and lasted from 3 to 5 o'clock. The auditorium was attractively decorated with flowering plants, cut flowers, ferns and palms. Mrs. Cregar was assisted in receiving by her sister, Miss Anna Stoughton, of Lewisburg, Pa. At the conclusion of the play refreshments were served by Mrs. Henry Johnson.

The honors comprised the flowering plants and were presented to Mrs. Henry S. Eddy, Mrs. William Rogers, Mrs. Frank Whitney French, Mrs. Robert D. Robertson, Mrs. Herbert Buxton, Mrs. R. F. R. Huntsman and Mrs. Hugh C. Pierce.

CITY OFFICIALS MAY BE NAMED BY COUNCIL

The Assembly, at Trenton yesterday, concurred in Senator Bradley's bill to regulate the naming of officers in Second class cities, of which Plainfield is one. It provides that the city clerk, corporation counsel, tax collector, street commissioner, overseer-of-the-poor, city surveyor and city physician after the expiration of their terms which began not later than January 1 last, shall be selected by the Common Council. The terms are fixed for three years each.

At the present time the city clerk here is elected by the Common Council and the term of the incumbent, James T. MacMurray, expires on December 31, but it began over two years ago. The tax collector's term expires this fall and his office is elective the term beginning a couple of years ago. The city physician, overseer-of-the-poor, street commissioner and corporation counsel are all appointed by the mayor at the present time but the Common Council exercises the right of confirmation or rejection.

The bill is now before the Governor for his approval or disapproval.

GOES TO JAIL BECAUSE HIS HOUSE WAS FILTHY.

Patrick Doyle, who was accused by the Health department with allowing his home to become too filthy to live in, thereby endangering the health of his children and his mother, was sentenced to sixty days in the county jail this morning by Judge DeMeza in the city court.

Doyle refused to say anything, but acknowledged that he had been drunk many nights during the past four weeks and had paid but little attention to his family.

"Larry" Wallace in Toils.

"Larry" Wallace was so boisterous and scrappy last night at 10:40 o'clock on East Front street that it took two patrolmen to get him to a cell in police headquarters. Patrolmen Nolan and Saffron managed the affair and this morning Judge DeMeza imposed a fine of $5 or the alternative of twenty days in the county jail.

FIGHT FOR ESTATE

Two Wills Form the Basis of Legal Battle Before Judge Case Today.

FOR MRS. LAKE'S PROPERTY.

Husband Cut-off in One Instrument Which Leaves Possessions to Testatrix's Sister—Later Testament Introduced

The fourth hearing of the Mrs. Walter G. Lake will case is being held today before Judge Clarence L. Case in the Orphans Court, Somerville, and the testator's sister, Miss Lottie VanFleet, resides on Monroe avenue, this city, and is the sole beneficiary under the first will. Mrs. Josephine E. Brown, a widow, residing at Basking Ridge, who was residing at Basking Ridge, who was a sister of Miss VanFleet, several years ago married a young man named Walter G. Lake, of Newark.

E. S. Allen, of Basking Ridge, a lawyer, who discovered a deed transfering a fifteen acre tract of land belonging to Mrs. Lake, the transfer made by Mr. Lake, alleged to be a forgery. The husband was charged with forgery and when arraigned in the Essex county court, he entered a plea of non vult and was given two years in States prison. In the meantime Mrs. Lake died and her will drawn by Clarence L. Murphy, showed that she practically left everything to her sister, Miss VanFleet. Later on a second will, dated May 11, 1910 was found, in which everything was left to the husband. Both sides filed caveats. Lake is contesting the first will, maintaining that the second instrument is the legal one, while the beneficiaries under the first will maintain that that instrument is the right one.

At the hearing today, John Cunningham, one of the witnesses who signed the second will, described in detail the incidents leading up to that act. He said that by appointment he and three others, E. J. Swartout, R. J. Hilton and a woman he did not know, met Mrs. Lake in Hahne's store, Newark. Swartout and Hilton offered to sign the paper, but the woman he did not know declined and Cunningham was then asked to write his name on the paper, which Mrs. Lake, he said, declared was her last will. Clarence L. Murphy, Arthur Murphy and A. A. Clark represent the beneficiaries under the first will, while John F. Reger is counsel for Lake.

DISREPUTABLE WOMEN GIVEN JAIL SENTENCES.

Charged with disorderly conduct in a local hotel last night, Gertrude Sherman, better known as "Gertie" Coddington, of this city, and Annie Smalley, of Cranford, were fined and given a jail sentence by Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning. The Sherman woman was fined $20 and given twenty days in the county jail while the Smalley woman was fined $10 and received a similar jail sentence. Their two male companions, who were strangers in the city, were given suspended sentences after pleading guilty to the charge.

Later Judge DeMeza, after a conference with Mayor Moy and the two women, suspended their sentences with the understanding that the Smalley woman leave town never to return and the Sherman woman took an oath to hereafter live a moral life.

MRS. ADELE BYE DIES AT HER NEW YORK HOME.

Mrs. Adele A. Bye, wife of Henry Bye, for the past five years a resident of this city during the summer, died yesterday morning at her winter home in New York, 305 West Eighty-fourth street. She had been ill a short time. The body was brought to Plainfield today and taken to the summer home on Clinton avenue, near Eighth street. The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church Monday morning, followed by burial in St. Mary's cemetery.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Bye is survived by four daughters. They are Mrs. M. J. Lynch and the Misses Lillie, Inger and Adele Bye. The family has many local friends made during their summer stays.

NEWPORT Coal and Gas Range

—a modern kitchen convenience that housewives will be quick to appreciate.

Embraces every good feature of the regular single oven "Newport," with the added capacity of the gas attachment.

BOYNTON FURNACE CO.

It nearly doubles the cooking capacity of the range, as both coal and gas may be used at the same time if desired. Besides, this handy range gives, in compact form, both a winter necessity and a summer convenience. It solves the "cook stove" problem. Ask your dealer to show you this best of all combination ranges—the "Newport."

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:—

In view of the legislative disagreement, regarding the medical bill known as the Ramsey bill, House 299, a clear conception as to the purposes and intent the said bill would not be out of place. Many arguments have been said in favor of it by medical men and many arguments against it, by 175 members of the New Jersey State Osteopathic Society. I will attempt to explain the provisions which vitally affect the State Osteopaths. We are manifesting strong opposition to the amendments which Dr. Ramsey has offered to the medical bill now pending in the House.

The amendments were offered presumably as a concession to the osteopaths, but president of the New Jersey osteopathic Society brands them as mere trickery, their acceptance by the osteopaths will place our school of practitioners in a worse position than they are in today.

No amendments to the Ramsey bill, House 299, can make that bill acceptable to friends of osteopathy. It is a medical act drawn to regulate and control medicine, is supported chiefly by the old school organizations, and is shaped by the policies of the American Medical Association. It provides for the licensing of persons to practice medicine and surgery only, not for licensing any one to practice osteopathy. If this act, with amendments, should become a law, it would still be impossible for any person to obtain from the State a license to practice osteopathy. That practice would continue without regulation by the State and its friends would continue to be unprotected by law from incompetent practitioners.

All that would be effected by these vanted amendments would be to make it possible for an osteopath to take the regular medical examination, and, if he passed, be given a license to practise medicine and surgery. Osteopaths do not want any such license, and, as they have not been trained in the giving of drugs and the performance of major operations, such a privilege necessarily would be very dangerous to the public health.

Osteopaths resent most earnestly this attempt of the old school to make all practitioners medical men whether they will or no, and they insist that such action is neither necessary, just, nor even possible in this free country.

Attention to the fact that the osteopathic bill now pending requires that persons admitted to practise now shall have a preliminary and professional training equal to that required of medical men, and that after 1912 the standard required of the osetopath will be higher than that required of the meidcal candidate.

Nowhere in House 299, if these amendments are adopted, will the word "osteopath" or "osteopathy" appear except in relation to admission to examination. No person will be licensed to practise osteopathy, but all persons to practise medicine and surgery.. If the intent of the bill is to require an intending practitioner of osetopathy to add four years of medical college to his three or four years of osteopathis college education before admitting him to practise, then its absolute unfairness appears unless there be in the bill a prohibition against the practise of osteopathy or the giving of osteopathic treatment by any licensed physician who lacks such dual education.

The attitude of the medical profession, as exhibited in House 299, with the proposed amendments simply emphasizes the argument advanced in behalf of osteopathy that its adherents should be controlled and governed by a board distinct from the present medical board. The bill and amendments give point to the persistent argument of osteopaths that a joint board is desired solely that osteopathy may lose, as homeopathy and eclecticism have lost, its identity, and with its loss of identity another strong opponent of the basic theories of allopathy will be removed. Only by a separate board can osteopathy hope to retain the virility which it needs to work out its ultimate possibilities of good to humanity.

The second amendment, which requires those at present practising osteopathy in the State to submit to an examination before continuing their practise, is particularly unjust. Any man of education knows the difficulty of passing a good examination, even on subjects in which he has had the most thorough training, at a period remote from that training. The men now practising in this State have acquired sufficient reputation to indicate that they possess the ability properly to carry on their profession and it would be absolutely unfair to require them to pass examinations; and such a course would run counter to all precedent in similar laws. Every medical law which has been passed in New Jersey has taken care of the existing practitioners without examination. Indeed, House 299 does not require present practitioners of medicine to be examined according to the new requirements, no matter how slender their original qualifications for the practice may have been."

Miss Mary Leveridge, of Sherman avenue, is entertaining her schoolmate, Miss Bird Embler, of New York, for several days.

Mrs. James Boynton, and daughter, of Saginaw, Mich., have returned home after visiting Mr. and Mrs M. H. Ewart, of Fairview avenue.

O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, and his daughter, Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson, have returned from Bermuda, where they enjoyed a stay of a few weeks.

Miss May Vincent Whitney, of First place, who has been spending the Easter vacation at Albany, N. Y., and Saratoga Springs, will return this week and resume piano teaching Monday.

PANAMA FAIR OFFERS $1,000 FOR NEW ROSE.

One thousand dollars for a rose! That is the offer of the Panama-California Exposition directors, who want a new species of the flower, to be known as the San Diego, and to be used in profusion on the grounds of the exposition in 1915.

The offer will be extended to every florist in the United States. There are but three general restrictions. The first is that the rose must be hardy, so that it can be easily grown outdoors. The second is that the competitors must be residents of the United States, and third is that they must make known to the floral association their intention to compete.

The date for the ground breaking and corner-stone laying ceremonies for the exposition is July 19-22.

COLD STORAGE LIMIT PLACED AT TEN MONTHS.

The House and Senate conferees on cold storage, after a long conference yesterday morning, agreed to report a bill fixing a time limit of ten months on the period in which goods may be kept in cold storage. It was also decided to fix as the penalty for a first violation a fine of $500 and to make subsequent offenses misdemeanors.

The conference yesterday morning found Senator Gaunt fighting for a time limit of twelve months and Assemblyman James contending for nine months. The others were disposed to compromise and finally persuaded the two to make mutual concessions. Assemblyman James contended that all violations should be rated as misdemeanors. Senator Gaunt did not like this, but agreed to a proposition to impose a very heavy penalty for the first offense and make further offenses misdemeanors.

This view finally prevailed.

A Sale of Marquisette and Lingerie Dresses

You will note that this announcement is begun with the word SALE, this means that every garment here enumerated will be sold at less than the already fair price consistent with good dependable merchandise. We desire to call particular attention to this in order that the offer may not be confused with other regular advertising. We wish to state further that all dresses are from our regular stocks, none bought for the occasion, and as is the method in many establishments, cheapened and scanted, all our regular choice and original—

And others similarly reduced.

$6.50 and $7.50 Dresses reduced to 5.50
$9.50 and $10.00 Dresses reduced to 7.50
$14.50 and $15.00 Dresses reduced to 12.50
$17.50 and $18.50 Dresses reduced to 15.50

Big Sale of Silk Dresses and Costumes

We have never received so much favorable comment on our showing of silk dresses and costumes as this year, and the comment has invariably been accompanied with a purchase. The applause has encouraged us to the end that we have probably bought too many and this is the sole reason for this special inducement; silks of every description and models to suit everybody; foulards, messalines, crepes, acolines, voiles and marquisettes; sizes for women and misses—

$12.50 and $13.50 Dresses reduced to 10.00
$17.50 to $20.00 Dresses reduced to 14.50
$25.00 to $27.50 Dresses reduced to 20.00

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

David Kirchenbower, a prominent citizen of Williamstown, is seriously ill with Bright's disease.

In a collision between a Moorestown car and a cross-town car of the Public Service Railway Company, on Market street, below Delaware avenue, in Camden, Wednesday night, David C. Gerhart, a conductor of 1508 Federal street, sustained injuries to the back.

Through the adoption of a resolution Wednesday night, the Camden Excise Board decided not to grant any more permits for the keeping open of saloons after 1 o'clock in the morning.

It having been called to his attention that the city ordinance regarding the sale of trolley tickets is being continually violated, Mayor Madden, of Trenton, has served notice on the Trenton and Mercer County Traction Company that it must sell six tickets for a quarter at all times. He has threatened to revoke the licenses of all cars whose conductors are not provided with the tickets.

Judge Cross, Wednesday, in Trenton, directed a verdict for the defendant in the suit of Harvey M. Boyer and Mrs. Violet L. Boyer, of Ardmore, Pa., against the Mercer Automobile Company, of Trenton, for injuries sustained in an auto collision. When the defense showed that John Sherwood, sales manager for the Mercer company, who was driving the car which struck the Boyer machine, had the car out on private business, the court held that the company could not be held liable.

Two weddings were solemnized in Gloucester City, Wednesday, in which a mother and son were two of the participants. They were Mrs. Ida Tiedekin, who married L. W. Voltz, and her son, John Tiedekin, whose bride was Miss Kathryn Gallagher.

Judge Starr, at Woodbury, has rendered a decision in the Langley case in favor of the heirs. James P. Langley, of Porchtown, died intestate, leaving an estate valued at $5,000 or $6,000. Frank Langley, a brother, claimed that he and his wife had looked after James for years, putting in a bill against the estate for $6,500, $1,400 of which was for washing and mending clothes and a bill for several years' board at $4 a week. Drivers of butcher and grocery wagons testified that the deceased made his own purchases and paid the bills of such.

The Easter music will be repeated by the choir of Warren chapel Sunday morning and evening.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will hold a "stunt" social in Vincent chapel this evening.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Henry B. Harris and Jesse L. Lasky announce the opening late in April of their new Folies Bergere, a restaurant-music hall, more Parisian than Paris and catering to all the senses, which they have built in 46th street, west of Broadway. More than one million dollars is being invested in the theatre and its companies to give New York a fresh amusement thrill and to carry the metropolis far beyond provincialism into the freedoom and adult delight of the world famous music halls of Europe. Geo. Marion is the permanent producer for the Folies Bergere and now has more than 150 people in rehearsal. Signor Curti, of the Alhambra, London, is the permanent ballet master and with thirty imported dancers is rehearsing sixty American girls for a huge ballet, "Temptation," composed by Edmond Diet, of Paris, the foremost ballet musician of Europe. Among those in the cast of the revues are Ethel Levey, who returns from four years of success in Europe; Marthe Lenclud, the star of La Cigale, Paris; Janete Denarber, the comedienne of the Paris Folies Bergere revues; Britta, prima ballerina at the London Alhambra; Kathleen Clifford, Ada Lewis, Taylor Holmes, Mayme Kelso, Arthur Lipson, Elizabeth Goodall and scores of others.

WOULD ALLOW WOMAN IN SCHOOL BOARDS.

There was a lot of fun in the Senate yesterday morning over Senator Frelinghuysen's bill requiring that at least one woman shall be appointed to appointive school boards. The measure was passed.

Senator Frelinghuysen, in speaking for the bill, said he was not a suffragette, but that he believed women were so intimately interested in school affairs that they should be represented on school boards. Senator Nichols opposed the measure at first and was excused from voting on it.

"The women teachers of the State are against this bill," he said. "Women don't like to be ruled by women. They prefer the Boards of Education to be made up of men."

The fate of the bill hung in the balance for a time, having received only nine votes. Then Senator Brown voted for it. This brought Senator Nichols to his feet.

"When the old bachelor of the Senate votes for a bill like this, I guess I will, too." He then cast the deciding vote for the measure.

Mrs. F. E. Hammann and children, of West Seventh street, returned today from Bethlehem, Pa., where they have been visiting relatives.

TEN YEARS OLD BOY SAVE A GIRLS LIFE

Dean Bell, the ten-year-old son of C. L. Bell, of North avenue, Cranford, distinguished himself yesterday afternoon by saving Virginia Talcot, aged nine years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Talcot, of Forrest avenue, Cranford, from drowning in the Rahway river.

The little girl fell into the water near the North avenue bridge and the boy jumped into the deep water and brought her to shore. She was taken into the home of J. Richards nearby and Dr. F. C. Irwin was summoned. After working for two hours over the child she regained consciousness. Her recovery is assured.

MAY TERM OF COURT WILL BE A BUSY ONE

The May term of the Supreme, Quarter Sessions and Circuit courts will open in the Courthouse at Elizabeth Tuesday, May 2, and the indications are that the term will be a busy one.

The Grand Jury will also go into deliberation on that day. Many cases will come before the jury for consideration and it is very likely that the session will be longer than usual. Among the cases to come up before the Grand Jury is the manslaughter case growing out of last Sunday nights' killing on the Long Branch Division of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. William Hartman, the engineer of the train, is now out on $2,000 bail awaiting the action of the Grand Jury.

The case of Richard Lewis, a trolley car conductor, will also be considered by the Grand Jury on the charge of manslaughter. Lewis was driving the trolley car which ran down and killed Frank Wood, in Westfield, on March 8, this year. Lewis is also out on $2,000 bail.

While the time for filing notices of trial for civil cases does not expire until next Saturday, it is nevertheless true that many local attorneys have signified their intention of appearing in suits involving damages, etc.

Judge James J. Bergen will preside in the Supreme Court, Judge Benjamin A. Vail in the Circuit Court, and Judge Edward S. Atwater in the Quarter Sessions.

STATE WILL ASSIST IN MOSQUITO WAR

Professor John B. Smith, State entomologist, will send to Elizabeth at the expense of the State a gang of ten or fifteen men who will join in the work of exterminating the mosquito larvae in Elizabeth. Health Officer Richards stated yesterday that he expected that the men would begin work the first of next week.

As has already been announced the local health department has not enough money successfully to wage a war against the mosquito pest and so Health Officer Richards solicited aid from the State. Instead of contributing money, Professor Smith will contribute men—which amounts to the same thing.

The work of these men will be devoted exclusively to that part of the salt water marshes in Elizabeth east of the tracks of the Central Railroad. Other parts of the marsh and the fresh water ditches and pools, Health Officer Richard states, have been well taken care of by men employed by the Elizabeth Board of Health.

Lyons Farms and the Roselles, Health Officer Richards states, are not doing as much as they should in the mosquito extermination work. It is said that the municipalities mentioned are handicapped by lack of funds. Mr. Richards admitted that it would be possible for mosquitoes from those places to be wafted by the winds into Elizabeth.

Jersey City is also said to be lagging in the work and a committee of five has been appointed from the North Jersey Mosquito Extermination League to wait upon Mayor Wittpenn, of that city, and request that some action be taken to drive the mosquitoes out of the fresh water marshes.

An active campaign is being waged in Newark. Professor Smith declares that although there are myriads of wrigglers in the marsh lands of the meadows all ready to be hatched, action will be taken to end their existence when the warm weather comes.

Health Officer Richards declared yesterday that the fresh water mosquito was more of a nuisance than his salt water brother. The salt water mosquito works during the daylight hours and remains out of doors, while the fresh water insect is active at night and takes delight in entering sleeping rooms.

The Truest Economy

Economy doesn't mean the buying of cheaply made things at any price, but the purchase of well-made articles at a moderate price. The Shoes we sell are carefully made from selected materials and will wear longer and always be more comfortable than the shoddy kinds that are always advertised and sold at odd cent prices. $3.00 values here mean just that and no less. There is no $2.75 value tagged at $2.98 and masquerading as $3.50 quality.

J. A. BLATZ SELLS CHATHAM HOTEL TO SON.

Joseph A. Blatz, for the past seven years proprietor of the Chatham Hotel at Somerset and Chatham streets, disposed of the busines today to his son, Hilaire C. Blatz. Application for a transfer of the license was made in the Somerset county court, this morning and granted by Judge Case. The new proprietor has been associated with his father since he first purchased the hotel and it will be conducted on the same lines.

The Chatham Hotel is one of the best known stands in the borough. The elder Mr. Blatz bought the business from Jeremiah Burns, who had succeeded Rudolph Spiegel. In selling the place to his son, Mr. Blatz will practically retire from business and enjoy a much-needed rest.

Real Estate Transfers.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the office of the county registrar at Elizabeth: Isaac Womack to James M. Johnson, lots 178 and 179, map of Westfield Golf Park, Fanwood, $1; Ezekiel C. Williams et ux. to Annie E. Williams, northeasterly side Sandford avenue, 874 ft. northwesterly of Main street, Plainfield, $1; Charles L. Moore et ux. to Caroline L. Moore, northwesterly side West Front street, 459 feet southwesterly of West End avenue, Plainfield, $1.

For Fresh Air Camp.

Miss Sara Curry, who for several years has been in charge of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp, will meet her friends and those who have befriended the camp, at the First Baptist church next Monday evening in the lecture room. Rev. John R. Henry, of New York, will deliver an address in which he will tell the story of the Nursery in New York over which Miss Curry presides.

Michael J. O'Keefe.

Michael J. O'Keefe, aged seventy-five years, a well-known resident of this city, died yesterday at Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Elizabeth, where he was under treatment for the past three weeks. He had been a resident here about ten years. He is survived by a wife and two sons, Joseph and William O'Keefe. The funeral will be held at St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Wind Damages New Building.

The heavy wind of yesterday morning blew down a portion of the frame building being erected at Grant avenue and South Second street, for Michael F. Watson. The timbers on one side and the brick wall beneath were affected. M. P. O'Keefe is the contractor.

Trades Unions Directory.

Plainfield's building trades members are about to issue a directory and will call upon local merchants for support in the undertaking. It is said that the directory will be a better example of the directory building art than has recently appeared in this city.

HAPPY THOUGHTS.

The best things are nearest; breath in your nostrils, light in your eyes, flowers at your feet, duties at your hand, the path of God just before you. Then do not grasp at the stars, but do life's plain, common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

You will find, as you look back upon your life, that the moments that stand out—the moments when you have really lived—are the moments when you have done things in a spirit of love. As memory scans the past, above and beyond all the transitory pleasures of life there leap forward those supreme hours when you have been enabled to do unnoticed kindness to those around about you, things too trifling to speak about, but which you feel have entered into your enternal life.—Henry Drummond.

The Pressers and Finishers

Those who have read our Dry Cleaning Talks are aware by this time that there is something to Dry Cleaning.

After the garments have been properly dusted and passed through their proper bath, properly dried, spotted, etc., they reach the Finishing Department.

It is the duty of this Department to prepare the work for return, also largely to inspect, proving the previous work.

Our Finishing Department is our pride and we know it is efficient. Our ever increasing trade confirms this fact. Send your next work to us.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

A powerful drama, that was written in the vicinity of that world's phenomena, Lost River, which rises out of the earth and goes direct into the mountains, and no one so far has been able to trace it further—eyeless fish invade its waters—hence the name, Lost River, which will be given tonight at the Plainfield theatre. It permits of a strong plot, and requires a special scenic equipment, a few of which are the big bicycle race at the finale of the first act, where three people ride for life, and it takes twenty people to work and reproduce this great stage effect of moving panorama tread mills, electrical storm, etc., another realistic scene is the attempt to hold up at the toll gate.

A dramatization of the famous novel of Lena Rivers is the offering of the popular Myrkle-Harder Co., for Saturday matinee. This play and novel is so well known that it is hardly necessary to go into detail concerning its merits. The play is almost word for word from the novel, and the pretty fair haired Lena is given a delightful rendition by Miss Myrkle and her girlish and childlish manners are most effective, as Miss Myrkle has made a deep study of this child-like role. The other members of the company are all caste to excellent advantage, and critics from other cities claim this as one of this clever company's best efforts.

The North Avenue Juniors defeated the Bearcats by a score of 13 to 12 on the East Third street grounds yesterday. Wilford Higgins and Lawrence Paoli formed the battery for the North Avenue Juniors and Russell Coddington and Willard Giles were in the points for the Bearcats. Bill Harden was the umpire.

Hot Fat Causes Fire.

A pail of fat on a stove caused a slight fire at Moses Careys' home on Fillmore avenue, yesterday afternoon. The department responded to an alarm from box 52 and put out the blaze. The loss was $50.

TO PORTRAY INDIAN LEGENDS AT WATCHUNG

The North Plainfield Township Improvement Society and the Watchung Cemical Engine Company are planning to give an elaborate out-door entertainment at Watchung on the three nights of the Plainfield horse show in June. The preliminary arrangements have already been made and the affair promises to be one of the most original yet attempted in this section.

The spectacle will be a portrayal of the legend of the Indians who roamed about Watchung and the adjacent valley before the advent of the whites. Watchung is the name given by the tribe to this section and means "the first hill." The scenes will tell the story of Chief One Feather's encampment and an attack made upon it by a band of whites, which descended from German Valley. The invaders sought the beautiful lands for themselves but the invaders were driven back and defeated. Scores of prisoners were taken and the Indians prepare to torture and burn their victims. The death dances are underway when Chief One Feather discovers among the captives the half-breed Indian princess Wetumpka, after whom the falls on upper Somerset street are named. The princess pleads for the release of herself and friends in such entreating terms that the young chief falls a victim to her charms and orders the release of all the prisoners. This is done after considerable parleying and a truce is declared which results in the division of the lands in Washington Valley. Chief One Feather wooes and weds the princess and all ends happily.

The location selected for the portrayal is on the cliffs above Wetumpka Falls, a most admirable spot for the purpose. The dates decided upon are during the full moon and huge search lights will give further illumination. Parking spaces can be arranged for and dinners will be served at the Washingtonville and Pedeflous hotels.

The two organizations arranging the affair have a large membership of both men and women and they will interpret the parts. A man thoroughly versed in this line of spectacular production will be engaged to perfect the details and coach the participants.

STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING COMMITTEES

The general committee of arrangements for the convention of the State Sunday-schools Association, which will be held in this city next fall, met last night in the parlors of the Y. M. C. A. and appointed these sub-committees: Finance, W. D. Murray, Samuel Bingaman, Harry Gee, E. M. Cave and James F. Parker; registration and information, James E. Church, chairman. Mr. Church will appoint the other members of this committee later.

Places of meeting, Harry Gee, Harold Serrell, J. H. Manning, Walter M. McGee, Horace J. Martin, W. J. Conroy; music, D. E. Titsworth, C. W. McCutchen; reception, F. E. Smith, A. V. Searing, L. W. Randolph, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, James McClymont, Mrs. Grace Williams, E. H. Beekman, Robert Love and Miss Nettie Beeching; ushers and pages, John G. McLoughlin, chairman, who will select the other members later.

The publicity committee will consist of James R. Joy, George E. Hall, J. E. Erickson, Dr. Henry M. Maxson and W. C. Hubbard; banquet and restaurant, Philip Suffern, E. E. Parvin, Clarence LaRue, D. E. Titsworth, J. D. Loizeaux; entertainment, Joseph W. Gavett, E. F. Sheppard, William N. Runyon, A. W. Duxbury, H. H. Williams, G. Stuart Simons, O. S. Rogers, and L. H. Gates. George E. Hall will appoint the other members of the committee on decorating, printing and badges.

Arthur M. Harris presided at last night's meeting which was largely attended. The chairman of the sub-committees will form the central executive committee and the financial committee was authorized to appoint a treasurer. James R. Joy, James E. Church and F.E. Smith were appointed a committee to consider the advisability of organizing a Superintendents' Union in this city. They will report their deliberations at the next meeting. Great interest was manifested by all those present last night.

'PAIR OF IDIOTS' GIVEN FOR HEAVENLY REST

The Christian Endeavor Society of Hope chapel, successfully presented a sketch, entitled "A Pair of Idiots," in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest last night, before a large audience. The affair was given under the auspices of the Women's Guild. The audience was an appreciative one and was generous in its applause of the good work of the cast. The performance was given with more finish than upon the initial production. Mrs. G. Stuart Simmons, coach, was much pleased with the result of last night's performance.

Miss Eunice Eckert, contralto soloist, accompanied by Miss Frances Mosher, sang a pleasing solo. Harry Kartscher was obliged to respond to several encores, his humorous recitations being popular. Miss Alice Rimmer rendered piano selections during the intermission between the second and third acts.

Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the church, took occasion to publicly thank the members of the cast; also Mrs. G. Stuart Simmons, Mrs. Michael Rimmer and others who were responsible for the entertainment. The cast follows: Frank Rimmer, C. Howard Firstbrook, Harold A. Brownell, Miss Mary N. Mortimer, Miss Edna Eckert and Miss Elizabeth Slorah. An informal dance and reception followed the play. The net proceeds will be about $40.

'OAK FARM' TONIGHT AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

"Oak Farm," a comedy drama in three acts, will be presented at Washington Hall, South Plainfield, this evening at 8:15 o'clock, by the Young Men's Baraca Class, of the Baptist church. A fine program has been arranged and an attractive design sketched by Mrs. Peter Johnson made for the occasion, which adorns the front page of each program, which is as follows:

Overture, Hobo Band; duet, Miss Blanche Lewis and Miss Nellie Pickering; piano solo, Miss Nellie Pickering. The following is the cast for the sketch:

Silas Weatherby, E. Monroe Pyatt; Donald Weatherby, Elwood D. Johnson; Joel Weatherby, Samuel A. Purnell; Jonathan Prune, Charles H. Thornton; Joycelyn Spudge, John Conger; Dr. Wilson Meredith, Philip H. Smith; Wellington Tro, Edward Norman; Mrs. Sarah Weatherby, Miss Mildred F. Johnson; Helen Trumbull, Miss Blanche A. Leewis; Cynthia Warner, Grace M. Norman; Sally Smart, Gladys W. Thorne.

Between the first and second acts, Miss Lorena Harris will recite, "Cow Boy," and between acts two and three Miss F. Johnson will give a pantomime entitled "Hark, Hark My Soul."

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The weekly prayer meeting will be held this evening at 8 o'clock, and the thought for the service will be "Consecration of Rest." The class for teacher training and Bible study which meet Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the pastor's study will discuss the question, "What the Pupil Should Do?"

Jesus, the Sabbath-keeper," will be the theme of the discourse by Rev. Edwin Shaw at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. The Sabbath school which meets at 11:45 under the direction of Superintendent W. C. Hubbard, will have for the Bible lesson, "Joash Repairs the Temple." Miss Eva M. Rogers will be the leader of the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at 4 o'clock. The topic will be "Moses Called to God's Service," and Miss Ruth Morris will be the leader.

A Surprise Party.

A surprise party was given in honor of Pierson Baily, of Duer street, last evening. About twenty-five young people were present from this city and vicinity. The evening was enjoyably passed in the playing of games and other amusements. Refreshments were served.

HERE AND THERE.

An aged woman of Albany, N. Y., dying without kin, left an estate of $17,566, which in its progress through the courts has dwindled to $3,353.

The council of Oconto, Wis., has imposed a tax of $6 on all unmarried men between the ages of twenty-one and fifty. The money thus raised is to be used for the support of orphans, according to the intention of the framer of the ordinance.

The new notary of Saint-Sauvy, in the department of Gers, France, succeeded his father, as have members of the family for 315 years. His name is Barhaile. The first Barhaile who became notary of Saint-Sauvy was appointed December 23, 1506, the decree being signed by Catherine, sister of Henry IV. The new incumbent is the eleventh member of the family to hold the office.

William Tillie, a negro, seventy-five years old, who died recently in Jefferson City, Mo., had a distinguished funeral. The Governor of the State made a speech at the grave, and there were State officers, bankers and professional men in the large attendance of white and black people. Tillie's claim to honor was his cooking and his good nature. He was reputed to be the best camp cook in the State, and there had not been a first-class barbecue for forty years without Tillie as master of ceremonies.

An American Sonsul J. H. Arnold, who traveled through China last summer, was a guest at eighty inns, and reports that he received courteous and friendly treatment at every one of them.

The problem of the right sort of education for girls is solved by a South Sea island tribe. Before the girls reach a marriageable age they are kept in cages for some years. The cages are dark and without furnishings, and the inmates are allowed to come out but once a day. There can be no doubt that after this sort of confinement any sort of marriage must be something of a relief.

While a new edifice of the Protestant Episcopal church of the Epiphany in Philadelphia, is being erected, the worshippers make use of a temporary building which has no belfry. The large bell taken from the old church is suspended to a tree for the time being and is rung by means of a rope which enters the temporary house of worship through a hole in the roof.

TEXAS AS AN EMPIRE.

Texas on an area almost 60,000 square miles grtater than that upon which the 65,000,000 subjects of the German empire live, now has nearly 4,000,000 inhabitants. Such a comparison emphasizes in lively fashion the vast possibilities of the region that came to us when we annexed the Lone Star republic.

There was a short period after the successful Texan revolt against Mexcio, in 1836, when the future Texas seemed problematical. Even yet there are to be picked up occasionally at old book stores copies of the pamphlet in the French language issued by the Texan consul-general at Paris, one Theodore Barbey, urging upon Frenchmen the superiority of Texas to the United States as the future home of intending immigrants

Eventually, however, the South revenged itself upon Van Buren for its unwillingness to declare for annexation, and the campaign of 1844 was fought upon the issue of the retention of Oregon and the "reannexation" of Texas, as part of the original Louisiana purchase abandoned when we obtained Florida. Then John Tyler made haste in the dying hours of his administration to clinch the bargain for Sam Houston's republic and in December 1845, Texas came into the Union against the futile protest of the Northern Whigs.

With her vast area of about 265,000 square miles Texas may sometime be the most populous State in the Union. She is now the fifth in the line, and her rate of growth in the last decade, was faster than that of any other great State. Two more decades at the same rate will give her nearly 6,500,000 inhabitants, and before the middle of the century she may be second only to New York. Thus far Texas has been growing largely by domestic immigration, much of it from the old native stock of the South.

Texans invariably believe their State destined to become the most populous in the Union. Two factors only threaten this realization—the huge areas of the State which are arid and so can never support more than a sparse population, and the extraordinary concentration of forces on Manhattan Island. The far Southwest can seemingly never have any counterpart of that, although history has shown some strange reversals on this score.—Boston Herald.

MODERN EDUCATIONAL DEMAND

Opportunity for the fullest individualization is, then, the demand which modern life makes upon education. The school should be an experiment station replete with alluring incentives to intellectual growth. Here, aided by the helpful sympathy of teachers who have discovered the difference between schooling and education, children should try their powers and moments of enthusiasm be utilized for mental growth in various lines. Mental tendencies, like animal instincts, must be coaxed by stimulating situations, and the present school environment is too barren to offer the needed excitation. Boys are continually trying to understand themselves, to find the occupation that their nature vaguely craves, but the pedagogical rope always pulls them back to the curriculum. Then their enthusiasm cools, while the teachers go on trying to strike an intellectual spark with the mental temperature at zero. This is not only an extravagant waste of educational forces, but, what is far more serious, it awakens hatred for study in those whose mental organization does not suit the school plan.

There are those, of course, who say that children must learn to do disagreeable things, but the biographies of many eminent men show that they did not learn this lesson from the school, and that they gained their real training for their future achievements against the handicap of persistent resistance from their teachers who tried in vain to hold them to studies which they hated. After all, the important things is not that children study certain subjects, but that they work intensely at something. Our common schools have made the mistake of assuming that they are for common children, though no one would be so bold as to forecast the future of any boy. The restraint of a system suited to the average child inhibits the powers of unusual children and awakens resentment. Uniformity in treatment and instruction suppresses the tendency to vary and create dullards.—Edgar James Swift, in Harper's Magazine for January.

MURDERER, REPENTANT, PAYS DEATH PENALTY.

Christopher Buntin, the Danish West Indian, who murdered Mary Elizabeth James in Newark last December, expiated his crime in the death chair at the State prison at Trenton Tuesday night. Escorted by Father Fish, the prison chaplain, the condemned man walked to the electric chair, holding a small crucifix and muttering a prayer.

Buntin was converted while in the Essex county jail and had had the constant attention of Father Fish since his commitment to the deathhouse. He wrote many letters during his last day, in which he expressed his repentance for his crime.

In one missive in which he thanked Warden Osborne and the keepers with whom he came in contact, Buntin wrote that while the law would not forgive him, he felt confident that God would, and that he had become reconciled and was not afraid to die. Buntin's last words to his spiritual adviser were that he was thankful for the opportunity given him to prepare himself for eternity.

The crime for which Buntin was electrocuted occurred in the home of John Poinier, at 43 Spruce street, Newark, where the James woman was employed as a servant. Jealousy over the attention another man was paying the woman led Buntin to cut the woman's throat with a carving knife. Buntin and the James woman had been sweethearts in the West Indies.

REBEL "JOAN OF ARC" ESCAPES TO ARIZONA.

The Mexican Federal force went west from Douglas, Arizona Wednesday night, presumably to engage the rebel force of Juan Cabral, whose scouts they fired upon last evening as they were advancing on Auga Prieta, not knowing that the Federal had taken the town. One rebel was killed. Senora Tolamantes, the "Joan of Arc" of Sonora, was with Cabral when this skirmish took place. She broke through the lines last night and is now in Douglas under cover. She had offered, it is said, $10,000 for the head of Francisco Chiapa, the prefect of Montezuma, who executed her husband, Colonel Tolamantes, a former Federal officer, and their two sons after the Federals captured Sahuaripa.

The Americans have asked that Federal commanders permit the Douglas Red Cross under arm regulations to care for the wounded in Agua Prieta. The Federal commander, Colonel Reynaldo Diaz, is considering this request, but it seems unlikely that he will comply.

DISLIKING PEOPLE.

"I don't like that man," yau say. Cut it, bo; cut it! the Baltimore Evening Sun remarks. You don't know what your talking about. You're just making your head roar without making any headway toward the improvement of the world or adding to its intelligence. Just making a noise, that's all.

Don't like him, eh? Condemning everything about him. My, but that's a silly stunt, mighty silly. Besides, it isn't true.

Now there are all sorts of qualities and impulses in a man—in every man. You know yourself that there is a fight between two or three elements in you before you do the commonest thing.

You don't like that other fellow, eh? Yes, you do, some of him.

Don't you know that quality in yourself that you think is so perfectly sweet and noble? The man you claim to hate has that quality. Maybe not so well developed as yours—maybe hasn't had the chance to develope it. But he has it, and you should like that much of him, because he has it in common with you.

That is true of every one of those qualities you recognize so proudly in yourself.

He has 'em, too!

Then that thing in him that you observed that led to your remark of condemnation—you've got it, boy, you've got it!

You may have succeeded in hiding it, or perhaps even in smothering it some and making it keep its head down and not have much to say about your actions, but you have that quality!

The thing that you deplore in the other man is somewhere in you, more or less dormant or undeveloped.

Your hate hurts that other man just that way, and—well, don't do it. If he died tomorrow you couldn't lookthe Lord in the face.

Like folks!

POOR "LO" TOO POOR TO ATTEND RACE CONGRESS.

The American Indian will not be represented at the first Universal Race Congress in London in July.

Aborigines from all parts of the earth will be seen there, but the American red man will be absent because the comptroller of the treasury has decided that the Indian appropriation could not be used for the expense of sending representative types of the first American.

Fire on Codington Farm.

The barns and outbuildings on the farm of M. F. Codington near Mt. Horeb were destroyed by fire Wednesday night. The fire, which is believed to be of an incendiary origin, started about 10 o'clock. Codington, with the assistance of his neighbors, succeeded in getting a number of horses and cows from the barn, but several hundred chickens and a number of swine were lost. The Codington residence was threatened and several times caught fire, but the flames were extinguished by Mr. Codington's neighbors.

A movement has been started in Germany with the object of compelling girls to do domestic service for a certain number of years on the analogy of compulsory military service for men.

A volume of statistics issued by the British Poor Law Commission fixes the number of paupers in England and Wales at 1,700,000. This high figure is based on a new method of classification, which is said to be necessary in order to represent the facts.

New Map of New York City.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has issued one of the best maps of New York city that has ever been published. It is being distributed by Frank Rowley, the druggist, of West Front street. The map shows plainly all the points of interest about the big city, including all the docks, steamship piers and other interesting information.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Nash and family have removed from West Seventh street to their summer home in Washington Valley.

LOCAL HORSE SHOW ON JUNE 1, 2, AND 3

Official announcement of the dates for the eighth annual horse show under the auspices of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club, was made today by Robert A. Fairbairn, vice-president of the club. The show will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 1, 2 and 3, instead of June 8, 9 and 10, the change being made owing to the fact that the latter dates will conflict with the meeting of the United Hunts at Belmont Park on June 8 and 10, and would naturally take some people away from the local exhibition.

All the details for the show are being looked after and one of the big new features this year will be the classes for military mounts, which are always very popular at horse shows. The club anticipates a number of fine entries. The other classes will be about the same as last year, and promises have been assured of a large number of entries.

EAST END CHURCH MEN HAVE A DINNER

The Dutch Arms, men's association of the Netherwood Reformed church, gave a successful dinner at the church last night and a feature was the music furnished by a male quartet from the New Brunswick Seminary, which was in the nature of a surprise to the members and friends.

The dinner which was served first by the men of the Dutch Arms, was an excellent one. There were about seventy-five persons present to enjoy it. The men were assisted by Miss Iona Wood, Miss Gertrude Berry and Miss Helen Carson. William T. Banks was chairman of the committee and also acted as toastmaster. Other members of the committee were B. P. Hansen, Claude Gonod and Rev. Royal A. Stout.

Rev. George H. Donovan, of the Reformed church, Rocky Hill, was present and after making a few remarks, told a number of humorous stories. Interspersing the program, the Seminary quartet, comprising James Dykema, second bass; M. C. T. Andrea, second tenor; John Warnshuis, first bass and James T. Vaneklassen, first tenor, with Rudolph Stier, accompanist, rendered a number of fine selections, which were enjoyed. Mr. Dykema also gave several recitations.

During the evening Amos Andrews gave a resume of the work of the Dutch Arms and the prospects for erecting a building for the use of the men close to the church. The past year, he said, had been a prosperous one and the coming year is full of promise.

DR. SIMON FLEXNER ON INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

"The control of infantile paralysis today must be by prevention, since no specific remedy or cure for it is known," said Dr. Simon Flexner, of the Rockfeller Institute of Medical Research, yesterday before the National Academy of Sciences. The determined effort by many States to deal with the epidemic through prevention by requiring notification and quarantining was commended by Dr. Flexner.

Pointing out that 20,000 cases occurred since its appearance in epidemic form in the United States, Dr. Flexner said from 10,000 to 15,000 cripples had been left by the disease. No more convincing and impressive example of the value of the employment of animals in the elucidation of a serious and baffling disease could be cited, he said, than the experiments from which knowledge of infantile paralysis had been obtained.

GRACE CHURCH MISSION WOMEN HOLD A FAIR

Under the aupices of the women of Grace Church Mission, colored, a successful fair and entertainment came to a close last night. It was held Wednesday afternoon and evening and last night and was well attended. The parish house was attractively decorated with flowers and booths. A feature was a little play entitled "The Toy Shop," which was arranged by Miss Mary Faber and Miss Alice Titus, teachers in the mission Sunday school.

Mrs. L. E. McCoy was chairman of the general committee which comprised Mrs. Eugene Johnson, Mrs. J. C. Anderson, Mrs. William Jones, Miss Helen Lockett, Miss Clyde, Miss Alice Maynard, Miss Mayzie Maynard, Miss Stewart and Miss Cary. Useful and fancy articles were on sale and a supper was served each evening.

Marvelous Chimpanze at Proctor's.

Alfred the Great, the marvelous chimpanze now appearing at Proctors theatre, proves beyond all doubt that this animal is only slightly below a human being in intelligence. Alfred can smoke, drink, eat, thread a needle, unclock a padlock, roller skate, ride a bicycle, walk a tight rope, brush his hair and do many other remarkable things. Mark List, violin vituoso, is one of the best yet heard in this city. His program is classical and popular. Husted and Olmsted present a fine sketch, entitled "Stripes," while McCabe and Murray, singing and talking comedians, are clever.

REV. AND MRS. McKELVEY RECEIVE THEIR FRIENDS.

Rev. and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey gave another one of the series of "at homes" at Warren chapel, last night, the affair being one of the most enjoyable of any thus far arranged. Mr. and Mrs. McKelvey were assisted in receiving by Mrs. R. O. Stewart, Mrs. F. J. Burner, Mrs. David Smith, Mrs. George Hoagland and Mrs. Charles B. Stephens.

The parlors, where the affair was held, was attractively decorated for the occasion. A feature of the informal program was the rendition of several cornet solos by Dorothy Seader, aged nine years. Refreshments were served during a social hour under the direction of Mrs. John Higgins.

An Up-to-Date Bakery.

GAVE SUCCESSFUL SUPPER AND DANCE.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society held a very successful supper and dance in the town hall at Watchung, last night. Over 300 people attended, many of them coming from this city.

The supper was served from 7 to 9 o'clock, the members of the auxiliary preparing and serving the meal. At its conclusion, dancing was commenced and continued until an early hour this morning. Music was furnished by the "specializing musicians," Messrs. Perrit and Anderson.

The members of the auxiliary are highly gratified at the outcome of the affair and express appreciation both for attendance and donations.

CHAPTER XIV.

While the Lancashire Lass was racing down to the Straits of Messina the Erinna was heading for the same point from the opposite direction, no longer dawdling along at half-speed, but going her full 16 knots, after coaling at Naples, and any navigator who knew the positions and respective speeds of the two yachts could have calculated with approximate precision the point at which they would probably sight each other.

Logotheti had given up the idea of taking Baraka to Paris, if he had ever really entertained it at all. He assured her that Naples was a great city, too, and that there was a first-class French dress-making establishment there, and that the Ville de Lyon would turn her out almost as smartly as the Rue de la Paix itself. He took Baraka ashore and placed her for half a day in the hands of Mme. Anna, who undertook to do all that money could do in about a fortnight. He had the effrontery to say that Baraka was a niece of his from Constantinople, whose mother was on board the yacht, but had unfortunately sprained her ankle in falling down the companion during a gale, and could therefore not accompany her daughter on shore. The young lady, he said, spoke only Turkish. Mme. Anna, grave and magnificently calm under all circumstances, had a vague recollection of having seen the handsome oriental gentleman already with another niece, who spoke only French; but that was none of her business. When would the young lady try on the things? On any day Mme. Anna chose to name; but in the meantime her uncle would take her down to Sicily, as the weather was so wonderfully fine and it was still so hot. Mme. Anna therefore named a day, and promised, moreover, to see the best linen-drapers and seamstresses herself, and to provide the young lady with as complete an outfit as if she were going to be married. She should have all things visible and invisible in the shortest possible time. Logotheti, who considered himself a stranger, insisted on putting down a thousand franc note merely as a guarantee of good faith. The dressmaker protested almost furiously and took the money, still protesting. So that was settled, and Baraka was to be outwardly changed into a beautiful Feringhi lady without delay. To tell the truth, the establishment is really a smart one, and she was favorably impressed by the many pretty frocks and gowns that were tried on several pretty young woman in order that she might make her choice.

Baraka would have liked a blue satin skirt with a yellow train and a bright green silk body, but in her travels she had noticed that the taste of Feringhi ladies was for very sober or gentle colors, compared with the fashionable standards of Samarkand, Tiflis, and Constantinople, and she meekly acquiesced to everything that Logotheti and Mme. Anna proposed, after putting their heads together. Logotheti seemed to know a great deal about it.

It was nearly dark when the naphtha launch took them out to the yacht, which lay under the mole where the big English and German passenger steamers and the men-of-war are moored.

Logotheti had at last received Margaret's telegram asking him to meet her at once. It had failed to reach him in Gibraltar, and had been telegraphed on thence to Naples, and when he read it he was considerably disturbed. He wrote a long message of explanations and excuses, and sent it to the prima donna at Bayreuth, tripling the number of words she had prepaid for his answer. But no reply came, for Margaret was herself at sea and nothing could reach her. He sent one of his own men from the yacht to spend the day at the telegraph office, with instructions for finding him if any message came. The man found him three times, and brought three telegrams; and each time as he tore open the little folded brown paper he felt more uncomfortable, but he was relieved to find each time that the message was only a business one from London or Paris, giving him the latest confidential news about a government loan in which he was largely interested. When he reached the yacht he sent another man to wait till midnight at the office.

He Sent Another Man to Wait Till Midnight at the Office.

The diva was angry, he thought; that was clear, and perhaps she had some right to be. The tone of her telegram had been peremptory in the extreme, and now that he had answered it after a delay of several days, she refused to take any notice of him. It was not possible that such a personage as she was should have left Bayreuth without leaving clear instructions for sending on any telegrams that might come after she left. At this time of year, as he knew, she was beset with offers of engagements to sing, and they had to be answered. From eight o'clock in the morning to midnight there were 16 hours, ample time for a retransmitted message to reach her anywhere in Europe and to be answered. Logotheti felt a sensation of deep relief when the man came aboard at a quarter-past midnight and reported himself empty handed; but he resolved to wait till the following evening before definitely leaving Naples for the ten days which must elapse before Baraka could try on her beautiful Feringhi clothes.

He told her anything he liked, and she believed him, or was indifferent; for the idea that she must be as well dressed as any European woman when she met the man she was seeking had appealed strongly to her, and the sight of the pretty things at Mme. Anna's had made her ashamed of her simple little ready-made serges and blouses. Logotheti assured her that Kralinsky was within easy reach, and showed no inclination to travel far. There was news of him in the telegrams received that day, the Greek said. Spies were about him and were watching him for her, and so far he had shown no inclination to admire any Feringhi beauty.

Baraka accepted all these inventions without doubting their veracity. In her eyes Logotheti was a great man, something like a king, and vastly more than a Tartar chieftain. He could send men to the ends of the earth if he chose. Now that he was sure of where Kralinsky was, he could no doubt have him seized secretly and brought to her, if she desired it earnestly of him. But she did not wish to see the man, free or a prisoner, till she had her beautiful new clothes. Then he should look upon her, and judge whether he had done well to despise her love, and to leave her to be done to death by her own people and her body left to the vulture that had waited so long on a jutting point of rock over her head three years ago.

It was a dreamy and sense-compelling life that she led on the yacht, surrounded with every luxury she had ever heard of, and constantly waited on by the only clever man she had ever really talked with, excepting the old Persian merchant in Stamboul. The vision of the golden-bearded giant who had left her to her fate after treating her with stony indifference was still before her, but the reality was nearer in the shape of a visible "greatman," who could do anything he chose, who caused her to be treated like a queen, and who was undeniably handsome.

She wondered whether he had a wife. Judging marriage from her point of view, there probably had been one put away in that beautiful house in Paris. He was an oriental, she told herself, and he would not parade his wife as the Feringhis did. But she was one, too, and she considered that it would be an insult to ask him about such things. Spiro knew, no doubt, but she could not demean herself to inquire of a servant. Perhaps Gula had found out already, for the girl had a way of finding out whatever she wanted to know, apparently by explaining things to the second mate. Possibly Gula could be made to tell what she had learned without being directly questioned. But after all, Baraka decided that it did not matter, since she meant to marry the fair-beard as soon as she had her pretty clothes. Yet she became conscious that if he had not existed, she would think it very satisfactory to marry the great man who could do anything he liked, though if he had a wife already, as he probably had, she would refuse to be the second in his house. The Koran allowed a man four, it was said, but the idea was hateful to her, and moreover the Persian merchant's wife had told her that it was old fashioned to have more than one, mainly because living had grown so expensive.

Logotheti sat beside her for hours under the awnings, talking or not, as she chose, and always reading when she was silent, though he often looked up to see if she wanted anything. He told her when they left Naples that he would show her beautiful islands and other sights, and the great fire-mountains of the south, Etna and Stromboli, which she had heard of on her voyage to Marseilles, but had not seen because the steamer had passed them at night. The fire-mountain at Naples had been quiet, only sending out thin wreaths of smoke, which Baraka insisted came from fires made by shepherds.

Pressing Centerpieces.

When laundrying centerpieces the ugly puckering that prevents them lying flat on the table is prevented by ironing the centre before the edges. Hankerchiefs are also best ironed in this way, through usually the hems are ironed first.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 23, 1911.

Topic.—Sabbath benefits.—Isa. lviii, 1-14. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the importance and necessity of properly observing the Sabbath day. The tendency today is to neglect or to desecrate it rather than to remember it and to keep it holy. Many use it as a day of pleasure and of recreation, while others are engaged in the performance of unnecessary work, which is directly forbidden by the command of God. Then, again, there are those who, like the Jews to whom Isaiah wrote at this time, partially keep the Sabbath, but do not devote the entire day to the purpose for which it was intended. But under none of these circumstances can the Sabbath be profitable and beneficial. Therefore if we desire that the Sabbath should be a day of blessing and not of weariness we may well study the prophet's injunction concerning the observance of it.

The Sabbath to be rightfully observed, according to the injunction of Isaiah, must first of all be treated with reverence. This fact is taught in the expression, "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath—i. e., look upon it as sacred and holy as it really it—no one will ever keep the Sabbath as it should be kept without first realizing its sacredness and manifesting toward it a spirit of true reverence. To keep it properly we must realize that it is a holy day, a day set apart of God for His worship and service and therefore different from the other days of the week. (2) The Sabbath should be a day of rest from work of every sort. The prophet exhorted the Jews to abstain from business on God's day, "from doing thy pleasure [business] on My holy day." It was by business rather than by pleasure that the Sabbath was desecrated at this time. After the Sabbath sacrifices had been offered secular occupations were engaged in with all freedom. It is this that the prophet condemns, and it is just as contrary to the true observance of the Sabbath day as it ever was. (3) The Sabbath should be honored "and shalt honor Him," or rather "it," for the Sabbath day is referred to. This honoring is to be done by our not following the ordinary pursuits of life upon the Sabbath day, by our not doing our own ways, nor finding our own pleasures, nor speaking our own words. Instead we should do God's ways, seek His pleasure and speak words of Him and for Him. If we follow these injunctions then we shall truly delight ourselves in the Lord, find joy and pleasure in His worship and in His service.

Is the Sabbath a delight to us? Do the Sabbath benefits of rest or worship, of Christian fellowship, of opportunities for service, belong to us? If not the Sabbath should be a delight, and these benefits should be ours. Moreover, they may be ours if in the true spirit we will "remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. ii, 1-3; Ex. xx, 8-11; xxiii, 12; Num. xv, 32-36; Neh. x, 31; Jer. xvii, 21, 22; Matt. xii, 1-8; xxv, 43; Mark ii, 23-28; Heb. iv, 9-11.

Two Practical Lessons.

Here are two practical lessons:

1. Nil desperandum. Never despair of a Christian Endeavor society. It has amazing vitality. It can "come back" from the edge of the grave. In thousands of cases it has done so. A single new consecrated leader will often produce marvelous results. The advent of a new pastor, of a new family in the congregation, the coming of a wise evangelist, the proximity of a county or state convention, the sending of a delegate to an inspiring Christian Endeavor gathering—all these are messengers of the Spirit of God to the society, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."

2. The reason for this is that the society of Christian Endeavor is a distinctly religious society. Other organizations, when they get sick, die and remain dead, because they have no indwelling source of life.

Kill a literary society and it remains dead for all time. You may start another, but there are ten chances to one that the same society cannot be revived.

Let a society die that is dependent on the pastor and one or two older people, and it is almost impossible to resuscitate it. But a Christian Endeavor society has life within itself. It is not altogether dependent on older leadership. If a few earnest, faithful, thoroughly Christian young people can be found who will take the lead the society can always be rejuvenated. The recent revival of interest in Christian Endeavor and its work all over America in connection with the increase campaign is proof of my contention, showing that not only individual societies, but local and state unions as well, can "come back."

For one society that has died ten have sprung up to take its place. For one local union that is lagging today five have revived and are doing a better work than ever. There is nothing harder to kill permanently than a Christian Endeavor society or local union. This is distinctly a year for encouragement, for congratulations, for thankfulness to God for a society that amid all vicissitudes, even if it falls upon evil times, can "come back."—Francis E. Clark in Christian Endeavor World.

Creamed Chicken.

Two cups flour, three-fourths of a cup of lard, one teaspoon of salt, the white of one egg and one pint of creamed chicken. Sift the flour and salt together twice, then work in the lard and add the white of the egg beaten to a froth with one tablespoon of ice water, then add enough more water to make a stiff dough. Place on a molding board and roll into a thin sheet, cut into strips on inch wide and twelve inches long. Wrap these around your pastry tubes and bake a delicate brown. Remove the tubes and fill the horns with the creamed chicken mixture. Wrap each horn in parafine paper. These can be served either hot or cold.

Tea Gowns.

A lovely little tea gown which contains an idea for the woman with a similar garment to make over is of pale turquoise satin, draped in empire style and veiled with gray ceepe de chine, hemmed with a finger's width of gray squirrel fur. The veiling is held in place over the underbody by a fleur-de-lis of seed pearls at the waist.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits."

A copy of which is subjoined to this notice, has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt such ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council, to be held in the Council Chamber, No. 149 North avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J. at eight o'clock p. m., on Monday, the first day of May, A. D. Nineteen Hundred and Eleven, at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance, said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council, and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council with reference to the proposed ordinance.

By order of the Common Council.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., April 3, 1911.

AN ORDINANCE

For the Permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of Streets of the City of Plainfield, with Permanent and Durable Macadam Pavement, and to provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the following streets and parts of streets of the City of Plainfield shall be permanently improved with durable macadam pavement to be completely laid and constructed on or before the thirty-first day of October, 1911, said macadam pavement to be of the depth and width hereinafter specified, the plain macadam to be in every respect equal to the macadamizing on Randolph Road, between Arlington Avenue and Cedar Brook and the macadam with bituminous binder to be in every respect equal to the macadamizing on Johnston Avenue in said city, the quantity of bituminous binder to be 1¾ gallons per square yard. All work to be given out upon contract to the lowest responsible bidder and only after bids therefore shall have been solicited and received according to law, all bids to specify prices for each of said streets or parts of streets separately.

West Fifth and West Sixth Streets from the macadam on Monroe Avenue to the macadam on Clinton Avenue;

East Sixth Street from the northeasterly curb line of Richmond Street to the line of the proposed macadam on Central Street;

Webster Place from the northerly curb line of Putnam Avenue to the intersection of Berckman Street;

Berckman Street from the intersection of Webster Place to the macadam on East Seventh Street;

Central Street from the macadam on South Avenue to the westerly curb line of Woodland Avenue;

Columbia Avenue from the macadam on Leland Avenue to the northeasterly curb line of Frederick Street;

Leland Avenue from the macadam on South Avenue to the southeasterly side of Cushing Road;

Essex Street from the macadam on Spooner Avenue to the macadam on John Street;

Irving Place from the macadam on West Seventh Street to the macadam on West Eighth Street;

Central Avenue from the end of the present macadam to the southerly City Line;

East Seventh Street from the macadam on Belvidere Avenue to the macadam on Terrill Road;

Sec. 2. That said streets and portions of streets described in Section 1 shall be macadamized for the width and depth and of the kind shown in the following schedule, and the macadamizing preparation shall be laid down to the grades already established by ordinance for said streets or portions of streets, respectively:

	Depth Width, Inches.	Kind.
W. Fifth St.	16 6 to 4	Plain Macadam
W. Sixth St.	16 6 to 4	"
E. Sixth St.	25 6 to 4	"
Webster Pl.	16 6 to 4	"
Berckman St.	16 6 to 4	"
Central St.	16 6 to 4	"
Columbia Ave.	16 6 to 4	"
Leland Ave.	16 6 to 4	"
Essex St.	30 6 to 4	Macadam with bituminous binder in top course.
Irving Pl.	30 6 to 4	"
Central Ave.	16 6 to 4	"
E. Seventh St.	16 7 to 5	"

Sec. 3. That for the purpose of obtaining money by the sale of bonds hereinafter specified for the permanent improvement of said streets and parts of streets as aforesaid, in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits, to an amount not exceeding fifteen dollars per capita for each of the inhabitants of said City according to the last official census, but not for more than the amount limited by law, the Common Council of said City do hereby, pursuant to the Act of the Legislature of said State entitled "An Act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State, and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same, and for the assessment of the benefits of such improvement upon the land and real estate benefited thereby," and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, authorize the issuing of thirty-four coupon municipal bonds of the City of Plainfield of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) each, and amounting in all to Thirty-four Thousand Dollars ($34,000), which bonds shall be dated July first, 1911, and shall bear interest at the rate of five per centum (5 per cent.) per annum, payable semi-annually, and be payable three years from the date thereof, with the option to the City to redeem or pay off the said bonds, or any one or more of them at any time after one year from the date thereof and before three years from the date thereof, on giving personal notice to said holders of said bonds or thirty (30) days notice by advertisement in the official newspapers of the City of the intention to make such redemption or payment, which bonds shall be signed by the Mayor and bear the corporate seal of the City and be attested by the City Clerk, and may severally or collectively when ordered by resolution of the Common Council be sold for an amount not less than par value; and there shall be raised by tax in each year hereafter such sum of money as may be necessary to pay the interest on all outstanding bonds and the principal of such bonds as may mature during that year, and the money derived from the assessments upon the property benefited shall when collected be held as a fund toward the payment of said bonds.

Sec. 4. That after said improvements shall have been completed, the Common Council shall, pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, apply to the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Union for the appointment of Commissioners to estimate and assess benefits upon the owners of the lots or parcels of land and real estate peculiarly benefited by such improvements, in proportion as near as may be, to an amount equal to the amount of benefits actually acquired by the lands and real estate bordering on said streets or portions thereof respectively, by reason of such improvements respectively; and in case the costs and expenses aforesaid shall exceed the amount of said benefits, the excess thereof shall be paid by the City at large and raised by general tax; no property or owner thereof to be in any case assessed beyond the amount of benefit actually derived from said improvements.

HOPE SHOW CLOSES

Capacity House at the Final Performance of Young Men's Minstrels.

HITS ARE SCORED BY ARTISTS.

Bouquet Presented to Clifford Braider, the Musical Director—Tom Muir's Topical Song a Winner.

The Hope minstrel troupe gave the final performance of its third annual show at the chapel, last night, before one of the largest audiences that has yet been noted. Seats were at a premium long before the doors opened and scores bought standing room in preference to being turned away.

The program was carried out to perfection, all the principals and chorus members doing their best to excel the work of the other nights.

The songs and jokes went with a snap and the large audience responded with liberal applause. A number not on the bill was the presentation to Clifford Braider, musical director of the show, of an immense bouquet of roses. It came from the troupe in appreciation of his work and was handed over the footlights by the manager, Ben Evans, with a neat speech of thanks.

The topical song, "If I had the Mayor's job for just a day," as sung by Tom Muir, again scored a hit. Mayor George W. V. Moy was an interested listener and seemed to appreciate the suggestions made as to what would be done if he vacated his executive seat for twenty-four hours. The words of the song were composed by Mr. Muir, while Judge William N. Runyon furnished the catchy air they were set to. The verses were as follows:

Now listen while I tell you of the many things I'd do,
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.
How Plainfield's business would be run on plans completely new
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.
I'd have a lovely frolic turning everything about
And when I finished up the job there isn't any doubt
That politics and bosses would be put to utter rout
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.

CHORUS.

If I had the Mayor's job for only just a single day
It's a cinch that I would do things in a very different way
I would work with all my might from early morn to late at night,
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.

The Public Service trolley folks would surely treat us fine
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.
They'd furnish Pullman palace cars for every local line
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.
No more would bumping flat wheels make the people cuss and swear
Conductors would be pretty girls with looks beyond compare
Who'd give you fifty trading stamps for every nickle fare
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.

The fire department members would all get a raise in pay,
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.
And better apparatus would be ordered right away
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.
I would see that Mr. Buxton purchased all new teams of course,
And then I'd do a little stunt the people would endorse
By swopping Chief Doane's auto for a wooden hobby horse,
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.

The city police station would receive a call from me,
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.
To ferret out a matter that is quite a mystery,
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.
With rubber-padded shoes I'd go a
sleuthing here and there
A poking into cubby holes and under every stair.
Until I found the foxy guy who hid that silverware,
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.

The councilmen and Mr. Moy their scrapping soon would cease,
If I had the Mayor's job for just
a day.
And o'er the city hall would fly the white-winged dove of peace.
If I had the Mayor's job for just

CITY CAN APPROPRIATE $10,000 FOR HOSPITAL

Senator Ernest R. Ackerman's bill permitting cities to spend amounts up to $10,000 for charity patients in hospitals, passed both branches of the Legislature this week and will probably be signed by the Governor. While the provisions of the bill applies to cities generally throughout the State, it is understood, that it was introduced especially for the benefit of Plainfield. There has been a law in operation which permitted the Common Council to appropriate $1,500 to the hospital for the care of indigent patients, but the Board of Governors of the hospital have felt for some time that this amount is not sufficient.

One of the members of the Board of Governors in speaking of the matter said that about fifty per cent. of the work performed at the lacol hospital is charity work, and in view of this it hardly seems fair that a limited number of citizens should stand the bulk of the expense. The legislative committee of the board has been interested in securing some legislation that would enable the Common Council to increase its appropriation. This does not mean that $10,000 would be appropriated but the bill gives the Council greater latitude than it enjoys at present.

FANWOOD'S MAYOR RESIGNS HIS OFFICE

J. H. L. Todd, who has been Mayor of Fanwood Borough, since 1909, when he was elected on the Republican and Democratic tickets, has resigned his office, because of a pressure of personal business and the fact that he expects to be away from the borough a great deal of the time during the coming year. Mr. Todd owns a farm neaar Liberty, N. Y., and he plans to spend some time there this summer, also to take t trip to Europe. Mr. Todd's resignation will take effect April 30.

Mr. Todd expects to remove from the borough some time next week. He is engaged in the iron and steel business and this, it is expected, will take him to Europe next summer. William H. Hoar, who is now president of the Borough Council will succeed Mr. Todd and serve the unexpired term and the Council will then elect one of its number as president. As acting Mayor, Mr. Hoar will have the power to fil the vacancy in the body for the unexpired term.

PHYSICAL DIRECTOR WHITAKER RESIGNS

Thomas G. Wittaker, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., has presented his resignation to take effect on July 1. He will then become one of the instructors in swimming at the University of Pennsylvania. He entered the service of the local Association on September last, coming from Reading, Pa., where he had acted as director of municipal playgrounds. Prior to his entrance upon this work he had several years of successful experience as gymnasium leader and assistant phyiscal director of the Germantown, Pa., Association.

Mr. Whittaker has introduced scveral new features of work during his directorship here. A champion swimmer himself he has promoted keen interest in swimming among both junior and senior members of the association. Several local swimming records have been broken and a strong swimming team has been organized under his directorship. An increased attendance in many of the Association gymnasium classes attest both his popularity and his efficiency as a director.

No succesor to Mr. Whittaker has yet been chosen.

Entertained Five Hundred Club.

Mrs. Henry Biedleman, of South avenue, entertained the Five Hundred Club, of which she is a member, at her home, last night. Mrs. Fred Sandford, Mrs. A. E. Giddes and Mrs. Frank W. Rowley received the first, second and third prizes for the women and Robert Gow, Dr. A. K. Brennan and Robert Giddes, the honors for the men.

Violated Health Ordinance.

Hyman Semmer, a baker of the east end, was arraigned this morning before Judge DeMeza in the city court charged by the health authorities with violating part of the ordinances relating to basements. The case was adjourned until Monday morning for final adjustment.

Miss Emily Coriell, of Fairview avenue, is building a bungalow on Verdon street, which she will occupy when completed.

HISTORY'S FACTS

Heavenly Rest Church Rector Criticizes Dr. McArthur's Public Assertious.

WASHINGTON 'FIRST AMERICAN'

Cromwell Not England's Greatest Man But a Butcher, Bigot and Tyrant Clergyman Says.

Rev. Cortland H. Mallery rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, takes exception to some of the assertions made by Rev. Dr. McArthur in his address at the Park Avenue Baptist church on Thursday night, his topic being "America's Place Among the Nations." The clergymen's criticism follows:

Editor, The Daily Press:

May I occupy a space in your paper in order to draw attention to the serious mistatements involving an utter perversion of history, to say the least, contained in your report of the remarks of the Rev. Dr. MacArthur at the Park Avenue Baptist church. This gentleman is reported to have said that "Washington was not an American." What a slander against the Father of his Country and son of Virginia! Further comment upon this would be superflous; it carries with it as every school child knows its own refutation.

One can only wonder, however, how any American could utter it and I am going to charitably suppose that there must be some mistake on this point. But I wish to enter a protest against placing the name of Lincoln above that of him who made a Lincoln possible. Were it not for Washington leading and suffering with his gallant patriots throughout the years of that struggle which won our independence and made possible for us all that we now enjoy, no Lincoln would have found a place in our history. The hero of Valley Forge and of Yorktown, the first President of the infant republic and the guiding hand of its beginning will always occupy the first place in the hearts of all true Americans.

Let there be no disparagement of either hero, there is glory enough for both, but Dr. MacArthur's remarks are only another instance of the modern tendency to exalt Lincoln at the expense of Washington and hand down to posterity a distorted view of history.

And then as to Cromwell, he is called "the greatest man England has ever shown." If this were true I would pity England. The name of anarchist, tyrant, religious bigot and human butcher, strong words I realize, would more accurately describe him. If some question this I refer them to any impartial English history. Finally the pity of such inaccurate remarks is that coming from a man of Dr. MacArthur's ability the casual reader accepts them as true and hands them on to others, the mischief which follows being sometimes imparable. Thanking you for the courtesy of your columns, I am,

Sincerely yours,
CORTLANDT H. MALLERY.

"ONE GIRL IN A 1,000" THE OFFERING TONIGHT.

A lively rural comedy with a dandy good plot and a funny rube constable, a crazy nigger and a giddy old maid, are the alugh producers in "One Girl in a Thousand" to be presented at the Plainfield theatre tonight, besides this Miss Myrkle is seen to excellent advantage in her only oubrette role and by the way this kind of parts, brought her into prominence and gaining for her the enviable reputation she now has. The play is laid in Baltimore and the scenes are taken from an actual occurence that happens when homes were destroyed and inmates had to flee for their lives from the burning city, a little girl was found whose parents had perished, she is the one girl in a thousand and such a pretty story is seldom seen or heard on any stage as this one. The court room scene is a big dramatic surprise and almost as strong as the big scene in Madame X. The play also has a realistic rain storm scene when barrels of water are used to reproduce this effect.

Hush, 'Tis the Black Hand.

Residents of Park avenue near Kensington were startled yesterday afternoon by a violent explosion in the debris about the dumping ground at that point. While no windows in the vicinity were broken the concussion was strong enough to arouse the neighborhood. Health officer John O'Brien, Jr., together with inspector William Addis is making an investigation to determine the cause of the explosion.

Mrs. Patrick Kiely, of Steiner place, is detained at home by illness.

Thomas Carty, Jr., of Orchard place, is much improved from a recent illness.

FRED. BADER SR. DIES AT CARTERET

While coughing and attempting to cross the tracks of the Long Branch division of the Jersey Central Thursday night, Frederick Bader, father of Patrolman Fred Bader, was struck by an express train and killed. The funeral will be held on Monday, April 24, at the late residence, 734 South Second street at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. The interment will be in St. Mary' cemetery.

Mr. Bader had been suffering from a severe cold and had not been able for the time being to get any relief from the cough. He did not hear the warning bell at the crossing and stepped directly in front of the train, which killed him.

Mr. Bader is survived by his wife, one son, the patrolman and one daughter, Mrs. William Hahn, of Birmingham, Alabama.

Mr. Bader was employed at the Chrome Steel Works at Carteret and was one of the oldest employes of the concern. It was said this morning that he had always been slightly deaf and that he had always feared crossing the tracks at the point where his fatal injuries occured.

SORE ON LA MONTE IN SOMERSET COUNTY

Somerset county Democrats, to say nothing of some of the Republicans are up in arms with a feeling of distrust in Assemblyman LaMonte, who it is said dodged the issue when when called upon to vote on the sewerage measure, known as Senate bill, No. 301, which has kept Bound Brook and North Plainfield on the anxious seat for the past few days.

According to the statement received from other people who were present when Senate bill, No. 301 was passed he quietly slipped out of the chamber and refused to vote on the measure. There are those who go so far as to state that Mr. LaMonte tried to exert his influence in obtaining contrary votes to this measure.

It is said on reliable authority this morning that there was a powerful contingent of North Plainfielders present and that they watched carefully the moves made by Assemblyman LaMonte and found that rather than face the question of voting on the bill had absented himself from the house.

A Bound Brook resident is responsible for the statement that Assemblyman LaMonte did not properly represent his constituency in the sewerage matter.

HENRY ELLIK DIES OF SPINAL MENNIGITIS.

Henry Ellik, a resident of the city for the past twenty years, died this morning at his home on Plainfield avenue. He had been ill only three days with spinal meningitis. Mr. Ellik was a native of Baden, Germany, but came to this country when a young man. During all his residence here he was in the employ of Frank Linke as bottler, by whom he was brought to Plainfield. He was an unassuming man but very conscientious and a member of the German Reformed church. He was fifty three years old and is survived by his wife.

The funeral will be held at his late home Tuesday morning at 10:30 and burial will be in the Plainfield Avenue cemetery.

Members of Nominating Committee.

William Demarest and A. E. LaPorte, of the local postoffice, have been appointed members of a nominating committee by the local branch of the United States Civil Service, which was organized at Elizabeth a few days ago. Branches are being formed throughout the country.

Moose Memorial Service.

The members of Plainfield lodge, No. 310, Loyal Order of Moose, have been requested by the secretary, Charles L. Kling, to assemble at Columbus hall on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock to attend the first annual memorial service. A full attendance is desired.

Mrs. Louise S. Travis.

Mrs. Louise Stratton Travis died this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Outwater, of Fanwood. The funeral will be held at the Moravian cemetery, New Dorp, S. I., Monday afternoon and will be in charge of Rev. Adrian Duryea, of Hackensack.

To Repeat Easter Music.

The Easter music will be repeated at the services at the Church of the Holy Cross tomorrow.

MISS SMITH WEDS

Daughter of William Palmer Smith the Bride of Edward Yarde Breese.

TWO CLERGYMEN OFFICIATE.

Miss Alice H. Smith Maid of Honor and J. Buchanan Breese Best Man—Ceremony at Home of Bride's Father.

Miss Georgianna Smith, daughter of William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue, and Edward Yarde Breese, of Trenton, were married at noon today at the home of the bride's father. Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, rector of Grace church, assisted by Rev. Dr. W. C. Neilson, of this city, performd the ceremony. Owing to the fact that the family of the bride is in deep mourning, the affair was a quiet one, the guests being restricted to relatives and a few intimate friends.

The bride was gowned in white satin embroidered net and she wore a tulle veil, and orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of lillies-of-the-valley. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Alice Hoadley Smith, who was maid-of-honor. Her gown was of white satin over tunic of white satin cloth, embroidered with pearls and she wore a Juliet cap of pears and carried white sweet peas and moss roses. The best man was J. Buchanan Breese, of Trenton, brother of the groom. There were no ushers.

The house was decorated with spring flowers, the scheme in the parlors and dining-room being very attractive, particular that of the table in the dining-room.

A reception followed the ceremony and a wedding breakfast was served by Delmonico. Later in the afternoon the bride and groom departed on an extensive wedding trip. They will reside in Trenton upon their return. The bride is well-known in Plainfield and New York society. She is an accomplished and talented young woman and during the past few years has traveled extensively. She has also been greatly interested in charitable and religious enterprises and has been active in Grace church parish.

The groom who is the son of Captain J. Buchanan Breese, United States Marine Corps. He is a member of the Second Regiment State Infantry, having held the position of lieutenant and adjutant. He is also a member of the Essex Troop and the Military Order Loyal Legion. The family has been prominent in Trenton for years. Mr. Breese is connected with the well-known bond department of Taylor, Smith & Evans, with offices in New York, Philadelphia and Trenton. The bride received a large collection of beautiful gifts, many being of great value.

"THE HENRIETTA" SEATS ON SALE ON MONDAY.

Seats for "The Henrietta," the benefit play for the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, will go on sale Monday night at 6 o'clock at the Plainfield theatre. This play to be given by the Park Comedy Club on May 18-19, is rapidly being made the social event of the post-Lenten season and those who remember the long line that formed at the box-office at the opening sale of seats for "Trelawney of the Wells," last year, will see to it that this year they have their representatives in line at an early hour.

Not a box-office seat will be sold in advance and first come first served will be the strict rule. Each individual will have the privilege of buying twelve seats for each performance. Owing to the demand for boxes it may be thought best to auction them off. If this is done, due announcement will be made.

Sunday-school Class Elects.

Sunday-school Class, No. 2, of Trinity Reformed church, of which Phillip A. Vroom is the teacher, met Thursday evening for organization and enjoyment at the home of one of the members, Mrs. Louis Neuman, on Essex street. The class organized by electing Mrs. George Ord, president; Mrs. Louis Neuman, vice-president; Mrs. Joseph Neal, secretary, and Mrs. W. B. Shafer, treasurer. A social time followed, games being played and refreshments were served. There were twenty-two members present.

Accused of Assault.

Francis J. Blatz and V. W. Nash, Jr., appeared for Joseph Manhattan and W. H. Foster, respectively in the city court this morning. Manhattan is accused of assault by James Olsen, a workman on the Foster place in West Ninth street. The case was adjourned until next Saturday morning at request of Mr. Blatz, who wishes to procure another witness whom it was impossible to have in court this morning.

TEA AND RECEPTION FOR MISS HOOLEY

One of the most delightful social functions of the season was a tea and reception given at the Park Club yesterday, by Miss Elizabeth Flanders for Miss Mabel B. Hooley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Hooley, of the borough, and Miss Marion Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hall, of Belvidere avenue, two prospective brides of the early summer.

Those who assisted in receiving with Miss Hooley and Miss Hall were Miss Elizabeth Flanders, Miss Ida Yerkes and Mrs. Edwin S. Hooley, while Mrs. Maxwell Perkins and Mrs. Gifford Cooley poured. The young women who assisted in serving were the Misses Nancy VanDeventer, Lucie Budlong, Katherine Titus, Helen Stevens, Anna Garrigues, Rae Hooley, May Faber, of this city; Miss Dorothy Ward, of Brooklyn; Miss Verna McCutcheon, of Boston and Miss Josephine LaTourette, of Bound Brook.

The affair was largely attended by young society women and Miss Hooley and Miss Hall were showered with congratulations in anticipation of their wedding. The clubhouse was tastefully decorated for the affair, yellow being the predominating color.

TO TELL STORY OF NETHERWOOD CAMP

Miss Sara Curry, matron of the Little Missionary's Day Nursery, in New York, and matron of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, will attend a meeting of the churches to be held in the Fist Baptist church on Monday evening, and relate her experience in the work for the past fifteen years. Charles W. McCutchen will preside, and Rev. John R. Henry, of New York, will deliver an address.

The following is a partial resume of Miss Curry's work during the year 1910: 43,061 poor families were visited; 4,095 sick people were nursed and furnished with medicine and doctor's service when required; 4,029 needy persons were supplied with garments and work was found for 348 men, women, boys and girls. In addition 3,215 mothers and children were brought out and cared for at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. Many will no doubt want to attend this general gathering and meet Miss Curry after the service.

YOUNG PEOPLE HOLD SUBSCRIPTION DANCE

The second of two subscription dances was given at the Hartridge Auditorium last night, and like the first one, proved to be a success. There were more than two hundred young people from the city and borough present. Music for dancing was furnished by a New York orchestra and during an intermission refreshments were served by Mrs. Henry Johnson, of the Park Club.

The committee having charge of the dance conprised Miss Helen Rae Hooley, Miss Florence Stewart, Miss Marion Hall, Edward Sharretts, Jack VanDeventer and DeWitt Brokaw. The patronesses who received were Mrs. Edwin S. Hooley, Mrs. Leon Moran, Mrs. L. A. Williams, Jr., Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. F. H. Andrews and Mrs. James H. Charles.

A Business Announcement.

The undertaking business of P. Casey and son is to be continued on the same lines as previous to the death of Patrick Casey. John F. Casey will have direct charge and will be assisted by members of the family in its management. He was associated with his father for twenty years and is thoroughly experienced in all branches of undertaking and embalming.

Dunellen Building Sold.

Charles L. Moffett, of this city, has purchased the three-story brick business building on North avenue, Dunellen, belonging to Dr. P. W. Brakeley. The ground floor is occupied at present by R. W. Pennock, who succeeded Dr. Brakeley in the drug business. The deal was made through the real estate agency of Robert L. Pierce.

HONOR LOCAL MEN

Governor Wilson Gives Appointments to Dr. Hughes, D. T. Kenney and Others.

ALL CONFIRMED BY SENATE.

D. E. Titsworth Among Them—William W. Smalley and Foster M. Voorhees Come in for Share of the Honorary Plums.

Governor Woodrow Wilson made some appointments yesterday which were confirmed by the Senate last night and among them was that of Dr. Frank J. Hughes, to be a member of the New Jersey Sanatatorium for Tuberculosis Disease. This appointment is a compliment to Dr. Hughes than whom there is no greater authority, it is said, on tuberculosis in this part of the State.

Doctor Hughes has had experiences in connection with fighting this disease which peculiarly fit him to fill the position and he is recognized as one of the best advisers on the disease in Union county. He is a trustee of the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis Society.

Among the other appointees is David T. Kenney to the Board of Managers of the State Home for Girls. Mr. Kenney was recently appointed Knight of the Cap and Sword by Pope Pius X and is a governor of Muhlenberg Hospital.

David E. Titsworth was re-appointed a member of the Geological Survey for the First district of New Jersey.

TO OCCUPY THE PULPIT AT 1ST BAPTIST CHURCH.

In the absence of the pastor, who is somewhat disabled by a severe cold the pulpit of the First Baptist church will be occupied tomorrow by two prominent men. In the morning the Rev. Dr. J. T. Dickinson, pastor of the First Baptist church of Rochester, N. Y., will be the preacher. Dr. Dickinson is remembered in New Jersey as formerly pastor for seventeen years of the North Orange church, which, like his present charge, ranks among the foremost in the denomination.

In the evening the preacher will be the Rev. Dr. J. W. Weddell, who chances to be visiting friends in Plainfield. Dr. Waddell, whose pastorates have been in Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Cleveland, has long been known as one of the leading ministers of the Baptist church.

All are cordially invited to hear these able men. Hours of service, 10:30 a. m., and 7:45 p. m.

LEON RICE'S COMING RECITAL AT Y. M. C. A.

Another rare treat is in store for Plainfield music-lovers on next Monday evening when Leon Rice, the well known New York tenor, will give a second evening of song in Y. M. C. A. Hall. Mr. Rice's singing delighted a large audience on the occasion of his first recital, his singing of such popular favorites as "The Rosary," "Sing Me to Sleep" and "The Ninety and Nine" captivating all his hearers.

The pragram for next Monday evening's recital will be entirely different from that given before, with the exception that two numbers "The Rosary" and "The Ninety and Nine" will be repeated by request. As before, no admission will be charged but a silver offering governed in amount by individual appreciation will be received.

Mr. Smith's New Position.

Herbert B. Smith, of West Fourth street, who has been connected with the advertising department of the New York Herald, will leave Monday to assume a new position as assistant advertising manager of the Marshalltown, Iowa, Times-Republican. Mr. Smith was for several years a general representative in New York for western newspapers and his selection by the Iowa publication was made because of the record he had made. His absence from Plainfield will be greatly missed as he has been active in musical and other circles. His 'cello selections were one of the features of the Hope minstrel show which closed last night. His friends wish him all success in his new fied.

Entertainment and Dance.

The Nonpareil Social Club is conducting the final rehearsals for its entertainment and dance in Saengerbund Hall next Thursday night. The first part of the evening will be devoted to a alughable comedy drama, "Men, Maids and Match-Makers," presented by a competent cast. Reserved seats are now on sale and may be had from members of the committee composed of William J. Willis, chairman; Robert Lee, J. W. Murray, E. Thomas, Robert Stevens, C. C. Irby and Eugene Johnson.

HEED THE WARNING.

Many Plainfield People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are sick they give unmistakable warning that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Sick kidneys expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequent rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only; they help sick kidneys and rid the blood of uric poison. If you suffer from any of the above symptoms you can use no better remedy.

Plainnfield people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

Albert Naylor, musician, 256 East Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I suffered from an ache in the small of my back and sharp pains when stooping or lifting. I took Doan's Kidney Pills, as I was told that they were good for such troubles and by the time I had finished the contents of two boxes, I was feeling better in every way. I have often recommended this remedy to people I have heard complain of kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Some thirty-third degree and then some fans are still discussing the last play of the game Wednesday at the Yankees' grounds between the Giants and the Brooklyns. It was the final clash of the series which was a clean-up for McGraw's men.

The play in question was up to Bert Tooley, shortstop for Brooklyn, the score being a tie. One man was out and the bases choked when Josh Devore, the speed kid, came to bat in the last half of the ninth. Becker was on first, Chief Meyers, of steam-roller gait, was on second, and Fletcher, running for Devlin, was on third.

Devore drew one strike and then smashed the ball, which bounded direct to Tooley. Tooley lined the ball like a shot to "Tex" Erwin, catching for Brooklyn. Erwin held the ball, which beat the flying Fletcher, but "Tex" forgot to stand on the plate and thus lost the forceout and the game as well.

The thirty-third degree and then some fans then got busy. Some claimed Tooley was a bonehead in trying to cut off Fletcher at the plate. The pro-bonehead contingent said Tooley should have tried for a double play, which if it went through would have closed the game a tie, as rain was falling at the time and there was no question that the contest would have been called by the umpire. Tooley could have made the double by throwing to Hummel at second, who had Becker forced a mile. It would then have been up to Hummel to hustle the ball either to first to shut off Devore, the batsman, or to third, where he would easily have been able to stop the lumbering Meyers.

Arthur Irwin, the Yankee scout, was asked what he would have done on the same play in the old days when he was shortstop with Boston. Said the big scout: "Radbourne would have shot me if I ever played for anything else but a double."

YESTERDAY'S HISTORY IN BASEBALL.

1883—In an exhibtion game with Dayton, the East Saginaw team of the Northwestern League scored twenty runs in the sixth inning. "Yank" Robinson, who played second base for the St. Louis Browns when Charley Comiskey was their leader, made three hits, one doube and two triples, in the prosperous inning.

1890—Amos Rusie, of the New York Nationals, struck out thirteen of the Phillies.

1896—In the Washington-Brooklyn game, Win Mercer retired the Superbas on three pitched balls in the first inning and Roaring Bill Kennedy treated the Senators similarly in the second session.

1909—Monument to Henry Chadwick, "Father of Baseball," unveiled in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

1909—Lord, Speaker and Gessler, of the Boston Red Sox, pulled off a triple steal in the game with the Athletics, Plank and Lapp being the battery for the Mackmen.

1910—Russell Ford, of the Highlanders, had his first chance to start a game in the American League and returned his team a winner over the Athletics, 1 to 0, striking out nine men and limiting the White Elephants to five safeties. Harry Davis faced Lord four times and struck out on each occasion.

1910—Stahl, of Boston, made a home run with the bases filled off Groom, of Washington, the Senatorial slabman having purposely passed Tris Speaker in order to get a chance at Garland.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

When William A. Larned, of Summit, this State, the national tennis champion, started in to practise at Hot Springs, Va., Wednesday for the international matches in which he will represent the United States, next summer, he had to play in front of a gallery of 400 or 500 persons, who had given up golf and driving and riding for the afternoon and assembled at the courts.

The Rocky Mountain Rifle Club of Butte, Mont., was Thursday awarded the club rifle shooting championship of the United States for the second time by the National Rifle Association of America, having defeated by 992 to 990 out of a possible 1,000 the Winchester Rod and Gun Club of New Haven, Conn.

Peter Gannon, the young Argentinian, who holds the amateur golf championship of France, Italy and Austria, will pay a visit to Canada soon and also make a detour to play in the American amateur championships on the Apawamis course at Rye, N. Y. The strength of Gannon's game can be judged from the fact that in the French championship he beat Brokaw, who won all his matches against the Oxford and Cambridge Golfing Society, when that body visited the United States.

It has been deemed advisable in consequence of the clashing of dates with the international polo matches and the hunt and steeplechase meeting to change the time for holding the Plainfield horse show from June 8, 9 and 10 to the previous week, namely, June 1, 2 and 3.

The Harvard lacrosse team will face Stevens at Castle Point Field, Hoboken, this afternoon in what promises to be a lively, well played game. Harvard has beaten Stevens only once in four years.

Devoting himself to spectacular shots, Alfredo De Oro successfully defended his pool championship last night, defeating Jerome Keogh in New York, by the final score 600 balls to 542.

DENIES MARS HAS CANALS.

Aitken Says They Are Just Earthquake Fissures.

Berkeley, Cal., April 22.—Professor Robert D. Aitken, one of the astronomers of Lick Observatory, does not believe there is life on Mars. In a lecture delivered at the University of California Thursday night he expressed the opinion that the markings seen on the surface of the planet, and supposed by some scientists to be canals constructed by intelligent beings for irrigation purposes, are nothing more than earthquake fissures. They are too rough and too wide for canals, he said. He exhibited photographs in support of his belief.

Will Chase the Hounds.

The weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club will be held this afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock at Dog Tavern, where the hounds will be met. This will be one of the best hunts of the season.

LONGWORTH TALKED OF FOR THE BERLIN POST.

If Representative Nicholas Longworth (Rep., O.) wants the Ambassadorship to Germany, his friends in Washington believe that he can get it.

It is known that President Taft has included the name of Colonel Roosevelt's son-in-law in the list of those who may be available to fill Dr. Hill's place in Berlin. To friends of Longworth, Taft is known to have said that there has been no choice as yet, but that he was under consideration.

STEP NEARER TO END PRISON CONTRACT WORK.

Efforts by Mr. Radcliff to amend Senator Osborne's bill to abolish contract labor in State institutions were defeated yesterday, through the opposition of Mr. Boettner. Later the latter spoke for the bill and Mr. Radcliffe in opposition. The latter thought the bill too drastic and proposed a commission to inquire into the subject. Mr. Ford imparted the information that labor men had been investigating the subject for years. It was passed, 33 to 10.

RICH MEN SOLD LIQUOR ILLEGALLY.

Toms River, April 22.—That all the responsible officers of the swell Lakewood Country Club at Lakewood, of which George J. Gould, the multi-millionaire, was president up till a few weeks aga, were liable for indictment for selling liquor without a license was the statement of Judge Berry, in the license court yesterday, when for the second time he laid over the application for a liquor license for this club.

On April 11 an application for a license for this club was presepted, and on reading it it was found to be dated from December 8, 1910. An examination of the county records then showed that the Country Club's license expired in December and that the club had been without one since. The application was accordingly laid over by the judge till yesterday. Lawyer R. T. Stout represented the club and stated that Captain A. M. Bradshaw, the Lakewood postmaster and magistrate, had charge of obtaining the license for the club and he had overlooked it. Stout admitted that the club had been violating the law during the months of December, January, February, March and April by selling liquor to its members and guests without a license. He read a letter from Captain Bradshaw in which the latter assumed the blame and said the club would make any amends or pay any amount to square itself.

Judge Berry said he did not see how he could grant a confessed lawbreaker a license. He laid the matter over until May 1 for further consideration. In the meantime the club is without a license, though it will hold its golf tournaments, its horse show, gymkhana events, trotting races, etc., before that date, and this week and next are the busiest weeks of the season at the club.

NEGRO PROWLER SHOT IN THE ARM.

Elizabeth, April 22.—Aroused by the suspicious manner in which Nelson Tate, a negro, aged 41, was prowling about a new frame building being erected at Westfield avenue and Grove street, Philip Sheedy, the watchman at the building, shot him in the shoulder last night after calling on him to halt. The bullet passed through the shoulder of the right arm, lodging in the arm pit.

Tate was taken by ambulance to the Elizabeth General Hospital and the bullet removed. He lives at 700 Fay avenue and does miscellaneous jobs in winter. In summer he has an ice wagon and distributes ice to negroes.

Sheedy, who did the shooting, lives on Third avenue. He is white. He was arrested about fifteen minutes after the shooting, which was at 8:15, by Detective James Ward, on orders from police headquarters. He is being held pending the outcome of Tate's injuries. It was said at the hospital last night that the wounded man would likely recover, because of his vigorous constitution.

Sheedy's explanation of the shooting is that he was under the impression that Tate came to the building to take lumber. He told him to "halt" and he did not do so. Then Sheedy fired. Tate says he went to the building to arrange his clothing and had no intention of touching any of the property there.

The mid-week prayer-meeting will be held at the West End Tabernacle Thursday evening and the Junior C. E. Society will meet at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Virtuolo

MUSIC is a language—the composer's language by which he tells you the things he sees and feels.

Playing music is feeling the things the composer felt. Whether or not you really feel them depends on the kind of a player-piano you have.

A new player-piano has been invented. It is called the Virtuolo Piano. Ten years from now all player-pianos will have to be built like it.

The ease with which a novice can play even the most difficult pieces on the Virtuolo is due to a new invention in player-piano building called "the air-muscle finger." We will explain the principle of the "air-muscle finger" at our store. Space won't permit it here.

These "air-muscle fingers" play inside the piano almost direct on the strings. They are as sensitive as a nerve. By the easy and simple operation of two buttons, two levers and the pedals, you can make them play for you a difficult piece like "A Wandering Iceberg." You can make the chords of sunshine glisten over the iceberg; you can make the heavy chords of the heaving waves resound tempestuous and beautiful, and at the close you will be surprised how you can make these "air-muscle fingers" touch the strings lighter and lighter until they die out deliciously into nothingness.

Or, if you wish to play ragtime or a popular air, you can make the Virtuolo "air-muscle fingers" fill you and your guests with all the ecstasies of joy that these pieces create in the theatres.

THERE really isn't any reason why you shouldn't have a Virtuolo Player-Piano playing in your home tomorrow night. The price is reasonable, terms are easy, and it is manufactured and guaranteed by the Hallet & Davis Piano Company of Boston, who have been leading art piano builders for 71 years.

The Virtuolo in a Hallet & Davis upright piano retails at $750; terms, $50 cash and $15 per month.

The Virtuolo in a Conway upright retails at $550 to $600; terms, $25 cash and $12 per month.

If in 30 days you are not satisfied with your Virtuolo, we will take it back, without expense to you, refund all you have paid, and cancel your contract.

Pianos or unsatisfactory player-pianos taken in exchange.

Come in and hear the ingenious "air-muscle fingers" of the Virtuolo play today. Whether you wish to purchase or not doesn't matter. You are very welcome. Our automobile will bring you to our store and back home if you write or 'phone us. If you put it off you will never come.

"A. LINCOLN, 1832."

Log Bearing That Inscription Found in River.

Springfield, Ill., April 22.—William Morgan, living at Osbornville, in Christian county, Thursday carried to the State House a piece of red elm log measuring 19½ inches in length, and bearing on one side the carved inscription:

"A. Lincoln, March 7, 1832."

Mr. Morgan, who has been the possessor of the log for more than a year, gave it into the keeping of the Illinois State Historical Society. It was found in a pile of drift in the Sangamon River. That it was originally carved by Lincoln is the belief of Morgan and his neighbors.

DR. HOLMES TALKS 'ON SOCIAL SERVICE'

Rev. Dr. J. H. Holmes, of New York, addressed the Unitarian Women's Alliance of the State of New Jersey, in All Souls' church yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock taking for his topic "Social Service." Rev. Mr. Holmes declared that charity and not justice characterized the Christian church of today and that the order of things should be reversed.

"Charity is now useless," he said, "as a factor in Christian work. What we need is justice. The conception of the people is right in believing that more than mere expression of willingness to help is needed. What in reality is the greatest requirement of the American nation today is practical help and this can only be obtained through the administration of justice through its natural channels.

"Too many persons are condemned for things which, if proper adjudication of the matter was done, would not be made to suffer."

Dr. Holmes was heard by a large number of women of the alliance and several men connected with the organization.

The morning session of the alliance was devoted to the business affairs of the alliance.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

The repertoire for the second week of Mr. Mantell's season at Daly's, commencing next Monday, April 24, will be more varied than that of the opening week. On Monday and Tuesday nights and Wednesday matinee, "Hamlet" will be the bill. On Wednesday and Thursday nights Mr. Mantell will be seen in his very scholarly characterization of "Richelieu." On Friday night, "Othello" will be the bill, with Mr. Mantel as the Moor. Later in the engagement Mr. Mantell will be seen in the same play as Iago. At the Saturday matinee, "Hamlet" will be repeated, and Saturday night Mr. Mantell will play the role of Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice," with Marie Booth Russell as Portia. Elaborate scenic productions and historic costuming are announced for all the plays. Mr. Mantell is supported by an adequate company of Shakespearian players, including Marie Booth Russell.

"Baby Mine," Margaret Mayo's record-breaking farce, will make one more move before ending its long and notable run in New York. Monday night, April 24, it will take possession of the stage of the Lyric Theatre, and remain there for a week, filling in the interim before the opening of Wm. A. Brady's all-star revival of "The Lights O' London," Monday evening, May 1.

HELD FOR DEATH OF MAN IN "JOY RIDE."

Elizabeth, April 22.—George W. Christopher, of 363 Cherry street, is being held at police headquarters on a charge of manslaughter as the result of the death at 4:30 yesterday afternoon of Ernest Schenning, the Westfield avenue blacksmith, the victim of Thursday night's "joy ride."

Prosecutor of the Pleas C. Addison Swift appeared before Judge O. P. Mahon in police court to prosecute the charge. Christopher will probably be arraigned before Judge Atwater, of the County Court, today and heavy bail fixed. The other occupants of the car were released yesterday afternoon by Judge Mahon as material witnesses. Bail to the amount of $300 was furnished for Frank A. Carter and Ernest Cox by Lawyer Abe J. David, their counsel, and Owen McLaughlin. Mrs. James McGann, of Westfield avenue, the woman occupant of the car, was released on her own recognizance, being unable to furnish bail. She was arrested shortly after midnight, being found in men's attire at her home.

It was stated by Christopher at the arraignment yesterday afternoon that Schenning was dozing on the front seat of the car when it turned the curve at Elizabeth avenue and Westcott place. Persons who saw the accident declare that the machine swayed from side to side as it came down Elizabeth avenue. They say that Schenning was dragged a score or more feet before he was released from the machine. He lingered at the hospital all day without regaining consciousness. The county physician has been notified and an inquest will be held.

There is still some doubt as to the ownership of the automobile. Christopher says it is the property of a New York man for whom he was chauffeur. It had been at a local garage for about two weeks. Owners of all Elizabeth garages deny any knowledge of the machine.

Monument to Signers.

Washington, April 22.—A resolution appropriating $100,000 for plans for a monument in Washington to the signers of the Declaration of Independence has been introducted in the Senate by Senator Galliger.

A TALK WITH LEE.

The General's View of His Own Ability and Sphere of Action.

General Lee knew his own training, his own character, knew his own work and did it, letting others do theirs if they could. It is with this explanation in view that we should read his colloquy with B. H. Hill toward the close of the war.

"General, I wish you would give us your opinion as to the propriety of changing the seat of government and going farther south."

"That is a political question, Mr. Hill, and you politicians must determine it. I shall endeavor to take care of the army, and you politicians must make the laws and control the government."

"Ah, general," said Mr. Hill, "but you will have to change that rule and form and express political opinions, for if we establish our independence the people will make you Mr. Davis' successor."

"Never, sir," he replied, with a dignity that belonged only to Lee. "That I never will permit. Whatever talents I may possess (and they are limited) are military talents. My education and training are military. I shall not do the people the injustice to accept high civil office, with the questions of which it has not been my business to become familiar."

"Well, but, general, history does not sustain your view. Caesar and Frederick of Prussia and Bonaparte were great statesmen as well as great generals."

"And great tyrants," he replied promptly. "I speak of the proper rule in republics, where I believe we should have neither military statesmen nor political generals."

"But Washington was both and yet not a tyrant."

With a beautiful smile he responded, "Washington was an exception to all rules."—Atlantic Monthly.

SWISS VIGILANCE.

Effective Supervision Over All Foreigners in the Country.

In proportion to her population Switzerland gives asylum to more foreign anarchists and revolutionists than any country in Europe. If they respect the law they may remain in this country as long as they wish. The Swiss have a very effective method of supervising the foreigner, be he anarchist or banker.

Every foreigner arriving in Switzerland must procure from the town hall a permis de cejour within eight days of his arrival, under penalty of a fine, or, in serious cases, of expulsion from the country. In order to obtain this permission his papers must be in order—that is to say, he must take his passport to his consular representative in Switzerland and have it signed by the latter. By this simple method the identity of the foreigner is established, and in return for his papers, which are docketed in the town hall, he receives a permis de cejour for a period lasting from a few days to a year—the maximum duration—when it must be renewed. This rule is so strict that even Swiss citizens of other cantons are classed as "foreigners," and must take out their permission to reside in another canton.

An exception is made in favor of visitors staying at the principal hotels and pensions, who are nominally allowed two months' stay (instead of eight days) in Switzerland before they are expected to legalize their papers, but this law is not strictly enforced, as the hotel proprietor supplies the police with a list of his guests at frequent periods.—Washington Star.

Suns of the Night.

"During the day we say that the sun shines; during the night we should say that the suns shine," writes a Boston correspondent of the New York Times. "During the day one sun reigns over us; during the night many suns sparkle and scintillate upon us. The only difference is that our sun of day is so much nearer than our suns of night, but there is one sun of night that during our winter far outshines the other sparkling sky gems. That sun is Sirius, whose distance has been estimated at 50,000,000,000 miles, whose size has been conjectured to be as vast as that of 7,000 suns like our own."

Just Like Her Brother.

The new cook, who had come into the household during the holidays, asked her mistress:

"Where ban your son? I not seeing him round no more."

"My son?" replied the mistress pridefully. "Oh, he has gone back to Yale. He could only get away long enough to stay until New Year's day, you see. I miss him dreadfully, though."

"Yas; I knowing yoost how you feel. My broder, he ban in yail sax times since T'ankgiving."—Judge.

One of Jerrold's Retorts.

Very tart was Douglas Jerrold's retort to a would be wit who, having fired off all his stale jokes with no effect, exclaimed:

"Why, you never laugh when I say a good thing!"

"Don't I?" said Jerrold. "Only try me with one!"

"Ah! She has a telephone."

HINDU FUNERAL PYRES.

Burning the Dead at Benares a Careless and Callous Rite.

Describing the burning of their dead by the Hindus of India at Benares, Price Collier in Scribner's Magazine says:

I have been present at these burnings. The bodies are brought in on a frail litter. A pile of logs is built up, held in place by four iron stanchions. The body, with the head uncovered, is placed on the logs, more logs are piled on top, the litter is broken up and added to the small fagots underneath and the fire lighted. There are various ceremonies connected with the rite. The body is carried several times around the pile before being placed upon it. The nearest relative walks around the pile with a jar of water, letting it drip down as he goes till of a sudden he dashes the jar to the ground, breaking it to pieces—a symbol of life, everywhere. At a certain moment, too, the skull is fractured by the nearest relative to allow the easy escape of the spirit to another world. Where the deceased is rich the fire is made of costly and sweet smelling wood, sandalwood and the like, and the ceremonies are more elaborate and more prolonged. No doubt it is the ideal way to dispose of a dead body, but when I have seen it done here it seemed to me a callous and a careless rite.

I have noticed all over India the absolute indifference of the natives themselves to the pain and deformities and maladies that are displayed as an excuse for alms. It is not the stoicism of our western Indians, who thought it dishonorable to show fear or to shrink from pain, but an imbedded indifference, a numbness to this particular influence.

HER NEW GOWN.

It Was Comfortable Even if It Didn't Hang Just Right.

Miss Amanda Jones, who possesses the artistic temperament in a very high degree, is as careless as a lily of the field as to her attire. Not long ago, being away from home and far from the watchful eyes of her family, she selected and purchased an evening gown for herself and wore it on several occasions with great comfort and satisfaction. Shortly after her return to her home she was invited to a reception and decided that it would be a good opportunity to wear her self selected gown. Accordingly she put it on and presented herself complacently for family inspection.

"What is the matter with your dress?" asked her sister, eying her critically. "It hikes up in the most singular way in the back and seems to be too long in the front."

"I've always thought it looked very nice," said Miss Jones, with an air of chagrin.

"But it doesn't fit," exclaimed the sister, still examining the garment attentively. "Is that the way you've always worn it?" was the next question, uttered in a despairing tone.

"Yes, of course. How else could I wear it?" was the response. "And it is so comfortable, with plenty of room in the back for my shoulder blades. And, then, I like a gown to fasten in front. Why, what's the matter?" as her sister covered her face with her hands and sat down abruptly. "Do you see anything wrong with it?"

"No, no, no," said her sister, shaking her head, "only, you know, you've been wearing it hind part before."—New York Press.

Who Owns the Falkland Islands?

Few people are aware to this day that the Falkland islands are marked in all Argentine maps and geographies as "unlawfully retained by Great Britain." The origin of the dispute was that England after abandoning the islands in 1774 resumed possession in 1829. The Argentine government protested and, as A. Stuart Pennington points out in his book on the country, is even today "careful to do nothing which could even apparently recognize the rights of the present possessors." It was for that reason that it declined a proposal a few years ago to run a line of Argentine ships to the islands.

"Moreover," she said, as they watched Vesuvius receding when they left Naples, "your mountains are not mountains, but ant-hills, and I do not care for them. But your sea has the colors of many sherbets, rose-leaf and violet, and lemon and orange, and sometimes even of pale yellow peach-sherbet, which is good. Let me always see the sea till the fine dresses are ready to be tried on."

"This sea," answered Logotheti, "is always most beautiful near land and amongst islands, and the big fire-mountain of Sicily looks as tall as Kasbek, because it rises from the water's edge to the sky."

"Then take me to it, and I will tell you, for my eyes have looked on the Altai, and I wish to see a real mountain again. After that we will go back and get the fine dresses. Will Gula know how to fasten the flue dresses at the back, do you think?"

"You shall have a woman who does, and who can talk with Gula, and the two will fasten the fine dresses for you." Logotheti spoke with becoming gravity.

"Yes," Baraka answered. "Spend money for me, that I may be good to see. Also, I wish to have many servants. My father has a hundred, perhaps a thousand, but now I have only two, Gula and Spiro. The man I seek will think I am poor, and that will be a shame. While I was searching for him, it was different; and besides, you are teaching me how the rich Franks live in their world. It is not like ours. You know, for you are more like us, though you are a king here."

She spoke slowly and lazily, pausing between her phrases, and turning her eyes to him now and then without moving her head; and her talk amused him much more than that of European women, though it was so very simple, like that of a gifted child brought suddenly to a new country, or to see a fairy pantomime.

"Tell me," he said after a time, "if it were the portion of Kralinsky to be gathered to his fathers before you saw him, what would you do?"

Baraka now turned not only her eyes to him but her face.

"Why do you ask me this? Is it because he is dead, and you are afraid to tell me?"

"He was alive this morning," Logotheti answered, "and he is a strong man. But the strong die sometimes suddenly, by accident if not of a fever."

"It is emptiness," said Baraka, still looking at him. "He will not die before I see him."

"Allah forbid! But if such a thing happened, should you wish to go back to your own people? Or would you learn to speak the Frank and live in Europe?"

"If he were dead, which may Allah avert," Baraka answered calmly, "I think I would ask you to find me a husband."

"Ah!" Logotheti could not repress the little exclamation of surprise.

"Yes. It is a shame for a woman not to be married. Am I an evil sight, or poor, that I should go down to the grave childless? Or is there any reproach upon me? Therefore I would ask you for a husband, because I have no other friend but only you among the Feringhis. But if you would not, I would go to Constantinople again, and to the Persian merchant's house, and I would say to his wife: 'Get me a husband, for I am not a cripple, nor a monster, nor is there any reproach upon me, and why should I be childless?' Moreover I would say to the merchant's wife: 'Behold, I have great wealth, and I will have a rich husband, and one who is young and pleasing to me, and who will not take another wife; and if you bring me such a man, for whatsoever his riches may be, I will pay you five per cent.'"

Having made this remarkable statement of her intentions, Baraka was silent, expecting Logotheti to say something. What struck him was not the concluding sentence, for Asiatic match-makers and peace-makers are generally paid on some such basis, and the slim Tartar girl had proved long ago that she was a woman of business. What impressed Logotheti much more was what seemed the cool cynicism of her point of view. It was evidently not a romantic passion for Kralinsky that had brought her from beyond Turkestan to London and Paris; her view had been simpler and more practical; she had seen the man who suited her, she had told him so, and had given him the secret of great wealth, and in return she expected him to marry her, if she found him alive. But if not, she would immediately take steps to obtain another to fill his place and be her husband, and she was willing to pay a high price to any one who could find one for her.

Logotheti had half expected some such thing, but was not prepared for her extreme directness; still less had he thought of becoming the matrimonial agent who was to find a match worthy of her hand and fortune. She was sitting beside him in a little ready-made French dress, open at the throat, and only a bit of veil twisted round her hair, as any European woman might wear it; possibly it was her dress that made what she said sound strangely in his ears, though it would have struck him as natural enough if she had been muffled in a yashmak and ferajeh, on the deck of a Bosphorus ferry boat.

He said nothing in answer, and sat thinking the matter over.

"I could not offer to pay you five per cent.," she said after a time, "because you are a king, but I could give you one of the fine rubies I have left, and you would look at it sometimes and rejoice because you had found Baraka a good husband."

Logotheti laughed low. She amused him exceedingly, and there were moments when he felt a new charm he had never known before.

"Why do you laugh?" Baraka asked, a little disturbed. "I would give you a good ruby. A king may receive a good ruby as a gift and not despise it. Why do you laugh at me? There came two German merchants to me in Paris to see my rubies, and when they had looked, they bought a good one, but not better than the one I would give you, and Spiro heard them say to each other in their own language that it was for their king, for Spiro understands all tongues. Then do you think that their king would not have been glad if I had given him the ruby as a gift? You cannot mock Baraka. Baraka knows what rubies are worth, and has some still."

"I do not mock you," Logotheti answered, with perfect gravity. "I laugh at my own thoughts. I said in my heart: 'If Baraka asks me for a husband, what will she say if I answer. 'Behold, I am the man, if you are satisfied!' This was my thought."

She was appeased at once, for she saw nothing extraordinary in his suggestion. She looked at him quietly and smiled, for she saw her chance.

"It is emptiness," she said. "I will save a man who has no other wife."

"Precisely," Logotheti answered, smiling. "I never had one."

"Now you are indeed mocking me!" she said, bending her sharp-drawn eyebrows.

"No. Every one knows it who knows me. In Europe, men do not always marry very young. It is not a fixed custom."

"I have heard so," Baraka answered, her anger subsiding, "but it is very strange. If it be so, and if all things should happen as we said, which Allah avert, and if you desired me for your wife, I would marry you without doubt. You are a great man, and rich, and you are good to look at, as Saad was. Also you are kind, but Saad would probably have beaten me, for he beat every one, every day, and I should have gone back to my father's house. Truly," she added, in a thoughtful tone, "you would make a desirable husband for Baraka. But the man I seek must marry me if I find him alive, for I gave him the riches of the earth and he gave me nothing and departed, leaving me to die. I have told you, and you understand. Therefore let us not jest about these things any more. What will be, will be, and if he must die, it is his portion, and mine also, though it is a pity."

Thereupon the noble little features became very grave, and she leaned back in her chair and folded her hands in her lap, looking out at the violet light on the distant volcano. After that, at dinner and in the evening, they talked pleasantly. She told him tales of her own land, and of her childhood, with legends of the Altai, of genii and enchanted princesses; and he, in return, told her about the great world in which he lived; but of the two, she talked the more, no doubt because he was not speaking his own language. Yet there was a bond of sympathy between them more natural and instinctive than any that had ever drawn him and Margaret together.

When the sun was up the next morning and Logotheti came on deck to drink his coffee alone, he saw the magic straits not many miles ahead, in an opalescent haze that sent up a vapor of pure gold to the pale blue enamel of the sky. He had been just where he was now more than once before, and few sights of nature had ever given him keener delight. On the left, the beautiful outline of the Calabrian hills descended softly into the still sea, on the right the mountains of Sicily reared their lofty crests; and far above them all, twice as high as the highest, and nobler in form than the greatest, Etna towered to the very sky, and a vast cloud of smoke rose from the summit that streamed westward as far as the eye could reach.

"Let her go half speed, captain," said Logotheti, as his sailing-master came up to bid him good-morning. "I should like my guest to see the straits."

"Very good, sir. We shall not go through very fast in any case, for the tide is just turning against us."

"Never mind," Logotheti answered. "The slower the better to-day, till we have Etna well astern."

CHAPTER XV.

It was eight o'clock in the morning when the Lancashire Lass steamed slowly into Messina and dropped anchor out in the middle of the harbor to wait while Capt. Brown got information about the Erinna, if there were any to be had at the harbor-master's office. It would have been folly to run out of the straits without at least looking in to see if she were there, lying quietly moored behind the fortress of San Salvatore and the very high mole.

She was not there, and had not been heard of, but a Paris Herald was procured in which it was stated that the Erinna had arrived in Naples, "owner and party on board."

"Well," said Mr. Van Torp, "let's get to Naples, quick. How long will it take, captain?"

"About eight hours, sir, counting our getting under weigh and out of this crowded water, which won't take long, for the tide will soon turn."

"Go ahead," said Mr. Van Torp.

Capt. Brown prepared to get under weigh again as quickly as possible. The entrance to Messina harbor is narrow, and it was natural that, as he was in a hurry, a huge Italian man-of-war should enter the harbor at that very moment, with the solemn and safe deliberation which the movements of line-of-battle ships require when going in and out of port. There was nothing to be done but to wait patiently till the fairway was clear. It was not more than a quarter of an hour, but Capt. Brown was in a hurry, and as there was a fresh morning breeze blowing across the harbor he could not even get his anchor up with safety before he was ready to start.

The result of all these delays was that at about nine o'clock he saw the Erinna right ahead, bows on and only half a mile away, just between Scylla and Faro, where the whirlpool is still a danger to sailing vessels and slow steamers, and just as the tide was turning against her and in his own favor. He did not like to leave the bridge, even for a moment, and sent the second mate with an urgent message requesting Mr. Van Torp to come up as soon as he could.

Five minutes earlier the owner had sat down to breakfast opposite Lady Maud, who was very pale and had dark shadows under her eyes for the first time since he had known her. As soon as the steward left them alone, she spoke.

"It is Leven," she said, "and he wants me to take him back."

Mr. Van Torp set down his tea untasted and stared at her. He was not often completely taken by surprise, but for once he was almost speechless. His lips did not even move silently.

"I was sure it was he," Lady Maud said, "but I did not expect that."

"Well," said Mr. Van Torp, finding his voice, "he shan't. That's all."

"No. I told him so. If I had been dressed I would have asked you to put me ashore at Messina. I thought you were going to stop there—the stewardess told me where we were, but she knew nothing else—and now we're off again."

"I can't help it, Maud," said Van Torp, almost in a whisper, "I don't believe it. I don't believe in impossibilities like that beard of his. It may sound ridiculous in the face of your recognizing your own husband, but it's a solid fact, and you can't get over it. I wish I could catch the Erinna and show him to that Tartar girl. She'd know in a minute. He can't be her man and Leven, too. There's only one thing to be done that I can see."

"What?" asked Lady Maud sadly and incredulously.

"Tell him you'll take him back on condition that he'll shave."

Mr. Van Torp, who was in dead earnest, had just given his best friend this piece of sound practical advice when the door opened, though he had not rung, and the steward announced that the second mate had a message for Mr. Van Torp. He was admitted, and he delivered it.

The owner sprang to his feet.

"By thunder, we've caught 'em!" he cried, as he rushed out of the deck saloon.

Lady Maud leaned back and stared at his empty chair, wondering what was going to happen next.

This was what happened. The Lancashire Lass reversed her starboard engine with full speed astern, put her helm hard over to port, and turned back towards the straits in the smallest space possible for her, passing less than a cable's length from the Scylla rock, and nearly running down half a dozen fishing boats that pulled like mad to get out of her way; for they supposed that the steering-gear had broken down, unless her captain had gone raving mad.

While this was going on, Capt. Brown himself, with the international signal code in his hand, was calling out letters of the alphabet to a quartermaster, and before his ship had made half a circle the flags ran up the single stick the yacht carried.

"My owner has urgent business with your owner," was what the flags meant in plain English.

The Erinna was going slow, for Baraka was only just ready to come on deck, haste being in her opinion, an invention of Shaitan's. Logotheti, who wished her to see the straits, was just inside the door of the deck saloon, waiting for her to come out of her cabin. The officer of the watch read off the signals of the other yacht, ran up the answering pennant, and sent for the sailing-master, but could of course do nothing else without orders. So the Erinna continued to go slow. All this took some minutes, for the officer had naturally been obliged to look up the signal in the code before answering that he understood it; and in that time Van Torp's yacht had completed her turn and was nearly alongside. The Lancashire Lass slowed down to the Erinna's speed, and the two captains aimed their megaphones accurately at each other from their respective bridges for a little pleasant conversation. Capt. Brown, instructed by Mr. Van Torp at his elbow, repeated what his signals had meant. The other sailing-master answered that he had already informed his owner, who was coming to the bridge directly.

At that moment Logotheti appeared. There was not much more than a cable's length between the two yachts, which in land-talk means 200 yards. Van Torp also saw a slim young lady in blue serge, with a veil tied over her hair, leaning on the rail of the promenade deck and looking towards him. With his glasses he recognized the features of Baraka.

"Got 'em!" he ejaculated in a low but audible tone of intense satisfaction.

Logotheti had also seen Van Torp, and waved his hand in a friendly manner.

"Ask the gentleman if he'll come aboard, captain," said the American. "I can't talk through your cornopean anyway. I suppose we can send the naphtha launch for him if we stop, can't we?"

"Can't stop here," answered Capt. Brown. "The currents might jam us into each other, and we should most likely get aground in any case. This is not even a safe place for going slow, when the tide is running."

"Well, you know your business, and I don't. Tell him we don't want to interfere with any arrangements he's made, and that if he'll kindly set the pace he likes we'll trot along behind him till we get to a nice place, somewhere where we can stop. I suppose he can't run away from us now, can he?"

Capt. Brown smiled the smile of a man who commands a 23-knot boat, and proceeded to deliver the message in a more concise form. Logotheti heard every word, and the answer was that he was in no hurry and was quite at Mr. Van Torp's disposal. He would be glad to know whom the latter had on board with him.

"Lady Maud Leven, Miss Margaret Donne, Mrs. Rushmore and Count Kralinsky," answered Capt. Brown, prompted by Van Torp.

The latter was watching the Greek through a pair of deer-stalking glasses and saw distinctly the expression of surprise that came into his face when he heard the last of the names.

"Tell the gentleman," said Van Torp, "that if he'll bring his party with him when we stop, I'll be very glad to have them all take lunch with me."

Capt. Brown delivered the message. At such a short distance he did not even have to raise his voice to be heard through the six-foot megaphone.

To Van Torp's surprise, Logotheti nodded with alacrity, and the answer came that he would bring his party with pleasure, but thought that his visit would be over long before luncheon time.

"All right, good-by," said Van Torp, as if he were at the telephone. "Ring off, captain. That's all. Just let him give us a lead now and we'll follow him through this creek again, since you say you can't stop here."

As he went off the bridge to return to his breakfast he passed close to the chief mate, who had turned again, though it was his watch below.

"I say, Mr. Johnson," he asked, "have we got a barber shop on board this ship."

"No, sir," answered the mate, who knew better than to be surprised at anything.

"It's no matter," said Mr. Van Torp, "I was only asking."

He went back to his breakfast with an improved appetite. When he re-entered the saloon Lady Maud was still leaning back in her chair, staring at his empty place.

"Well," he said, "they're both coming on board as soon as we get to a place where we can stop."

"Have you really seen the girl?" Lady Maud sat up, as if she were waking from sleep.

"Oh, yes! There she was, looking over the rail, as neat as a pin, in a blue serge dress, with a white veil tied over her hair, watching me. We've got 'em right enough, and that's going to be the end of this mystery!"

"Did you see any one else on the yacht?"

"Logo. That's all. He and I talked. At least, our captains talked for us. They do know how to yell, those men! If the girl's the party, Logo beats the band for brass, that's all I can say!"

"It is rather cool," said Lady Maud thoughtfully. "If he's alone with her, it will be all up with his engagement."

They talked a few minutes longer, agreeing that she should tell Margaret what was going to happen; but that Mrs. Rushmore and Kralinsky should be kept in ignorance of the plan, the American lady because she might possibly yield to temptation and tell the count, and the latter for obvious reasons. It was not likely that any of them would be on deck much before Logotheti came on board.

There is good anchorage out of the tidal current at Scaletta, some few miles below Messina, on the Sicilian side, and towards this well-known water the Erinna led the way, followed at a short distance by the Lancashire Lass.

Logotheti and Baraka watched her, the girl recognizing Van Torp on the bridge of his yacht, without even using glasses, for she had eyes like an eagle's, and the American millionaire stood alone at one end of the bridge looking towards her.

Logotheti had told her that Kralinsky was on board, and that she should see him as soon as both yachts could anchor. He explained that it was an unforeseen coincidence, and that Mr. Van Torp must have taken him on board somewhere on the previous day. To the Greek's surprise, Baraka showed no outward sign of emotion. He had promised to take her to the man, and had said that he was near at hand; that the meeting should take place sooner than had been intended hardly surprised her, because she had been so perfectly sure that it was near. Her only preoccupation now was about her appearance in her ready-made serge and blouse, when she had meant to show herself to Kralinsky in the glory of a beautiful and expensive Feringhi dress.

But Logotheti explained that even the richest Feringhi ladies often wore little blue serge frocks on yachts, and told her to watch the Lancashire Lass with her glasses, as there were three very great Feringhi ladies on board, and she might see one, and be reassured; and presently she saw Lady Maud walking alone on the promenade deck, in clothes very like her own, excepting that they were black instead of dark blue. So Baraka was satisfied, but she never took her eyes from the following yacht, for she hoped that Kralinsky would come out and show himself.

All at once he was there, taking off his white cap to Lady Maud, and they stood still facing each other, and talking.

"I see him," Baraka said in a low voice, without lowering her glasses. "It is he."

Logotheti, who had been much absorbed in thinking about his coming interview with Margaret, raised his glasses, too, for he was curious to see the man at last. He had known Leven for years, though never intimately, as he knew a vast number of people in London, and he was struck at once by the resemblance in size, build and complexion.

"He is fatter than he was, and paler," Baraka said quietly, "but it is he. He is speaking earnestly with the beautiful woman in black. I can see well. He likes her, but she does not like him. I think she is telling him so. I am so glad. But she is more beautiful than Baraka, even in those clothes. When he sees me, he will deny me, because he likes the beautiful woman in black. I will tell Spiro to be ready. It is a pity, but I see there will be no other way. It is his portion and mine. It is a great pity, for I have been happy with you."

Instead of any look of anger, Logotheti now saw an expression of profound resignation in her lovely young features. If he had been less anxious about his own affairs, he would have smiled at her simplicity.

"When we are on that ship you will let me talk with him a little apart from the rest, and Spiro shall go behind him and wait, looking at me. If he denies me, I will make a sign, and Spiro shall shoot him, and then kill me. It will be very easy and quick."

"And what will become of Spiro?" inquired Logotheti gravely.

"I do not know," Baraka said quietly. "Perhaps he will lose his head. How can I tell? But he is a good servant, and will obey me. Afterwards it will not matter, for he is really a Mussulman, and will go at once to paradise if he dies, because he has killed a Christian."

"But you are a Mussulman, and he is to kill you also. What about that?"

"I am only a woman," answered Baraka with supreme indifference. "Now I will call Spiro and tell him what he is to do. He has a good revolver."

Logotheti let her clap her hands and send the steward for her man, and she rose when he appeared and made him follow her a little way along the deck. The interview did not last long. She handed him her glasses and made him look carefully at the intended victim; then she apparently repeated her brief instructions again, pointing here and there to the deck at her feet, to show him how they were to stand; after which she turned quietly, came back to Logotheti's side and sat down again.

"He understands," she said. "It will be quite easy."

But Logotheti, looking past her as she came forward, had met Spiro's eyes; and he felt not even the slightest anxiety for Kralinsky's safety, nor for Baraka's. He was still wondering what he should say to Margaret.

Plainfield High School Girls' Basketball Team.

The Plainfield High School basketball team has held the State championship ever since they put a team in the field with the exception of last year when they won only five out of the nine games played. With the new team of this season they again forged to the front winning ten out of fourteen games played. The majority of the games were played on the home court. Only Montclair's girls' team seemed to be able to win from the Plainfield young women. Their record for the past season is one to be proud of.

These were the games and scores: Plainfield, 23, Somerville High, 5; P. H. S., 22, Nutley, 6; Montclair, 35, P. H. S., 1; Flemington High, 2, P. H. S., 28; Nutley, 6, P. H. S., 9; New Brunswick High, 11, P. H. S., 9; Battin High, 2, P. H. S., 31; South Orange High, 4, P. H. S., 17; Westfield High, 11, P. H. S., 5; Paterson High, 7, P. H. S., 25; Montclair, 14, P. H. S., 11; North Plainfield High, 12, P. H. S., 18; Westfield High, 15, P, H. S., 17; and North Plainfield High, 10, P. H. S., 12.

The members of the Park Avenue Baptist church will give a reception to Rev. and Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire at the church, Tuesday evening.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, and Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel, will exchange pulpits tomorrow morning and in the evening each will occupy his own pulpit.

The semi-annual meeting of the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest will be held on Thursday evening, in the parish house at 8 o'clock. All the men are urged to be present.

J. N. Harrison, of this city, gave a tells at the prayer meeting in the Park Avenue church of the Disciples of Christ, East Orange, on Thursday evening. He dwelt most particularly upon his experiences while traveling in his gospel wagon from New York to Atlanta in 1903.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, will exchange pulpits tomorrow morning. In the evening Dr. Herring will occupy his own pulpit and preach on the subject, "Was Christ a Socialist?"

Mrs. Garret P. Kiely, of Jersey City, is visiting Mrs. Patrick Kiely, of Steiner place.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

The most interesting play that will be seen in a long time will come to the Plainfield theatre on Monday night. It is Frederic Thompson's big New York sucess, "Polly of the Circus." One of the big features of the play takes place in the third act, the first scene of which shows the "Pad" room. The "Pad" room is a place where the performers limber up before entering the ring. The second scene is the interior of the circus where for ten minutes the "real thing" is presented, in order to give Polly a chance to rush into the ring and faint. Horses are galloping around the ring—a regular circus ring in every particular—the tumblers, acrobats and clowns are all working as if their lives depended on their efforts. The trained dogs, ponies and horses are all in the picture—and only for ten minutes.

When Viola Allen comes to the Plainfield theatre Friday evening next, April 28, she will be seen here for the first time in a new play which has aroused more comment among critics, theatergoers and literatours than any dramatic offering for many and many a season. The play is "The White Sister," a most unusual story, both in plot and sub-plot, the work of the late F. Marion Crawford. When "The White Sister," was first produced the announcement was made that it would be interesting to watch the attitude of the Catholic church with regard to this play and conjucture was rife among the laymen of every sect as to whether or not the church through its clergy could endorse or condemn the stage offering.

Inasmuch as F. Marion Crawford was selected as the biographer of the late Pope Leo shortly before his death,, it was thought probable that the play would make for a truer understanding of the Catholic faith. After the first performance a number of the prominent Catholics of Chicago were selected to attend a performance and report the peculiarities of "The White Sister," in their relation to the church. The result of the churchmen's visit was a statement issued by the Catholic publication to the effect that Miss Allen's plays was based entirely upon facts, as far as the principles of the church was concerned; that Catholics would appreciate the play and enjoy it; that Miss Allen's characterization of the Nun was beyond reproach; and that people of every sect and creed could find no objection in any part of the performance at the delicate subject of religion in general and Catholicism in particular was treated in a most unusual manner, with deftness and dramatic power and that as an entertainment "The White Sister" was high in the list of the greatest offering of the American stage.

Frank Dencklau, of Fairview avenue, has returned from an extended business trip.

Rev. and Mrs. Frederick L. Greene, of West Fourth street, are entertaining the latter's mother Mrs. Richards, of Buffalo, N. Y.

LAWMILL RECORD

Governor Gives Expression to His Satisfaction Over Session's Results.

ENUMERATES BIG BILLS PASSED.

Wilson Says Legislature's Achievements are Extraordinary—The Campaign Promises Are Fulfilled.

Governor Wilson last night said he felt he was simply expressing a universal sentiment in saying that the legislative session was one remarkable for good feeling and achievement.

"I think it will always be remembered," he said, "as extraordinary in this, that it witnessed the fulfillment by the Legislature of every important campaign pledge.

"Much remains to be done in the way of effecting such reorganigation of the State government as may result in increasing economy and efficiency, and many reforms of consequence remain to be prosecuted and put upon the statute book, but no single Legislature could possibly be expected to accomplish more than this one has accomplished. It has acted not only with unusual diligence and sobriety, but with singular absence of party feeling and party contest. It has had about it the freedom which characterizes men who are acting in the public interest and without regard of private connections or personal interest. In no other way can I account for its extraordinary record.

"The employers' liability and workingmen's compensation act has given the State a statute more serviceable and more consistent with justice in the field to which it applies than perhaps any other in the Union.

"The primary and election bill has worked a thorough going reform of the whole electoral process of the State and has put every process of choice directly in the hands of the people.

"The Corrupt Practices act is singularly thorough going and will undoubtedly prove most effective. It will do, perhaps, more than any other piece of legislation on this notable list, to purify elections and secure unbiased action of the people at the polls.

"The Public Utilities act goes the full leagth of reform in respect of control of public service corporations. It is a thoroughly business like act, well conceived and well constructed, and ought to afford a means of settling some of the most perplexing questions conected with the control of corporations.

Added to the list the regulation of cold storage, the substitution of indeterminate for determinate sentences for criminal offences, the rectification of the abuses in connection with false weights and measures, the administration reform of the school system, and it must be admitted to constitute one of the most remarkable records of legislation, I venture to think, that has ever distinguished a single legislative session in this country.

COMMISSION GOV'T IA HARD QUESTION

A fight of intense interest that marked the closing hours of the Assembly at Trenton was on the commission government bill, against which the machine bosses of both parties were arraigned, with the democratic State chairman, James Nugent, in personal command. The Assembly yesterday afternoon defeated the measure as it was amended in the Senate to permit its adoption in cities by twenty-six per cent. of the vote of the last preceding election. Last night Mr. Walsh, the author, sought a reconsideration. Another bitter contest developed. The resolution to reconsider was passed by a bare majority of thirty-one votes.

On reconsideration the vote was 28 to 26, the same as yesterday afternoon. Mr. Walsh then introduced a resolution for a joint committee to consider the bill and arrive at some compromise. This left the commission government matter "up in the air" at midnight, with indications that the Senate and Assembly would later agree on a vote of 30 to 32 per cent. to adopt. The machine men said they would stand for this, and the "progressives will accept it on the score that half a loaf is better than no bread."

Catherine Mulcahy.

Catherine Mulcahy, the year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mulcahey, of McDowell street, died last night. The funeral will be held at the parents' home Monday afternoon and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Alfred Kuhl, 31 Norwood avenue, has returned from a visit to her son at College Point.

SOCIALISM THEME

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring Says Moral Insensibility Makes Atheistic Socialists.

CHRIST NOT ONE OF THEM.

Charity Is Good But It Can Never Atone For Sin, Says First Presbyterian Church Pastor.

"Was Christ a Socialist?" was the theme of the discourse by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, at the First Presbyterian church, last night. He said that the assertion that socialism is but another name for "practical Christianity," or "Christianity applied," is too broad and misleading. Dr. Herring spoke in part as follows:

"Socialism according to one of its leading exponents, Morris Hilquitt, is that science which 'discerns the root of the evils of modern civilization in competitive industry and wage labor and advocates the reconstruction of our entire economic system on the basis of a cooperative mode of production.' According to John Spargo, it is 'that science which demands only the collective ownership of the principle means of production.' the socialist claims that society has clothed the few with power at the expense of the many.

"The earth with its unlimited resources is withheld from the mass of the people and they are in a state not far from slavery.' Socialism believes that there should be public ownership of the great industries, and that these should be controlled not for profit, but for the general good of mankind; very much as the Postoffice is controlled. Socialists cry for better homes, better clothes, better food. It is the cry of need and no Christian should be indifferent to the sincere needs of men.

"It cannot be said, however, that Christ was a socialist, for socialism is a method of righting social conditions. Christ taught no method of righting things. He preached that we should be filled with a spirit of unselfish love for all men.

"Some of the great leaders in Socialism tell us that socialism is based on atheism, that 'the true root of liberty is atheism,' that hereafter 'are simply done with God,' that there is no soul and no hereafter, that 'anyone who mistakes Christ for a socialist is a dangerous muddlehead.' Then, whoever tells us that Christ was a socialist is not well informed.

"But if every Christian man permitted Christ to control the whole of him, that is control his whole life, his private and public affairs, there would not be thirty millions of socialists crying of man's inhumanity to men.

"The lesson that every Christian must re-study is that every man can call God his Father. He may be your servant or your master, but he is the child of a king and should be treated royally. He is not a slave. He should be paid, at least, a living wage even if that does decrease your dividends. Someone has well said that a man's devotion to charity of the superfluity of wealth, unscrupulously gained, will redeem his life no more than did the act of a man in charity.

"Charity is good but it can never atone for justice. The serious sin of men today is moral insensibility. So many men think that while they are responsible for their acts as individuals, they are not responsible for their acts as members of agreat corporation. The great ideal of a corporation is not to seek the kingdom of God and his righteousness, but to pay dividends. The corporation can raise the price of the finished product and force down the wages of the laborers; but that is pure business, if dividends are increased, and business is not run on sentiment.

"It is just this sort of moral insensibility that makes atheistic socialists. Listen to the incisive words of profes" sor E. A. Ross. 'There are son many respectible men who would not pick your pocket but will do the same thing with a railroad rebate; who will murder with an adulterant in your food stuffs, who will burglarize with a rake-off instead of a jimmy, who will not bribe but will finance the briber, who will not shed innocent blood but bribe inspectors to overlook their neglect to install safety applicances.'

"What Christian men need in their business is the spirit of the cobbler in the western town on whose buiness card wa printed: 'My Business is Serving the Lord, I Mend Shoes to Pay Expenses.' If men lived up to this principle, some of the problems of the business world would disappear and there would be less poverty."

PLAINFIELD TEAM TO OPEN SEASON

The Plainfield Baseball Club will open the season next Saturday afternoon on Crescent Oval in a game with the Brighton Field Club, of Brooklyn. The opening will be of unusual interest for Manager Ernest Dorflinger announced today that Dave Driscoll, "Waly" Cosgrove and Joe Harter, all well-known here, where they have played, will be in the Plainfield lineup. The locals will present a team of unusual strength and some fast ball may be expected.

James Emery, who played third base for the Plainfield team last year, left today for Charleston, West Virginia, where he will play the same position for the Mountain League team.

RECOLLECTIONS OF WILD PIGEON TRAPPING

Continuing his story yesterday about wild pigeon trapping a part of which appeared in The Daily Press on Wednesday, Thomas Hand says: "I remember one year when we were trapping on the Mississippi bottoms at the mouth of the Zumbro river, near Kellogg, Minn., some logger came along and told us that the birds were nesting on the west branch of the Hay river, near Scott's camp, a small colony of lumbermen occupying two large buildings there.

"I was selected to make a tour of that part of the country and get a line on the nesting place. I got a little white pony and with him as my companion I took the boat to Wabasha, following the landing with a trip up the Chippeway to Round Boom. From there I followed the trail to Wilson, forty miles away from Scott's camp. And when I got part way on the trip I was told to be careful or the black flies would get me and the pony, too. I had to buy a mosquito net and put it over my head as the flies became so thick that at times I could not see further than twenty feet away. I followed the trails of the "tote" teams which handled supply wagons for the lumber camps.

"Judging by the whirring noise made by the birds I made up my mind that the woods were alive with wild pigeons. I laid down on some pine brush and rested for the night and early the next morning was on my way back to Wilson. It took me two days to get back. My legs were in bad shape from the fly bites so I telegraphed for the rest of the boys to come to Wilson. All told there were twelve of us and we hired a team at Wilson to haul our supplies after making arrangements with a gun club at Marshaltown, Iowa, to take our catch. After making one of the biggest catches we ever made and had started on our way back we found that the birds could not stand the traveling and we rafted them down the river in crates, using poles as our motive power. We reached Round Boom in five or six days and loaded our birds on the steamer which plied up and down the river.

After settling with the agent who was there to meet us and take our birds we went to St. Paul, Minn., and from there back to Kellogg. We had a good time cleaning up after our river trip and finally got home in first class health; but ever since have regretted the disappearance of the wild pigeons.

The disappearance of the wild pigeon was noted in Mr. Hand's first story. Since 1878 the western pigeon trappers have felt that the greatest calamity that ever happened was the killing off of the wild pigeons which were a source of great revenue to the men who made it their business to trap the birds. The birds themselves were accused of all sorts of depredations on the graneries and young shoots of the western farmers and it was considered a good thing to remove the pests as they were termed.

Runaway, But No Damage.

A horse belonging to H. W. Templin, a milk dealer, tore through his hitching rope on East Fourth street, near Park avenue, this morning, and becoming frightened at a passing trolley car ran away. The animal narrowly missed hitting a delivery wagon of William M. Smalley & Co., at the corner and dashed down Park avenue at a fast clip. He came to a stop in front of the Woodhull & Martin building on East Front street because he slipped on the wet pavement. Mr. Templin was in a store purchasing some horse feed at the time the animal ran away. The horse was not injured.

Clan Mackenzie to Meet.

Clan Mackenzie will hold its regular meeting this evening at Coward Hall, 109 Park avenue. A full attendance of members is desired.

POSTOFFICE CLOSING IN EFFECT YESTERDAY

The closing of the postoffice on Sunday, except for one hour during the morning to allow holders of lock-boxes to get their mail, went into effect yesterday and worked satisfactory. Postmaster E. H. Bird said today that he had not heard a single complaint. There was quite a contrast to the usual order of things about the office yesterday morning. Instead of the customary large crowd of people calling for mail, there was only a scattering few who dropped in from 9:30 to 10:30 to get mail from the boxes.

The new rule is a welcome one for the employes of the office, who are now given the greater part of the day off. The carriers and clerks are obliged to go to the office early to distribute the mail. When that is completed they can go home for the day.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF FREDERICK BADER, SR.

A large delegation of members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians attended the funeral of Frederick Bader, Sr., this morning at St. Mary's church, where a high mass was celebrated by Rev. B. M. Bogan at 9 o'clock. Several large floral pieces were sent by friends and relatives of the family. The interment was in St. Mary's church.

According to what has since been learned of the accident in which Mr. Bader received his fatal injuries, he was crossing the tracks at Carteret where the Reading and Long Branch diivsions meet. There was nothing to prevent anyone from being struck by passing train the gates being up and no light showing to warn those who might have to cross the tracks at that point.

Mr. Bader was struck by engine No. 350 drawing a fast freight and hurled a distance of 25 feet. He was picked up unconscious and attended by Dr. A. H. Hoagland, of Woodbridge, who found that the man was suffering from a fractured skull. The accident occurred on Tuesday evening and Mr. Bader lingered until Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

The pall bearers at the funeral this morning were Edward Coffey, Morris Kennedy, Edward Crowle and John Bellew.

Plan Baptist Conventions.

The Northern Baptist Convention will be held in Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, June 13-18, and this is expected to be one of the greatest gatherings of Baptists in recent years. The local churches will be well represented, each church being entitled to one delegate and one additional for every eno hundred members or above the first one hundred. The general convention of Baptists of North America will meet June 19 and the Baptist World Alliance will be held June 19-25. New Jersey will be entitled to sixty-six delegates to the latter convention.

Race Meet on May 13.

Plans for the seventh annual race meeting of the Watchung Hunt Club to be held at the Plainfield Driving Park, May 13, are well underway, and the entries are coming in rapidly. The races will be started promptly at 2 o'clock. The race committee comprises Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., Harry A. Bourne, J. J. O'Donohue, C. E. S. Bellows and William Palmer Smith, Jr. George W. Call, of New York, will be clerk of the course.

NETHERWOOD HOME MEETING IS TONIGHT.

The union meeting tonight at the First Baptist church in the interest of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home is one of information not for solicitation. The occasion is to be full of interest to all who would like to hear a brave little woman tell the results of her self-denying labors among poor and destitute families. Every fibre of this Angel of Mercy to over-worked mothers and sickly children is bound up in the work for "His Sake."

The meeting is sure to be a blessing to all in attendance, enriching them with a fuller measure of faith in "applied religion." Her wonderful story of a holy purpose is thrilling in every particular. The splendid results of Miss Curry's labors, are seen in restored motherhood and invigorated childhood. The summer days at Netherwood are a great help to the bodies and uplifting to a spiritual life of the little children.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. Louise Frazier, of West Second street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Anna Frazier, to Timothy Carroll, of Somerset street. The wedding will take place sometime in September.

M'ARTHUR'S SIDE

Rev. John Weaver Widdell Replies to Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery.

NOT UNKIND TO WASHINGTON.

The Lecturer Had Referred to What Carlyle Had Discovered In Eulogizing Oliver Cromwell.

Rev. John Weaver Widdell makes the following reply to Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery's criticism of references made by Rev. Dr. MacArthur, on the places in history enjoyed by Cromwell and Washington, in a recent lecture here:

Editor, The Daily Press:

You are familiar, perhaps, with the old colloquy: "Pat where are you going?"

"And how did you know my name was Pat?"

"O, I guessed it."

"Then guess where I am going."

It is well always to know your man and your aim, as well, before entering into a controversy or raising a row.

If our friend and brother of the Church of the Heavenly Rest had been present and listened personally to the lecture by Dr. MacArthur to which he chooses to take exceptions, he would not only, I dare say, have enjoyed one of the literary treats of his life, but would have saved his wrath and his rage for some object of deprecation more deserving of his purpricks. For the generous words he speaks for the Father of his country are such as the distinguished lecturer would himself employ about the man he with all true patriots—and no one will dispute the patriotism of Robert Stewart MacArthur—loves to honor.

I chanced to be spending a few days in your lovely city and had the opportunity to hear the speaker of last Thursday evening on "America's Place Among the Nations." An unusually large and intelligent company of your citizens listened, deeply thrilled, to the eloquent periods of the New York clergyman, a man easily prince among pulpit actors. What he said in passing of Oliver Cromwell was not in contrast with other noble Englishmen, but in declaration of what Carlyle had discovered in the man, unobserved by others, too near to distinguish his greatness; and what was said of George Washington, it is sufficient to remark, was not by any means in disparagement or unkind comparison with a later hero of like prominence, but simply in explanation, so far as it can be posthumously explained, of the appellation of "first American" given by Lowell to Lincoln. The interpretation was recognized by everyone as just and true and would probably have been so regarded by our discriminating brother, had he himself heard it, that the real, the first American had not, in the poet's mind, yet been born. The first President of our great nation being himself with most of his compatriots reared in an atmosphere distinctly British, certainly not the Americanism, christened and cherished, of the "Ob." It is, after all, "much ado about nothing." Let us be Americans—all of us—up to date.

JOHN WEAVER WIDDELL.

"POLLY OF THE CIRCUS" COMES HERE TONIGHT.

Edith Speare, who has achieved the greatest success of her career in the role of "Polly" in Frederic Thompson's great American drama, "Polly of the Circus," which comes to the Plainfield theatre tonight, is one of the youngest leading women on the American stage, she having just passed her seventeenth birthday.

This delightful play, the story of a little circus rider, who, through an accident is thrown into an environment totally foreign to that which she has been accustomed to, seemed to charm countless thousands during its long run at the Liberty theatre, New York City, and has repeated its great success there in Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston. The story of the play is most interesting and entertaining, and its character drawings are quaint and original types. Its comedy is homely and the situations highly dramatic. Its many spectacular features are stirring and the massive production which shows the exterior and interior of a circus in full tilt makes the most realistic stage pictures ever seen on the stage of a theatre.

Minstrel Troupe to Dine.

The members of the Hope minstrel troupe and all who participated in the recent show will enjoy a course dinner at the chapel tonight. The young men will be the guests of G. H. Beiser, who has been a co-worker with the boys at the chapel.

MISS NELSON DIES FOLLOWING A STROKE

Miss Sarah Nelson, who formerly resided at West Front and Liberty streets, died at 9 o'clock this morning at the home of Mrs. Jeremiah Manning on Myrtle avenue, following a stroke of apoplexy about a week ago. At the time she was stricken she became unconscious and remained so, never regaining consciousness even for a brief spell.

Miss Nelson was a native of this city and had always lived here. She with her late brother, Edward Nelson, who died over a year ago, and another brother, Joseph Nelson, resided on West Front street for many years. After Edward Nelson's death, Miss Nelson and the other brother made their home with Mrs. Jeremiah Manning. Miss Nelson was a member of the First Baptist church. She is survived by a brother and one sister, Mrs. Nelson Gardner, of Boston.

FOSTER MILLIKEN WED TO MRS. A. K. WALLACE

Foster Milliken, contractor, whose father, Samuel L. Milliken, of this city, founded the contracting company of Millikens Brothers on Staten Island, was married Saturday noon at the City Hall, Jersey City, to Mrs. Antoinette Knapp Wallace, daughter of the late Joseph P. Knapp, founder of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Mrs. Wallace was divorced in Philadelphia on March 28, 1911, from Edward C. Wallace, who has been president of Milliken Brothers since the reorganization in 1909, after the company had been in the receiver's hands for two years.

Mr. Milliken formerly resided in this city, where he is well-known. He is at present associated with C. T. Wills in the steel contracting business at 286 Fifth avenue, New York. The couple was married by Rev. Andrew J. Meyer, pastor of the First Reformed church, Jersey City. Mr. Milliken was first married in September, 1881, to Louisa Ward, of Rowanda, N. Y., who died September 17, 1909. He has two children, Ruth, who is 16 years old, and Foster Milliken, Jr., who is 18.

MRS. MARY R. SUTTON DIES AT HAMILTON, OHIO.

Mrs. Mary R. Sutton, adeg seventy-one years, widow of A. P. Sutton, of this city, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Oscar C. Geiger, Jr., at East Hamilton, Ohio, at 7 o'clock last night. She resided here until about four years ago, when she went to East Hamilton to make her home with her daughter. Death was due to paralysis.

Mrs. Sutton leaves two sons, Willard V. Sutton, of Liberty street and Fred A. Sutton, of Bradley Beach; one daughter, Mrs. Oscar Geiger, Jr., and also a sister, Mrs. C. E. Richardson, of Somerville.

The remains will be brought to this city and notice of funeral will be made later.

Alexander Russell Ill.

Alexander Russell, organist of the Crescent Avenue church, was too ill to play yesterday and his place was taken by Edwin H. Breyer, of New York. The friends of Mr. Russell will no doubt be pleased to learn that his condition is improving and that he hopes to play at least a part of the service next Sunday, after which he will be succeeded by Charles L. Gulick, of New York.

Moose Memorial Service.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 310, Loyal Order of Moose, held its first memorial service in Knightts of Columbus Hall, yesterday afternoon. Seventy-five members were in attendance, the exercises being private. Dictator John J. Carroll delivered the oration and hymns were sung by the gathering. The lodge has lost one member by death since its organization, Thomas J. McGann.

William Pfeister's Condition.

William Pfeister, who had one eye seriously injured by the explosion of a ginger ale bottle at the Hotel Waldorf, a week ago Saturday night, is still detained at Muhlenberg Hospital. It has not been definitely ascertained, as yet, if any particles of glass are in the eye-ball, and if there is none his recovery will be rapid. Because of the nature of the injury, Mr. Pfeister is in a darkened room.

Bornman Trial Postponed.

On application from the defendant's counsel, Alvah A. Clark, the trial of John D. Bornman, of Warrenville, scheduled to begin at Somerville today, was postponed until May 10.

Edwin Langey, of Ansonia, Conn., has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Muir, of Grant avenue.

GEO. W. VANBOSKERCK BORNE TO THE GRAVE

The funeral service of George W. VanBoskerck was held at 11:30 o'clock this morning at the late residence on West Seventh street. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, of which Mr. VanBoskerck was a communicant, conducted the service. There were a great many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends, and former business associates.

There was a large attendance of mourners at the service, a great many New York friends being present, including representatives from the New York Produce Exchange, of which Mr. VanBoskerck was one of the oldest members. The burial was in Woodlawn cemetery this afternoon.

P. H. S. INTER-CLASS MEET NEXT FRIDAY

The Plainfield High School boys will hold their inter-class athletic meet on Friday afternoon, April 28, at 3 o'clock. Several entries have already been made for each event and entries will be received up to Wednesday. Point winners of each event will be selected and the winner of the greatest number of points will receive a medal. Ribbons will be awarded to first and second in each event.

The events are: 100 yard dash, 220 yards, 440 yards, running high jump, running broad jump, running hop, skip and jump, pole vault, shot put, discus throw, class relay race, half-mile four men to a team.

JAILED FOR FAILURE TO PAY $400 JUDGMENT.

William Reinman, of the borough, was taken into custody, Saturday, on an order of arrest issued by the Somerset County District Court for failure to pay a judgment entered against him. He was lodged in the county jail at Somerville and will be kept prisoner unti the amount is paid or the freeholders intercede.

Reinman was sued in the Somerset District Court, last August by Miss Maska Kososka, who asked for $500 for breach of promise. Judge Wittemore awarded her $400 at the request of her counsel, Robert Newton Crane, the usual order of arrest in a judgment of this kind was deferred for one week in order to give the defendant a chance to secure the money. Reinman disappeared before the time was up but returned to the borough a few days ago. Mr. Crane was apprised of the fact and the order of arrest was immediately secured from Judge Isaac P. Runyon.

COCKRAN'S LECTURE NETS $1,800 FOR MT. ST. MARY.

More than $1,800 was raised last evening in Elizabeth for the benefit of Mount St. Mary College. W. Bourke Cockran, the noted New York lecturer, delivered his famous lecture on "Charity" before an audience which completely filled Proctor's theatre in that city.

Several of the members of the choir of St. James' church, Newark, contributed vocal numbers to the entertainment which preceded and followed the lecture. President Frank Bergen, of the Plainfield-Union Water Company, introduced Mr. Cockran and explained the objects of the meeting.

A check for the net amount of the benefit was mailed today to the Sisters of Mercy of Mount St. Mary in this city.

Mrs. Anna B. Foster.

Mrs. Anna Bell Foster, wife of Sherman Foster, died yesterday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McCrea, 211 West Third street. Mrs. Foster was in her nineteenth year. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and the interment will be in North Plainfield.

Undecided About Call.

Rev. E. C. Conover, pastor of the Pemberton Baptist church, today said that he had not decided yet whether he will accept the call extended by the Temple Baptist church, of this city. It is expected that he will announce his decision next Sunday to his own congregation.

Visited New Acqueduct.

Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, of Fanwood, has returned from a two weeks' trip to the region surrounding the new Croton Acqueduct. Mrs. Van Hoesen brought with her several specimens of rock blasted from the waterway and said she had the unique experience of taking refuge in one of the safety caves when a huge charge of giant powder was set off.

CHILD'S WELFARE

Plainfielders to Attend International Congress at Washington Tomorrow.

PRESIDENT TO PARTICIPATE.

Ambassador James Brice Among the List of Distinguished Speakers —Lecture At Arlington Hotel.

What it is believed will be the greatest gathering of mothers, teachers and students of child welfare will be the International Congress of Child Welfare which will convene at the National Capitol tomorrow. President Taft will open the congress and will have as his aides and assistants his wife and several of the leading women of the country. There will be delegates from all parts of the world and it is expected that a decided step forward in the matter of care and culture of children will be made.

On the afternoon of May 1 President and Mrs. Taft will receive the delegates and individual members of the congress as well as representativss of associations from foreign countries. The governor of each State has been requested to appoint a special delegate to this convention and in most all cases have responded willingly, giving the assurance that there will be a large representation from every part of the country. The local societies will be represented by Mrs. H. D. Corbusier, Mrs. W. D. Sandford, Jr., Mrs. Joseph Smith, Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees, Mrs. W. H. P. Veysey, Mrs. G. Stuart Simons and Mrs. M. P. E. Groszmann. The confress will last from tomorrow to Tuesday, May 2, sessions being held every day excepting Sunday, April 30, on which day all the pastors of Washington will preach on the "Relations of the Church to Child Welfare."

An invitation has been extended to the mothers and child lovers of the entire country to attend this congress for which special arrangements have been made for the caring of visitors. Welfare and information committees have been working hard for the past two months perfecting the programs of procedure and securing accommodations for hundreds of visitors. There will be no admission fee to the lectures which will be given in the Hotel Arlington.

All nations are looking to America to lead the way in finding the best means of providing for the welfare of the child. The motto of the international society is "to cure was the voice of the past; to prevent, the divine whisper of today."

Mrs. Frederick Schoff, president of the National Congress of Mothers, is the only woman ever invited to address the Canadian Parliament. She is a recognized authority on juvenile courts and probation systems and will be listened to wth profit by all who attend the coming convention. She has been instrumental in framing the laws relating to children in every State in the Union. England and Austria have called upon her for assistance along the same lines and she has responded in each case with her best efforts.

Hon. James Brice, British Ambassador to the United States, will speak on the "Child Protectors of Greater Britain." Other notable speakers will be Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, Judge John De Lacey, Mrs. E. F. Carroll, wife of the Governor of Iowa; Rabbi Simon, of Washington; members of foreign embassies and representatives from the various departments of the government of Washintgon.

Specially arranged trips for visitors will be taken between sessions of the congress including all the points of interest in and about Washington.

CHARGED WITH RECKLESS DRIVING OF AUTOMOBILE.

Murray Stowe, charged with driving an automobile recklessly through Watchung avenue, near Fourth street, yesterday, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning and pleaded not guilty. Patrolman McCarthy, who made the arrest, said that Stowe was driving so fast that when a Fourth street trolley car came around the corner, in order to avoid a collision he was compelled to throw his car up on the sidewalk and in doing so dented a hitching post at that point.

Mr. Stowe was represented in court by Winfield S. Angleman and at the request of the court consented to an adjournment of the hearing until Wednesday morning in order that another witness to the occurrence might be produced.

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Thirty-two persons were killed in the train wreck in Cape Colony on Saturday.

Denmarks is said to be planning measures to prevent Mormons from making converts there.

Through an election held on Saturday Socialists secured control of the government of Berkeley, Cal.

German census figures show a large increase in the male population and a decreased death rate.

A boy playing with a gun at Monticello, N. Y., accidentally shot two men who were passing in a wagon.

Reports from Morocco indicate slightly improved conditions; French officials are hastening preparations to relieve Fez.

Representative Underwood said at Washington that this extra session was to be essentially one for revision of the tariff.

It was said in Indianapolis that further arrests were expected in the case of the blowing up of the Times building in Los Angeles.

A seven-year-old boy died after eating candy at Warwick, R. I., the federal food authorities were asked to make an investigation.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Schwab, parents of Charles M. Schwab, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home in Loretto, Penn.

Controller Prendergast, of New York, made public a memorandum attacking the new city charter, for which the Mayor is the sponsor.

One man was killed and another probably fatally injured in a collision between their motorcycles, in Broad street, near the City Hall, in Philadelphia.

A letter from Commissioner Farley of the Excise Department to General George B. Loud, of the Grand Army, explaining his dismissals, was made public at Albany.

Advices from Tokio say that the anti-imperial movement is spreading and that the government has prevented an attempt to discuss in the Diet the right of the Mikado to the throne.

District Attorney Whitman was not satisfied with Banking Superintendent Cheney's excuse for his delay in closing the Carnegie Trust Company, and indicated a purpose to instigate a deeper investigation of it than at first intended.

MASONS MAKING PLANS FOR ARRIVAL OF TAFT.

To complete arrangements for the reception of President Taft, who is to take part in the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of St. John's Lodge, F. and A. M., May 13, in Newark, the committee of the lodge will meet Wednesday night.

Former Governor Franklin Murphy will head whatever committee is named to meet the President, who will reach Newark over the Pennsylvania railroad, accompanied by Senator Brigg. There will be a reception at the Murphy residence in Broad street before the Chief Executive is taken to the Krueger Auditorium, where the anniversary will be observed.

According to present plans, the President is due to arrive at the Market street depot about 7:32 o'clock in the evening of the celebration. After delivering an address to the Masons, of which order he is a member, the Executive will leave at 9:45 o'clock for New York, where he is to talk before the Prison Reform Association. The following day he will speak at the national convention of Railroad Trainmen, in Wilkesbarre.

WESTFIELD STANDS OUT AS RESIDENTIAL TOWN.

During the twelve months ending April 1, 208 new families took up their residence in the town. Westfield differs somewhat from most of the other towns along the Central Railroad, in that most of its residents own their own homes and there is very little renting property. One to secure a home in Westfield must build it.

A better class of buildings is going up every year. Three years ago the average cost of the new houses was $3,800. The average cost of those for which building permits have been issued since January 1, is $4,175.

Sixteen houses are now under way and building permits have been issued for nine that have not yet been started.

The new Methodist church, costing $80,000, will be completed this summer.

SPLENDID MILLINERY

You will derive the greatest pleasure from an inspection of our up-to-date shapes and styles. The new spring designs are unusually becoming and distinctive and the wide range of colors affords an opportunity of easily matching the new dresses. The extraordinary values represented show the unapproachable effects of personal selection and interest.

We have a large line of beautiful models—models that not only show the very latest fashionable shapes and designs, but at the same time are quite chic and attractive.

MOURNING MILLINERY EXHIBIT

Paris, reviewing millinery tendencies at this moment advises, wear anything you please as long as it is dainty and effective in itself and becoming to you, says a foremost Parisian millinery authority. It would seem as if this axiom were the ruling law this season, for never did one see such a variety of styles and shapes and trimmings. To group them into classes is next to impossible, so few features being common to any large number. The L. S. Plaut & Co. millinery organization has taken the keynote from this authoritative information, and applying the same in making up their collection of mourning millinery of this season, employing every thought and idea that places our colored hats in the front ranks of artistic and becoming millinery.

Few establishments anywhere given greater thought and attention to mourning millinery than the house of L. S. Plaut & Co.

TRIMMED MOURNING HATS—Bonnets, toques, turbans, sailors and dress hats $3.98 to 33.50

BASEBALL HISTORY.

APRIL 22.

1889—"Rube" Marquard, of the Giants for whose release President Brush paid the Indianapolis Club $11,000, born in Cleveland, O. In his first two seasons with the New York Nationals, Marquard pitched nine victories, each triumph, therefore, figuring at $1,222-22.

1898—Two no-hit games were pitched in the National League Jay Hughes, of Baltimore, treating the Bostons in this fashion, and "The" Breitenstein, of Cincinnati, duplicating the performance against Pittsburg. This was Hughes' second appearance in the National League. In his initial contest he used the whitewash brush on Washington.

1904—The New York Nationals defeated Philadelphia, 18 to 3.

1905—The Charleston and Columbia South Atlantic League teams played a nineteen-inning runless tie.

SUNDAY, APRIL 23.

1890—"Kid" Nichols, for many years a noted slabman, pitched his first game in the National League. The Boston team, of which he was a member, defeated Brooklyn, 5 to 2.

1895—John Ewing, a pitcher who made a great reputation in the National League while with the Giants, died of tuberculosis in Denver, Col.

1895—Thomas J. Lynch, now president, then an umpire, of the National League, resigned his posititon on the staff because of the abuse of the players.

1902—Napoleon Lajoie restrained by injunction issued by Common Pleas Court No. 5 of Philadelphia from playing with the Athletics. He was in Baltimore at the time and when notice of the court's action reached him quit the game. Had Col. John I. Rogers, of the Phillies, who persistently fought the case in the courts, raised Lajoie's salary, the American League would have received a severe setback. Larry finally deserted, signing with Cleveland, and was careful to stay out of the State of Pennsylvania, where he was in contempt of court.

1902—The St. Louis club played its first game in the American League, defeating Cleveland, 5 to 2. The pitchers were Frank Donahue, now a hotelkeeper in Philadelphia, and Earl Moore, at present with the National League club of that city.

1903—That remarkable oddity—two triple plays in one game—occurred in the contest between the Los Angeles and Butte teams of the Pacific National League. Captain Charles Reilly, of the Californians, who was known as "Fashion Plate" when he played in the majors, started both these three-ply killings, which came in successive innings.

GOLF

Local golfers will be much interested to learn that Frank O. Reinhart, at one time one of the most prominent players in this part of the country, has returned to Plainfield and renewed his membership at the Plainfield Country Club. He plans to follow the game this year and get back into his old-time form again. The active season will start about the first Saturday in May.

The green committee has been devoting considerale time to the course improving the fair greens. The bare spots have also received due attention and it is hoped that when the active season opens, the players will find the course in fine condition.

Herbert Barker, for several years professional at the Garden City Golf Club, has gone to the Rumson Country Club, of Seabright. This organization is in possession of a new eighteen-hole course which was completed last season. This will be Barker's second professional berth, as he came here an amateur from the other side.

That public golf is progressing steadily in various parts of the country is further shown by a decision of the authorities at Cleveland to lay out an eighteen-hole links on a piece of property consisting of a hundred-odd acres. Before long most of the large cities will doubtless be able to boast of municipal courses.

David Stevens has been engaged as professional of the Mohawk Golf Club. Last year Stevens, who is a Scot, held a position as clubmaker in a Chicago shop.

See Our Women's $25 Suits

This $25.00 suit story of ours bears repetition. We never tire of talking about this line, because we really have a good deal to tell you, and we want to impress upon you the fact that this is the store for $25.00 suits.

A wide range of styles in plain tailored and trimmed effects. Coats lined with peau de cygne. Stylishly cut skirts. The materials include hairline stripes, serges and smart mixtures.

We want you to see our $25.00 suits and compare them with the average $30.00 suits. We are satisfied to let you judge for yourself, because we know what others are showing at this price, and we know that we are making less on our $25 suits than most stores.

ATE THE EDUCATED PIG.

He Could Spell His Own Name, but Ended as Roast Pork.

Reuben, a much advertised educated pig belonging to the John Robinson circus, which is showing in Cleveland, O., this week, is no more. His fate was kept secret for a week, for more or less obvious reasons, the news becoming known only yesterday.

Hal Newport, the clown of the circus, who appeared nightly in the sawdust arena with the pig, said today:

"That pig could do everything but talk, and could nearly do that, as he spelled his name with letter blocks. All was confusion the night we broke camp at Terrace Park. We had pork chops for supper, and they were particularly delicious. We were all eating our heads off when the property man rushed in and cried that Reuben had vanished."

"'He got mixed up with those pigs that were sent from the stock yards,' he gasped.

"'Was one of those pigs a white one, with black polka dots?' I asked the cook.

"'It was,' he replied.

"'Then we have eaten Reuben,' I cried."

The property man is no longer attached to the circus.

GIVES MATHIS A CLEAN BILL.

The Senate, upon recommendation of the Senate Committee on Elections, voted Friday night to dismiss the protest of former Senator Thos. A. Mathis, and declared Senator Low entitled to the seat from Ocean county.

The committee bases its decision on the fact that part of the votes cast in the election for Senator in Ocean county have been stolen.

Every Senator was fully acquainted with the fact that the committee was completely opposed to reopening the case. The task which the Republicans found facing them was, however, to get some reasonable excuse for turning down Senator Mathis. They thought that any finding which reflected on his integrity would be unfair to him, for they had full confidence in his honesty in the matter.

Not only were the Republicans sure that they ought to drop the case as a matter of right, but they were fully convinced that it would be suicidal for their party to do anything that would result in the unseating of Low and the seating of Mathis.

Retracts Former Pleas.

Egbert Scribner, of the borough, appeared before Judge Case in the Somerset Court, this morning, and retracted his pleas of not guilty on two indictments for buying stolen property and buying lead pipe from minors. He was allowed to enter a plea of guilty to buying from minors and sentence will be pronounced next Friday.

JERSEY FIRM TO BUILD LIFE SAVING BOATS.

The United States Life-saving Service, Washington, D. C., opened bids on Tuesday last for the building of twelve thirty-six-foot self-righting, self bailing power lifeboats. Among the firms bidding were the Electric Launch Company, Bayonne; National Boat and Engine Company, Chicago, Ill.; Holmes Motor Company, West Mystic, Conn.; Welin Davit, Lane & DeGroot Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., and the Eastern Shipbuilding Company, Greenport, N. Y.

The lowest bidder was the Electric Launch Company, Bayonne, who offered to build the twelve boats in 200 days.

No Corporation Law Inquiry.

Senator Osborne's bill authorizing the Governor to appoint three persons to be known as the Commission on Corporation Laws, to investigate the laws of this and other States relative to corporations, passed the Senate Friday night, but got no further advanced. The intent of the bill was to have the commission report at the next session of the Legislature such recommendations as it might see fit. The bill also provided that the commission was to serve without pay, but $2,000 was to be provided for expenses.

Limits Area of Light Plants.

The Mylod bill, which was designed to allow the small municipalities in Essex county to establish municipal electrical plants and sell light and power, made its way through the Senate Friday afternoon in an amended form. As passed it allows municipalities to establish electric plants, but gives no authority to sell its product outside its borders.

Sang Easter Music.

A large audience listened with pleasure to the singers of the Lyceum Society, colored, yesterday afternoon in Reform Hall. The Easter cantata, "The Risen Lord," was rendered in splendid style. Rev. F. D. Tildon, pastor of Bethel chapel, gave the invocation. Upwards of 400 people attended the service.

A Church Bazaar.

For the benefit of the building fund of the Swedish Lutheran church, a bazaar will be held in Coward's Hall, 109 Park avenue, Saturday evening. There will be a musical and literary program. Refreshments will be served.

WILSON TO TOUR WEST FOR MONTH

Having succeeded in getting through the Legislature a sweeping program of reforms, Governor Wilson Saturday announced his plan for a "getting acquainted" trip around the western circuit.

Ostensibly the trip, which will take him through the west, with especial attention to the Pacific coast cities of Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles is undertaken to "keep engagements made some time ago," but the real reason is to aid the Governor's promising boom for the next Democratic presidential nomination.

The friends of the Governor frankly admit the real object of the trip. As showing that he may yet have the active support of William J. Bryan, they say that while en route the Governor will stop off at Lincoln and will be entertained at Fairview by Colonel Bryan. The trip will occupy a good part of next month.

REV. DR. J. S. ZELIE ILL; TO TAKE LONG REST.

Announcement was made at the Crescent Avenue church, yesterday, by Dr. W. H. Murray, that owing to illness from nervous prostration, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, the pastor, would probably not be able to return to active pastorate much before the close of the summer vacation.

Dr. Zelie recently returned from Bermuda, but Dr. Murray informed the congregation yesterday that his health was not much improved and this would compell him to relinquish pastoral duties for the present.

Funeral of Mrs. Haberle.

The funeral service of Mrs. Frances E. Haberle, widow of John G. Haberle, and stepdaughter of Bennett Britton, was held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the late home on Chatham street. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, of which Mrs. Haberle was a member, officiated. There was a large attendance of relatives, friends and neighbors, and many beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in Evergreen cemetery and the pall-bearers were relatives of the family.

Present Your Bills.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The sale of the P. W. Brakeley building on North avenue to Charles L. Moffett, of Plainfield, Friday, is one of the most important real estate transaction of the present season. The deal was made through the agency of Robert L. Pierce. Mr. Moffett is the owner of the garage building now being erected on North avenue adjoining the Dealaman property.

Junior Hall was crowded to the doors Saturday night, on the occasion of the third night of the St. John's church fair. The attraction received a liberal patronage which space on the dancing floor was at a premium. The fair is to come to a conclusion tonight and another large crowd is expected. The fair has been very successful so far.

Dr. T. H. Platt and John P. Fenner have purhcased the property at Washington avenue and Mountainview terrace, belonging to Mrs. May Baerman.

F. C. Gladden has rent the house on Front street formerly occupied by C. H. Hafner. The latter has removed to Scotch Plains.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Raven have placed their furniture in storage at Plainfield preparatory to a trip abroad.

No Bakery in Cellar.

After having made al arrangements to start a bakery at Lee place and Third street, Hyman Semmer cannot use the place for the purpose he intended. According to Health Officer J. O'Brien, Jr., the cellar is not sanitary and does not comply with the provisions of the new law which prohibits baking in a cellar. Semmer was arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning and warned against starting his new bakery.

Geo. Langford Breaks His Leg.

George Langford, aged 22 years, colored, employed in Knight's saw mill near Oak Tree, was taken to Muhlenberg hospital at 10 o'clock this morning suffering from a broken leg, the result of an accident at the mill. He was helping to pull logs into the mill for sawing, when one of the heaviest ones rolled over on his leg breaking it. Mr. Knight had the man removed to the hospital, where the bones were set.

Four Nurses to Be Graduated.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, has not yet made any official announcement for the annual graduation exercises of the training school, which are usually held the last Thursday in May. There will be four graduates this year, Miss Florence Stacy, of Easton, Pa.; Miss Elizabeth Williams, of Lansford, Pa., and Miss Autumn DeLany and Miss Elizabeth Randall, of this city.

Lace Curtain Fire.

A lace curtain at the home of Dr. W. Vaughn, of Liberty street, caught fire from a gas jet shortly after 10 o'clock last night. An alarm was turned in from box 46, but the blaze was put out before the apparatus reached the scene. The damage was trifling.

Playing in Buffalo.

Adele von Ohl-Parker, of this city, plays in Buffalo, N. Y., this week, instead of New York. She has her famous stage horse, "Aristocrat" home for a rest. On the way home the horse just escaped a wreck on the New York Central in which the fireman and engineer were killed.

Taken to Hospital.

Edson C. Westcott, proprietor of the Central Cafe, who has been ill for some time with a complication of rheumatism and diabetes, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital this morning for treatment. Mr. Westcott has been making his home at the Kensington.

Postponed Hunt.

Owing to the disagreeable weather the weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club was postponed on Saturday. There will be a hunt on Wednesday afternoon, however, weather permitting, when the riders will meet the hounds at Watchung Hill.

From Police Blotter.

John Keiderling and Joseph Haff over-indulged in beer on Saturday night and were arrested helplessly drunk. Judge DeMeza suspended sentence this morning, when both men promised to take the pledge for a year.

Harry Carey, who has been under treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital, is reported to be somewhat improved.

PLAINFIELDER HURT IN ACCIDENT IN NEW YORK.

Henry Rosenbaum, of West Third street, met with a severe accident in New York, yesterday, that will detain him at home for some time. He had been dining in a restaurant on East Broadway and in starting to go out opened the wrong door. He stepped forward before he realized it and fell down a dumbwaiter shaft a distance of thirty feet.

Nearly an hour afterward, an employe of the place discovered the Plainfielder in an unconscious condition. He was removed by ambulance to the Madison street station, where a physician revived him and dressed his wounds. The police helped him to the Jersey Central ferry and from there he was able to proceed home alone.

"At Home" After May 15.

Cards announcing the marriage of Councilman George S. Clay and Miss Mary Welby Washington, at Atlanta, Ga., on April 19, have received here. The couple will be "at home" at 315 East Seventh street, after May 15.

MYSTERY OF LIGHT

Some Luminosity So Intense the Eyes Cannot See It.

THE RIDDLE OF THE FIREFLY.

So Far It Has Baffled Science, but When It Is Solved, as It Eventually Will Be, We Shall Have Light Without Heat and the Perfect Lamp.

The scientist set down a small black box and impatiently pushed aside the powerful microscope and the delicate bolometer. "It is most discouraging," he muttered, "to have such a treasure before one's eyes and still be unable to grasp it."

I looked in the little box, surprised to find nothing but a few brilliant flies. The scientist began to explain.

"In that box is the most efficient illuminant known to man. The radiant output from one of those insects corresponds to nearly fifty watts a candle, while our very best artificial illuminant, the flaming arc lamp, gives only two or three watts to the candle. The light from those insects, as recorded by the bolometer, radiates little if any heat, while the very best incandescent lamps waste more than 90 per cent of the electrical energy in useless heat. If I could read this secret of the insect world and make a lamp after its pattern I could produce 384 candle power from the same current that gives sixteen candle power today. Some day the secret will be read."

The source of all light (except the light from fireflies and their kin) is a substance raised to a temperature sufficient to set up waves in the surrounding ether, which, when falling upon the eye, produce the sensation we know as light. Light waves vary in length between one thirty-three-thousand-four-hundredth and one sixty-five-thousandth of an inch, the first being extreme red and the second extreme violet. Rays of white light have a length of one forty-five-thousandth of an inch. The sun is a great mass of white hot matter. It is the atmosphere that enables us to see light, and outside of our atmosphere it is absolute darkness, as dark as the interior of Mammoth cave. In an arc lamp it is the white hot particles of carbon floating between the two electrodes that produce light. In the incandescent lamp it is the hairpin filament inside the glass globe that, when heated by electricity, gives off light waves. In gas and oil lamps light is produced by the heated particles of carbon in the flames above the wick or mantle.

The eye can stand without tiring a brilliance of about five candle power to the square inch of surface. The ordinary candle flame gives only two or three candle power to the square inch, while the sun at zenith gives 600,000. The arc light ranks next to sunlight, with 10,000 candle power an inch, and the best tungsten filament incandescents give 1,000 candle power. This means that if the sun could be changed into a ball of tungsten it would throw off only 1,000 candle power of light from every square inch of its surface, when the world would be practically dark and we should freeze to death in a week.

The prism shows that white light is composed of a happy blend of all colors of the spectrum. The sun gives the only pure white light, with the arc lamps a close second and the metal filament incandescents taking third place. Sky light, such as comes from the north on a clear day, is bluish white. Gas mantles give greenish light, open flame yellow light and kerosene orange light.

By the laws of evolution the human eye has become accustomed to sun light, or sky light, coming obliquely from above, and our eyes resent light coming from any other source. Snow blindness, distress from white sand or water, is the result of violating this rule. The upper eyelid is adapted to shade the eye from a strong light from above. The lower lid cannot perform this office, so when a strong light is reflected up into the eyes it blinds us.

The X ray has proved beyond doubt that there are light rays which move too fast for human eyes to register. This light penetrates books, wood, paper and even human flesh. With the fluoroscope to assist our eyes we can see the bones in our arm without bothering to remove coat or shirt. But a man with X ray eyes would be sadly handicapped in this world, for he could see nothing but solids, such as earths and metals, and would be unable to see a board fence at all. Beyond doubt there is light so bright that the eyes cannot see it, and to us all is darkness beyond what our eyes will register.

Light rays themselves are invisible. When they move through the ether alone our eyes cannot see them, consequently all is total darkness. But when they meet with the resistance of our atmosphere, producing heat, they register on the retina and—behold, we can see! As the atmosphere thins rapidly as we go upward, so in proportion the air resistance diminishes, and consequently the heat of the sun seems to grow less. This explains why the tops of high mountains are always covered with snow.

Many wonderful discoveries have been recorded in the illuminating field of late, and it is safe to say that this branch of science affords one of the greatest fields for research and invention. Each year our artificial illuminants are improved, but they are far from being perfect. Not until the secret of the firefly is read and light is produced without heat will our evening lamps be perfect.—Chicago Record Herald.

HEAT AND COLD.

The Range Between Liquid Helium and the Arc Light.

Have you never wondered on some terribly cold winter day, when the falling temperature had long since passed the zero mark, if it could possibly be any colder anywhere, and then, when summer comes and the mercury is apparently never going to stop climbing, you cannot imagine how anything could be hotter or more uncomfortable?

Fortunately we live in a world where the temperature seldom exceeds the limits of, say, 50 degrees below zero Fahrenheit and 110 above. This seems a tremendous range of temperature, but it is only trivial compared with that found on every side in nature or in the laboratory. Why, this 160 degrees is less than the range through which a dish of cold water is heated when you place it on the stove to boil.

A moment's thought of some of these higher and lower temperatures is well worth while. Liquid air at 312 degrees below zero is cold, but liquid hydrogen at 421 is still colder, while liquid helium at 451 below zero is the coldest thing we know of. Going the other way, lead melts at 620 degrees above zero Fahrenheit, while gold remains solid up to a bright red heat, or 1,946 degrees. A good furnace fire may get several hundred degrees hotter than this. Platinum, one of the most refractory of metals, melts only when intensely white hot at a temperature of 3,230, but even this is 100 degrees or so less than the temperature of the flame on your gas stove.

The hotter a body is the more light it gives, so the tungsten lamp filament, which runs at about 4,500 degrees, gives a brighter and whiter light than the carbon filament at 3,500. The electric arc gives still more light for a given amount of current consumed and generates a temperature not far from 7,200 degrees Fahrenheit. This is the highest temperature we can produce artificially. No metal known can stand this terrible heat, and even most refractory substances, such as carbon, are volatilized by it.

But, while the arc is indeed hot, it is by no means the highest temperature to be found in nature. There are the best of reasons for believing that the temperature of the sun is some 12,000 degrees or more, and it is probable that some of the stars are still hotter. This great heat explains the almost unbelievable fact, found by Langley, that sunlight is 5,000 times brighter than the dazzling stream of molten metal from a Bessemer converter.—New York Tribune.

They Both Knew.

When the war ended Thomas B. Reed went to California with a vague plan of settling in that new country. He used to tell with intense delight of his examination for admission to the bar of California. A young southerner came before the judge for examination at the same time. The judge asked the southerner if the legal tender acts were constitutional, and the young man answered without a moment's hesitation, "No." Then the judge turned to Reed and asked him the same question. Mr. Reed with equal promptness answered, "Yes."

"Very well," said the judge, "you are both admitted. Two men who can answer that question without hesitation ought to be admitted to any bar."—Henry Cabot Lodge in Century.

Very Simple.

A rather simple looking lad halted before a blacksmith's shop on his way home from school and eyed the doings of the proprietor with much interest.

The brawny smith, dissatisfied with the boy's curiosity, held a piece of red-hot iron suddenly under the youngster's nose, hoping to make him beat a hasty retreat.

"If you'll give me half a dollar I'll lick it," said the lad.

The smith took from his pocket half a dollar and held it out.

The simple looking youngster took the coin, licked it, dropped it in his pocket and slowly walked away whistling.

Making Life Worth "Livin'."

The other day I beheld a woman whose husband earns something less than $200 a month purchasing her season's wardrobe. Into it went one hat at $50 and another at $30. Her neighbors in the flat building admired and envied. One of the bolder wondered. "Well, I can't help it," said Mrs. Jones. "I just tell Mr. Jones life isn't worth livin' if I can't have what I want."—Atlantic.

Pithy Sayings of Famous Men.

Eli Whitney—That's some gin, believe me.

Charles Dickens—Got change for American notes?

Barnum—I will.

Noah Webster—Just a word or two.

Christopher Columbus—My land!—Chicago Tribune.

Hard to Satisfy.

Broker (to wealthy but stingy client)—Glad you did so well with those shares I told you to buy. Client—Why, I lost a pot of money over them. Broker—What! You bought at two and sold at seven, didn't you? Client—Aye! But they went up to ten after!—London Punch.

His Come Back.

Mrs. Jawback—I suppose you consider your judgment far superior to mine, Mr. Jawback—No, my dear. We proved the contrary when we chose to marry each other.—Toledo Blade.

Every man has at times in his mind the ideal of what he should be, but is not.

THE Diva's Ruby

BY

F. MARION CRAWFORD

Copyright, 1907, by F. Marion Crawford.

At a distance, Logotheti had supposed that he could somehow account to the diva for the position in which he had foolishly placed himself, because he had done nothing and said nothing that he would have been ashamed of before her, if she knew the whole truth; and he fancied that even if they quarreled she would make up with him before long, and marry him in the end. He had a good opinion of himself as a desirable husband, and with reason, since he had been persecuted for years with offers of excellent marriages from mothers of high degree who had daughters to dispose of. And beneath that conviction there lurked, in spite of him, the less worthy thought, that singers and actresses were generally less squeamish than women of the world about the little entanglements of their intended husbands.

She Followed Him.

But now, at the very moment of meeting Margaret, he knew that if he found her very angry with him, he would simply listen to what she had to say, make a humble apology, state the truth coldly, and return to his own yacht with Baraka, under her very eyes, and in full sight of Lady Maud and Mrs. Rushmore. Besides, he felt tolerably sure that when Spiro failed to carry out the young Tartar girl's murderous instructions, she would forget all about the oath she had sworn by the "inviolable water of the Styx" and try to kill him with her own hands, so that it would be necessary to take her away abruptly, and even forcibly.

Before the Erinna had quite lost her way, Logotheti had his naphtha launch puffing alongside, and he got into it with Baraka and Spiro, and the Lancashire Lass had barely time to lower her ladder, while still moving slowly, before the visitors were there.

Baraka bade Logotheti go up first, and trod daintily on the grated steps as she followed him. The chief mate and chief steward were waiting at the gangway. The mate saluted; the steward led the visitors to the main saloon, ushered them in and shut the door. Spiro was left outside, of course.

Mr. Van Torp shook hands coldly with Logotheti; Baraka walked directly to Kralinsky, and then stood stone-still before him, gazing up steadily into his eyes.

Neither Margaret nor Mrs. Rushmore was to be seen. Van Torp and Logotheti both watched the other two, looking from one face to the other. Kralinsky, with his eye-glass in his eye, surveyed the lovely young barbarian unmoved, and the silence lasted half a minute. Then she spoke in her own language and Kralinsky answered her, and only Logotheti understood what they said to each other. Probably it did not occur to Kralinsky that the Greek knew Tartar.

"You are not Ivan. You are fatter, and you have not his eyes."

Logotheti drew a long breath.

"No," answered Kralinsky. "I am Yuryi, his brother. I never saw you, but he told me of you."

"Where is Ivan?"

"Dead."

The proud little head was bowed down for a moment and Baraka did not speak till several seconds had passed. Then she looked up again suddenly. Her dark eyes were quite dry.

"How long?"

"More than four months."

"You know it?"

"I was with him and buried him."

"It is enough."

She turned, her head high, and went to the door, and no one hindered her from going out.

"Mons. Logotheti!" Lady Maud called him, and the Greek crossed the saloon and stood by her. "He is not the man, I see," she said, with a vague doubt in her voice.

"No."

Van Torp was speaking with Kralinsky in low tones. Lady Maud spoke to Logotheti again, after an instant, in which she drew a painful breath and grew paler.

"Miss Donne knows that you are on board," she said, "but she wishes me to say that she will not see you, and that she considers her engagement at an end, after what you have done."

Logotheti did not hesitate.

"Will you kindly give a message to Miss Donne from me?" he asked.

"That quite depends on what it is," Lady Maud answered coldly.

She felt that she herself had got something near a death-wound, but she would not break down.

"I beg you to tell Miss Donne that I yield to her decision," said Logotheti with dignity. "We are not suited to each other, and it is better that we should part. But I cannot accept as the cause of our parting the fact that I have given my protection to a young girl whom I have extracted from great trouble and have treated, and still treat, precisely as I should have treated Miss Donne if she had been my guest. Will you tell her that?"

"I will tell her that."

"Thank you. Good-morning."

He turned and went towards the door, but stopped to speak to Van Torp.

"This gentleman," he said, "is not the man my guest was anxious to find, though he is strikingly like him. I have to thank you for giving her an opportunity of satisfying herself. Good-morning."

Mr. Van Torp was extremely grateful to Logotheti for having ruined himself in Margaret's eyes, and would in any case have seen him to the gangway, but he was also very anxious to know what Kralinsky and Baraka had said to each other in Tartar. He therefore opened the door for the Greek, followed him out and shut it behind him. Baraka and Spiro had disappeared; they were already in the launch, waiting.

"Now what did they say, if it isn't a rude question?" asked the American.

Logotheti repeated the short conversation almost word for word.

"He said that his name was Yuryi," he concluded. "That is George in English."

"Oh, he's George, is he? And what's his dead brother's name, again, please?"

"Ivan. That is John. Before we part, Van Torp, I may as well tell you that my engagement with Miss Donne is at an end. She was good enough to inform me of her decision through Lady Maud. One thing more, please. I wish you to know, as between man and man, that I have treated Baraka as I would my own sister since I got her out of prison, and I beg that you won't encourage any disagreeable talk about her."

"Well, now," said the American slowly, "I'm glad to hear you say that, just in that way. I guess it'll be all right about any remarks on board my ship, now you've spoken."

"Thank you," said Logotheti, moving towards the gangway.

They shook hands with some cordiality, and Logotheti ran down the steps like a sailor, without laying his hand on the man-rope, stepped on board his launch and was off in a moment.

"Good-by, good-by, Miss Barrack, and good luck to you!" cried Van Torp, waving his cap.

Logotheti translated his words to Baraka, who looked back with a grateful smile, as if she had not just heard that the man she had risked her life to find in two continents had been dead four months.

"It was his portion," she said gravely, when she was alone with Logotheti on the Erinna, and the chain was coming in fast.

Van Torp went back to the main saloon and found Lady Maud and Kralinsky there. She was apparently about to leave the count, for she was coming towards the door, and her eyes were dark and angry.

"Refus," she said, "this man is my husband, and insists that I should take him back. I will not. Will you kindly have me put ashore before you start again? My things are ready now."

"Excuse me," answered Mr. Van Torp, digging his large thumbs into his waistcoat pockets, "there's a mistake. He's not your husband."

"He is, indeed!" cried Lady Maud, in a tone her friend never forgot.

"I am Boris Leven," said Kralinsky in an authoritative tone, and coming forward almost defiantly.

"Then why did you tell the Tartar girl that your name was George?" asked Mr. Van Torp, unmoved.

"I did not."

"You've evidently forgotten. That Greek gentleman speaks Tartar better than you. I wonder where you learned it! He's just told me you said your name was George."

"My name is George Boris," answered Kralinsky, less confidently.

He was not a coward, but he had never been face to face with Van Torp when he meant business, and the terrible American cowed him.

"My husband's name is only Boris—nothing else," said Lady Maud.

"Well, this isn't your husband; this is George, whoever he is, and if you don't believe it, I'm going to give you an object lesson."

Thereupon Mr. Van Torp pressed the button of a bell in the bulk-head near the door, which he opened, and he stood looking out. A steward came at once.

"Send me Stemp," said Van Torp in a low voice, as he stepped outside.

"Yes, sir."

"And, see here, send six sailors with him."

"Very good, sir."

Mr. Van Torp went in again and shut the door. Kralinsky disdained flight, and was looking out of a window. Lady Maud had sat down again. For the first time in her life she felt weak.

In less than one minute the door opened and Stemp appeared, impassive and respectful. Behind him was the boatswain, a huge Northumbrian, and five young seamen in perfectly new guernseys, with fair quiet faces.

"Stemp."

"Yes, sir."

"Take that man somewhere and shave him. Leave his mustache on." Van Torp pointed to Kralinsky.

For once in his life Stemp gasped for breath. Kralinsky turned a greenish white, and seemed paralyzed with rage.

"Take his beard off, sir, you mean?"

"Yes. Leave his mustache. Here, men," added Van Torp, "take that fellow outside and hold him down in a chair while Stemp shaves him. See?" The boatswain looked doubtful. "He's pretending to be somebody he's not," said Van Torp, "on my ship, and I want to see his face. It's mutiny if you don't obey orders!"

"Aye, aye, sir," responded the boatswain cheerfully, for he rather liked the job since there was a good reason for it.

But instead of going about his business gently, the Northumbrian giant suddenly dashed past Van Torp in a flash, and jumped and hurled himself head foremost at Kralinsky's legs, exactly as if he were diving. In the count's violent fall the revolver he had drawn was thrown from his hand and went off in the air. The boatswain had seen it in time. The big man struggled a little, but the five seamen held him fast and carried him out kicking.

"Stemp."

The valet was preparing to follow the prisoner, and was quite calm again.

"Yes, sir."

"If he won't sit still to be shaved, cut his head off."

"Yes, sir."

Van Torp's eyes were awful to see. He had never been so angry in his life. He turned and saw Lady Maud pressing her handkerchief to her right temple. The ball had grazed it, though it had certainly not been meant for her.

"Rufus!" she cried in great distress, "what have you done?"

"The question is what he's done to you," answered Van Torp. "I believe the blackguard has shot you!"

"It's nothing. Thank God it hit me! It was meant for you."

Van Torp's rage instantly turned into tender care, and he insisted on examining the wound, which was slight but would leave a scar. By a miracle the ball had grazed the angle of the temple without going near the temporal artery, and scarcely singeing the thick brown hair.

Van Torp rang and sent for water and absorbent cotton, and made a very neat dressing over which Lady Maud tied her big veil. Just as this was done Stemp appeared at the door.

"It's ready, sir, if you would like to come and see. I've not scratched him once, sir."

"All right." Van Torp turned to Lady Maud. "Do you feel faint? Lean on my arm."

But she would not, and she walked bravely, holding herself so straight that she looked much taller than he, though she felt as if she were going to execution.

A moment later she uttered a loud cry and clung to Van Torp's shoulder with both hands. But as for him, he said only two words.

"You hellhound!"

The man was not Boris Leven.

The eyes, the upper part of the face, the hair, even the flowing mustaches were his, but not the small retreating chin crossed by the sharp, thin scar of a sword-cut long healed.

"I know who you are," said Van Torp, surveying him gravely. "You're Long-legged Levi's brother, that disappeared before he did. I remember that scar."

"Let me off easy," said Long-legged Levi's brother. "I've not done you any harm."

"Beyond wounding Lady Maud, after trying to pass yourself off as her dead husband. No. I won't let you off. Boatswain, I want this man arrested, and we'll take him and all his belongings before the British consul in Messina in less than an hour. You just attend to that, will you? Somebody go and tell the captain."

"Aye, aye, sir."

The rest is soon told. A long inquiry followed, which led to the solution of the mystery and sent Count Yuryi Leven to Siberia, for he was Boris Leven's twin brother.

(To be Continued).

This Boiler is a Coal Saver

Why? Because it is a BOYNTON and has the BOYNTON square fire pot, which increases fire surface about 25% over other boilers of like diameter.

The BOYNTON "square pot" is the greatest improvement yet devised in heating systems. It is square at the corners, hence clears free of cinders and ash each time the grate is turned. That means a live fire, always, and plenty of draft. See your dealer about the

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

The most congenial role to which Viola Allen, America's distinguished emotional actress, has devoted her attention, is to be found in her newest play, "The White Sister," in which she will appear at the Plainfield Theatre on Friday night of this week, accompanied by James O'Neill, and the greatest supporting company ever organized including Minna Gale and Henry Stanford. In this romantic drama Miss Allen assumes the characterization of a nun in a convent in Rome. To those who are familiar with her exceptionally appealing emotional power, there is promise of a newer and broader conception of the brilliant acrtess' interpretations. "The White Sister" offers opportunity for acting of the highest order and yet the acting demanded is singularly popular in its appeal.

ARE MADE LAWS DESPITE FOES.

It was only by introducing a duplicate bill in the Senate, for one that mysteriously disappeared in the Assembly, that Senator Osborne was able early Saturday morning to circumvent efforts to prevent the enactment into law of a revision of the poor laws. As conditions developed, the very efforts of the opponents of the bill, who were acting under the direction of James R. Nugent, was to hasten the enactment of the bill into a law.

It became a law early when Governor Wilson signed it at the request of Mr. Osborne, who told the Executive of the mysterious circumstances that had been discovered. The bill is the one prepared by the Associated Charities.

Its provisions were embodied into Senate bill No. 31, introduced by Mr. Osborne. That measure was passed in the Senate and when it went to the Assembly, was referred to the Committee on Revision of Laws, of which Mr. Leveen is chairman.

Mr. Leveen stated that he reported the bill Friday with three others from his committee, but the report sheet nor the books of the Assembly clerk did not show it. Clerk Dugan denied that he had received it from Mr. Leveen.

Thus the situation was that the bill had been "lost." Mr. Leveen and a number of Newark men, whose power will be affected by the provisions of the bill, had been opposing it bitterly. With the bill in the possession of Mr. Leveen they did not think that it would ever be reported.

Mr. Osborne made special inquiries about it in an effort to have it reported and brought before the House for action, and in hunting up the record of the bill discovered that it had mysteriously disappeared.

Young Girls Death.

Miss Beatrice Eleanor Pittinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Pittinger, of Dunellen, died Saturday morning after a brief illness with pneumonia. She was in her fourteenth year. The funeral will be held at the parents' home on Mountainview terrace tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

TABLEAUX AND SONGS FOR CHARITY'S SAKE.

Arrangements are about complete for the entertainment to be given at the Plainfield High School auditorium, Friday night, under the auspices of In His Name Circle of The King's Daughters. The entertainment will comprise familiar songs and tableaux depicting well known young people in history and fiction.

Miss Elizabeth Fisher has charge of the tableaux, while Miss Vivian Edwards will be the soloist. The members of the circle who will take part are as follows: The Misses Gertrude Butler, Dorothy Tuttle, Leila Hedges, Monoca Sharretts, Marguerite Arnold, Carolyn Slauson, Eleanor Hatch, Pauline Gates, Dorothy Lyon, Gwendolyn Stanton, Dorothy Leal, Eleanor Brown, Caroline Ross, Edith Ogden, Ellen Hovey, Helen Strong, Edith Arnold, Martine Weeks, Dorothy Parvin, and Walter Harrington, John Zerega, Thomas Leggett, Thomas Jewett, Robert DeGraff.

NURSE PLACED ON TRIAL FOR INSUBORDINATION.

Charged with neglect of duty and insubordination, Miss Elizabeth Slaughter, formerly district nurse of Trenton, was placed on trial under the prosecution of the Civil Service law of New Jersey at the New Jersey State Home for Girls Saturday. John H. Backes appeared for Miss Slaughter. The trial was before the Board of Managers of the Home as a committee of the whole.

The charges against Miss Slaughter were preferred by Miss Elizabeth Mansell, matron of the institution. One of the complaints is that Miss Slaughter refused to teach the wards of the State in the Home certain matter, holding that this subject matter was beyond the comprehension of the girls of the Home and of such a nature that it should not be taught at all in a school.

CATTLE TUBERCULOSIS BOARD NOW ASSURED.

The House declined Friday night to pass the bill creating a State commission for the suppression of tuberculosis in cattle, in the form in which it had passed the Senate. Principal objection was taken to the fact that the bill provided that the appointments should be made by the president of the State Board of Agriculture instead of by the Governor. There was also a contention that the board should contain a medical man and a veterinarian.

When the Senate learned of the House's action on the bill, Senator Frelinghuysen introduced a resolution calling for a conference. The House quickly concurred.

Council Meets Tonight.

The Common Council will hold an adjourned meeting this evening to finish up some of the business of the month. The various committees will also have reports to make regarding some special matters, including stret work.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. MacDonald, who are sojourning at Atlantic City, are expected home tomorrow.

GOVERNOR IS BACK AND SIGNING BILLS

After a strenuous night with legislation and legislators, Governor Wilson arrived at the State House Saturday morning after an absence of less than six hours, and immediately proceeded with the consideration of bills which are before him, many of which must be signed today or filed without executive action.

The Governor will have until next Wednesday to pass up all of the bills received by him Saturday. Bills which do not have the executive's consideration by Wednesday must be filed with the Secretary of State and become laws. The Governor, however, does not expect to have to send any bills away from his desk without going over them.

DR. MAXIMILIAN GROSZMAN HONORED BY GERMAN SOCIETY.

At a recent meeting of the German Social-Scientific Society, of New York, Dr. Maximilian P. E. Groszman was singularly honored by the members of the society. Dr. Groszman had been abroad for several months and his return was the signal for a meeting in his honor. He was accompanied in his travels by Mrs. Groszman, who participated with him in the honors bestowed. Dr. Groszman was presented with a handsome porcelain chocolate urn by the members. Dr. Otto Glougau made the presentation speech. The rooms of the society were beautifully decorated for the occasion.

Dr. Groszman is the author of a new work entitled "The Career of the Child," which already has a wide circulation. The book is considered by experts on child culture one of the best books of its kind ever written.

BREAKERS OF SABBATH MUST SUFFER FOR SIN.

Rev. G. W. Bailey, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, in a sermon to his congregation yesterday took up the matter of Sunday observance from the viewpoint of the Christian. Mr. Bailey declared that the Sabbath was instituted by God and told why it was ordained that at least one day in the week should be kept sacred for rest from labor. The day was seanctified and should be sacredly observed according to the Scriptures, said Mr. Bailey.

In concluding his scriptural quotations Pastor Bailey said that there is every reason to believe that people who violate the orders of God by desecrating the Sabbath will be punishedin some way for their sin. He referred his hearers to Exodus 31:14.

PLAINFIELD TO HAVE A BUSY CIRCUS SEASON.

The route of the Barnum & Bailey circus, which left Madison Square Gar Saturday night for a week's stay in Brooklyn, has been shifted so that it will not appear in New Jersey this year as prearranged. This city, accordingly loses the "Greatest Show on Earth," but in its place is to have Forepaugh-Sells show on Friday, June 9, owned by the same people.

Plainfield is to receive more of the tented attractions this year than ever before, as in addition to the Forepaugh-Sells date, the Frank O. Robbins and Downey & Wheeler shows come early in the season. Ringling Brothers are booked for the latter part of July and the 101 Ranch Wild West will probably return again.

BOYS KILLED A ROBIN, ARRAIGNED IN COURT.

After keeping watch for a number of days, James Babbitt, a colored man, managed to capture two boys who, he alleged, had been shooting robins in a lot adjacent to his home. Babbitt produced a dead bird and the boys acknowledged having killed it "accidentally." Mathew Koons and Michael Brockle are the culprits.

The boys explained the shooting by telling Judge DeMeza that they were shooting at sparrosw and that when the shot was fired which killed the robin that bird just happened to get in the way of the bullet. They were using an air rifle within the city limits, which as against the law. The boys were lectured and promised to quit the practice.

Hotel Property Sold.

The Clifton House, one of the finest summer hostelries on the south shore of Long Island and located at Patchogue, was sold Saturday by the owner, William M. Jenkins, formerly of this city, to Louis Martin, of New York. Charles B. Clifton, of this city, was a part owner of the hotel for several years and many Plainfielders were guests during the seasons. The new owner conducts the Hotel Martin at Eleventh street and University place, and the Louis Martin restaurant at Broadway and Forty-second street, New York.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey at Trinity.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, occupied the pulpit at Trinity Reformed church, in exchange with the pastor, Rev. J. Y. Broek, yestrday morning. His theme was "He that Overcometh," taken from Rev. 3:21. It was a very earnest discourse, full of helpful thoughts and encouragement, especially to those who are often sorely tried and finally overcome their troubles.

LECTURE ON CHINA

Dr. H.D. Corbusier Gives Thrilling Narrative of the Boxer Uprising.

SUPERBLY ILLUSTRATED TALK.

Pictures Taken by the Physician—Acts of Bravery Related in Talk to Co. K At Its Armory.

Dr. Harold D. Corbusier gave his lecture on China last night before an audience made upof the men of Company K and a number of friends in the armory on West Front street. Pictures of thrilling scenes taken by the doctor during the Boxer troubles in 1900 and after the cessation of hostilities and exhibited on the screen by A. V. Searing, Jr., provided an evening of intense interest. It was just like taking a trip to the Celestial Empire under personally conducted auspices. From the entrance to the Pei Ho river to the hidden mysteries of the Forbidden City there was provided one of the most interesting and instructive illustrated talks ever given in this city.

Dr. Corbusier delivered the lecture in Morristown on Sunday evening at the school for boys, where it was enthusiastically received. No one who is not familiar with the history of the campaign conducted by the allied forces during the trying times before Pekin can have any conception of the splendid work done by Uncle Sam's troops. Few as they were they showed to the nations of the world what an American soldier can accomplish in an emergency. Scaling walls and intimidating the apparently scared people seemed to be but an ordinary effort for the men of the Fifteenth U. S. Infantry, the Sixth U. S. Calvary and the other troops hurried to the relief of the besieged people in the foreign legations.

The speaker told of the bravery of one Japanese who while setting off dynamite to blow up one of the principal gates to the city was himself destroyed. The boys of Company K could not refrain from cheering at the story of bravery Among the nationalities represented in the relief of the siege were Italy, Germany, England (including the Bengal Lanciers) and the loyal Chinese. But taken by and large the United States troops showed to decided advantage in every action and when it came to scaling walls and showing the way to out-maneuvre the Boxers General Chaffee and his aides had all the rest of the military men beaten to a frazzle.

While it is only ninety miles from TienTsin to Pekin the tortuous windings of the Pei Ho make the joruney one of five days' duration, but in spite of this obstacle our men managed to beat the others to it and were first on the ground and first to assure the besieged people within the confines of the fortresses of ultimate rescue.

Humor while not made to order among the Chinese was demonstrated when after sending for a cook who lived ninety miles away and who was ninety years old, finally arrived and instead of building a fire in the grate of the camp cook stove built it in the oven. "Billy and Billy's brother," who finally were selected to do the cooking for the camp made good and had many a laugh at their older and less ingenious compatriots.

Why so many Germans were killed in the assault upon the walls of Pekin was shown. Their metal helmets gave a chance for the Chinese sharpshooters to pick them off at long distance. The khaki uniforms of the American soldiers were a safeguard and gave them the advantage of being inconspicuous.

The lecture took up about an hour and a half and was thoroughly enjoyed by those present. Dr. Corbusier was introduced by Captain H. B. Kitchell.

Funeral of Henry Ellik.

The funeral of Henry Ellik, whose death occurred Saturday after a brief illness, was held this morning at his late home on Plainfied avenue. It was conducted by Rev. C. H. Schneegas, pastor of the German Reformed church, in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was made in Evergreen cemetery, the pall bearers being four fellow-employes at Frank Linke's establishment, Martin Schneiderbeck, Herman Fisher, Patrick Foley and William Burns.

Local Concern Changes Hands.

The Plainfield Cement Stone Company, which was owned and controlled by the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company, has changed hands. Edward Marshall Tilton, who was manager for the concern, having taken over the business. The company's plant is located in the East End of the city near the yards of the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company.

YOUNG MAN SAVES LITTLE FELLOW'S LIFE

Had it not been for the prompt action of Charles Sherwood, of East Seventh and Berckman street, this morning at 11 o'clock and the quick assistance rendered by Dr. G. T. Longbothum and J. Stanley Woolley, Lewis Young, Jr., four-year-old son of Lewis Young, of 716 East Seventh street, would have been burned to death.

Shortly before 11 o'clock this morning the little fellow attempted to rush through a brush fire near his own home, but his clothing caught fire and in a twinkling he was wrapped in flames. Mr. Sherwood who was in his yard across the street heard the screams of the child and rushed to his rescue, beating out the flames with his coat and hands. His act saved the lad's life.

Mr. Sherwood was severely burned about thte face and hands while the boy was badly burned about his limbs. The prompt response of the two doctors who applied emergency aid probably aided the work begun by Mr. Sherwood.

It was said this afternoon that the boy would recover.

COLORED TEMPLARS HOLD THEIR CONCLAVE

The Grand Conclave, Knights Templar, State of New Jersey, colored , was held here last night, with Cypress Commandery, No. 6, K. T., sixty representatives from various parts of the State being present. The session was given up almost entirely to business, during which these officers were elected for the coming year:

Right Eminent commander, B. G. Fitzgerald, Atlantic City; grand deputy commander, William B. Randolph, Plainfield; grand generalissimo, Arthur Venable, Plainfield; grand captain general, James Alston, Cape May; grand recorder, James C. Connett, Plainfield; grand treasurer, William J. Douglas, Plainfield. The other appointive officers will be announced later.

Following the business a banquet was served by a committee from Cypress Commandery. The semi-annual conclave will be held at Atlantic City, this summer, and the annual conclave will be held here one year hence.

MARKS IS ACQUITTED; ACCUSER CONVICTED

After a trial in which a dozen witnesses had been examined and which annoyed Judge William G. DeMeza because the variety of testimony contrary to actual facts, Harry Berlowitz, of East Third street, was convicted of assault on Robert Marks, colored, and a suspended sentence of a ten dollar fine hung over his head this morning.

The alleged assault was comitted on the morning of April 13 and among the witnesses to it were Councilman Ralph I. Tolles, William L. Smalley and a number of the Union Beef Company's employees. Berlowitz, who was defended by Samuel S. Swackhamer claimed, that the colored man had assaulted him. Marks declared that he had simply acted in self-defense in throwing a brick at Berlowitz. On the throwing of this missile and its result hung the story of the fracas, which has all been printed in The Daily Press.

Other witnesses called this morning included William Van Syckle, of East Third street; John J. Leahy, of Steadman place, and Charles Herring, of West Sixth street. The latter corroborated the testimony given on Thursday last by Mr. Smalley and after rehearsing the case from its beginning Judge DeMeza resolved on the above sentence. Before allowing Berlowitz to go the court administered a severe rebuke and it is likely that peace will reign next door to the beef house for some time to come.

Auto and Trolley Collide.

Chief T. O. Doane, in his Brush automobile, while turning from Fourth street into Watchung avenue at 4:30 o'clock, yesterday afternoon, just as an Arlington avenue car was turning from Watchung avenue into Fourth street, collided, but there was no damage worth speaking of and both the trolley and auto were able to proceed. The rear wheel of the auto struck the fender of the car.

Cancels Engagement.

Owing to the fact that William A. Brady has announced that Miss Grace George's season will close on April 29, the scheduled appearance of this talented actress here has been cancelled.

APPEAL FOR HOME FOR MT. ST. MARY'S

Mass Meeting in Interest of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp.

WORKERS ARE NOW NEEDED.

New Dormitory in Course of Construction—Splendid Institution to Be Opened for Season on Sunday, July 9.

Several hundred interested people attended the meeting in the First Baptist church lecture room last night, at which Miss Sara Curry, George L. Chapman and others told of the splendid work being done at the Missionary Day Nursery in New York and at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. Charles W. McCutchen presided.

George A. Chapman, chairman of the executive committee of the Home, gave an able report of the work accomplished during the past season, showing that upward of 2,000 mothers and children had been cared for and restored to health at the Home at an expenditure of but 78 cents a person. "Where," he asked, "could seventy-eight cents be spent to better advantage than right here?" Mr. Chapman also declared that some of those whose criticisms are included in those "higher up" would eventually come to look upon this great work as worthy of not only support but what sometimes counts for more, sympathy.

Rev. Dr. Henry, whose personal knowledge of the nursery work in New York enabled him to state positive facts, told of Miss Curry's indefatigable efforts among the poor mothers and children of the East Side in the big city. There was a tone of deep pathos and a feeling of admiration for the woman who has sacrificed her freedom in order to protect and lift up these who cannot help themselves.

Miss Curry spoke at length upon the work both in New York and at the Netherwod Home. She made it emphatically understood that it was not her efforts that made the work successful, but God's alone and for that reason it could not possibly fail. She spoke kindly of the splendid support she had received from the residents of this city and asked that this newspaper express her thanks for the many evidences of friendliness that had been extended to her. "Without your aid the good work would have been impossible," she said.

Through the munificent bequest of H. C. Hewitt, the grounds about the Netherwood Home have been much improved and continual improvements are being made. Adjoining the original site of the grounds a plot of seven and a half acres has been secured which will be converted into a park for the children. A lake helps out in making an ideal summer recreation park for both parents and children.

A new dormitory containing sixteen rooms fitted with baths and other conveniences is being built and when the Home opens with its first contingent of visitors on unday, July 9, those who come to the camp will find a distinctly improved place to that which was there last year. It is hoped that the interest of the people of this city will not relax during the coming summer. Anyone willing to do anything in the way of teaching the children, whether it be sewing, music or any other desirable thing would do well to communicate with J. D. Loizeaux, president of the local end of the enterprise. He would be glad to correspond with them on the matter.

These are the officers of the Fresh Air Home: President, J. D. Loizeaux; secretary, B. F. Hadley; treasurer, D. M. Runyon. The executive committee consists of George A. Chapman, P. F. Parker and J. D. Loizeaux.

A Surprise Party.

A surprise party was tendered Miss Catherine McCue, of 676 West Fourth street, Saturday afternoon, April 22. Games were played and refreshments served. Among those present were Anna Harrington, Catherine Connolly, Cecelia Fee, Margaret Diskin, Margaret Doyle, Catherine McCarthy, Mary Harrington, Mary Connolly and John O'Keeffe, Charles McCarthy, John Harrington, Edward Moore, Edward McCue, John McDonald and Thomas Connolly.

Men's Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue church will be held tonight. Henry J. Cochran will be the toastmaster and among the speakers will be Rev. Gilbert Reid, of the borough, who is home from China, where he has been a missionary for thirty years, and Rev. Samuel Carter, of this city, a retired clergyman. Owing to illness, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, the pastor, will not speak.

FOR MT. ST. MARY'S

Chamber of Commerce Plans a Big Benefit for Catholic College.

JUDGE ULRICH THE CHAIRMAN.

Entertainment to Be Given at Plainfield Theatre on Thursday, May 25—Fraternal Organizations to Participate.

The committee appointed by President George L. Babcock, of the Chamber of Commerce last month reported last night that they had been successful in bringing the fraternal organization of this city together with unanimity in the proposed benefit to be held to aid the Sisters of Mercy in rebuilding Mount St. Mary College.

All the organizations of the city have signified their intentions to aid in the project, they include the Foresters, Elks, Jr. O. U. A. M., Red Men, Moose, T.A.B. Society, Knights of Columbus, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Gesang and Turn Verein, Knights of Pythias, Fraternal Order of Eagles and others.

At the meeting last evening, Judge John Ulrich was chosen chairman and Counsellor Francis J. Blatz, secretary. Judge Ulrich made a short address in which he related the objects of the movement among the fraternal organizations. He said it was a three-fold movement involving the three distinct portions of our local benevolence and ought to be supported by the city at large.

All the representatives of the organizations present pledged their support and it goes without saying that the entertainment to be given in the Plainfield theatre on Thursday evening May 25, will surpass anything of its kind ever given in this city. Local talent will provide the amusement.

Theodore J. Shirley, Francis J. Blatz and David T. Kenney form the committee which has the matter of the entertainment in hand.

HOPE MINSTREL MEN GUEST AT A DINNER

The members of the Hope minstrel troupe, together with a few invited friends and all who had assisted in making the recent annual show a success, enjoyed a dinner and social time at the chapel last night. The affair took place in the William N. Runyon Association room and was participated in by sixty-five diners in all. They were seated about circular tables arranged in two rows with the association officers and guests at the head. Candleabra, cut flowers and shaded lights added to the attractiveness of the scene.

The dinner was a full course affair and was the generous gift of George H. Beiser, a worker at the chapel and staunch friend of the young men. Experienced chefs and waiters perpared and served the meal and nothing was left undone to make it a complete and unqualified success. Between courses, the principals in the troupe repeated their songs and the gathering joined in the choruses.

At the conclusion of the dinner fully an hour was spent in listening to brief addresses. President Ben Evans, of the association, presided as toastmaster and established a reputation by his witty introductions. The speakers included Rev. Frederick L. Greene, G. Herbert Condict, Howard MacWilliams, Clifford Braider, Thomas M. Muir, David B. Martin, G. L. Lindsey and James Penny. As Mr Penny concluded speaking he presented Mr. Beiser with a handsomely framed group picture of the minstrel troupe and Mr. Evans with a beautiful bunch of American Beauties, in behalf of the association. Both recipients responded fittingly.

Each attendant received a memento of the dinner in the form of a souvenir menu card and picture of the minstrels. It was voted one of the pleasantest affairs the association has yet enjoyed.

Proctor's Good Bill.

The vaudeville bill at Proctor's this week comprises Viola Hoyt and McDonald, in a clever sketch; J. Warren Keane & Co., in magic and palming, accompanied by Mrs. Kean on the piano; Tom Ripley, a real funny black-face monologuist and Perry Spiro & Co., presenting comedy sketch, "I Bid."

Miss Nelson's Funeral.

The funeral of Miss Sarah V. Nelson, whose death occurred at her home on Myrtle avenue, yesterday morning, will be held at the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Burial will be in the family plot in Evergreen cemetery.

NO ACTION TAKEN

Member of Council May Demand Report From the Water Commission.

IRRITATING PROCRASTINATION.

Private Company's Offer Not Made Public and No Steps Taken for Solution of the Problem.

The question as to what has become of the expected report from the Councilmanic Water commission report is now a topic of much discussion on the part of those who have interested themselves for and against municipal ownership of water works. That the commission is planning to recommend some action to the Council is the opinion of those who are in touch with the situation, but what it is cannot be learned.

There is a report in circulation that the Plainfield-Union Water Company has within the past month made a proposition to the commission to be submitted to the Council, but for some reason has been withheld. According to rumor this proposition suggests a short term contract, say five years, with the privilege of terminating the same upon a year's notice.

It is known that some of the Councilmen have favored and do favor a municipal plant either through the purchase of the present plant or in building an independent one. Others do not favor the proposition and believe the city should renew its contract with the Plainfield-Union Water Company, believing that the people's interest would be better conserved.

In view of the fact, however, that the water commission agitated the subject to such an extent by holding several public hearings and went to a great deal of expense in employing an expert engineer, citizens generally believe that a decision should be reached soon. No doubt the fact that the water company recently executed a $3,000,000 mortgage has caused a change of plans on the part of the water committee in its recommendations, but the recommendations of the committee are being awaited with interest.

One member of the Council said today that unless the report is presented within a reasonable time he will call for it on the floor of the open Council and request that the committee explain its action and what its purpose is regarding the matter. This Councilman said that he believed the people have a right to know what is being done and full publicity should be given the committee's action.

HE'S TOO ILL TO WORK BUT NOT TO GET DRUNK.

Tony Sandey, of Cottage place, had a very lame excuse this morning when he was arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court charged by his wife with drunkenness and abuse. He said, "Too mucha da sick ina da back, an' me no lika da jail, so me lay a down and stay ina da bed."

The court told Tony that it was necessary to provide for his family and that he could not do it if he kept up "hitting the booze.' His honor finally got the Italian to promise to keep sober for a year and let him go with a suspended sentence.

Sandey's four children, bright-eyed and apprehensive, clinging to their mother's skirts presented a pathetic sight to the spectators in the court room. Sandey's twelve-year-old daughter acted as interpreter always reluctantly, but told the story of how the prisoner had abused her mother and how it was they had nothing in the house to eat.

BONDSMAN SURRENDERS A MATERIAL WITNESS.

Frank Blumberg, a witness, who was held in $500 bonds as a material witness in the accident in which Frank Wood, of Westfield, was killed late last month, was released by his bondsman, Samuel Silverstein, this morning and will be held in custody to await the action of the grand jury in the case unless another bondsman comes to the front today.

Wood was killed by being struck by a trolley car near Grant avenue on West Front street early in the morning of March 8. His companion, Blumberg, who was trailing the wagon Wood was driving was the only witness of the accident excepting the motorman and conductor of the car. Wood's skull was fractured and he died shortly after being removed to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Miss Helen Adams, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. D. C. Adams, of Grove street, is spending the week at Craig Hall, Atlantic City.

DUNELLEN FAVORS A PLANT AT GREENBROOK

The Dunellen Board of Health and Board of Trade in joint session, yesterday, pased upon the report of Lewis T. Churchill, borough engineer, which appears to be at variance with that of the State Geological Survey recenely made. In the opinion of Mr. Churchill the report of the State geologist that the sewage disposal plant at Greenbrook would contaminate the Watchung WaterCompany's wells, is not based upon the facts in the case and in his view a protest should be made by the people of the borough against the State Board of Health's decision which forbids North Plainfield to locate its plant at Greenbrook.

Mr. Churchill declared that if the sewage beds were located west of the Watchung Water Company's plant, there would be no contamination, while the report of the State geologist was directly to the contrary.

A prominent citizen of North Plainfield in commenting on the action of Dunellen, said today, that in his opinion he thought it was unwise at this time.

WHY WAS THERE NO MEETING OF COUNCIL

An adjourned meeting of the Common Council was set for last evening when it was expected that action would be taken on Mayor G. W. V. Moy's appointment of Arthur Lovell as corporation counsel. That was the understanding when it was decided to adjourn to last night. No meeting was held, however, as only three members, Councilman W. W. Wilson, F. L. Holt and F. L. Montgomery, were present, with the city clerk, James T. MacMurray. After waiting until 8:30, the clerk adjourned the meeting.

It was the impression that sufficient number of members absented themselves from the meeting for the purpose of dodging a vote on the Mayor's appointment, pending the Legislative action of a measure which aims to give the Council the right of appointment. This is known as the Bradley bill and it was reported that Governor Wilson intended signing the message.

If this was the design of certain members of the Council they failed to let Councilmen Holt, Wilson and Montgomery in the secret. They expressed ignorance of the matter last night, in fact, Mr. Montgomery inquired the purpose for which the meeting was called, apparently having no knowledge on the subject.

RICE'S TENOR SOLOS PLEASE HIS AUDIENCE

The Y. M. C. A. auditorium has seldom held a larger or more enthusiastic audience than that which listened to Leon Rice, tenor, last night. Mr. Rice appeared once before and sang for a big audience who demanded his return. Last night's attendance was a tribute to the singer's splendid art. Time and again he was recalled and in each instance he was accorded a splendid reception.

There is no denying the fact that good singing is an attraction to the people of this city and in order to secure more of it, Mr. Rice has been requested to come again tonight and Mr. Rice has consented to sing this program beginning at 8:15. As usual no admission fee will be charged, but a silver collection will be taken.

Dedication, Franz; Love's Springtime, Hammond; Cupid's Wings, Hammond; The Parting Hour, Wright; Spring Again, Wright; To You, Hawley; I Love You So, Hawley; Dearest, Homer; The Bethrothal, Kursteiner; Of a' the Airst the Wind Can Blaw, Kursteiner; His Lullaby, Kurstenier; I Hear You Calling Me (By request), Marshall; The Rosary, Nevin; Mother o' Mine, Tours; The Holy City, Adams.

James Weston Ill.

James Weston, of Essex street, who has been seriously ill for the past week, was removed to Muhlenberg hospital yesterday afternoon for treatment. He is suffering from an organic trouble. Mr. Weston is one of the oldest employes at the Potter Press Works having been a machinist in its shop since it was first built.

First Anniversary Dance.

The first anniversary dance of the Pastime Social Club, formerly the Social Five, will be held in Sebring's Auditorium, this evening. The committee in charge comprise Edward F. Conshay, Monroe R. Nichols, Robert T. Skinner, John P. Connolly, Geo. E. Howe. Charles Suhr's orchestra will furnish the music.

FOR GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION

Expected That Plainfield Will Vote This Fall to Adopt Provisions of Act.

Senator Osborne's bill providing for a commission form of government in such municipalities as shall adopt the act having become a law, it is asserted that an election for that pupose will be held here. According to report there is a moyement on foot to have the election take place in the fall.

There appears to be little opposition to the adoption of the law. Among its advocates is Mayor Geo. W. V. Moy, who says that he considers the plan of government as outlined far preferable than the present scheme.

The bill contains these provisions:

The five commissioners shall be elected at the first election after the adoption of the act.

The commissioners must have been residents of the city for three years prior to the election.

The commissioners shall serve until the third Tuesday in April of the fourth year following their election.

Every fourth year on the third Tuesday in April there shall be a municipal election to choose five commissioners.

In case of a vacancy, within thirty days thereafter the commissioners shall elect his successor to fill the unexpired term.

When the commissioners' terms begin, the terms of the council or other governing body and those of all officials shall cease.

The commissioners shall constitute a board of commissioners every member having the right to vote at board meetings.

Three commissioners shall constitute a quorum to enact any legislation.

The commissioners shall elect one of their number to preside and he shall be known as 'mayor," but shall have no veto power.

The powers of the board of commissioners shall be the same as those of the mayor and council.

The powers shall be distributed as follows:

Department of public affairs.

Department of accounts and finance.

Department of public safety.

Department of streets and public property.

Department of parks and public property.

The board of commissioners shall determine the powers and duties of each department.

The board of commissioners shall assign the officers and employees to a given department or to more than one department.

The mayor shall be the director of public affairs.

The board shall designate the other commissioners to be heads of the several departments, respectively.

The board of commissioners shall create subordinate boards and shall appoint such officers as necessary to transact public business.

Any board created may be abolished and any employe appointed may be discharged by the board of commissioners.

The salaries of the commissioners in cities of from 20,000 to 40,000 population shall be $1,800 for the mayor and $1,500 each for the other commissioners.

The salaries of all employes shall be fixed by the board.

The mayor shall order meetings which shall be held at least once a week.

All meetings of the board shall be open to the public.

The mayor shall be president of the board, the director of the department of finance, vice-president, and in case of vacancy of the mayor's office the latter shall perform his duties.

Every measure appropriating money, or ordering street or sewer improvement, or authorizing any contract, or a right affecting any street or public place shall remain on file with the city clerk for two weeks prior to its adoption.

None of the foregoing rights shall be renewed or extended except by ordinance first published and then agreed to by at least four commissioners.

No officers or employee shall be interested in any contract, materials or services furnished the city.

No officer or employee shall receive any frank, free pass, free ticket, free service. Such prohibition shall not apply to firemen or policemen in uniform for free transportation.

No ordinance in raising the bond-

FIFTH SUNDAY CUTS UP JINKS

The fact that there are five Sundays in April caused a mixup among the church folk of Somerville Sunday, resulted in depriving one church of a minister and causing to be printed on the church bulletin a wrong date.

Rev. A. A. Pfanstiehl, pastor of the Second Reformed church, was scheduled to exchange pulpits with Rev. Dr. Vandermuelen, of New York City, on the last Sunday in April. Dr. Pfanstiehl, unmindful of the tricky Sunday, started out Sunday morning to fill his engagement in New York. His congregation waited around the church for an hour for the appearance of Dr. Vandermuelen and then went home.

Dr. Vandermuelen was also to have addressed the Bible fellowship of the Second Reformed church in the afternoon. There was another wait of an hour, and as Dr. Vandermuelen failed to turn up the gathering went home disappointed.

Mr. Pfanstiehl appeared in his pulpit at night and told his congregation that he had been through the most remarkable experience in the twenty-one years of his ministry. There had not only been a mix-up in dates, but also in railway connections, he said. When he arrived in Manhattan he had just ten minutes to reach by subway Dr. Vandermuelen's church. He was directed wrongly, he said, and at ten minutes after the church hour he found himself six miles from the edifice. He arrived at Dr. Vandermuelen's church forty-five minutes late, and was astonished to find Dr. Vandermuelen preaching to his own congregation.

There was a hurried interview between the ministers in the pulpit. Dr. Vandermuelen explained that it was his understanding that he was to preach in Somerville a week hence or on the last Sunday in April. The ministers after a hasty luncheon attempted to catch an afternoon train from New York in order that Dr. Vandermuelen might lecture before thte Bible Fellowship, but they missed the last train by one minute and Dr. Vandermuelen returned to his home.

In the First Baptist church a printed bulletin announced the program of the church for the first Sunday in May for "next Sunday."

Rev. Frederick J. Soule, pastor of the church, also made the error in reading the announcements from the pulpit.

There was a whispering among a few members of the congregation who had kept tabs on the calendar. Then an elder stepped to the pulpit and whispered to Mr. Soule, who corrected his mistake before the congregation.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"A Stubborn Cinderella," which has proveen one of the best entertainments of its kind produced in recent years, will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre Saturday next, matinee and night. That the Hough and Adams musical comedy will be one of the season's most successful bookings at this theatre can safely be anticipated. Few, if any comedies of like nature have won for their owners as great financial results as "A Stubborn Cinderella," and the wonder is that this city has not been blessed with more frequent visits of this splendid offering. In presenting "A Stubborn Cinderella" this season, Charles A. Goettler is said to have outclassed himself in the carefulness of its production. The costumes, scenery and effects are all new and elaborate. The cast, too, has received that astute manager's personal attention with the result that many notable artists are among the principals. The chorus is one of the many features, for, as is well known, an attractive, hard working and good singing ensemble is essential to the success of the comedy. George Marion staged the original and his work is carried out again with this season's company to the minutest detail.

HOUSE, AHEAD OF THE SENATE, FEELS PROUD.

Congress yesterday found itself in a peculiar situation. The House is congratulating itself on having passed expeditiously the campaign publicity, the direct election of Senators and the Canadian reciprocity bills, but the Senate thus far practically is unorganized, its committees not yet having been named. Because of this the upper branch of Congress was unprepared to go ahead with the program. The situation may be remedied today, when Chairman Gallinger, of the Committee on Committees, will bring in a list of the Republican members. It remains to be seen whether this list will satisfy the Progressive Republicans and permit of immediate action.

Having caught up with its work, the House program yesterday dealt with emergency bills, with a report late in the afternoon on the free list measure by Chairman Underwood, of the Ways and Means Committee.

A week or more of debate on the measure is anticipated, though its ultimate passage is not doubted.

Miss Helen H. Bogert, of East Sixth street, spent Sunday at the home of a dear friend, Mrs. G. S. Cook, Altamont place, Somerville.

SOMERVILLE.

Bridgewater Council, No. 1375, Ropal Arcanum, is making preparations for holding a banquet early in June, at which prominent speakers will be expected to make addresses.

Next Thursday evening Mrs. Wescott will hold her annual reception for the members of her dancing class. "The Ballet of Roses," will be given by a number of her pupils.

The R. B. A. Club, of this place, held its first annual banquet Saturday evening at the County House. A bountiful menu was served.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ramsden, of Raritan, have returned from a visit to their son, George Ramsden, and family, in New York city.

An invitation shirtwaist dance will be given in Neshanic Hall, Neshanic, Thursday evening, May 4.

Miss Dladys Kanouse, of Newark, is visiting Miss Viola Meyer, of First avenue, Raritan.

Miss Mamie Sullivan, of New York city, is visiting Miss Bessie Crollman, of this place.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

George Frentz and family, who have been making their home in Plainfield since their return from the west several months ago, have rented one of the Rose cottages on Farlee avenue, and will move in May 1.

Manager Joe Albert expects to have the material for the local ball team out for hard practice Saturday afternoon. The team opens the season May 6 with the Plainfield team.

Mrs. George McVoy, of Plainfield, intends to erect a double house on Front street near the garage. Ground will be broken for the cellar this week.

Miss MacGowan, of the corps of teachers of School No. 1, has returned from a week's visit with relatives in Pennsylvania.

George H. Johnston, of Westfield avenue, is able to be around again after an illness of several days with the grip.

Mrs. George Harper and daughter Margaret are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Hand, of Park avenue.

Philip Jahn, of Park avenue, has been detained at home for several days with a severe cold.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Thomas Loughlin, of Prospect avenue, received a broken leg and severe bruises at the Levering and Garrigues plant, yesterday morning. He is employed at the plant and while engaged in the removal of a heavy piece of iron, an air hoist broke, allowing the weight to fall against him. It was thought at first that he was fatally injured. He was removed to his home.

The St. John's church fair was brought to a successful close last night. All the saleable articles were disposed of and the various contests were decided. The one for the watch was the one in which interest centered and it was decided in favor of Joseph Morgan over Louis Wahl. While no exact figures can be given as yet it is believed the fair will net $2,000.

Owing to the fact that Junior Hall was engaged last night for the St. John's church fair, the regular meeting of the Court Dunellen, I. O. F., was not held last night. It will be held Friday night of this week instead. Several membership propositions are pending.

Miss Ellen Lane, of Belleville, was an over-Sunday guest at the home of her uncle, Theodore Voorhees, of Jackson avenue.

According to the canvas recently made by Marshal Wyhusky, there are 164 dogs owned by borough residents.

Earl Ising, has resigned his position with Walter G. Runyon and taken one with J. C. Dilts.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

William Norman, who has become interested in wireless telegraphy, has started to build a wireless station for his son Edward.

SPORTING EVENTS OF NOTE.

Thomas F. Curley, of Rockland, Mass., who calls himself the champion big eater of Massachusetts, has issued a challenge backed by $500, "to devour a larger quantity of eggs, oysters or lobsters at one sitting than any self-styled champion in the country." Curley's most recent feat included the eating of five dozen boiled eggs at a meal. On two other occasions he devoured thirteen one-pound lobsters and 100 oysters at a sitting.

Local option in boxing contests may be brought about in Illinois. The Carroll boxing bill, which legalizes six round bouts promoted by incorporated athletic clubs, which was defeated by the Senate last week, will be considered today. To overcome objections raised by the Senate leaders, Senator Carroll will offer an amendment to the bill which will leave it optional with the city councils whether boxing may be permitted. With such an amendment, friends of the bill says, it will have a fair chance of success.

Richard Frizell, all-round champion swimmer of the West, has accepted a position in New York and will henceforth make his home there. He is one of the best watermen in the country and will prove a strong accession to the ranks of the tank athletes of the city. He will probably affiliate with the New York Athletic Club.

Theodore Kiendl, captain of the champion Columbia University basketball team and star player on the baseball nine, is ill with appendicitis in New York and will have to undergo an operation, which will probably keep him out of athletics for a year.

A baseball team made up entirely of county secretaries of the Young Men's Christian Association will tour a number of Eastern cities in June, playing against local nines. The trip was planned by the New York State executive committee. There will be no admission fee to the ball games, the entire expenses being borne by the State executive committee. Every man on the team is an athlete and the State committee expects them to keep up a high average in their contests.

GOLF.

On Thursday the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association will hold an open one day tournament at the Baltusrol Golf Club. The association gives the gross and Mrs. Myra D. Paterson the net score prize for the handicap.

As entries do not close until tomorrow night for the spring tournament of the Atlantic City Country Club no more information may be obtained from Secretary Walter E. Edge than that the number will far exceed the sixteen needed as qualifiers for the six regular match play cups, the governors', the president's, Atlantic City, Northfield, Absecon and Chelsea, all titles repeated every year, although the cups each time become the absolute property of the winners. W. C. Fownes, Jr., and Charles Evans, Jr., said at Pinehurst that they would play, but if it is true that the latter is to sail on Saturday for the British championship he could not remain through the tournament. The championship is to be at Prestwick during the week of May 29 and Evans might stay over easily enough for Atlantic City, especially as he does not believe in a lingering, long drawn out study of a course.

Evans did not reach Brookline until the day before the last amateur championship and he gained the semi-final by a game as clever as though he had been living at the Country Club for a month. Harry Vardon always stipulated for one day's play at a course on his American trip and he used to say any real golfer did not need more than two rounds of a course to play his best over it. The latter assertion is not fully borne out by records, yet ten days or a week should be long enough for Evans to learn Prestwick and to give him time on the side for riding, motoring or aerial voyages if there are any biplanes handy.

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Stocks closed higher in New York yesterday.

Congress.—Senate: The appointments of William W. Rockhill to be Ambassador to Turkey; ex-Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., to be Ambassador to Russia, and Harry S. Boutell to be Minister to Switzerland were confirmed. House: The Democrats had a three hours' wrangle over clerical help for committees, and Representative Underwood then called up the Farmers' Free List bills which will be the subject of general debate today.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Lord's Supper will be celebrated at the First M. E. church on Sunday, May 7, with reception of members.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue church will meet for Bible study Friday evening. The studies will be in the Book of Job.

Beginning tomorrow evening and on successive Wednesday evenings for the present, W. D. Murray will give a series of Bible studies at the Crescent Avenue church.

The result of the pledge system at the Crescent Avenue church is gratifying. Up to the present time pledges amounting to $16,700 have been made, thus assuring already for the coming year more than the church has had fefore.

Miss Hazel Hatfield, contralto, of the First Baptist church, who recently resigned, will sing at the services next Sunday for the last time at this church. Her successor will make her first appearance Sunday, May 7. There will be no other changes in the choir.

GOV'T BY COMMISSION

ed indebtedness in excess of ten per cent of the assessed valuation of property shall be valid unless first submitted to and approved by the voters at a special election.

All officers and employees shall be chosen by the merit system only not by party affiliation.

Every elective office shall publish in a local newspaper within ten days after qualifying his campaign expenses and the sources thereof.

The board of commissioners shall publish every month the receipts and expenses and the proceedings of the preceding month. An annual statement shall be published likewise.

There shall be a primary election for such commissioners on the fourth Tuesday following the adoption of this act and on the second Tuesday in March of the fourth year.

The ten candidates receiving the highest number of votes at the primary shall be the only ten candidates at the election for commissioners.

An elective officer may be removed at any time by the electors qualified to vote for his successor. Twenty-five per cent. of the voters must sign petition for such election naming the cause therefor.

Any proposed ordinance shall be submitted to the board signed by twenty-five per cent, of the total voters and the board shall pass such ordinance within twenty days or shall order a special election. Any number of ordinances may be voted upon at the same election.

No ordinance, except one for immediate protection or preservation, shall go into effect for ten days after its passage and if in the meanwhile twenty-five per cent. of the voters shall object to it, the board must reconsider and if it fails to defeat the measure, it shall be submitted to the voters.

This act shall go into effect when approved by the majority of the voters at an election and such election shall be called on the petition of twenty-per cent. of the voters.

BOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD REVISES TEACHERS' LIST.

The borough Board of Education, at its regular monthly meeting last night, made a thorough revision of the teachers' salaries list. Increases were granted in a number of instances while a number of changes were made in the corps because of resignations.

In the regular order of business, E. A. Edgar and T. E. Currin, Jr., were appointed as a committee to complete arrangements for the annual commencement exercises of the High School. Bills to the amount of $3,500 were ordered paid.

Senator Martine Will Not Attend.

United States Senator James E. Martine will not be able to attend the fair and supper to be given at Jersey City, tonight, under the auspices of the Jr. O. U. A. M., of that place. He has informed the committee to that effect and expressed his regrets. Senator Martine will, however, go to Phillipsburg, Thursday and be the principle speaker at the annual banquet of the Board of Trade of that city.

Mr. Cutting's New Position.

Elmer D. Cutting, who has been connected with the F. L. C. Martin Auto Company for the past two years, has resigned his position to become traveling representative for the Craftsmen's Art Company, of Plainfield. He will enter upon his new duties at once. Mr. Cutting very capably handled the Hup output for the Martin concern and his many friends bespeak success for him in his latest venture.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 4

The Pressers and Finishers

Those who have read our Dry Cleaning Talks are aware by this time that there is something to Dry Cleaning.

After the garments have been properly dusted and passed through their proper bath, properly dried, spotted, etc., they reach the Finishing Department.

It is the duty of this Department to prepare the work for return, also largely to inspect, proving the previous work.

Our Finishing Department is our pride and we know it is efficient. Our ever increasing trade confirms this fact. Send your next work to us.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. H. W. Templin, local milk dealer, wishes to thank through the columns of this paper Dr. Watts and also those who helped to stop his horse which ran away from the driver on Monday due to careless tying. As it being in one of the business streets of the city more serious damage may have resulted had it not been for Mr. Watts and the bystanders.

CARD OF THANKS.

ACKERMAN MADE IDEAL PRESIDING OFFICER

Genuine regret is felt among the State Senators, and in fact, by nearly everybody at the State House, that Ernest R. Ackerman, State Senator from Union, who has been president of the Senate, will retire to private life. While acting as president of the Senate he has made an exceptionally fine record. He has been an exceptionally good paliamentarian, a good disciplinarian, and he lived up to the minutest requirements of his position.

Never before, in the history of the Senate, has that body been called to order with such promptness. To Mr. Ackerman "two thirty" actually meant that hour, if he were the only Senator present. Promptly at the time named the President was invariably on hand to rap for order, and if there was no quorum present it was never due to any negligence on his part.

At any time while the Senate was in session, if it became apparent that there was no quorum present Mr. Ackerman would instantly direct the sergeant-at-arms to hunt up the absentees after making the announcement that the Senate would be at rest for a few minutes. He would not permit any irregularity of any kind, during his incumbency of the office of president. Yet, no man was more particular about the rights of colleagues, in the matter of all of the courtesies that any member had a right to expect, than was President Ackerman.

It was no uncommon sight to see some Senator rebuked, in a mild form, for interrupting another colleague who was speaking, or, who had the floor at that time. Mr. Ackerman always did it in such a nice way that the offender could not get angry, if he wished to do so.

No smoking was permitted in the galleries, while Senator Ackerman was in the chair. Occasionally some visitor, thinking it was all right to enjoy a smoke, inasmuch as some of the Senators were smoking, would be touched upon the shoulder by an attendant, and reminded that the President of the Senate did not permit any smoking. Naturally, a smoker who was obliged to desist after a warning of this kind, would look over the gallery rather enviously to notice Senator Silzer, of Middlesex, or Senator Low, of Ocean, puffing industriously upon a Havana.

ROYAL Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

Royal Baking Powder is made from pure grape cream of tartar, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is more economical at its price than any other leavening agent, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.

Mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food. In England, France, Germany and some sections of the United States their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a dangerous mineral acid, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

The label of alum baking powders must show the ingredients.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

A number of the friends of Judge Curtis T. Baker have arranged to tender him a banquet in Wildwood on May 15.

A country club has been organized at Stone Harbor, with twenty charter members. Former Governor Stokes is vice-president.

Bitten on the right arm by a dog, Lewis Mather, eleven years old, of 1029 Pine street, Camden, had the wound cauterized at the Homeopathic Hospital Sunday.

John O'Connelly, of Phenixville, Pa., was found dead in bed Sunday, at 37 West Thirty-ninth street, Bayonne. He is believed accidentally to have turned on the gas.

The Trenton S. P. C. A. has called a meeting for today to reorganize. New officers will be elected, and a crusade will be started to prevent cruelty to dogs and horses especially, and to provide for cats abandoned by their owners in summer.

Fittingly to celebrate the winning of nearly a dozen blue ribbon events at the Atlantic City Horse Show, which closed Saturday night, Mr. and Mrs. Edward McLean, of Washington, D. C., purchased a $5,000 Persian silk rug in a round of the Boardwalk shops Saturday night.

Under the Geran law, the number of voting precincts in Atlantic City will be increased from twenty-six to forty-three, and City Clerk Donnelly and his subordinates are already engaged in the work of redistricting the city. At the meeting of the council last night an ordinance setting forth the new election districts was introduced in outline, so that the bill may be passed upon at the first meeting in May.

The Bayonne Board of Trade will hold a dinner in Meister's Casino, Thursday evening. Governor Wilson will be unable to attend, but is expected to send a letter. The speakers will include Senator Martine, Congressman Kinkead, Arthur Brisbane, George Cromwell, President of Richmond; Mayor Cain, Mayor Wittpenn, of Jersey City; C. H. K. Halsey, president of the Elizabeth Board of Trade, and the Revs. Theodore F. Hayles and Peter E. Reilly.

John Kanthitch, of 50 Essex street, Jersey City, reported to the police that he was held up at Greene and Essex streets, early yesterday morning, and robbed of $150 which he had in a roll of bills in one of his trousers pockets. On his complaint later on Frank Gazenski, twenty-six years old, of 108 Essex street, and Patrick Gavin, thirty years old, of 214 Warren street, were arrested by Patrolman Zellinsky, at 103 Greene street. They were charged with robbery.

The most successful meeting of the Cape May Teachers' Association ever held occurred Saturday at the courthouse. The annual banquet was held the previous evening and Rev. Madison Peters, of New York, lectured upon, "How to Do Things," to a large audience. He delivered a second lecture upon "The Part of the Jew in the Making of America," Saturday morning. A. D. Sorenson, of Philadelphia; President Powell G. Fithian, of the State Teachers' Association, and Treasurer H. J. Neal, of the same organization, made addresses.

A vivid dream, so realistic that the man who experienced it thought it had really happened, caused Police Captain Dettmar and Detecitve John Clancy much work in Trenton, Sunday. Paul Oberty, an employe of the Home Rubber Company, told members of the firm of a horrible murder in a Centre street saloon. He said a man came up from the cellar holding a butcher-knife dripping with blood. The man then went into the cellar again and came up with a box in which was the body of a red-headed girl. After the authorities had run down every clue without success they closely questioned Oberty and learned that it was just a dream.

McCLELLAN TO OCCUPY NEW CHAIR AT PRINCETON.

Formal expression of his willingness to accept the chair of public affairs at Princeton University was cabled by George B. McClellan, Saturday, to the trustees of the university. Friends of Mr. McClellan have raised $50,000 endowment and tendered it to the institution on condition that Mr. McClellan, the former Mayor of New York, be the first incumbent of the chair. Mr. McClellan, at present is in Rome. He has been abroad some time for the purpose of study in connection with a sequel he is writing to his work, "The Oligarchy of Venice."

In his cable, Mr. McClellan states that he will be back in this country about September 1 ready to begin work. Meantime he will work out the details of the course, the features of which will be politics and municipal government.

The endowment fund was raised by James J. Martin and Herman A. Metz, who were city chamberlain and comptroller, respectively, during Mr. McClellan's administration as Mayor of New York. It is understood that J. Pierpont Morgan promised Mr. Martin that after all that could be collected elsewhere had been secured he would make up any balance necessary to provide the $50,000. Mr. Morgan gave, it is said, about $12,000.

The trustees of the university, it is said, received many letters from Leonard Opdyke, a Harvard man and a lawyer, who protested against the appointment of Mr. McClellan. This, it is understood, was the only opposition manifested. Mr. Opdyke recently led an unsuccessful effort to depose Colonel Wagstaff as head of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

It is understood that Mr. McClellan will retain his appointment as lecturer under the Stafford-Little foundation. This was established for Grover Cleveland and at Mr. Cleveland's death Mr. McClellan was invited to deliver the four lectures at Princeton provided for under the terms of the foundation. The income of the foundation is $500. Mr. McClellan was graduated from Princeton in 1886.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

Selected list of the public library's books for the guidance of parents in the moral and religious training of children (boys and girls) in the home.

Copies of this list were distributed at the last lecture given by the Rev. F. K. Mathiews, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary Y. M. C. A. Committee on Moral and Religious Training of Boys in the Home.

Child Study—Fireside child-study. Patterson DuBois, 1903. Education of the child, Ellen Key, 1909. "A plea for natural education, which is defined as 'the system of allowing nature quietly and slowly to help itself taking care only that the surrounding conditions help the work of nature'".

Developement of the child, Nathan Oppenheim, 1899. "A remarkable book; especially good in dicsussing the relation of physical growth to moral education. Chapter VI deals with the place of religion in the development of the child."

Books on the Boy—a. Popular Treatment. Winning the boy, with an introduction by Judge Ben. B. Lindsey, Lilburn Merrill, 1908. Boyhood: A plea for continuity in education, Ennis Richmond, 1901. Your boy; his nature and nurture, George A. Dickinson, 1910.

b. The boy interpreted from the modern Viewpoint. First year of responsibility, Mapnard Butler, 1904. Boy problem, William Byron Forbush, 1907. "An enthusiastic book embodying the results of practical experience in religious work with young boys."

Boy life and self-government, Geo. Walter Fiske, 1910. The most popular study of the boy yet published.

Studies of the Boy and Girl.—Growth and education, John Mason Tyler, 1907. A study of the relation of physical growth to mental and moral development.

Youth, G. Stanley Hall, 1907. A popular study of adolescence by the one most competent to write upon the subject.

Education in religion and morals George Albert Coe, 1909.

Sex Hygiene—a. Books to be read to children. Song of life, Margaret Warner Norley, 1896. "Elementary instruction in sex and parenthood through lessons from nature. Delicately done and, within its rigid limits, as excellent as anything available."

Life and love, Margaret Warner Morley, 1899. "Like 'A song of life," but for somewhat more advanced pupils. At once frank and delicate in teaching sex through nature as culminating in human life."

b. Books to be read by parents. Child confidence rewarded and teaching truth, Mary Wood Allen, 1892. From youth into manhood, Winfield Scott Hall, 1910.

Books on "Occupation," showing the educational (moral) value of the things boys enjoy.

a. Play. Education by plays and games, George E. Johnson, 1907. Games for the playground, home, school and gymnasium, Jessie H. Bancroft, 1909.

b. Manual Training. Elementary woodworking, Edwin W. Foster, 1903. Box furniture; how to make useful articles for the home, Louis Brigham, 1910.

c. Crafts. Art crafts for beginners, Frank G. Sanford, 1904. Boy Craftsman, A Neely Hall, 1905.

d. Gardening. Children's Gardens for Pleasure, Health and Education, H. G. Parsons, 1910. When Mother Lets us Garden, Frances Duncan, 1909.

e. Nature Study. Nature Study and Life, Clifton F. Hodge, 1902. Field and Forest Handy Book, Daniel Carter Beard, 1906.

f. A Mother's list of books for Children, Gertrude W. Arnold, 1909. Ethics for Children, Mrs. Ella Lyman Cabot, 1910. "The purpose of this book is to suggest the best available ethical instances for every year from six to fourteen." Under the elemental virtues (generosity, gratitude, cleanliness, kindness, courtesy, good deeds, self-control, courage, perseverance, obedience, faithfulness) Mrs. Cabot has grouped the best stories from the literature of childhood, biography, history, current narrative, etc.

g. Sunday Occupations. Pleasant Sunday Afternoons, Symporium, 1909. Practical Plans Suggested by Mothers. Happy Hours for the Boys and Girls, Daniel Elwood Lewis, 1909. Descriptive scenes of Old and New Testament times and also of Palestine by means of steregraphs and the sterescope. The boxes of views, with descriptive book and sterescope are charged as a book on a Library card and may be kept for seven days (one week).

LOGICAL ECZEMA REMEDY MILD, SOOTHING WASH.

Although many different kinds of remedies have been tried for the cure of Eczema and other skin diseases, it has been proven by years of tests and thousands of cases that the only possible cure is in the form of a liquid. This is a mild, soothing, healing wash made of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine, and a few other ingredients, compounded so carefully that each one has its proper effect.

This simple compound is now made up in the D. D. D. Prescription—so harmless that it will clear the blotchy face or wash away the pimples as readily as it will stop that awful itch and cure the worst case of Eczema.

Try D. D. D. It is wonderful what it will do for any kind of skin trouble. No matter what it is—D. D. D. will prove to you that you can be cured. The very first drops will give you instant relief.

Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paint is always uniform in quality—one can as like another as the proverbial two peas in a pod. It is made from formulas that have taken years of experimenting and experience to perfect. It isn't the result of haphazard guess, but rather than that, of pains-taking, ceaseless study, with perfection as the goal,

Don't waste time on home-made paint with its varying goodness. It is more expensive; isn't nearly so satisfactory; wastes a lot of time and can't possibly match the quality of Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paint.

If you have made up your mind to use prepared paint, be sure you don't buy the sort that's merely cheap per gallon—buy Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paint—the paint that "covers" best; the paint that lasts; the paint that is made to suit the climatic conditions of your locality. Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paint is "made up to a standard, not down to a price."

There is a lot to know about paints. We should be glad to enlighten you and tell you why Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paints are better than others.

KNIFING AN ERMINE.

Cold Trick That Traps the Shy Little Fur Prize.

You are doubtless aware that the ermine of which your muff is made has been the emblem of royalty almost since royalty began, in Russia, until very recent years, its use being forbidden to those not of noble birth. But I wonder if you are likewise aware that it is brother, or at least first cousin, to the weasel. Ermine, as a matter of fact, is nothing more than the weasel or common stoat in its northern coat, for, like other arctic and subarctic animals, the weasel turns white in winter in order that it may be as inconspicuous as possible in its environment of ice and snow. Yet so abnormally keen of sight are the Siberian trappers that they can distinguish at almost incredible distances the little black tip of the ermine's tail as it whisks across the dazzling plains.

It is very shy, is the ermine, and special snares must be devised by the trapper to avoid injuring the delicate skin. Even the smallest of the steel traps are too heavy for such tiny animals as these, and here it is that the trapper's fertility of resource is most strikingly displayed. Smearing a little grease on his hunting knife, he lays it across the succession of dots and dashes which show that an ermine has passed that way. Along comes the tiny white form on its erratic course again. The grease appeals to it, and it begins to lick the knife blade, which in those far northern lands, where the mercury drops to 20, 30, 40 degrees below zero, is inconceivably cold. Did you never as a child on a winter's morning put your tongue to some piece of metal only to find that it did not easily come away? So it is then with the ermine, whose tiny red tongue is instantly frozen to the steel as though with glue. The knife being too heavy for the little animal to carry off, it can only wait until the trapper comes upon his rounds, and you, my lady, have a muff of snowy unmarred skins.—E. A. Powell, F. R. G. S., in Everybody's.

QUEER STREET NAMES.

One Feature In Which Brussels Outdoes London or Paris.

There are many bewildering street names in European cities, and of these London presents a bewildering variety. Bermondsey possesses a Pickle Herring street. Near Gray's inn there is to be found a Cold Bath square. Most of the Nightingale lanes and Love lanes are hidden, ironically enough, in the slums of the east end of the British capital.

In Brussels some of the street names are really bizarre. The Short Street of the Long Chariot, the Street of the Red Haired Women and the Street of Sorrows are remarkable enough to catch the least observant eye. The Street of the One Person is, as one might guess, an extremely narrow one. But the cream of the Brussels street name surely belongs to the Street of the Uncracked Silver Cocoanut. This in the original appears as one ponderous word of thirty-six letters.

The 7,000 inhabitants of the Rue des Mauvais Garcons signed a petition praying that the name of the street be changed. They contended that the denomination of the thoroughfare in which they reside produces a bad impression on those to whom they are obliged to give their address.

This Street of the Bad Boys was, it appears, so named in the sixteenth century because of the noisy character of its inhabitants. But now it needs no such designation, those who reside there being for the most part peaceful and respectable citizens.

Among the peculiar street names in Paris may be mentioned the Street of the Little Windows, the Street of the Mule's Foot, the Street of the Holy Fathers, the Street of the Daughters of Calvary, the Street of the Dry Tree, the Street of the Empty Pocket and the Boulevard of the Good News.—Harper's Weekly.

Booksellers' English.

Booksellers' English is sometimes a peculiar product. In a recent catalogue the author of a work under the heading of "Mystical Theology" is referred to in a footnote as "next to Ignatius Loyola, perhaps the greatest soul sexton that ever handled shovel." The simile is startling and not quite intelligible to the lay understanding. But it is in reference to a volume of church music that this bookseller really lets himself go, "Religious harmony must be moving, but noble withal; grave, solemn, seraphic, fit for a martyr to play and an angel to hear."—London Chronicle.

The Cornetist's Teeth.

"Do you know the great dread of the cornetist?" said a cornet virtuoso. "I'll tell you, son—the loss of his teeth. Worst thing that could happen to him. It means the end of his playing. No man can play the cornet with false teeth. When his own cuspids and canines are gone he loses his embouchure."—New York Press.

Discouragement.

"So you have quit laughing at your wife's hats?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Growcher. "The funnier they seem to me the more convinced she is that they must be correct in style."—Washington Star.

Psychology of the Crowd.

"What makes the crowd gather so over there?"

"Oh, vulgar curiosity, I suppose. Let's go over."—Harvard Lampoon.

Waste not fresh tears over old griefs.—Euripides.

THE CURIOUS TADPOLE.

Maybe He Turns Into a Frog and Then Maybe He Doesn't.

If a tadpole cannot get to the top of the water when it is at the time of life when it is breathing by means of its gills, like a fish, it will not become a frog. It will then always be a tadpole.

Keep a tadpole in cold water and in the dark or away from the light and it will be years getting to be a frog. Left to the course of nature, says Browning's Magazine, the tadpole becomes a frog in from six to eight weeks, although it will have been two years arriving at that chance to change into the mature frog.

The tadpole's mouth is so tiny that it would be difficult to insert a pinhead into it, yet it has horny jaws and a sharp, biting beak, with three rows of teeth on the upper jaw. A hood grows down and incloses the gills on the right side, leaving them open like a spout on the left side.

At this stage of its transformation the tadpole breathes like a fish, taking water through the gills into the mouth and spouting it out on the left side. Its tail is what the tadpole feeds on by absorption of the white corpuscles of the blood during the molting and mouthing epoch in its life, when it is fasting. When it is ready to eat again the tail and the horny beak are gone, the wide mouth of the mature frog having taken the place of the latter.

There are forty species of frogs, only one of which is in South America. Australia has no frogs. Of all those forty species only one is edible—the Rana esculenta—and nowhere is this one more plentiful than in America, although that eminent naturalist St. George Mivart declares that the edible frog is unknown in America.

A frog that is common in France will mew like a cat if its thigh is squeezed and emit the odor of garlic. For this it has to go through life bearing the name of Pelobates fuscus. Most species of frogs will not take anything in the way of food that is not a live, moving thing or something with the semblance of life and will starve to death among a million creatures if none obliges the frog by moving.

WHIM OF AN ARTIST.

Turner and His Great Picture, "The Building of Carthage."

When Turner exhibited his great picture, "The Building of Carthage," he was disappointed because it had not been sold at once at the private view and angry with the press for criticising it severely. Sir Robert Peel called upon him.

"Mr. Turner," said he, "I admire your 'Carthage' so much that I want to buy it. I am told you want 500 guineas for it."

"Yes," said Turner; "it was 500 guineas, but today it's 600."

"Well," said Sir Robert, "I did not come prepared to give 600, and I must think it over. At the same time it seems to me that the change is an extraordinary piece of business on your part."

"Do as you please," said Turner. "Do as you please."

After a few days Sir Robert called again upon the great painter. "Mr. Turner," he began, "although I thought it a very extraordinary thing for you to raise your price, I shall be proud to buy that picture, and I am prepared to give you the 600 guineas."

"Ah!" said Turner. "It was 600 guineas, but today it's 700."

Sir Robert grew angry, and Turner laughed. "I was only in fun," he said. "I don't intend to sell the picture at all. It shall be my winding sheet."

For years he kept it in his cellar, Then it was brought up and hung in his gallery, where it remained as long as he lived. When he died he left it to the nation.

Changing a Name.

The brother of Mme. de Pompadour had at first been created Marquis de Vandieres, a somewhat unfortunate title for a man of such new nobility, for he soon discovered to his profound annoyance that his enemies would persist in calling him the Marquis d'Avant Hier (the Marquis of the Day Before Yesterday).

Mme. de Pompadour, naturally sensitive in such matters, brought the affair before the king and, as a title more or less was a small matter to grant the lady who grasped so much, after due forms her brother became the Marquis de Marigny.—From "Mme. Gaffrin."

Tolstoy Hated Doctors.

"The late Count Tolstoy loathed physicians," said at a dinner in Washington a Russian diplomat.

"You remember how Tolstoy ridiculed physicians in 'War and Peace?' Well, I heard him ridicule three of them to their faces over a vegetarian dinner at Yasnaya Polyana.

"'Physicians,' he said bitterly, looking up from a plate of lentils, 'may be divided into two classes—the radicals, who kill you, and the conservatives, who let you die.'"

Mental Arithmetic.

"Is your young man gittin' a sal'ry, Melia?"

"Sure he is. An' what's mo', de boss tol' William he's gwine to double it."

"Dat's fine! How much is he gittin' now?"

"I dunno what he's gittin' now, but I speck it's somefin' like half what he's gwineter git."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Just a Precaution.

"So you are attending cooking school?" says the friend. "Are you going to do your own work?"

"No. I want to be able to teach my husband how to prepare the meals in an emergency."—Judge.

THE Diva's Ruby

BY

F. MARION CRAWFORD

Illustrations by A. Weil, author of "Saracinesca," "Arethusa," etc., etc.

Copyright, 1907, by F. Marion Crawford.

The truth turned out to be that there had been three brothers, the youngest being Ivan, and they had all entered the same Cossack regiment, and had served in the Caucasus, where most officers learn the Tartar language, which is spoken by all the different tribes. It will be simpler to designate them by the English equivalents for their names.

Boris behaved himself tolerably well in the army, but both his brothers, John and George, who was his twin, were broken for cheating at cards, and emigrated to America. So long as they all wore their beards as officers of Cossack regiments usually do, they were very much alike. They were all educated men of refined tastes, and particularly fond of music.

When his two brothers were cashiered, Boris resigned, entered the diplomatic service, married Lady Maud Foxwell, and was killed by a bomb in St. Petersburg.

John and George separated in America when they were tired of punching cattle.

John was something of a naturalist and was by far the most gifted of the three as well as the most daring. He gravitated to China and at last to Mongolia, wandering alone in search of plants and minerals, and it was to him that Baraka showed the ruby mine. He got back to civilization with his treasure and took it to Petersburg unmolested.

There he found George earning a poor living in an obscure position in the public service, his conduct in the army having been condoned or overlooked. John, who was the incarnation of selfishness, would do nothing for him. George, exasperated by him, and half starved, murdered him in such a way that he was supposed to have died by an accident, took possession of his hoard of unsold rubies, and wrote to his twin brother to come and share the fortune John had left them.

George and Boris had been in constant correspondence, and had even helped each other with money from time to time. Some weeks elapsed after Boris' return to St. Petersburg before his death, and during that time he told George, who knew London well and had, moreover, helped him in his attempt to get a divorce, a vast number of details about his married life and his wife's behavior, her character and tastes. Then Boris was killed in the street, and George left the country and changed his name, with the vague idea that his own was not a very creditable one and that if he kept it he might be troubled by his brother Boris' numerous creditors. He began life over again as Kralinsky.

He had not entertained the least intention of passing himself for Boris and claiming Lady Maud as his wife till he met her, and her beauty made him lose his head completely when he saw that she took him for her husband. He would have been found out inevitably sooner or later, but Van Torp's vigorous action shortened Lady Maud's torments.

George was tried, and Russian justice awoke, possibly under pressure from England. The family history of the Levens was exhumed and dissected before the courts. The creditors of Boris Leven appeared in legions and claimed that in proper course he should have inherited the rubies from his murdered brother, and would then have been able to pay his debts. The court thought so too, and ordered the confiscated treasure to be sold.

But since it had been Boris', the law was obliged to declare that the residue of the money, after paying the debts, was the property of Countess Leven, Boris' widow.

Lady Maud thus found herself in possession of a considerable fortune, for she accepted the inheritance when she was assured that it would go to the Russian crown if she refused it.

The wealth Lady Maud thus commands enables her to carry much further than formerly the peculiar form of charity which she believes to be her own invention, if it may be properly called charity at all, and which consists in making it worth while and agreeable to certain unfortunate people to live decent lives in quiet corners without starving, instead of calling to them to come out from behind the virtue-curtain and be reformed in public. It is a very expensive charity, however, and very hard to exercise, and will never be popular; for the popular charities are those that cost least and are no trouble.

Mme. Konstantinos Logotheti is learning French and English on the Bosphorus with her husband, and will make a sensation when he brings her to London and Paris. On the day of his marriage in Constantinople Logotheti received a letter from Lady Maud telling him how sorry she was that she had not believed him that day on the yacht at Sealetta, and saying that she hoped to meet his wife soon. It was an honest apology from an honest woman.

He received a letter a few days later from Margaret, and on the same day a magnificently printed and recklessly illustrated booklet reached him, forwarded from Paris. The letter was from Margaret to tell him that she also took back what she had thought about Baraka and hoped to see him and her before long. She said she was glad, on the whole, that he had acted like a lunatic, because it was likely that they would both be happier. She herself, she said, was going to be married to Mr. Van Torp at St. George's, Hanover square, before sailing for New York, where she was going to sing at the opera after Christmas. If he should be in town then she hoped he would come and bring his wife.

The booklet was an announcement, interleaved with fine etchings, to the effect that "The Mme. da Cordova and Rufus Van Torp Company" would open their new opera house in Fifth avenue less than two years hence with a grand Wagner festival, to last two months, and to include the performance of "Parsifal" with entirely new scenery, and the greatest living artists, whose names were given.

Mr. Van Torp had told the diva that he would like her to choose a wedding present which she really wanted, adding that he had a few things for her already. He produced some of them, but some were on paper. Among the latter was a house in Wandering Alone In Search of Plants and Minerals.

New York, overlooking the park and copied exactly from her own in London, the English architect having been sent to New York himself to build it. Two small items were two luxurious private cars of entirely different patterns, one for America and one for Europe, which she was always to use when she traveled, professionally or otherwise. He said he did not give her the Lancashire Lass because it wasn't quite new"—having been about ten months in the water—but he had his own reasons, one of which was that the yacht represented a sentiment to him, and was what he would have called a "souviner." But if she could think of anything else she fancied, "now was the time."

She said that there was only one thing she should really like, but that she could not have it, because it was not in the market. He asked what it was, and it turned out to be the ruby which Logotheti had given her, and had taken to Pinney's to be cut, and which had been the cause of so many unexpected events, including her marriage. Logotheti had it in his possession, she supposed, but he had shown good taste in not trying to press it on her as a wedding present, for she could not have accepted it. Nevertheless, she wanted it very much, more as a remembrance than for its beauty.

Mr. Van Torp said he "thought he could fix that," and he did. He went directly to Mr. Pinney and asked what had become of the stone. Mr. Pinney answered that it was now cut and was in his safe for sale. The good man had felt that it would not be tactful to offer it to Mr. Van Torp. Logotheti, who was a fine gentleman in his way, had ordered it to be sold, when a good opportunity offered, and directed that the money should be given to the poor Greeks in London, under the supervision of Lady Maud Leven, the Turkish ambassador and the Greek minister, as a committee. Mr. Pinney, after consultation with the best experts, valued it at 14,000 pounds. Mr. Van Torp wrote a check for the money, put the stone into an inner pocket, and took it to the diva.

"Well," he said, smiling, "here's your ruby, anyway. Anything else today?"

Margaret looked at him wonderingly, and then opened the small morocco case.

"Oh—oh—oh!" she cried, in rising intimations of delight. "I never saw anything so beautiful in my life! It's ever so much more glorious than when I last saw it!"

"It's been cut since then," observed Mr. Van Torp.

"It ought to have a name of its own! I'm sure it's more beautiful than many of the named crown jewels!" She felt half hypnotized as she gazed into the glorious depths of the great stone. "Thank you," she cried, "thank you so very much. I'm gladder to have it than all the other things."

And thereupon she threw her magnificent arms around Rufus Van Torp's solid neck and kissed his cool flat cheek several times; and it seemed quite natural to her to do so; and she wished to forget how she had once kissed one other man, who had kissed her.

"It wants a name, doesn't it?" assented Mr. Van Torp.

"Yes. You must find one for it."

"Well," he said, "after what's happened, I suppose we'd better call it 'The Diva's Ruby.'"

THE END.

Checking Unwise Curiosity.

Lord Baltimore—My dear lady, how much is this inquiry going to cost me?

Dame Democracy—Oh, let's change the subject. I do hate petty gossip.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

One of the most notable events of the theatrical season will take place on Friday night next, when Viola Allen, accompanied by James O'Neill and the greatest supporting company ever organized including Ninna Gale and Henry Stanford, appear in a new play, "The White Sister." Aside from Miss Allen's prominence and the fame of her extraordinary company, the success of "The White Sister" has been such that the dramatic interest of this performance should prove unusually great.

Mme. Tytus, of West Front street, has returned from a pleasant sojourn at Atlantic City.

Fritz—Boylan.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Fritz, daughter of Mrs. Charlotte Fritz, formerly of the borough, but now of Somerville, and Walter V. Boylan, son of J. N. Boylan, of Regent street, were quietly married last evening by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel. The ceremony took place at Mr. McKelvey's home on Grandview avenue. The couple will reside in the borough. Mr. Boylan is employed at the Rushmore Dynamo Works.

Danish Lutheran services will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Swedish Pilgrim church, West Sixth and New streets, with preaching by Rev. N. H. Nyrap, of Brooklyn.

Parent-Teachers Meeting.

A most important meeting of the Irving School Parent-Teachers Association will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Irving School. Aside from the annual election of officers there is special business of interest to every member to be brought before the meeting and a large attendance is desired.

Reception to Pastor and Wife.

The congregation of the Park Avenue Baptist church will give a reception this evening to Rev. and Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire. This is an annual affair and all members of the church and congregation are invited to attend.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO HOLD AN INSTITUTE

The institute planned by the intermediate department of the Union County Sunday-school Union for Friday afternoon and evening, in the chapel of the Central Baptist church, Elizabeth, will bring together Sunday-school workers from many parts of the county, and all officers and teachers will be welcomed.

Devotional exercises will be conducted at the afternoon session by Rev. Dr. E. T. Tomlinson, pastor of the church. A "sample" lesson for children of the primary grade will be given by Miss F. E. Doe, of this city, and a lesson for pupils of the junior department will be given by Miss Sue A. Valentine, of Elizabeth. Miss Emma Wilkinson, of Elizabeth will sing a solo.

The evening session will begin at 7:45 o'clock with Thomas B. Lindsay, president of the Union County Sunday-school Association, in charge of the opening exercises. An intermediate grade lesson will be taught by Miss F. M. Hedden, of Newark, and the Rev. S. F. Davis, of Hackensack, will give an address on graded lessons.

ENDEAVORERS RALLY AT ELIZABETH, MAY 12

Excellent programs are being arranged for the Junior rally and annual meeting of the Union County C. E. Union to be held in the chapel of the Third Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, and the rally of the young people at 8 o'clock in the First Baptist church, Elizabeth, on Friday, May 12. Plans for the afternoon rally are in the hands of the Junior superintendent of the county, which will include an illustrated talk by Rev. Dr. John T. Kerr, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church. The Elizabeth Juniors will meet their out-of-town visitors at the railroad station and escort them to the church.

Rev. Harry E. Fosdick, of Montclair, will be the chief speaker in the evening. He is a man of exceptional ability and his talk cannot fail to interest both young and old. Special music will be a feature. The attendance banner is now held by the society of the Madson Avenue Presbyterian church, Elizabeth. It will be awarded at the coming meeting to the society having the largest percentage of members present. The aftrnoon and evening meetings are open to the public.

HERE AND THERE.

The receipts at the Oberammergau Passion Play last year were $426,150. After all salaries and expenses were paid and $2,600 deducted for the poor of the parish the sum of $108,975 remained. This can be expended on new buildings, improvments or other public works in the village.

Twenty-nine per cent. of the beet sugar products of this country comes from Colorado, which thus leads all the States. California is second with twenty-five per cent., and Michigan third with twenty-two. The value of the beet sugar produced in Michigan in 1909 was $10,477,000. It is thought in the West that the industry is a growing one.

The Netherlands India Government has thrown the west coast of Acheen open to planting enterprise, but only Dutch subjects need apply for concessions. The managers of the concessions must be Hollanders. Foreigners who may be employed under them must sign declarations that they will not claim for compensation from the government in case of troubles with the people of the land.

Of the total ore shipments on the Great Lakes last year, 36,696,296 long tons are credited to Lake Superior ports, and 4,821,345 long tons to Lake Michigan ports for transportation further inland to Ohio and Pennsylvania furnaces, and eighteen per cent. to Lake Michigan ports for consumption at the furnaces situated on the lake front.

As an example of scientific farming, a farmer out in Colorado harvested 200 bushels of grasshoppers last summer, dried them and kept a big lot of chickens on them throngh the winter.

Productions of gold in the United States in 1910 fell below that of the record output in 1909. The decrease was due to reduced production in Alaska, Colorado and South Dakota. In other States the output showed an increase.

There is a wide use for potash salts in the manufacture of chemical products, and the United States imported from Germany last year not less than $11,000,000 worth. The potash beds at Strassfurt are so great that if the present demand is not increased there will be enough to supply the world 600,000 years.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Pupils of the High School will be admitted to the lecture by Buffalo Jones at half price.

Rutgers Preparatory School nine will be the opponents of the local High School boys on Wednesday afternoon on Crescent Oval. The game starts promptly at 3:30 o'clock.

The game scheduled for Friday afternoon with the Hasbrouck Institute nine has been cancelled by the Jersey City boys.

The pupils of the Stillman School will present the play "Ali Baba or the Forty Thieves," in the High School auditorium on Thursday afternoon next at 3 o'clock and again on Saturday evening at 8:15. The large cast necessary to present this play is being coached by Miss Eason, a teacher in the school.

The sophomores and juniors will furnish one of the inter-class team matches at the Crescent Oval this afternoon. Baseball has the preeminence just now among the boys and a good game is assured.

The High School tennis court is attracting many of the pupils and constant practice is the word among those who will participate in the coming tournament. New rules have been adopted by the pupils.

"Resolved that the present pension policy is adequate and requires no reforms," is the topic for debate among the seniors at the next meeting of the debating society.

Jersey Central Blamed.

According to the verdict of the coroner's jury which deliberated yesterday afternoon at Elizabeth on the evidence submitted on the accident at the Elizabeth avenue station of the Long Branch Railroad, when three persons were killed, on April 16, the Central Railroad Company is solely to blame for the accident in not having provided proper safeguards for its passengers. The verdict was reached after two hours' deliberation.

Fire in Firemen's Home.

A slight fire occurred at 10 o'clock last night at the home of Joseph Clark, of East Second street, a member of the fire department. The wainscoating in the kitchen caught from a stove and the blaze worked its way into the walls. Men from headquarters, only a few doors away, ran down with axes and extinguishers and soon put out the blaze. The damage is about $25. Mr. Clark is kept at home at the present time with blood poisoning in the hand, caused by a cut received while at work in the Harrigan fire.

Final Plans for Ball.

Final plans for the first grand annual ball to be held in Sebring's Hall Friday night, were made by Clan Mackenzie, O. S. C., at its regular meeting last night. It was stated that delegates from out-of-town clans will be present and also the Scottish Highlanders, of New York. The latter will come in Hielan regalia and will parade from the North Avenue station headed by a band of pipers.

Councilman Dunn Improving.

Councilman John E. Dunn, of West Front street, who has been seriously ill for several months, is improving slowly. Today he was able to take a short walk, which seemed to be beneficial. He still has a cough and other troubles which do not yield readily to treatment, but his physician believes that these things will disappear in time.

Borough Couple Wedded.

Charles E. Bremmer and Miss Wilhelmina Hook, both of the borough, were married Saturday night, at the home of the bride's parents on Steiner place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. O. McKelvey in the presence of a gathering of friends. A reception followed. Mr. and Mrs. Bremmer will make their home in the borough.

CHILD'S MIND.

To a child all that passes through the mind appears real, and he is often unable to distinguish fact from fancy. He is confused by punishment for "not telling the truth," when what he says is perfectly true to him. So also the perception of the right of private property is not natural, but arises in every nursery through the primitive "taboo." Therefore, the parent or teacher, instead of presupposing such a moral code, must create it and apply it to the right objects.

The rise in the child of the dramatic instinct gives numberless opportunities for preparation for real life. The fact that imagination is so easily led into channels of action provides an opportunity for all kinds of lessons as to relationships that will afterwards exist, and imaginative right action under many circumstances.

CHURCH MEN DINE

Distinguished Men Heard at Crescent Ave. Church Club's Banquet.

H. J. COCHRAN TOASTMASTER.

Dr. W. E. Guile, Dr. Gilbert Reid and Dr. C. H. Hart gave Instructive Talks—Election of Officers Held.

Following the business meeting of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last night, the second annual banquet was held at which Dr. W. E. Guile, a noted explorer and scientist; Dr. Gilbert Reid, of the International Institute, Shanghai, China, and Dr. Charles H. Hart, of the Bureau of Child Help of the Sage Foundation, spoke. These officers were elected at the business meeting: President, W. L. Glenney; vice-president, DeWitt Hubbell; secretary-treasurer, George L. Davey. The executive committee comprises Henry J. Cochran, Henry L. DeForest, F. N. Genung and Charles L. Wilson.

Henry J. Cochran was toastmaster at the dinner. The discussion of the menu was interrupted to allow Dr. Guile to deliver a short address upon the great Chinese wall. Among the ruins of a wall which antedated the Christian era 223 years, he said, he found evidence of a civilization which bore unmistakable evidences of a higher civilization than is found today among civilized nations. A temple to literature, and the announcements of the existence of the "True God" were found 1,100 miles from the center of present day Chinese civilization. The wall was originally 1,142 miles long and parts of it had crumbled into decay far beneath the surface.

Dr. Guile said that the influences of the missionaries had clipped the corus of superstition which once enshrouded China, but the great empire would soon come into its own. No such dividend will ever be paid as will reward those who invest in missionary work there.

Dr. Gilbert Reid, the next speaker who has been a missionary to China for years, declared that it is easier for him to obtain an interview with the great men of China than to get one with some of the rich men of this country. It took him seven years to get into the presence of Li Hung Chang, but once there his path was comparatively smooth. He said that he was now a missionary from China to America the expenses of his visit being defrayed by the Imperial government. He was told to come here and try to reform America and to interest Americans in the greatest country in the world.

Dr. Reid told of his experiences in other parts of the world in securing interviews with potentates whose exclusiveness seemed to be a bar to intimacy, but declared that in Germany the natural business instinct of the Teuton opened wide the gate of inquiry with the result that today Germans are interested much more in Chinese enterprises than any other nation.

Following Dr. Reid, Dr. Hart, who is interested in Child Welfare through his connection with the Sage Foundation, spoke briefly on the "Dependent and Neglected Children." He said that no State in the Union has progressed so fast in the matter of protection to children as New Jersey to which he paid a tribute. In the past twenty-five years this State has won a place among the States which may be envied.

"There are three things done here which lend themselves to the commendation of the entire country," he said, "first, you have made a particularly close study of the child and I have noticed that in Plainfield you have been particularly busy in this respect. The psychological, pathological and physiological study of the young as carried on in this city reveal a stupendous interest in what the country needs today. A movement such as this is worthy of all commendation. Second, the prevention of feeblemindedness among children—to New Jersey must go the credit of starting the thing in the right direction, and let me say that no feeble-minded girl is safe outside a protective institution. Third, and chiefly, your law under which the State Board of Children's Guardians is one to be admired. It may have its defects, but it nevertheless is the wisest plan yet devised for the protection and uplift of minors."

Dr. Hart said in conclusion that it was a mistake to appoint men to positions in institutions devoted to the care of children simply because they had nothing else to do. Because a man is a superannuated minister of the Gospel is no reason why he should have charge of an institution which must eventually reflect either credit or discredit upon the State or city in which it is situated.

The speaker referred in glowing

'CLEANUP' CRUSADE BY BOARD OF HEALTH

A systematic general housecleaning will be inaugurated by the Board of Health on May 1 and delinquents will feel the power of the law, so it is said. The board proposes to inspect the yards and the surroundings of every house in the city. Chicken yards, coops, outbuildings of all sorts, garbage piles, vaults and other possible plague spots will receive a thorough going over.

If conditions are found in which violations of the new health ordinances are evident legal notice will be served on the offender before action is taken, and thereafter there will be no leniency shown to anyone. John O'Brien Jr., the local health officer, has issued the statement that there will be a complete and scrupulous examination made through every residence in the city, and, as has been said before, "a word to the wise is sufficient."

GOFF'S TUMBLE MAY PROVE FATAL

Samuel Goff, of this city, who is a brother to John and William Goff, is in St. Barnabas Hospital, Newark, in a critical condition, the physician believing that his neck is broken. Goff fell down a stairway at 53 Nicholson street, Newark, yesterday and was first removed to the police station where it was not thought that his injuries were serious.

Later Goff was found to be in a serious condition and he was hurried to the hospital where it was the opinion that the man's neck was broken. An X-ray examination is to be made today. Goff is well-known in this city, where he was engaged in business as a peddler of vegetables, fish, etc.

Hold a Rubber Social.

Under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, a rubber social was held in the parish house, last night. The price of admission was rubber articles of any kind and description, and there was a great collection received. These articles will be sold and the proceeds applied to church work. During the evening there was an informal program comprising recitations, vocal and instrumental solos and duets and games were played. Refreshments were also served.

Choir Changes Soon.

Clifford A. Braider, organist of the First Presbyterian church, for twelve years, will play for the last time at the church on Sunday. The following Sunday he will take a similar position at the First M. E. church, where a quartet choir will succeed the present chorus choir. The quartet will be Mrs. June Bilby, soprano; Miss Jessamine Burd, contralto; Raymond McGee, baritone and Aleck MacGowan, tenor.

Open "Rose Tea Room."

The new and attractive "Rose Tea Room" was opened at Truell Inn, yesterday, to the guests of the house and their friends. During the afternoon Miss Clyde Burnet and Miss Mabel A. Maxson played piano solos from McDowell and Chopin and the affair proved delightful. This room is now opened to the public and those who enjoy this refreshing beverage are invited to patronize it amid artistic surroundings.

Dr. Brown Chancellor of N. Y. U.

Among the council of New York University, who were appointed on the sub-committee of seven to elect a chancellor for the University to succeed Dr. Henry M. McCracken, was George A. Strong, of Central avenue. The meeting was held Monday afternoon and resulted in the election of Dr. Elmer Elsworth Brown, United States Commissioner of Education, seventeen votes being cast for him in the final election.

In the Borough Court.

John Lyons, arrested for helpless intoxication yesterday afternoon, had sentence suspended by Recorder Polliver, this morning. The same disposition was made in the case of O. P. Baker, arraigned on a disorderly charge preferred by his wife. George Ammon, of Harrison avenue, will be arraigned tomorrow morning on a charge of speeding his auto over the limit, preferred by Special Officer Martin.

A Tea and Sale.

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. will hold a tea and sale at the home of Mrs. Geo. L. Babcock on Friday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. At 4 o'clock a short musical program will be presented by Mrs. Harry Johnson, pianist; Miss Violet Truell-Johnston, violinist, and Mrs. J. B. Cottrell, soprano.

JONES ILLUSTRATES ANIMALS' CAPTURING

An exhibition of the capturing of wild animals in Africa was given in moving pictures at the High School auditorium last evening under the auspices of the Women's Exchange. "Buffalo," otherwise known as Charles J. Jones, once superintendent of the National Park in the Yellowstone Valley, illustrated his work among the widls with some moving pictures and stereopticon views.

Animals of all degrees of ferocity appeared to have submitted to the superior will and influence of the lecturer and in some instances he was applauded for his methods of subjugating them and in some instances he was not.

Mr. Jones said in a prologue that it was the intention of the Creator that all things should become subject to man and that animals in whatever state of existence naturally feared man. His methods of using the power of the eye or hypnotism, as it may be called, proved to him that it is unnecessary to hunt the wildest of creatures without firearms.

Mr. Jones' method of lassoing the Eland, Cheetah, Rhinoscerous and other denizens of the jungle showed him to be fearless. Particularly thrilling was the ascent of a tree and the capturing of a leopard with nothing in hand but a rope.

The pictures were of a character to inspire awe in the minds of those who saw them and from the viewpoint of interest the exhibition might be called a success, though many in the audience would disagree with this assertion.

MR. MERVIN TO EDIT THE NATIONAL POST

The promoters of the National Post, of which Samuel Mervin, formerly of this city, is the eidtor, have issued an attractive booklet offering stock to investors. The policies are fully outlined in this announcement booklet which sets forth the plans in a most original and attractive form. The magazine, to be published twice monthly, is to be an independent journal of the people, published by them and owned by them and is to have no corporate or political tag.

Mr. Mervin, who will occupy the editor's chair, is the man who made Success one of America's foremost publications. He has surrounded himself with a staff of writers and a business management second to none in this country. There are to be 2,000 owners and the shares are to be distributed among the people in the various states in a proportion based on respective populations. Each chare is $200.

To illustrate what profits there are in the business, attention is called to this list of yearly net earnings of leading magazines: Ladies Home Journal, $3,600,000; Saturday Evening Post, $3,480,000; Collier's Weekly, $2,750,000; Munsey's $1,600,000; McClure's, $1,250,000; Cosmopolitan, $1,500,000; Everybody's, $1,500,000.

These enormous profits are made possible by the price paid for space in the advertising columns. For instance a full page advertisement in the Ladies' Home Journal costs $7,000 for a single insertion. The Saturday Evening Post rate for the same privilege is $4,500.

Great things are expected of the National Post for with Mr. Marvin as its guiding spirit it is bound to be a monumental success.

Firemen Disabled.

The city fire department force is somewhat crippled at the present time because of illness and accidents keeping four of the men off duty. Captain James Daley, who recently suffered a nervous break-down, is on a leave of absence recuperating. Two other men at Headquarters, Joseph Clark and G. H. Freeman, are also incapacitated. Clark has blood poisoning in one hand while Freeman is suffering from a badly sprained wrist. William Jaeger, of No. 1 house, is off duty because of blood poisoning which followed the getting of a splinter in his hand.

Signs Com. Gov't Bill.

Among the other bills signed yesterday by Governor Wilson, was the Trenton commission government measure, allowing municipalities to adopt the initiative, the recall, the referendum, and other governmental reforms. This is the measure so hotly opposed in the Legislature by the machine leaders of both parties.

SAUNDERS' ADVICE

Manufacturer Tells Young Men How to Succeed in Life.

PRACTICAL AND HARD WORK.

Former Mayor Addressing Graduating Class of Michigan College of Mines Tells of his Own Experience in Life.

William L. Saunders, president of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, of New York, and former Mayor of North Plainfield, delivered the address at the class day exercises of the Michigan College of Mines, at Houghton, Mich., and also responded to a toast at the class banquet. He gave some sound advice to the young men, coupling with it his own experiences, at the class day exercises, speaking in part as follows:

"Over in New Jersey a clergyman visiting one of the public schools was unexpectedly asked to make an address. While standing before the school, endeavoring to collect his thoughts, he said: 'Now boys what shall I speak about?' A little fellow on the front row with a shrill voice, who had just committed several compositions to memory, called out, 'What do you know?'

"The position is not an easy one for the speaker, though on the face of it he appears to have a wide latitude. Had such an invitation been extended to me thirty-five years ago when I, a blooming youth of nineteen, walked out of college and down Broadway with a diploma in one hand and with the thumb of the other cocked under the armpits of my waistcoat, I should have seized the opportunity to tell of the things that appealed to me, the things I knew. I should even have demanded the privilege of talking overtime! But with my present limitations and in that humility of mind which comes with experience, you may take comfort in the fact that your president has, through his instructions to me, safeguarded you. The audience is safe because the speaker is limited. You are free, for instance, from the danger of an attempt to deliver a baccalaureate sermon by one to whom a bacchanalian feast makes a stronger appeal. You are spared the lash of the golden rule because it has appealed very strongly to me in my life that if you do unto others you will surely find that these others will do you.

"For what you are about to receive you should therefore be thankful to your president, for it might have been worse.

"I once saw somewhere these headlines, 'Great opportunities,' and as I was looking in that direction I eagerly read the following: 'A man with a good rosewood desk, a new typewriter, a fountain pen, lots of linen-wove paper and leisure, has it in his power to make a great literary reputation for himself, if he can only think of something to write.' I had everything on the list with leisure in abundance, but for the life of me I could not qualify in the last item. Here was my first ambition blasted.

"And yet, and yet—I say it more in joy than in anger—they gave me the degree of E. M. Mining Enzineer! I rather think that Dr. Koenig and others of the faculty of science would have agreed to still further distinguish me by adding R. I. P.—'Requiescat in pacem.'

"My first personal appeal to you is that poetry is a good antidote for insomnia—a joyous pastime, but it is not a passport to prosperity. It is said that men should eschew evil and do good. Rather would I advise you to eschew poetry and be good, lest you fall a victim to the wrath of the gods as it is written in the scripture 'To him that hath shall be given, and to him that hath not shall be taken away even that little nothing that he hath.'

"At the risk of being charged with egotism I am going to give you the next step in my career. Opportunity opened the door to me in the offer of a position as chainman on an engineer corps in or near New York. In this work, it soon appealed very strongly to me (and because of that fact, I want to appeal very strongly to you), that my college training gave me no knowledge of the practical things in life. I could lay out a pipe line on paper, but I could not lay that line on the ground. I did not know how to handle the tools, how to lead joints and a hundred other things that an uneducated workman, little above the scale of a day laborer, knew all about. Of equal importance and of greater regret to me was the evidence that not having mixed with working men I was not competent to handle them. I was not in touch with them and did not know how to discriminate between men. To do good executive work one must know men. We cannot handle men properly without

ANNUAL RECEPTION FOR PASTOR AND WIFE

The second annual reception to Rev. and Mrs. Gabriel Reid Maguire was given at the Park Avenue Baptist church last night, there being an unusually large attendance of members and friends of the church. The spirit of good fellowship was manifested on the part of pastor and people and the affair was one of the best ever held in the church.

The Sunday-school room was elaborately decorated with palms and carnations by a committee comprising Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Mrs. Robert Lowry, Mrs. Thomas Cuming, Miss Marjorie Phillips, Miss Florence G. Hawkins and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mason.

Rev. and Mrs. Maguire stood beneath a number of large palms, where they received the people, exchanging good wishes. During the evening there were congratulatory remarks by Rev. F. St. John Fitch, George E. Hall, William N. Runyon, while Mr. Maguire made a happy response to all the complimentary things said about his wife and himself. Mr. Maguire said that he owed the success of his pastorate here to the loyal support of his officers and congregation.

During the evening there was an informal program of music, including several solos by William N. Runyon, Miss Edith Bechtle and Mrs. Caroline Schuyler. The program was concluded by all giving the pastor and his wife the Chautauqua salute, after which refreshments were served by the women of the church, and a social hour was enjoyed.

JOHN B. SLORAH WEDS MISS RIMMER TODAY

Miss Elsie M. Rimmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Rimmer, of Essex street, and John Brandon Slorah, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Slorah, of Prescott place, will be married at 5 o'clock this afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Frederic L. Greene, pastor of Hope chapel, of which the bride and groom are both members, will perform the ceremony, using the service of the Episcopal church.

The bride will wear an all-embroidered gown, trimmed with white Liberty satin ribbon. She will be attended by Miss Edna Eckert as bridesmaid. Her gown will be of white net over pink. Frank Rimmer, brother of the bride, will be the best man.

Miss Alice Rimmer, the bride's sister, will play the wedding march from Lohengrin, as the bridal party enter the parlor. Following the ceremony a wedding supper will be served.

There will be about seventy-five guests from New York, Brooklyn, Rutherford, Staten Island, Morristown and this city, comprising relatives and intimate friends of the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Slorah have received an unusually large number of wedding gifts, including silverware, cut-glass, linen, pictures, a sideboard, a buffet, etc.

Both the bride and groom are well-known in the West End and for several years have been actively engaged in work at Hope chapel. The bride was for five years engaged as stenographer in the law offices of Winfield S. Angleman. After May 1, the bride and groom will be "at home" at 970 West Third street.

SEATS FOR "THE HENRIETTA" WILL BE PUT ON SALE MAY 8.

The sale of seats for "The Henrietta," the benefit play to be given by the Park Comedy Club, at the Plainfield theatre, May 18-19, will begin Monday afternoon, May 8 at 4 o'clock at the box office of the Plainfield theatre. There will be no advance reservations and a limit of twelve seat for each individual will be the rule.

For the first time in its history the Park Comedy Club will take its play out of town. Final arrangements have been made with a charity organization at Cranford for the production of "The Henrietta," there on Tuesday, May 23. The whole cast is hard at work putting on the finishing touches of the play, under the direction of Edgar Hart, coach.

"Ladies' Night" at Grace Church.

Prof. Ditmars, of the Bronx Zoo, will entertain the Men's Club of Grace church, this evening, giving an interesting talk about performing snakes and other animals. It will be "ladies' night" and all the women of the parish are invited.

UNION COUNTY GETS $20,000 OF AUTO FUND

The road committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders conferred with Col. Stevens, State Road Commissioner, at Trenton, yesterday, and it was agreed that Union county should receive $20,000 of the yearly automobile fund. The committee, consisting of Freeholders Cady, Wilbur and Smith, will use $8,000 of this sum in improving West Broad street, Elizabeth, and will also use a part to improve St. George's avenue, leading to Rahway. A promise was made by the state commissioner to visit Union county next week when he will decide whether an extra $10,000 needed by the freeholders for road work, can be granted by him.

At Elizabeth yesterday the Board of Freeholders awarded to C. H. Wyans & Co., the lowest bidders, the contract for improving the Morris turnpike between Hobart Hill and the Passaic River, a distance of a mile and a half.

VIOLATED SPEED LAW; SO POLICEMEN SWEAR

Charged with driving a car in a reckless manner, Murray Stowe, a recent graduate of the New York Y. M. C. A. School of Automobile Instruction, was given a hearing this morning before Judge William G. DeMeza, who, after hearing the testimony of the patrolmen and other witnesses deferred judgment until next Wednesday. Patrolman McCarthy and Sweeney testified that Stowe was driving his car at a speed of about twenty miles an hour and that while attempting to turn the corner of Watchung avenue and Fourth street the speed was so great that the accident of running into a telephone pole was inevitable.

In his own defense Stowe said that he had applied the brakes, but that at that instant they did not seem to work properly and that he had not been travelling at more than ten or twelve miles an hour. He was corroborated by Frank Lee, night man at the Brokaw garage; Joseph Davis, a colored attendant in the garage, and Lloyd Brokaw, an employe of the concern. The accident occurred at about 10:30 on Sunday night and the patrolmen claim that the trolley station corner was crowded with people. Stowe was defended by Winfield S. Angleman.

GEO. W. MARLOR DIES; U. S. SUB-TREASURER.

George W. Marlor, acting assistant treasurer of the United States at the Sub-Treasury, in Wall street, New York, who died yesterday at his home in Roselle, was an uncle of William E. MacClymont, of Woodbine avenue. For many years he had been cashier and was appointed acting sub-treasurer only a few dags ago on the death of George S. Terry, whose successor has not been selected. Mr. Marlor entered the department on May 16, 1865, being appointed by John A. Stewart, President Lincoln's treasurer. He served during the Civil War and was a member of Lafayette Post, G. A. R.

MR. ATTERBURY TO TALK AGAIN ON THE TARIFF.

This evening in Y. M. C. A. Hall A. H. Atterbury will deliver the second of a series of addresses on the "Tariff on Wages," given under the auspices of the Plainfield Democratic Club. Following the address there will be an open discussion, similar to that held on last Wednesday evening.

Much interest has been manifested in these addresses and discussions and the meetings are well attended. A special invitation has been extended to the teachers and pupils of the local High School to attend and take part in the meetings.

Leon Rice's Concert.

Leon Rice pleased another large audience at Y. M. C. A. Hall last night, singing with delightful and reposeful assurance a program replete with variety. Several of the numbers were songs composed expressly for the singer and in many cases he was forced to respond to the importunities of his audience for repititions. The silver collection showed that the audience appreciated the recital.

Mr. Westcott Better.

Ellsworth C. Westcott, of the Hotel Kensington, who is undergoing medical treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital, is reported today as being slightly improved. He is suffering from a complication of diabetis and rhumatism.

WORKMAN KILLED

Cornelius McMullen's Life is Crushed Out on a Railroad Track.

WEDDED THREE WEEKS AGO.

His Body Found After Train of Freight Cars Had Passed Over it in Smelting Plant at Perth Amboy.

While coupling cars at Perth Amboy last night, Cornelius McMullen, son of Neal McMullen, of South Plainfield, was crushed to death in the yards of the American Smelting and Refining Company at Perth Amboy. Mr. McMullen was married three weeks ago to Miss Margaret Lee, of New Brunswick, and the newly married couple had established a home on Division street, Perth Amboy. The young man, who was popular in Perth Amboy and in South Plainfield, is survived by his wife, father, and two sisters and one brother.

Mr. McMullen, who was working for the Lehigh Valley Railroad in the Smelting Company's yard last evening, slipped between the cars of the train which was backing out of the yards. When the train had pulled out a brakeman discovered the body of young McMullen lying face downward on the tracks. He immediately summoned help and Dr. W. E. Ramsey responded. The fatally injured man was removed to the Perth Amboy hospital and everything possible done to relieve his sufferings, but he died after having regained consciousness twice on the way to the institution.

Young Mr. McMullen was a son of Neal McMullen, who for the past fifteen years has been superintendent of the Lehigh Valley coaling station at South Plainfield. Mrs. McMullen, the bride of three weeks, is prostrated over the sudden death of her husband and when notified of the accident fainted and for two hours was unconscious. Engineer John Daley, of the train which killed McMullen, has also been prostrated over the accident. Notice of the funeral will be given later.

ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS LEAGUE NAMES SUB-COMMITTEES.

At the recent meeting of the publicity committee of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield the following sub-committees were appointed; Schools, Champlain L. Riley, Mrs. C. B. Tyler; churches, J. P. Murray and Mrs. F. E. Mygatt, factories and industrial establishments, Dr. Clara Krans and Miss Harriet Goddard; meetings and speakers, Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, William S. Tyler and Ralph L. Morrow; exhibits, Dr. F. E. DuBois, H. H. Pond and Mrs. Leighton Calkins; circulation, William M. Wherry, Jr., and Miss Ellen Merrill.

The duties of the various committees have been outlined in a communication sent out today by Hugh F. Fox, chairman of the committee.

PARKER FIELD WON'T BE USED THIS SEASON.

Plainfielders who are interested in the promotion of athletics and are looking forward to the use of the Parker Field on Randolph road will be disappointed to learn that there is little chance of the park being ready for this season. This is due to the fact that the work of seeding the grounds was not started early enough to provide a turf for the field and it will be impossible, it is said, to use it in its present condition.

Already considerable labor and money have been expended on the field and it was generally believed that the playground would be all in readiness for athletic events during the coming season.

Vardon—Neighbor Nuptials.

Miss May Neighbor, daughter of Mrs. John Neighbor, of East Second street, and Stanley Vardon, of West Third street, will be married this evening at the bride's home. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. A reception will follow and later the young couple will depart for a short wedding trip.

Funeral of Mrs. M. R. Sutton.

The funeral service of Mrs. Mary R. Sutton, widow of Aaron P. Sutton, who died at East Hamilton, Ohio, on Sunday, will be held at the home of her son, Willard V. Sutton, 204 Liberty street, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The burial will be in the M. E. cemetery. Relatives and friends are invited.

Sesame to Meet.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning with Mrs. Warren Travell, 816 Third place.

BOYNTON "Square Pot" BOILERS

are the basis of the best hot water heating system known—the BOYNTON dealers in your town can demonstrate this to your satisfaction.

BOYNTON boilers have the same square fire pot which has so long made BOYNTON hot-air heaters famous. This fire pot gives perfect, hence economical, combustion. Being square cornered, it clears of ashes instantly. It's never necessary to fuss or bother with a "BOYNTON" fire. BOYNTON "square pot" boilers give even, easily controlled heat, from cellar to farthest radiator.

Look at the sectional cut above and see how perfectly the Boynton is arranged for quick steaming.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Twenty-seven pupils of the Glassboro High School were exempted from the quarterly examination by having a percentage of over ninety in their class work.

Dr. J. Morgan Read, pastor of the Glassboro M. E. church, has announced that he will review the acts of the recent Legislature in a sermon next Sunday evening.

After returning home from his farm Monday afternoon, former Freeholder William H. Smith, of Pemberton, dropped dead from heart failure just as he was entering his house. It was only Saturday that his brother, John N. Smith, who died at Marlboro, was buried from the same house.

Before Supreme Court Justice Garrison, in Camden Monday, Charles A. McElhone, former assessor of Gloucester City, lost his suit to upset the action of the Gloucester Council in ousting him and creating a board composed of three members, his application for a certiorari being dismissed.

Members of the central Republican committee ("new idea") of the First Ward, Jersey City, Monday night passed resolutions favoring the nomination of Boulevard Commissioner Frederick H. Otto for Mayor. John J. Coyle was indorsed for street and water commissioner and Philip H. Wolf for Assemblyman.

The bar of Burlington county Monday night gave a dinner to Clarence L. Cole, of Atlantic City, who, as the new Circuit Judge to succeed Frank T. Lloyd, of Camden, remained in town over night to make his debut at the opening of the April term of court. Besides the new justice the list of guests included Willard P. Voorhees, Supreme Court Justice, of New Brunswick, and Judge Frank T. Lloyd.

While installing a gasoline engine in a motorboat Monday in Trenton, James Brennon, John Gilmore and John Adams, were discussing what was best to do in case of fire when Max Riosky entered the room, lit a cigarette, flipped the match away and puffed. The match struck a can of gasoline, there was an explosion, a burst of flame and the three men in the boat were badly burned. The cause of the trouble escaped injury.

Arraigned in the Camden Police court Monday on a charge of the larceny of an automobile belonging to S. Stockton Woodward, a commission merchant, William Brown, twenty-seven years old, a bartender, pleaded guilty, and was committed to jail in default of $600 bail. Steering out of the way of a trolley car opposite city hall, several weeks ago, Brown ran the machine half-way up a telegraph pole, wrecking the car. He then escaped.

Harold Frazeur, thirty-one years old, is in Bridgeton Hospital with a severe gunshot wound in one foot and there is fear that the member will have to be amputated. He was climbing a fence, carrying the gun, when his foot caught. He fell and the firearm was discharged. He had been working for a Dutch Neck farmer, and as they had been greatly bothered by crows and hawks he had gone out to shoot a hawk which was hovering around.

While sitting in the court house yard at Mays Landing reading a newspaper Monday, John S. Risley, clerk of the grand jury, suddenly dropped the paper, closed his eyes and keeled over. Friends quickly picked the official up and carried him to the sheriff's office, where he remained unconscious for several hours. Attending physicians pronounced apoplexy the cause. Mr. Risley is a member of the Board of Freeholders and for nearly a quarter of a centruy was county surrogate.

With the college baseball season a third completed, from the performance of the Princeton and Pennsylvania nines it appears that the Tigers and Quakers will run a neck and neck race this year for the college title. The Tigers have so far played more games than any of the other teams, their contests to date numbering an even dozen. At the start of the season they were defeated by the fast Ursinus team; but since then they have not been defeated by a college nine.

One of the games went thirteen innings with the Georgetown nine, and this had to be called off on account of darkness. Pennsylvania has yet to meet her first defeat by a college team. The Quakers have played seven games and won six of them. When they lined up against the Phillies they lost the struggle.

Yale and Harvard have played so few games that it is a hard matter to get a real line on what these two teams are going to do when the big contests come. The middies also have shown up well.

CIVIL SERVICE JOBS FOR MANY SOON

The schedule of Civil Service examinations for May includes examinations for a number of positions created by the present Legislature. Among these are four state fire wardens, six factory inspectors, three assistant state superintendents of weights and measures and one county superintendent of weights and measures. The act creating the department of weights and measures provides that the assistant county superintendent in counties which have adopted the civil service law shall be chosen in conformity with that law.

In addition to the foregoing, the commission will hold examinations for fish and game wardens, who are hereafter to be classified in accordance with a bill which passed the Legislature during the present session, providing that the eligible list shall be made up according to counties. The examinations will cover a period of six days, and will be held at Trenton, Camden and Newark, two days being devoted to the examination at each point. The examination for fish and game wardens will be conducted with the assistance of Dr. T. S. Palmer, assistant chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and Charles E. Brewster, game law expert of the same department, both of whom have agreed to give one week of their time to this work. The examinations will be partly written and partly oral, and will include an examination to determine that the candidates are well able physically to perform the duties of the position.

Examinations for fire warden and factory inspector will also be partly written and partly oral, and will be designated to test the ability of the candidates not only from the standpoint of knowledge of the duties of the position, but also to determine their relative personal fitness, based upon experience and judgment to be ascertained through the oral examination.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will hold an all-day sewing meeting tomorrow. The members will enjoy a basket lunch at noon.

Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Hall, of Union Theological Seminary, is among the ministers who have been secured as supplies at the Crescent Avenue church, during the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, who is ill.

Alexander Russell, organist of the Crescent Avenue church, is still detained at his home in Brooklyn, by illness. Next Sunday was to have been his last at the local church, but it is not certain that he will be able to play that day.

SAUNDERS' ADVICE

knowing them. We can never understand men through the study of books. All the colleges in the world could not have taught Napoleon that rare faculty by which he placed the right man in the right place and at the right time.

"Ability is a broad term. We have the ability of the student to reach the highest place in his class; we have the ability of the scientist to uncover the hidden things in nature, of the inventor to put that knowledge to practical ends and to advance the progress of the world. We have the ability of the engineer who designs a great bridge; of the architect who plans a building; the sculptor and the painter; the poet and the author; the editor, the financier and the business man; but that ability which is to be most desired; that ability which it is within the power of almost all men of common sense to cultivate; that which represents the well rounded man, the highest ability of all, is executive ability. It is far easier to find men who can do good work than to find men who know how to make others do good work. The man who works does only one man's work, while he who knows how to get work out of others does the work of hundreds. One is like the actuary in an insurance company. He makes the figures on the basis of which business is solicited; the other is the manager of the company who handles the reins so that success follows the enterprise. We know by experience that it is easier to design a Panama canal than to build one. The man who is now so successfully doing this work is a type of the great executive. He is greater as an executive than as an engineer. He could not be the executive that he is had he not learned to study men by mixing with all classes.

"I dwell upon this appeal with emphasis because of its great importance. It should be your first post graduate lesson if you seek the higher planes in education and in life. The fact that you have a good scientific education does not give you the least advantage in doing executive work. The man of equal general abilities who, while you have been at college, has been mixing with and studying men, is ahead of you as an executive, but the training that you have received, and the knowledge gained, if you are not spoiled, should enable you to outdistance him after a few years. To do this you must get back to earth, you should be willing to begin at the bottom, to carry your candle and pick. In doing this you become not a common but an uncommon laborer.

"Let me give you an experience, an incident of my life which has in principle been duplicated many times. A young man walked into my office to seek a position. He was a clean cut, manly looking fellow of culture and refinement. He told me that he had just graduated from Cornell university and wanted to work in the shops. 'Do you know what that means?' I said, 'you will have to work in overalls, mix with the men, obey orders, go in and out at the blow of the whistle, do what you are told to do and all for apprentice's wages.' 'I know exactly what it means,' he replied. 'I ask only for an opportunity to begin at the bottom in a business which I believe to be a progressive one and where I may have a chance to grow.' That young man in a few months was receiving machinist's wages of from $2.50 to $3 per day, saving most of it and attracting attention because of good work and steady habits. Today he holds an executive position at a large salary. The men under him respect him and are productive because they know that he understands not only his work, but theirs. 'A college education,' he once said to me, 'is like the foundation of a building, of no practical value unless one goes on with the work above it.

"My next personal appeal is that men should strive to work always on practical lines. Separate the chaff from the wheat—cut off all ruching from your garment. Our great business, said Carlisle, is not to see the things that lie dimly at a distance, but to do that which lies plainly at hand. Men at college are engaged in abstract studies, much that is done is not tangible. This is good work and well worth doing in our educational life, but when this foundation is built and we stand upon it in the field of life our first concern should be to do things; to get results that tell. If a pump is out of order, fix it, and then talk and plan to prevent a recurrence by improving conditions. Get results with the instruments at hand for it is only a poor workman who quarrels with his tools. The time to mend the nets is not while the fish are running, for a small catch is better than none at all.

"It is work, work well done, work done on practical lines, that tells. Work is the hand-maiden of success, it counts more than genius, more than ability. Mr. Edison was once approached by an admiring lady who said, 'Oh, Mr. Edison, it must take so much inspiration to be a great genius!' He put his hand to his ear and asked that the remark be repeated as he did not understand it. This was done and quickly came his reply, 'Madam, it takes two per cent inspiration and ninety-eight per cent perspiration.'

"While working on practical lines we should not forget to also work on lines of greatest efficiency. The best engineering is that which accomplishes a result in the most economical manner. It is only a bad designer who puts more metal into an engine than is required for the work performed. Every pound of coal wasted for power or fuel may shorten life in the world. The man most valuable about a mine or mill is he who helps to lop off a fraction in the cost of producing the metal. This is the age of scientific efficiency, of conservation of industrial economies. Men need not work a whit harder, but through the use of machinery and better methods of work, greater results are obtained. After all it is only a question of study, of stopping the leaks and striving to concentrate on lines that produce. One should always try to touch the spot.

"Finally, perhaps I hear your president's personal appeal to me that I must not forget the advice given by Bishop Butler of Bristol to one making a speech, A. Have something to say; B. Say it; C. stop."

DUNELLEN RESIDENCE INVADED BY BURGLARS.

Burglars invaded Dunellen last night and forced entrance to the home of Frank Culver, on Depot avenue. They secured $50 in money and a quantity of silverware. The family knew nothing of their presence, the loss being discovered when they arose at the usual time. Entrance was made by breaking a window.

Marshal Davenport was notified but gained no clue that might lead to the arrest of the burglars. The Plainfield police were also notified. Mr. Culver was formerly a member of the North Plainfield police force.

terms to Father Foy, of Nutley, who instituted a system of protection to children which has been the means of closing up many orphan asylums in the country.

The meeting of the club was one of the most successful yet held but a note of regret was noticed in the absence of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie whose illness prevented his being present. Mr. Cochran referred to this in his final remarks saying that the absence of the minister was much regretted. About fifty men were present.

HERE AND THERE.

Representative F. H. Knight, of of Clarion county, is drafting a bill requiring every man or woman who desires to drink spirituous malt or brewed liquors in Pennsylvania to take out an annual license at a cost of $5. Representative Knight figures that there are at least a million out of the State's nine million people who would want such a license and that therefore the revenue would be $5,000,000 a year.

His bill would prohibit the issuance of licenses to habitual drunkards and would make it a misdemeanor to serve intoxicating drinks to any one who did not have a tippler's license.

WANT PUBLIC HEARING ON CONVICT LABOR BILL.

Governor Wilson has been asked to give a public hearing on Senator Osborne's bill for the abolition of contract labor in the State's penal institutions before he signs it. The application came from the prison authorities and from the contractors who have contracts at the prison. Senator Osborne intends to make a strenuous fight to have the bill signed. The date for the hearing has not been announced.

Attention has been called to the fact that the bill carried no appropriation to carry the bill into effect. This course was expected. All the contracts at the prison have several years to run and it will be some time before the new law can be put into effect there.

Germany's Vast Army.

Germany will have under arms in connection with the field maneuvers this summer, practically 1,000,000 men. In addition to the regular army strength of 622,000 men, over 355,000 reservists will be called to the colors, making a total effective strength for the army of 977,698. Adding to these the men serving with the fleet, an armed force of considerably more than a million will be engaged in the gigantic war games.

The new firing regulations for the field artillery, just published, contain in addition to former directions for fire against captive balloons, a new set of instructions governing the use of artillery against dirigbles and aeroplanes. It is admitted, however, that artillery fire against aeroplanes offers slight chances of success without enormous use of ammunition.

Blame it on Legislature.

Trenton, April 26.—Stung by criticism of the representatives to the New Jersey grand lodge of Masons that Trenton's hotel accomodations are too limited to permit the holding of future grand lodge communications here, the local bonifaces are now blaming the Legislature for their troubles. If the Legislature had not held over a week longer than usual the Masons would not have found the hotels over-crowded and there would have ben no complaint.

"Penny Postage" Likely.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock is confident that "penny postage" is a probability of the near future as the result of reductions in the $17,600,000 postal deficit which existed when he took charge of the Postoffice Department. He has made a statement to this effect in acknowledging letters received regarding the postal situation.

Parent-Teachers to Elect.

The Parent-Teachers Association of the Irving School will hold its annual meeting this afternoon for the election of officers and transaction of other business.

A Luxury.

"But," protested the plain citizen, "don't you consider honesty a good thing?"

"Sure," replied the politician, "but it's like every other good thing; you've got to make money before you can afford it."—Catholic Standard and Times.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The funeral of Miss Beatrice Pittinger, whose death occurred Saturday morning after a brief illness, was held at the home of her parents on Mountainview terrace, yesterday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. Ernest R. Brown, assisted by Rev. W. A. Knox and was attended by Rev. W. A. Knox, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends, including many schoolmates. There were numerous handsome floral tributes. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, Plainfield, relatives of the family acting as pall bearers.

The members of the Dunellen Athletic Club held a special meeting last night, to discuss the recent acts of vandalism perpetrated by someone who broke into the club rooms last week. It was declared that two young men under suspicion were seen about the premises last Tuesday night. This slight clue will be followed up. The damage done will amount to a large sum and because of the despicable way in which it was committed the club officials are determined to bring the culprits to justice.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Blank, of Woodside, L. I., are visiting the former's mother and sister, Mrs. Margaret Blank and Mrs. Fred Kirchner. Both of the latter have been quite ill.

The work of double-tracking the trolley road through the borough has practically been completed. Automatic switch lights are now being installed at the turn-outs.

Thomas Brennon has returned home from Muhlenberg Hospital, where he was treated for an injury to one of his limbs.

Miss Lucy Cox, of Dover, returned home yesterday, after a pleasant visit with the Misses Moynihan, of North avenue.

Joseph Stark, of the U. S. S. Idaho, is spending a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Siriski, of Lincoln avenue.

John P. Fenner is able to be out after a slight illness.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The local members of the Greek church celebrated their Easter yesterday by throwing water on each other or on any one coming in reach of them. M. Lewis, a baker, on Liberty street, and the yard master on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, were among the lucky ones.

The Plainfield Billposting Company were in the village yesterday and put up bills for Downie & Wheeler's Circus, which appears at Plainfield, May 10.

The Atlas Concrete Construction Company, of New York, has commenced to lay sidewalks on the Twin State property and expect to lay forty thousand feet.

The Baraca class has formed a baseball team and will cross bat with the South Plainfield Field Club, Saturday afternoon on the local diamond.

Miss Lillian McCaffry, of Elizabeth, has returned home after visiting her sister, Mrs. P. F. Kaine, of Lakeview avenue.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has purchased a piece of property from J. F. TenEyck, opposite the coaling station.

George Steengraff reports work progressing rapidly on the Twin State Company property.

HENRY THE THIEF.

The Black Heart of the Greely Arctic Expedition.

STORY OF HIS EXECUTION.

The Order Issued by the Emaciated Commander and the Way It Was Carried Out—The Rifle Shot That Put an End to the Traitor.

One of the many tragedies of the Greely arctic expedition was the execution of Private Henry, who had been caught time after time stealing food from the secret store of the starving party. Henry alone was strong and active, thanks to the stolen food and to the fact that he did no labor he could possibly shirk.

Lieutenant Greely had warned and warned Henry and had punished him, but to no avail, and finally, after a particularly despicable act of theft, the commander, in fear that Henry's course would cause a general raid on the store of food and thus bring about the destruction of the whole party, condemned Henry to death.

The story of the execution, which makes a new page in history, is told in the American Magazine by Frank B. Copley, who got his data direct from the survivors of the expedition. He writes:

"All his lethargy gone, Greely dismissed the man, seized pencil and paper and, with trembling, emaciated fingers, wrote:

"Near Cape Sabine, June 6, 1884.

"Sergeants Brainard, Long and Frederick:

"Notwithstanding promises given by Private C. B. Henry yesterday, he has since, as acknowledged to me, tampered with seal thongs if not other food at the old camp. This pertinacity and audacity is the destruction of the party if not at once ended. Private Henry will be shot today, all care being taken to prevent his injuring any one, as his physical strength is greater than that of any two men. Decide the manner of his death by two ball and one blank cartridge. This order is imperative and absolutely necessary for any chance of life. A. W. GREELY."

"In the official report of the Lady Franklin bay expedition it is simply announced that 'shots were heard about 2 o'clock, and later the order was read to the general party.' The manner in which the order was executed here appears for the first time.

"Sergeants Brainard, Long and Frederick could not, as ordered, 'decide the manner of death by two ball and one blank cartridge.' Greely had failed to take into consideration that at this time the party had left only one serviceable rifle.

"The three sergeants drew lots to see who would do the shooting. When they had done so they bound themselves with an oath that the identity of the man thus chosen never should be revealed.

"Henry was at the tent on Cemetery ridge with all the other men when the time for putting him to death came. What was to take place, of course, was known only to the three sergeants and the commander. Two of the sergeants remained in the vicinity of the old hut, while the third went to the tent to bring Henry down.

"The man who went for Henry told him that he was wanted at the old camp to help carry up some more of the supplies that had been left there. Suspecting nothing, Henry readily accompanied the sergeant to the place chosen for putting him to death.

"Now, Greely had repeatedly cautioned the three sergeants to take no chances on Henry's getting away, for, although none at Cape Sabine knew the man's past history, enough of the man's black soul had been revealed to make his comrades feel that no crime could be put past him.

"So Brainard, Long and Frederick, cautioned by their commander and warned by their own knowledge of the man with whom they had to deal, had decided that Henry should be made to stoop to pick up something and that then he should be shot from behind. At least one of the sergeants had no more compunction about killing him than he would have had about killing a mad dog.

"But one of the other two men weakened at the last moment. To shoot a man in cold blood from behind, to send him into eternity with no opportunity to compose his soul, was too terrible a thing for him to stand. It was a mistake that nearly proved disastrous.

"Henry was told face to face that he was to be put to death in accordance with the order of the commander, and he was advised to kneel and make his peace with his God. At the same time the executioner appeared with his rifle at a convenient distance before the doomed man's eyes.

"Henry stood agape. He muttered something about something not being right. Near where the third sergeant stood an ax lay on the ground. Henry's gaze, searching the ground, encountered the ax. He sprang for it. A warning cry was raised. The sergeant who stood near the ax jumped and got his foot on it almost as Henry was upon him. There was a cry of 'Quick!' Even then there was danger of the executioner shooting his fellow sergeant if his aim was the least unsteady.

"But despite all he had been through the aim of the executioner was true. The rifle cracked, and the bullet sped, penetrating the breast of the man for whom it was intended when it was molded. Henry whirled, crying: 'You have tricked me! You have tricked me!' Again the rifle cracked. The second bullet went through Henry's head, and he fell dead."

A word from a friend is doubly enjoyable on dark days.

More Boys' Wash Suits Than Any Other Store

The caption tells the story in eight words. We are not exaggerating a particle when we tell you that we have more boys' wash suits than any other two Newark stores. We have to have in order to transact the immense business we do in this department. Our boys' wash suits are properly made to. We do not handle cheaply finished or skimped suits, and our materials are all chosen with the same care that characterizes the selection of our cloth goods. This is essentially the boys' wash suit store of Newark. Hundreds of different models and combinations. Plain white; white with color combinations; white with allover lace collars. Some trimmed with insertion and embroidery; many hand embroidered suits. Also galateas, chambrays and percales, in plain colors and an immense variety of pretty patterns. Russian and sailor blouse styles, in 2½ to 10 year sizes. Military, eton and sailor collars. Some with Dutch necks—

A PERILOUS FEAT.

It Took Nerves of Steel, a Cool Head and a Steady Eye.

The cathedral at Salisbury, England, lifts its spire 404 feet, which is quite a respectable height even in the day of skyscrapers. This spire is topped by a ball, and on the ball stands a cross. From the ground the ball looks to be about the size of an orange, but in reality it is greater than a man's height.

A distinguished American visiting Salisbury when a very young man had a curiously weird adventure on this spire. Workmen were at the time repairing it. The American saw them crawling round the slim steeple in the afternoon light like so many bugs on a bean stalk. The impulse came to him to climb the spire and stand on the horizontal beam of the cross. Accordingly, late in the afternoon, when the workmen had gone, the young man made his way up the stairs to the little window which opened to the workmen's staging. To run up the scaffolding to the ball was easy. Then came the slightly more difficult climb to the foot of the cross over the bulging curve of the ball. A short platform gave him foothold. He reached up and put his hands on the base of the cross and pulled himself up. To gain the crossarm was merely "shinning" up a good sized tree, and soon he stood on the horizontal timber and, reaching up, touched the top of the cross.

After enjoying his moment of triumph he slid to the foot of the cross and with his arms around the post slipped down over the big bulge of the ball. His feet touched nothing. The little plank from which he had reached up was not there.

Here was a Poe-like situation requiring a cool head and a steady eye. He could, of course, not look down. The clinging hold that he had to maintain on the bottom of the cross shortened the reach of his body and made it less than when he stood on the plank and reached up to the cross with his hands. He must drop so that his feet should reach the plank, for he would never be able to pull himself back if he should let himself down at arms' length, and his feet hung over empty air.

But this young American had a good head, which he immediately put to work. He looked up at the cross and tried to recall exactly the angle at which he had reached for it, to make his memory tell him just how the edge of that square post had appeared. A few inches to the right or to the left meant that he would drop into vacancy. Bending his head away back, he strained his eye up the cross and figured his angle of approach. He cautiously wormed himself to the right and made up his mind that here directly under his feet must be the plank. Then he dropped. And he lived to tell the tale.

ANTS THAT COOK.

They Make Dough, Form Cakes and Bake Them In the Sun.

The remarkable habits of the harvester ant have long been known to naturalists. Certain species not only harvest and store in granaries the seeds upon which they feed, but actually plant and cultivate an annual crop of their food seeds.

But now a still more wonderful tale is told of an ant which is common in Dalmatia, Messor barbarus. According to Professor Neger of the well known forestry school near Dresden, this ant not only cuts leaves and gathers seeds, but actually makes bread or biscuit.

The seeds are first sprouted, then carried into the sun and dried, then taken back to the underground chambers, where they are chewed into a dough. The dough is then finally made into tiny cakes, which are baked in the sun, then carefully stored for future use.

From these observations it appears that the art of cookery is not wholly confined to the human race. All cooking is done by the sun, whether in the ripening of fruit or in the baking of bread in a stove. The heat obtained from fuel is simply stored up sunlight set free.

The Arab and the native Mexican speak of ripe fruit as fruit which has been cooked in the sun. The ant has somehow learned the art of sun cookery, the saliva with which it moistens the grain probably taking the place of yeast and sweetening through changes set up by its influence upon starch.—American Medicine.

Positively Rude!

Because she wanted everybody else to know as well as she knew that she had small feet the woman who had offered to lend rubbers to a friend added apologetically, "But they are so big I don't suppose you can keep them on."

"Oh, I guess I can," said the friend serenely. "I have big feet too."

Since then the woman with small feet has refused to see her friend even when she brought the rubbers home.—New York Press.

The House of the Whispering Pines

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, By Anna Katharine Rohlfs

PROLOGUE

English detective stories have their waxing and their waning in public favor; their American imitations hold the readers' attention for a time; French and German acuteness in the devising of original plots engages our interest until the tales of newer Vidocqs are told, but Anna Katharine Green's detective stories, based on incidents of American life, are perennial bloomers. They know no permanent rivals in American liking.

In the writing of stories with originality of plot, skillful depiction of character, interest of incident, intricacy of mystery and boldness of denouement no foreign novelist can hope to compete for American favor with this American woman writer.

Read "The House of the Whispering Pines," a story of love and crime and mystery, told in her best vein. We warrant it to be one of her best and therefore one of the world's best.

CHAPTER I.

THE HESITATING STEP.

THE moon rode high, but ominous clouds were rushing toward it—clouds heavy with snow—I watched these clouds as I drove recklessly, desperately over the winter roads. I had just missed the desire of my life, the one precious treasure which I coveted with my whole undisciplined heart, and, not being what you call a man of self restraint, I was chafed by my defeat far beyond the bounds I have usually set for myself.

I rode on, hardly conscious of my course, till the rapid recurrence of several well known landmarks warned me that I had taken the longest route home and that in another moment I should be skirting the grounds of the Whispering Pines, our country clubhouse. The season was over and the clubhouse closed, and when, the great stack of chimneys coming suddenly into view against the broad disk of the still unclouded moon, I perceived a thin trail of smoke soaring up from their midst I realized with a shock that there should be no such sign of life in a house I myself had closed, locked and barred that very day.

I was the president of the club and felt responsible. I turned in at the lower gateway. For reasons which I need not now state there were no bells attached to my cutter, and consequently my approach was noiseless. I was careful that it should be so; also careful to stop short of the front door and leave my horse and sleigh in the black depths of the pine grove, pressing up to the walls on either side. I was sure that all was not as it should be inside these walls.

Our clubhouse stands, as it may be necessary to remind you, on a knoll thickly wooded with the ancient trees I have mentioned. These trees—all pines and of a growth unusual and of an aspect well nigh hoary—extend only to the rear end of the house, where a wide stretch of gently undulating ground opens at once upon the eye, suggesting to all lovers of golf the admirable use to which it is put from early spring to latest fall. Now links as well as parterres and driveways were lying under an even blanket of winter snow. No other building stood with a half mile in any direction.

I felt the isolation as I stepped from the edge of the trees and prepared to cross the few feet of open space leading to the main door. In some moods I should have paused and thought twice before attempting the door, behind which in the dark lurked the unknown with its naturally accompanying suggestion of peril. But rage and disappointment, working hotly within me, had left no space for fear. Rather rejoicing in the doubtfulness of the adventure, I pushed my way over the snow until my feet struck the steps. Here instinct caused me to stop and glance quickly up and down the building either way. Not a gleam of light met my eye from the smallest scintillating pane. Was the house as soundless as it was dark?

I listened, but heard nothing. I listened again and still heard nothing. Then I proceeded boldly up the steps and laid my hand on the door.

It was unlatched and yielded to my touch. Light or no light, sound or no sound, there was some one within. The fire which had sent its attenuated streak of smoke up into the moonlit air was burning yet on one of the many hearths within. I proceeded to enter and close the door carefully behind me. As I did so I cast an involuntary glance without. The sky was inky, and a few wandering flakes of the now rapidly advancing storm came whirling in, biting my cheeks and stinging my forehead.

Once inside I stopped short, possibly to listen again, possibly to assure myself as to what I had best do next. The silence was profound. Not a sound disturbed the great, empty building. My own footfall as I stirred seemed to wake extraordinary echoes. I had moved but a few steps, yet to my heightened senses the noise seemed loud enough to wake the dead. Instinctively I stopped and stood stock still. There was no answering cessation of movement—darkness, silence everywhere. Yet not quite absolute darkness. As my eyes grew accustomed to the place I found it possible to discern the outlines of the windows and locate the stairs and the arches where the side halls opened. I was even able to pick out the exact spot where the great antlers spread themselves above the hat rack, and presently the rack itself came into view, with its row of empty pegs, yesterday so full, today quite empty. That rack interested me, I hardly knew why, and regardless of the noise I made I crossed over to it and ran my hand along the wall underneath. The result was startling. A man's coat and hat hung from one of the pegs.

Would this hat and coat identify the intruder? I would strike a light and see. But this involved difficulties. The gas had been turned off that very morning, and I had no matches in my pocket. But I remembered where they could be found. I had seen them when I passed through the kitchen earlier in the day.

I began to move that way and presently came creeping back with a matchbox half full of matches in my hand. But I did not strike one then. I had just made a move to do so when the unmistakable sound of a door opening somewhere in the house made me draw back into as quiet and dark a place as I could find. This lay in the rear and at the right of the staircase, and as the sound had appeared to come from above it was the most natural retreat that offered. And a good one I found it.

I had hardly taken up my stand when the darkness above gave way to a faint glimmer and a step became audible coming from some one of the many small rooms in the second story, but slowly and with evident hesitation.

The light steadily increased with each lagging but surely advancing step. Then the uncertain step paused, and a sob came faintly to my ears, wrung from lips stiff with human anguish. The sound of the sigh struck shudderingly on my ear, followed by the renewal of the step and the almost immediate appearance on the stairs of a beautiful young girl of seventeen holding a candle in one hand and shielding her left cheek with the other.

Nothing could have prepared me for an encounter with this woman anywhere that night after what had passed between us and the wreck she had made of my life. But here, in a place so remote and desolate I had hesitated to enter it myself, what was I to think? How was I to reconcile so inconceivable a fact with what I knew of her in the past, with what I hoped from her in the future?

It was evident that some grisly fear, some staring horror, had met her in this strange retreat. Simple grief speaks with a different language from that which I read in her distorted features and tottering, slowly creeping form. What had happened above? She had escaped me to run upon what? My lips refused to ask, my limbs refused to move, and if I breathed at all I did so with such fierceness of restraint that her eyes never turned my way, not even when she had reached the lowest step and paused for a moment there, oscillating in pain or uncertainty. Her face was turned more fully toward me and I had just begun to discern something in it besides its tragic beauty when she made a quick move and blew out the candle she held.

Then there came a crash, followed by the sound of flying feet. She had flung the candlestick out of her hand and was hurriedly crossing the hall. I thought she was coming my way and instinctively drew back against the wall. But she stopped far short of me, and I heard her groping about, then give a sudden spring toward the front door. It opened, and the wind soughed in. I felt the chill of snow upon my face and realized the tempest. Then all was quiet and dark again. She had slid quickly out, and the door had swung to behind her.

Another instant and I heard the click of the key as it turned in the lock, heard it and made no outcry, such the spell, such the bewilderment, of my faculties! Then I felt all lesser emotions give way to an anxiety which demanded immediate action, for the girl had gone out without wraps or covering for her head, and my experience of the evening had told me how cold it was. I must follow and find her and rescue her if possible from the snow.

Throwing myself against the door, I shook it violently. It was immovable. Then I flew to the windows. Their fastenings yielded readily enough, but not the windows themselves. One had a broken cord, another seemed glued to its frame, and I was still struggling with the latter when I heard a sound which lifted the hair on my head and turned my whole attention back to what lay behind and above me. There was still some one in the house. To find Carmel Cumberland alone in this desolation was a mystifying discovery to which I had found it hard enough to reconcile myself. But Carmel here in company with an unknown another at the very moment when I had expected the fruition of my own joy—ah, that was to open hell's door in my breast, a possibility too intolerable to remain unsettled for an instant.

Leaving the window, I groped my way along the wall until I reached the rack where the man's coat and hat had hung. Nothing now hung from the rack. The wall was free from end to end. She had taken these articles of male apparel with her; she had not gone forth into the driving snow unprotected, but—

I did not know what to think. The groping she had done had been in this direction. She was searching for this hat and coat (a man's hat, a derby, as I had been careful to assure myself at the first handling), and in them she had gone home as she had probably come, and there was no man in the case, or if there were—

The doubt drove me to the staircase. I began my wary ascent. I had not the slightest fear. I was too full of cold rage for that.

The arrangement of rooms on the second floor was well known to me. I understood every nook and corner and could find my way about the whole place without a light. I took but one precaution, that of slipping off my shoes at the foot of the stairs. I wished to surprise the intruder. I was willing to resort to any expedient to accomplish this. The matches I carried in my pocket would make this possible if once I heard him breathing. I held my own breath as I stole softly up and waited for an instant at the top of the stairs to listen. There was an awesome silence everywhere, and I was hesitating whether to attack the front rooms first or to follow up a certain narrow hall leading to a rear staircase when I remembered the thin line of smoke which, rising from one of the chimneys, had first attracted my attention to the house. In that was my clew.

I knew that there was but one room on this floor where a fire could be lit. It lay a few feet beyond me down the narrow hall I have just mentioned. Why had I trusted everything to my ears when my nose would have been a better guide? As I took the few steps necessary a slight smell of smoke became very perceptible, and, no longer in doubt of my course, I pushed boldly on and, entering the half open door, struck a match and peered anxiously about.

Emptiness here just as everywhere else, a few chairs, a dresser—it was a ladies' dressing room—some smoldering ashes on the hearth, a lounge piled up with cushions, but no person. The sound I had heard had not issued from this room, yet something withheld me from seeking further. I paused just inside the door and when the match went out in my hand remained shivering there in the darkness, a prey to sensations more nearly approaching those of fear than any I had ever before experienced in my whole life.

Why I did not know. There seemed to be no reason for this excess of feeling. I had no dread of attack. My apprehension was of another sort. Besides, any attack here must come from the rear—from the open doorway in which I stood—and my dread lay before me, in the room itself, which, as I have already said, appeared to be totally empty. I had forgotten the intruder. The interest which had carried me thus far had become lost in a fresher one of which the beginning and ending lay hidden within the four walls I now stared upon, unseeing. Not to see and yet to feel—did that make the horror? If so another lighted match must help me out. I struck one while the thought was hot within me and again took a look at the room.

I noted but one thing new, but that made me reel back till I was halfway into the hall. Then a certain dogged persistency I possess came to my rescue, and I re-entered the room at a leap and stood before the lounge and its pile of cushions. They were numerous—all that the room contained and more. Chairs had been stripped, window seats denuded and the whole collection disposed here in a set way which struck me as unnatural.

But at this point my second match went out.

Thoroughly roused now (you will say by what?), I felt my way [illegible] the room and to the head of the [illegible] case. I remembered the candle and candlestick I had heard thrown down on the lower floor by Carmel Cumberland. I would secure them and come back and settle these uncanny doubts. I had a hunt for the candlestick and a still longer one for the candle, but finally I recovered both and, lighting the latter, felt myself for the first time more or less master of the situation.

Rapidly regaining the room in which my interest was now centred, I set the candlestick down on the dresser and approached the lounge. Hardly knowing what I feared or what I expected to find, I tore off one of the cushions and flung it behind me. More cushions were revealed, but that was not all.

Escaping from the edge of one of them I saw a shiny tress of woman's hair. I gave a gasp and pulled off more cushions. Then I fell on my knees, struck down by the greatest horror which a man can feel. Death lay before me—violent, uncalled for death—and the victim was a woman.

It was she—she indeed. Dead—Adelaide, the woman I had planned to wrong that very night and who had thus wronged me! For a moment I could take in nothing but this one astounding fact; then the how and why woke in maddening curiosity within me.

But beyond the ever accusing, protuberant stare those features told nothing, and, steeling myself to the situation, I made what observation I could of her condition and the surrounding circumstances, for this was my betrothed wife. Whatever my intentions, however far my love had strayed under the spell cast over me by her sister—the young girl who had just passed out—Adelaide and I had been engaged for many months. Our wedding day was even set.

But that was all over now—ended, as her life was ended, suddenly, incomprehensibly and by no stroke of God. Even the jewel on her finger was gone, the token of our betrothal. This was to be expected. She would be apt to take it off before committing herself to a fate that proclaimed me a traitor to this symbol. I should see that ring again. I should find it in a letter filled with bitter words. I would not think of it or of them now. I would try to learn how she had committed this act, whether by poison or—

It must have been by poison. No other means would suggest themselves to one of her refined sense. But if so why those marks on her neck, growing darker and darker as I stared at them?

My senses reeled as I scrutinized those marks. Small, delicate, but deadly, they stared upon me from either side of her white neck till nature could endure no more, and I tottered back against the farther wall, beholding no longer room nor lounge nor recumbent body, but a young girl's exquisite face, set in lines which belied her seventeen years and made futile any attempt on my part at self deception when my reason inexorably demanded an explanation of this death. As suicide it was comprehensible, as murder not, unless—

And it had been murder!

I sank to the floor as I fully realized this.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

The wane of the New York Hippodrome season shows no abatement of public interest in the three great spectacular shows and circus, "Marching Through Georgia" with its big cotton plantation scene; building of the Pontoon Bridge before the audience, the march of Sherman's army to the sea, etc., and 200 extra jubilee singers and dancers are the chief features of this Southern spectacle. The Indian "Ballet of Niagara" with the beautiful Niagara Falls scene and "The International Cup" with its many beautiful stage effects and lively music as well as the circus made up of twelve star arenic features including the Great Albas, who slides down a tight wire on his head; Clown Armando and his funny boxing kangaroo, etc., contribue to what is undoubtedly the biggest performance of this kind on two continents.

Advices from Fez, dated April 20, said that all were safe in that capital, and that a route of escape was open.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS.

Plainfield People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them.

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment.

Passages are frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is constant day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sick kidneys, backache and urinary disorders.

Plainfield evidence proves their worth.

Mrs. P. Manchester, 120 Lafayette place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I can again endorse Doan's Kidney Pills and willingly allow the further publication of my former testimonal for the benefit of other kidney sufferers. I was afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble for a long time and I doctored without being helped to any extent. In July, 1905, I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and deciding to try them, I got a supply. They greatly relieved me and I have not had much need for a kidney medicine since."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

The Water Problem.

The cities and town in the central section of this State, including nearly all the counties of Middlesex, Somerset and Union, are practically face to face with the water supply preblem; a problem which must be solved in the not distant future.

Fifty years ago the city of Elizabeth was two little towns, Elizabeth Town and Elizabethport; New Brunswick was something of a trade centre, Plainfield was little more than a village, Rahway was a promising manufacturing place, and many of the present boroughs along the lines of the Pennsylvania and Central railroads had no existence.

Then the total population of all three counties was less than 85,000; now it is over 300,000. Then Elizabeth got its water supply from the Elizabeth Creek, Rahway from the Rahway River, and Plainfield, Somerville and Raritan from wells owned by individual citizens.

Hardly a place in the entire central section referred to, with the exceptions of Somerville and Raritan, but is approaching the limit of its present water supply. Elizabeth long ago added to the creek flowage a score of wells at the Hummock; another score, more or less, at the Seven Bridges, and a good-sized pipe line from the Netherwood district. The latter also supplies Plainfield, Westfield, Cranford and Roselle. Elizabeth occasionally gets some water from Middlesex.

Plainfield is looking for a new supply. Cranford recently spent $4,000 to ascertain if it could obtain a supply of its own, and has learned that its proposed scheme is not practicable. Somerville and Raritan have enough to last for at least fifty years if it is not taken away from them.

The only natural source in this district not already utilized to about the full extent is the Raritan River and its tributaries, the North Branch and the South Branch rivers. The former is a small stream, but the latter takes a circuitous course through Hunterdon and Warren counties and has its source near Budd Lake in Morris county.

The Raritan is not a large stream, and its avaliability as a water supply is being so rapidly reduced by the sewage poured into it from the municipalities along its banks that the State has interposed to save it by legal process and by compelling the disposal of sewage in some other way.

The problem which confronts central New Jersey cities and towns, therefore, is much the same as that which is yet to be solved in the Passaic Valley, viz.: The ultimate impounding and careful distribution of the whole flowage of the Raritan River.

Where and how this should be done; whether by the State itself or by a large private corporation, are questions under consideration now. There is no more doubt that something of the kind must be done in a comparatively short time than there is that the present supply will be insufficient if the cities and towns in Middlesex, Somerset and Union continue to grow in the next twenty-five years as they have in the past quarter century. It is the Passaic problem over again, but it ought never to be allowed to get into such a tangle. The conditions are fully understood, and the problem should be solved in the light of past experiences and future necessities.—Newark News.

HERE AND THERE.

In contrast to the story chronicled on Monday of the killing of a robin comes the story of the saving of a bird's life yesterday. An automobilist passing through Grove street at about 6 o'clock last evening was attracted by a crowd near the bridge across the brook. He saw a sight which raised at least one boy many degrees in his estimation. Hanging to a limb of a tree forty feet from the ground was a robin who was a prisoner in the toils of a string which it had probably picked up to weave into its nest. All the efforts of those about were insufficient to release the bird and finally a youngster climbed the tree and cut the string releasing the bird. And he was cheered after the feat.

FRESHMEN NO MATCH FOR THE SOPHOMORES.

A one-sided game in the interclass baseball series of the High School was played at Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon between the sophomores and freshmen, the former winning by a score of 24 to 9. Newell, who pitched for the freshmen, went to pieces in the fourth session beginning with allowing the first two men up to walk. After that it was a procession. Rickerts, on the mound for the sophs, held his opponents safe at all times and only let up after his team had acquired a safe lead.

Score by innings:

Sophomores	1	1	0	8	1	4	4	5	x	—24
Freshmen	2	1	3	1	0	0	1	1	0	— 9

Ackerman as Host.

Governor Wilson and the Senate of New Jersey are the guests today of Ernest R. Ackerman, the retiring president of the New Jersey Senate. A luncheon at the Hotel Astor, New York, was followed by a box party at the New Amsterdam Theatre, where the "Pink Lady" is being presented. Among the guests of the Senator were Republican County Chairman Frank H. Smith and former Judge William N. Runyon.

First Anniversary Dance.

The first anniversary dance of the Pastime Social Club held in Sebring's auditorium, last night, was a successful and enjoyable affair. It was largely attended. A feature of the dance was the music furnished by Charles Suhr's orchestra. The committee in charge comprised Edward F. Conshay, Monroe A. Nichols, Robert T. Skinner, John P. Connolly and George E. Howe.

Gave Dinner Party.

A dinner party was given at the home of Mr and Mrs. Albert C. Clark, of Jackson avenue, last evening, in honor of the engagement of Miss Ida Smith and Clarence Brokaw. William Smith, Elmer Cutting and Miss Smith entertained the guests with vocal and instrumental music.

Will Present Farce Comedy.

"Men, Maids and Matchmakers," a laughable farce comedy, will be presented at Saengerbund Hall tomorrow night by the Nonpareil Social Club. The entertainment will be followed by a dance. Reserved seats can be obtained at the hall box office tomorrow afternoon between 2 and 5 o'clock.

—The B. S. F. Club was entertained last night at the home of Miss Ida Quinn, on Stone street.

ACKERMAN AS HOST

Governor and Members of Senate Dined at Astor by Latter's President.

TOAST WILSON FOR PRESIDENT.

Democrats and Republicans Alike Applaud Sentiment—Dignitaries Exchange Felicitations—Governor Makes Speech.

Ernest R. Ackerman, the retiring president of the New Jersey Senate, gave a dinner to Governor Woodrow Wilson and nineteen of the twenty-one Senators at the Hotel Astor, New York, last night, after their return from the New Amsterdam Theatre, where they had a good laugh over "The Pink Lady." It was an informal affair, the Governor and Senators appearing in business suits.

Mr. Ackerman proposed a toast to the President of the United States. Before the Senators sat down Senator George S. Silzer, Democrat, proposed a toast "to the next President of the United States." When the hubbub had quited Governor Wilson, as he raised his glass of Appolanaris, laughingly said:

"I suppose, gentlemen, you mean Governor Dix." Governor Dix was attending another dinner at the time in another part of the hotel.

Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Republican, came back with, "No we refer to the present Governor of New Jersey." The toast was sipped amid applause.

After several Senators had regretted Mr. Ackerman's retirement and praised his genius as presiding officer, Governor Wilson told the company how glad he was that the Senate of New Jersey was a small body because it seemed to bring understanding of one another.

"I regret to see that certain newspaper correspondents in reporting enactments of the Legislature at Trenton had used the expression: 'The Legislature has yielded to the pressure brought to bear on it by the Governor or someone.' I haven't been aware of any yielding. All I have been aware of is that hearty co-operation of men seeking the same ends for the accomplishment of obvious reforms."

The Governor said the old age of national politics in city or State affairs was happily ended. "The difference between men now is," he declared, "whether a man is a progressive or a reactionary. It is the difference between a man willing to admit he lives in a new age and is willing to yield to the demands of that age or whether he is too blind to see the new age, or, seeing, is unwilling to yield. I don't agree with Senator Bradley, who said that we had accomplished everything. I do say we have accomplished about everything in sight—everything that has been formally proposed for action. It is not that New Jersey has been backward among her sister States. She has merely paused a little longer before taking action. When she did act, however, she raised herself to the level of the most progressive State in the Union."

The Senators sent committees to another part of the hotel to convey respects to President Taft, who was dining with the 69th Regiment. When Senator O'Gorman, through his son-in-law, Dudley Field Malone, learned that Governor Wilson was in the house, he came to the dinner and chatted pleasantries with him for nearly ten minutes. William N. Runyon was among the guests present.

Will Open Course on Saturday.

The Park Golf Club course will be open for general play on Saturday, but it will be necessary to use the temporary greens on the fifth, seventh and ninth holes. The active season will be started early in May, and the schedule will be ready for publication within a short time. Considerable time has been expended on the course and it is the belief that it will be better this season than ever before.

Relief Corps to Entertain.

The Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will hold a social and entertainment at its rooms in Reform Hall, tomorrow evening. An interesting program of music and recitations is being prepared. A good time is expected. Refreshments will be served. A silver offering will be received.

Will Give a Bible Reading

W. W. Newberry, of Nyack, New York, will give a Bible reading tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the church on Craig place, under the auspices of the Christian and Missionary Alliance. This meeting will be preceded by a short business session.

CELEBRATE FOUNDING OF ODD FELLOWSHIP

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., in addition to working the third degree last night, celebrated the ninety-third anniversary of the founding of Odd Fellowship, with an appropriate program, which was in charge of Fred Rose, noble grand. There was a large attendance of Odd Fellows and all were much interested in the remarks of a reminiscent nature.

Among those who spoke were Past Grand William Crater, John Page, Charles Yonug, Charles Ludgate, Guerilermo Thorn, Leonard Bennett, T. C. Smith, and Clark Burd. There were also vocal solos by Joseph Gray, John Page, David Patterson, R. W. Wilson, Leonard Bennett, Fred Cross, John Cornell and cornet solos by George Bennett; also recitations by J. D. Brown.

After the entertainment, refreshments were served and the members enjoyed a social hour. It was announced that on Sunday night, May 7, all Odd Fellows, together with their families were invited to attend divine services at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, when Rev. Edwin Shaw, the pastor, will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion. The Odd Fellows will meet at their rooms that evening at 7:30 o'clock and proceed in a body to the church.

PARENT-TEACHER ASS'N ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Officers were elected and plans for the coming year were discussed at the annual meeting of the Parent Teacher Association of the Irving School, yesterday afternoon. It was also decided to merge the associations of the Irving and the new Jefferson school, under the name of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Irving and Jefferson schools, and the next meeting will be held at the latter school next Thurday afternoon.

There was a discussion of the plans for the Mothers' Congress to be held in this city, November 7-8, and it was reported that about 150 delegates from all parts of the State will be in the city to attend the two-days' session.

The association elected these officers for the year: President, Mrs. George O. Stevens; vice-president, Miss Genevieve Petrie; secretary, Mrs. A. E. Force; treasurer, Mrs. Wallace R. Clark. Following the meeting there was a social time and refreshments were served.

ANCHOR LODGE HEARS THE LOTUS GLEE CLUB

Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., provided a delightful "ladies' night" affair, last night, to which the wives, sisters and sweethearts of the members were invited. There were about two hundred members of the lodge and their guests present and all thoroughly enjoyed the fine program presented by the Lotus Glee Club and Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith. The Masons proved to be admirable hosts and the women were delighted with the entertainment.

The program was as follows:

Hungaris Huzzars, Victor Herbert, Lotus Glee Club; recital, "A Country Romance," Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; "An Irish Love Song," Margaret Lang, Harvey Hindermeyer; "Break, Break, Break," Weiske, Lotus Glee Club; "Three for Jack," Squier, Charles L. Lewis; "A Dumb Waiter," Phelps, Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; "Awake Beloved," Dodd, G. Morgan Stricklett; "Old Cabin Home," Frank J. Smith, Lotus Glee Club; "A Ting Gee-Gee," Leslie, Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; "King Charles," White, L. R. Boals. The program was concluded with "An Act of Up-to-Date Grand Opera," the words being by George Ade and the music arranged by Frank J. Smith, accompanist for the Lotus Glee Club. Every number was received with generous applause.

At the conclusion of the program, refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and lemonade, were served under the direction of the general committee comprising J. Stephen Higham, James Dodd, Willard Maxim and Charles L. Lewis.

Brokaw—Lane.

Miss Mabel Lane and John Brokaw, were married last evening at the residence of Rev. F. D. Tildon, pastor of Bethel chapel. A brother and sister of the groom and Mr. and Mrs. Schenck accompanied the bridal couple and were witnesses to the marriage ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Brokaw will reside in this city upon their return from a honeymoon trip.

WAGEEARNERS PAY

The Taxes as Well as Duties According to A. H. Atterbury.

TARIFF NO VITAL FORCE.

"Protectionists Are Wrong in the Light of Established Rules of Political Economy," Says Speaker.

A good sized audience assembled at the Y. M. C. A. Hall last night to hear the second of A. H. Atterbury's talks on the tariff. He said that "Protectionists" were always very vague in explaining what a tariff was and how it worked. They seldom referred to it as a tax, or showed what a heavy burden it was on the wage earners. He explained again that a duty on imported articles is simply added to the price and is passed on from the importer to the wholesaler, and then to the retailer, and then to the consumer, and is eventually paid by the consumer. He said that taxes were a necessary evil and that we could not condemn the tariff merely because it was a tax. The vital objection to it is that it is a bad and a wasteful tax, and that while it brings a small amount of revenue to the government, it involves a large amount of absolute waste and also helps to build up large fortunes in industries which can be monopolized. He instanced crockery and tin-plate as good examples of imported and domestic articles selling side by side; the price of the imported article raised by a duty and the price of the domestic article raised to correspond, and pointed out that if you bought the imported article the tax went to the government, and if you bought the domestic article it went to the manufacturer. There is no way to avoid or evade this burden.

He then took up the question of who gets the benefit from the tax and gave several specific instances showing how enormous profits were made in certain industries by means of the tariff. He mentioned especially such products as of lemons, refined sugar, lumber, salt, and steel rails and beams. He then showed that many duties were so high that it did not pay to import the foreign articles at all, and that in those cases, while the consumer paid the increased price due to the tariff, the government did not get one cent of revenue from it. He said this was particularly true of cheaper grades of clothing and underclothing; in fact, nearly all the cheaper kinds of manufactured articles. He criticised the "Protectionists" for never getting down to the real facts, but always dwelling vaguely on their claims that a tariff raised wages, built up industry and created prosperity. A tariff is a tax; it has no vital force; it cannot create anything which did not exist before; it cannot build up one industry except at the expense of another; it cannot make one man rich except by making another man poor! The claims of the "Protectionists" are entirely unsound in the light of the established principles of political economy, and their facts when tested by the facts of American history are found to be distorted and baseless.

At the conclusion of the address there was a general discussion of the subject for about half an hour.

ICE 40 CENTS A HUNDRED; INCREASE OF FIVE CENTS.

It was announced today that the retail price of ice for the summer will be forty cents a hundred, an increase of five cents over that of last season. The Plainfield Ice and Supply Company, which has the exclusive sale of ice here, will handle the output of the Hygeia plant on Arlington avenue, as well as the supply from its ice houses at Watchung.

VanZandt—Parker.

Miss Nellie Garretson VanZandt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter S. VanZandt, of Richmond street, and William Frank Parker, of New Brunswick, were married at 11:30 o'clock this morning by Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, at his home on Second place. The ceremony was witnessed by relatives of the couple from this city and New Brunswick. The bride and groom left on a wedding trip and upon their return will reside in New Brunswick.

Five Hundred Club Outing.

Fourteen members of the Thursday Night Five Hundred Club enjoyed its annual trip to New York, last night. After partaking of a fine dinner at Shanley's, the party attended the performance of "Get Rich Quick Wallingford."

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Stevens, Miss Helen Adams, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Parse and Rev. J. Y. Broek, of this city, are spending the week at Atlantic City.

MASONS AND HELPERS WANT RAISE IN WAGES

Unless their demands are acceded to in the meantime all the union bricklayers and hod-carriers in the city will go on strike Monday morning. The men have asked for a raise in pay which the employers cannot see their way clear to grant at present and it is probable that all present building operations will be tied up for an indefinite period.

The new scale as outlined by the masons calls for $5.20 an eight hour day instead of $4.80 which they are now receiving. The hod-carriers want $3 per day instead of $2.80. The new rate would mean sixty-five cents an hour for masons, the same as is allowed in New York.

The new rate has been under discussion for several months but heretofore the contractors were aided in their refusal to grant the increase because of slackness in building operations. With the advent of spring and the consequent rush of work it gives the employes the advantage. Unless some understanding could be reached a strike at this time would result in serious losses to the bosses.

TEA AND MUSICALE AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH

A social event in the parish of the Church of the Holy Cross will be a tea and musicale to be held in the parish house adjoining the church on Friday afternoon, May 5, from 3 to 6. Mrs J. O. Stevens and Mrs. F. B. Ball, of the entertainment chapter of the Women's Guild, have charge of the arrangements. Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston and Mrs. Kent Bender will entertain the guests with violin and vocal selections. Miss Ida Randolph Smalley will render sereval instrumental selections.

Tea will be served at small tables, a member of the Guild presiding at each table, and the young women of the parish assisting in serving. In connection with the tea a cake and apron sale will be held. Mrs. Roundey who afforded so much pleasure in the art of palmistry at the time of the bazar last autumn, will be on hand to read all the pleasant good fortunes in store for those who would read the future.

A silver offering at the door will be gathered to help on the good work of the Guild, although the tea is primarily given to afford an opportunity for friends, well wishers and members of the church to meet together for a social hour or more.

PARK AVE. CHURCH'S ERA OF PROSPERTTY

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church and congregation was held last night with Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the pastor, presiding. Clerk E. F. Dorman, acted as secretary of the meeting, reading the reports for the year.

The treasurer's report showed receipts of $5,373.56, with a balance of $751. The receipts for the repair fund were $1,585.01 and there is a balance of $36.16. Including the above and all financial statements of the church the total receipts were $11,201.79 and there is a balance of $1,019.27. The condition of every department of the church is the best in its history.

Robert H. Lowry, William N. Runyon and John H. Doane were elected trustees for two years. Mr. Maguire took occasion to comment upon the excellent condition of the church and of the loyal co-operation of the people during the past year.

DONALD L. GREENFEAF HELPS FIGHT FOREST FIRES

Donald L. Greenleaf, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Greenleaf, of East Ninth street, a junior at Williams College, is among a large number of Williams College students who have been fighting forest fires for the past few days.

Some of the young men have had narrow escapes from serious injury. One tract of 1,700 acres near North Adams was completely stripped of its trees and foliage. Greenleaf will be remembered as a student at Leal's school.

Talks on "Palestine."

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will, on Sunday night begin a series of talks on "Palestine." They will be given on succeeding Sunday nights and after the talk, Dr. Herring will display about fifteen views taken by himself. The talks will cover a period of about two months.

LOSES HIS FOOT

George Lund Caught in the Railroad Tracks Escapes Death.

SHOWS WONDERFUL NERVE.

"Take Home My Books," He Says to Joseph Blimm—Shock Great But Boy Will Recover.

No greater exhibition of nerve has ever been noticed in these parts than that given yesterday by George Lund, the fifteen-year-old son of Peter Lund, of East Sixth street. The youth was making a short cut to his home and while crossing the Central Railroad tracks at the Washington street bridge caught his foot in the switch points of a side track and before he could extricate the foot was run down by a shunting train losing the foot.

The nervy young fellow saw the car backing down upon him and sacrificed his foot to save his life. He threw himself out and away from the cars and when picked up five minutes later calmly asked Joseph Blimm, who was one of the first to know of the accident, to "please take home my school books."

Ambrose Smalley, a carpenter, who was working on the addition to the Union Beef Company's plant, saw the accident and notified police headquarters. Young Lund did not appear to be the least disturbed over his misfortune and never whimpered when his mangled foot was removed from the rails. First aid was given by the police and the youth was rushed to Muhlenberg hospital, where the foot was amputated.

Young Lund never lost consciousness until put under ether and seemed to worry more about his books, the school and his parents than he he did about his own fearful wound. From present indications he will recover. Doctors W. H. Murray and Frederick Hughes attended the wounded boy.

Many complaints have been received recently of trespassers on the Central's tracks and several boys have been arrested on charges of stealing coal, breaking signal lamps and other misdemeanors, but Lund has never been in any of these scrapes, on the contrary has always borne the best of reputations. He is a quiet unassuming lad and studious and it is believed that he was in a hurry to get home making a short cut across the tracks for the purpose. It was suggested this morning by a Central Railroad detective that the accident would prove an object lesson to boys in general.

EARLY MORNING BLAZE DESTROYS SCOTCH PLAINS BARN

An old and unused barn located on Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains, and belonging to Fred Clark, of that place was destroyed by fire shortly after 2 o'clock this morning. The Scotch Plains fire department responded to an alarm turned in by officer Rabig, but were unable to save the structure. Charles Apgar, of Califon who has been cutting timber on David Kenney's land, near Mount St. Mary College, had a circular saw and portable boiler stored in the place and all were destroyed. His loss is about $300. It is believed the barn was set on fire by tramps as they have been using it as a sleeping place.

The flames were noticed in this city by Patrolman MacDonald and he thought the fire was in the city limits. He called to Patrolman Flatley, who was standing at East Third and Richmond streets, and the latter pulled box 52. The firemen quickly learned that the blaze was over the boundary line and returned to their houses.

Planning for New Nursery.

The officers and committee in charge of The Day Nursery, met this morning and discussed ways and means and several other matters pertaining to the operation of the nursery. As many improvements will have to be made, it is not expected that possession of the new nursery on West Front street will be possible before September 1. The annual meeting of the City Union of The King's Daughters will be held Thursday afternoon, May 4, when officers will be elected and reports will be presented for the year.

Autoist Fined $5.

George Ammon, who was charged with running his auto over the speed limit, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Recorder Dolliver, this morning. The evidence was against him and he was fined $5.

Y. W. C. A. Outing.

The members of the Y. W. C. A. will enjoy their weekly outing Saturday starting from the rooms at 3 o'clock. If stormy the affair will be postponed.

STANLEY VARDON WEDS MISS MAE C. NEIGHBOR

Miss Mae C. Neighbor, daughter of Mrs. Mary Neighbor, of East Second street, and Stanley Vardon, of West Third street, were married last evening at 7:30. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich at his home on West Seventh street, in the presence of only the attending witnesses. Mrs. William Smith, sister of the bride, was matron-of-honor, and Fred Baker, of Newark, acted as best man.

Miss Neighbor wore a becoming gown of white lace over white silk and large white hat with willow plumes. A bunch of bride's roses was fastened to the corsage. Mrs Smith wore gray voile and carried carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, which was attended by thirty relatives and near friends. Mr. and Mrs. Vardon left later for Atlantic City, where they will spend several days. On returning they will reside temporarily at Mrs. Neighbor's home.

Both young people have a large number of friends in the city and borough as was shown by the numerous presents they received. The array included furniture, checks, silverware and bric-a-brac. Mr. Vardon is employed in the circulation department of the Courier-News.

MRS. PEARSON'S LOSS; $90 STOLEN AT NIGHT

While Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Pierson, of East Fifth street, were in New York, last night someone unlocked a bureau drawer in Mrs. Pierson's sleeping apartments and extracted $90 in money from a pocketbook, leaving behind a small bank containing several dollars and about $200 worth of jewelry. The loss was discovered by Mrs. Pierson on her return from Manhatan at about midnight.

Police headquarters was immediately notified and Roundsman Maurice Higgins sent to investigate. There was no evidence of forcible entry to the house or rooms and it was Higgins opinion that some one in the house, familiar with the rooms and aware of the money repository who committed the crime.

Further investigations were made this morning by Detective Sergeant John Flynn and Chief Kiely. Their opinions coincided with those of Roundsman Higgins and a search is being made for a suspect who was a boarder in the house.

TITLE IN WIFE'S NAME DISPUTE OVER LAND

According to a complaint filed in the Court of Chancery by Robert Newton Crane, counsel for Frederick R. Stevenson, of Lincoln, Mrs. Stevenson will have to show why she bought some land in her own name when, it is asserted, she was instructed to buy it in the joint name of herself and husband. In the meantime Frank P. Webb, who occupies the property of the Stevenson at Lincoln, has been restrained from paying rent to Mrs. Stevenson until the case is called for a hearing before Vice Chancellor Stevens on May 2 at Trenton.

There is also involved the payment of some insurance money in which the joint names of the couple are concerned. While Mr. Stevenson was looking up some farm lands, in Oklahoma, so it is said, Mrs. Stevenson carried out a contract for the purchase of some land across the road from their home at Lincoln, but for some reason not yet explained she had the deed made out in her own name instead of that of herself and her husband.

The transaction was completed and the exchange of titles made on March 1, 1908. The fire which occurred in December, 1908, and which perhaps is the cause of most of the trouble was settled in short order by the fire insurance companies.

Mrs. Stevenson is well known as a breeder of fancy Chihuahua hairless dogs which she has exhibted with much success.

A Sacred Concert.

A sacred concert will be given at Bethel chapel on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in which some of the best colored talent in this city will take part. Miss Patsey Landes will have charge of the music and a silver offering will be taken.

Y. W. C. A. Exhibit.

The Y. W. C. A. will present its annual exhibit of work at Shirley & Johnston's store on Saturday and those interested are cordially invited to inspect the same.

JERSEY CENTRAL TERMINAL PLANS

Report That Road Has Signed Million and Half Contract to Get Tunnel Connection.

TRACKS TO PENNSY'S STATION.

Jersey City, April 27.—That the Jersey Central Railroad, in an effort to solve the puzzle of tunnel connection with New York, will soon begin operations changing its terminal point at Communipaw, is the report in circulation here based on apparently reliable information. The scheme, it is asserted, is to abandon for through passenger trains the present ferry-house and station and to run the tracks from a point between Van Nostand avenue station and the present Communipaw station (not terminal) into the old Pennsylvania terminal at Jersey City. The total cost of this improvement will approximate a million and a half of dollars and a contract to perform the work was signed by a big New York construction company, it is alleged, within the last fortnight.

For more than two years, the Jersey Central officials have been endeavoring to obtain tunnel connections and have had considerable correspondence with William G. McAdoo with that end in view. The only seemingly feasible proposition advanced was to run a tunnel spur from the tube at the Pennsylvania station to the present Jersey Central terminal. This link, however, it is stated, would mean an expense of one million dollars. Consequently the idea was abandoned and the change in the direction of the trackage was considered as the best solution. To build a tunnel direct would be out of the question, it is said, for the passenger business of no single railroad could provide for the interest on the investment. Under the plan, said to have been agreed upon, the Jersey Central would be able to use the Hudson Tunnel company's tube at the old Pennsylvania station, the only inconvenience being that the passengers would leave the trains at Jersey City and transfer to the tunnel cars.

The present terminal of the Jersey Central will not be entirely adandoned, so the story goes, for it is asserted that it is the road's intention to use it for some local trains and for freight.

Another reported improvement soon to be made concerns Newark, for it is asserted that the Jersey Central plans to raze its present structure in Broad street and to replace it with a handseme and commodious terminal building.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH GIVES RECEPTION TO NEW PASTOR.

Rev. C. C. Cain, the new pastor, and his wife, were given a reception at Grace M. E. church, Tuesday evening, the affair being largely attended by members and friends of the church. It was the first opportunity the people had for greeting the pastor and his wife, as they only recently took possession of the parsonage and are now settled there. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church and Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church; together with Dr. H. K. Carroll, were present and extended congratulations to pastor and people, expressing the hope that the coming year would be a prosperous one for both.

During the evening an excellent musical program was presented, including selections by an orchestra. The affair was arranged by the Ladies' Aid Society of the church and during the evening refreshments were served. Dr. Carroll and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson and Rev. Mr. Kemble each made short addresses, their words being full of cheer and encouragement to all present.

Want Insurance Money.

The Plainfield Firemen's Relief Association met last night, and decided to take steps to collect the 2 per cent. due it from insurance representatives. It seems that some of the men have been rather slow in paying the usual percentage and the association appointed V. W. Nash, Sr., John Kriney and Victor Lorton to attend to the matter.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, who has been suffering from throat trouble, was able to be out yesterday and is much improved.

WHAT CURES ECZEMA?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D. D. D., can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbors unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription.

Because—We know that it gives instant relief to that torturing itch.

Because—D. D. D. starts the cure at the foundation of the trouble.

Because—It cleanses, soothes and heals the skin, clearing away pimples and blotches over night.

Because—It enables Nature to repair the ravages of disease.

Because—The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most serious cases show that D. D. D. is today recognized as the absolutely reliable Eczema Cure.

Drop into our store today, just to talk over the merits of this wonderful Prescription. We will also explain the value of D. D. D. as a household remedy.

VOTE AT SPRINGFIELD FAVORS A TOWN HALL.

Favorable opinions regarding a new municipal building for Springfield Township were expressed at a special meeting of the voters of that place Tuesday night. The meeting was held in the assembly hall of the Springfield High School. Thirty-five persons attended, twenty-nine voting in favor of a new hall and six against.

It was the consensus of opinion of those talking on the matter that a structure could not be put up for less than $10,000, but the price was left with the Township Committee, which body will look into the matter. The committee will have plans drawn and get estimates and put the whole matter before the voters at the election in November.

Springfield has a town hall fund of $2,269.88, this money being the insurance collected from the fire which destroyed the old township building some years ago. There is also a surplus of $3,000 in the hands of Treasurer J. Edgar Meeker, which could be transferred to the town hall fund.

The Township Committee called the meeting with the idea of getting the sentiment of the voters on the question. Justice of the Peace Albert P. Cain was chairman, M. H. Higgins, secretary, School Trustee James Fister and Township Clerk Edward C. Townley, tellers at the balloting.

The trustees of the Baptist church have engaged workers to tear down the sheds and fences at the side and in the rear of the church. They are also planning to erect a new building for teams and to plant shrubs around the grounds in place of the fences. As soon as these alterations are made the grounds will be leveled and the lawn beautified; a tennis court will also be added.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield's sewage disposal beds are too small to accommodate the sewage of the town, and the matter has been causing the Council much thought. At a special meeting of the Council Tuesday evening it was decided to ask the town surveyor to prepare plans for additions to the present disposal beds on what is known as the sewer farm. The Council also did some work on compiling the tax budget, but as all of the departments had not reported, the complete budget could not be made up. It is generally admitted that the sum to be raised by taxation this year will not be far from $100,000.

In order to comply with the requirements of the Geran Election law, Westfield will have to have another ward or have two polling places of the First Ward.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF A. M. E. CHURCH STARTS

More than 250 delegates were present at the opening of the thirty-ninth annual session of the New Jersey annual conference of the African Methodist Episcopal church, which convened yesterday morning at St. James A. M. E. church, Union street, Newark.

The conference was opened shortly after 10 o'clock by Bishop Wesley J. Gaines, of Atlanta. Devotional service was conducted by Rev. Daniel J. Brown, of Camden, and Rev. John W. Cooper and Arthur H. Newton.

Following the services the roll call was read, which was followed by the election of officers for the conference. The election resulted as follows: Rev. Harry P. Anderson, of Atlantic City, chief secretary; William W. Johnston, of Bordentown, recording secretary, and G. M. Rice, of Camden, marshal.

After the election of officers luncheon was served the delegates by the members of th church.

The congregation of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will give a reception to Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Kemble, at the church, this evening.

YESTERDAY IN BASEBALL.

1888—Pitcher Ray Caldwell, of the Highlanders, born in Corydon, Pa. Caldwell jumped into prominence whole twirling for the McKeesport club of the O. P. League.

1901—Christy Mathewson, of the Giants, won his first game in the National League, humbling Brooklyn 5 to 3. His box vis-a-vis was Bill Donovan. The Superbas got four hits. Matty fanned eight men, walked two and winged one.

1901—The Baltimore Americans, then managed by John J. McGraw, stung Pitcher Win Kellum, of Boston, for eight long hits (five doubles and three triples) and three short ones, the Orioles refusing to make such an insignificant thing as a single until the seventh inning.

1902—Addie Joss, the great pitcher of the Cleveland club, who died recently, made his bow in the American League, blanking St. Louis and confining the Browns to one wee single.

1905—Jack McCarthy, now manager of the Danville (Ill.) club, and then playing centre field for the Chicago Cubs, was a participant in three double plays, nailing runners who tried to score at the plate. The Pirates were the Cubs' opponents that day. Oddly enough, the two pitchers in the game in which McCarthy got his name more than favorably mentioned—Jeff Pfeffer and Pat Flaherty—now are on the same team— the Boston National.

1907—Johnny Bates, now with Cincinnati, then with Boston, had a field day at the bat, making a single, a double, a triple and a home run off Rucker and McIntire, of Brooklyn.

1909—Maruice R. Powers, catcher of the American League Club, died of intestinal trouble. The last game he caught was when Shibe Park was dedicated.

GOLF.

Oswald Kirkby is to play at the Garden City tournament and in a recent three ball match there he led both Travis and Herreshoff. At Lakewood last week Kirkby showed he has conquered the tendency to be off the line from the tee and he played good golf. Stimies twice turned the odds against him going out in the semi-final with Travis, and from the viewpoint of Kirkby's friends, but for them he would have been even at the turn instead of 1 down. The weak part of such reasoning is that it does not allow for what Leighton Calkins termed "the ratio of possible improvement" in the other chap's game.

Yet Kirkby, now that his long drives are on the line, must be reckoned with this season. Late last fall in the qualifying round of an Englewood cup he made the course record of 67, only one put being of over ten feet. He and Jack Hobens have been having some fine matches there this spring and the tally is now even between them. Finishing a three ball match recently Kirkby had the last five holes at Englewood in three. He drove the bunker on the seventeenth, but made the green with a niblick and holed the put. The summer greens will not be in use until this week, a fact that does not discount materially Kirkby's sequence.

Kirkby, Herreshoff and Percy Platt were getting great distance from the tee at Lakewood and they all used the new heavy balls, but of various makes. Platt drove a ball from 325 to 330 yards on the third hole in his match with Herreshoff, the estimate being made by Jasper Lynch and H. M. Forrest, who know every foot of the course, and the reckoning is next best to putting down the yard measure. Platt's feats from the tee have long furnished gossip among the Deal members and only F. W. Kendal can line them out with him there.

Travis's approaches and putting, the latter with a centre shafted aluminum club, was of the phenomenal order throughout. In the medal round he had successive twos for the short holes, the puts being between five and eight feet, and with Kirkby he had a 2 again on the eleventh, putting from the edge of the green right through a film of rain water. Yet in the 70 of Thursday after noon's four ball match the short holes cost him a 3 and 4, but to make up he had threes the fourth, fourteenth and fifteenth. The crowning feat, for the glory of a good put is when it is most needed, was Travis's 3 on the nineteenth, which won the final from Herreshoff.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The new American aviator, Earle L. Ovington, made his first flight in this country at Belmont Park shortly after 7 o'clock Tuesday night, and proved to the handful of experts on the field that he is a daring, resourceful and finished flyer. Members of the Aero Club of America who witnessed the flight at once picked out Ovington for a place on the team to send to England for the international speed championship race on July 1.

Ovington's flight was interesting for several reasons. In the first place his machine is the only single-seater Bleriot in the world fitted with a 70 horse-power Gnome engine. In fact only two other 70 horse-power Gnomes have as yet been made. One of these is being used by Henry Farman in a biplane and the other in a passenger-carrying Bleriot monoplane of the military type.

The machine used by Ovington Tuesday night is the very latest type of Bleroit and has never been in the air before. The operating wires are all doubled to prevent the possibility of an accident from the loss of control; the machine is also fitted with a map desk, a compass, a high grade barometer, a gradometer and a speed gauge. Ovington's contemplates making some long cross-country flights in the near future.

It was nearly dark Tuesday night when Ovington took the air. His machine shot off the ground at a terrific speed and quickly climbed to a height of about 500 feet. Ovington went round the long course at Belmont Park several times, making several sensational dips on his way. Once he hit the ground and only just escaped colliding with a high fence by quickly raising his elevator and jumping over it. Ovington afterward explained that owing to the darkness and dust that had got into his eyes just before starting he could hardly see the ground and that he did not notice the fence until he was nearly up to it.

Ovington was in the air about ten minutes. Although touring wings were fitted to his monoplane he said his instruments showed that he made a speed of seventy miles an hour.

COLLEGE ATHLETICS.

The management of the Princeton University golf team has completed the schedule of the matches to be played this spring and summer. The schedule is as follows:

April 29—Baltusrol Golf Club at Short Hills, N. J.

May 6—Philadelphia Country Club at Bala, Pa.

May 12—Williams at Nassau Country Club, Nassau, L. I.

May 13—Yale at Apawamis Golf Links at Rye, N. Y.

June 9—Alumni at Princeton.

Sept. 5 to 9—Intercollegiates at Baltusrol Golf links, Short Hills, N. J.

The annual boat race between interclass crews at Syracuse University will be rowed on Saturday on Onondaga Lake. The race will be rowed late in the afternoon, the finish being in front of the yacht club. Last year the 1912 crew won the contest. This season the 1913 men are strong factors.

It is said that Brown University contemplates booming rowing as one of its athletic sports. The university at one time was represented by a crew, but had to drop the sport on account of its expensiveness. The Providence college has the Sekonk River near at hand, and should the sport be re-established that river could be used as a suitable practice course.

Coach Carr of the Orange baseball team has reduced his squad to the following men: Cottrell, Dexter, De Silva, Adamy and Severance, pitchers; Holmes, catcher; Hand and Fisher, first base; Giles, second base; Raynor, third base; Carling, Frye and Kling, infield; Newhart, Schoepflin and Parsons, outfield; Welch, pitcher and outfielder.

Yale's freshman eight-oared crew looks like a strong combination this year. The total weight of the boat is 1,364 pounds. The average is about 170 pounds, five pounds less than last season's first year shell. However, five of the men have had experience before in handling an oar. They rowed in prep. school shells and the eight is expected to develop into a fast crew before the race with Harvard on June 30.

REPUBLICANS NOW FEAR LOSS OF SENATE IN 1912

One of the significant features of the closing hours of the Senate at Trenton was the certainty with which the Republicans in that body were predicting that the Democrats would control the upper house next year.

So fixed was the idea of Democratic supremacy in the minds of some of the Republican leaders on the last night of the session that they were figuring out the chances of Senator Harry V. Osborne becoming president of the Senate next year, and after that of his becoming Acting Governor in case Governor Wilson should get into the Presidential race.

The present Senate consists of twelve Republicans and nine Democrats. The terms of six Republicans and two Democrats expire this year. The Republicans are: Brown, of Monmouth; Bradley, of Camden; Ackerman, of Union; Plummer, of Salem; Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, and Gaunt, of Glouceter. The Democrats are: Osborne, of Essex, and Cornish, of Warren.

To gain control of the Senate the Democrats must elect only four of the eight Senators to be elected this fall. The Republicans say gloomily that they will succeed without half trying. In making their forecasts they prophesy the election of a Democrats from Warren county, with the strong probability that the man will be Senator Cornish. Next, they fear that Senator Osborne will come back from Essex county. That leaves but two more needed for Democrats supremacy.

When the Republicans study the situation in Monmouth, Somerset and Salem counties they are ready to yield almost without a struggle. Monmouth county is already conceded to the Democrats. So true does this appear to be, that Senator Brown won't run again this fall, and the Republicans have tacitly agreed among themselves not to put up a good man to be "slaughtered." Down in Salem Senator Plummer has come to the conclusion that he doesn't want to run again and the wise ones see in this an indication of the way the wind is blowing in that county.

The situation in Somerset county isn't so promising that Senator Frelinghuysen is willing to risk his chances of political advancement on being re-elected in that county. He has made no official announcement yet of the fact that he will not run again, but it is understood that he has made all arrangements to have former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, be the Republican candidate this fall. Mr. Frelinghuysen still has pronounced Gubernatorial aspirations and doesn't want to have a wet blanket thrown on his chances by being downed in the Senatorial contest.

Assemblyman LaMonte is scheduled to be the Democratic candidate for the Senatorship in Somerset.

The Republicans fear more than anything else the influence which Woodrow Wilson's presence in the campaign will have on the vote. They acknowledge with mournful countenances that three rousing Wilson speeches in a doubtful county are about all that is necessary to swing any county into the Democratic ranks.

The Junior Mission Band of the First Baptist church will meet tomorrow afternoon at the usual hour.

The Boys' Battalion of the First Baptist church will hold its weekly drill in the church tomorrow night.

STATE-WIDE DELIVERY FOR BEER BOTTLERS

If Governor Wilson signs House bill No. 510, by Assemblyman James, of Hudson, he will do so against the protest of numerous Methodist clergymen in the State. It will also be against the protest of many temperance organizations in various parts of New Jersey. The bill, if it should become a law, will permit the bottlers of beer to deliver it direct to their customers anywhere in the State, rather than by the express wagon method, now in vogue.

The temperance people throughout the State are much incensed over the efforts to get a law to permit the delivery of beer in any locality from the wagon. The enactment of this bill would give them the privilege for which they have been contending, and it would nullify the ordinances against it in a "dry" community. In some of the cities in south Jersey, where there are no saloons, it is contended the enactment of this bill would result in more drunkenness, and increase the work of the police department to a large extent.

WORLD'S DEBT HERE IS LARGE.

Washington, April 27.—The world owes the United States $441,000,000 for food, clothing and raw materials sold abroad. Only once has the balance of trade been higher in favor of this country, according to government figures. That was in 1908, when it was more than $550,000,000.

Close observers of finance and trade predict a record-breaking fiscal year if the favorable condition continues until June.

While opinion is divided over the significance of the fact that the balance for March was less than half the size of that of previous months, some point out that March a year ago produced a balance entirely in the other direction, with an excess of imports of more than $12,000,000.

Miss Nelson's Funeral.

The funeral of Miss Sarah Nelson was held at her late home on Myrtle avenue, yesterday afternoon. The services was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was made in Evergreen cemetery, the pall bearers being B. Frank Coriell, Garret Dunham, S. H. Schlief and Henry Liefke.

SECOND INFANTRY'S SEA GIRT ORDERS

The Second infantry of which company K of this city is a member, will participate in a camp of instruction at the state camp grounds at Sea Girt July 24 to 29, inclusive, orders to this effect having been issued from the office of the adjutant general.

The minimum strength of each organization attending the annual camps should be not less than four full sets of fours, and the appropriate number of sergeants. No company will be considered as warranting the expenditure of federal and state funds for transportation, subsistence and pay that has a strength less that that indicated above.

No enlisted man will be taken to encampment unless enlisted prior to the thirty-first day of March of this year, or served at least six months in the army, marine corps, national guards or militia of this or any other state, or received equivalent military instruction in an educationel institution.

The several organizations may enter camp on the Saturday prior to the date designated for their tour of duty, provided ti is understood that the troups so ordered will receive no pay for the additional two days.

The brigade commandery will detail one commissioned officer, one corporal and four privates of field artillery for the purpose of firing salutes at the encampment during their tour of duty.

The Signal Corps company having been excused from attendance at the encampment by the governor and commander-in-chief, is authorized to participate in a six days' practice march on dates to be designated by its commanding officer.

Surprised Joel Illidge.

Several friends of Joel Illidge met last night at the home of Mrs. Bullock, on New treet, giving him a surprise, prior to his leaving on Saturday on the Steamer Paronia for St. Martin, West Indies to visit his parents. He expects to be away about two months. Mr. Illidge, who has been a resident of this city three years, was wished bon voyage by the company of friends. During the evening supper was served.

HELD FOR MURDER DONE YEARS AGO

On a charge of murder committed in Scranton in 1897 Phillipo De Angelo, one of the leading Italian business men of Trenton and a member of the Italian Trading and Banking Company, and his brother, Francesco De Angelo, were arrested at Trenton yesterday and are now confined in the Second district police station there.

The apprehension of the men for a crime fourteen years old was due to the efforts of a fellow countryman, Patrolman Antonio Pege, an Italian member of the Trenton police department. About a week ago he heard a chance remark that seemed to implicate the two, and since that time he has been working on the case. Under a rigorous examination yesterday the men admitted that they were in the Scranton saloon where Giovanni De Santis was murdered fourteen years ago, and later they confessed that they saw the killing. They insist, however, that they had no hand in the murder.

The man murdered in the saloon was carried into a cellar while the murderers fled from the city. The De Angelo brothers are said to have disappeared about this time and to have gone back to their home in Italy. They came back to America and eight years ago came to Trenton. The men say they fled from Scranton because they were afraid of being implicated and being foreigners, would have had difficulty in explaining matters. They strongly protest their innocence.

THOUGHTS OF LOVE.

The beginning, middle and end of love is—a sigh.

Some loves, like some fevers, have three stages, the latent, the eruptive and the convalescent.

One thing is impossible in love; the intensest and most fervent love is powerless to evoke love.

The man often argues that esteem will grow into passion. Woman knows the argument is utterly fallacious.

Even the love of a married pair, unless it retains something of the romance of courtship, is apt to go out.

Love will forgive love everything.

Love creats a world of its own—a world populated by two.

A Woman's Reason.

"Why," asks the inquisitive person, "do you enjoy having some one tell you that you are pretty, when you know you are not? Does it make you believe that you are?"

"No," she answered readily. "But it makes me believe that he believes I am."—Judge.

THE FRENCH MATCH MONOPOLY.

The annual report of the director-general of the State manufactories which has just appeared shows that the total receipts of the French match monopoly in 1909 amounted to $7,890,792, or $75,661 more than during the preceding year. The net profits were $5,757,661, being $73,046 in excess of the profits realized in 1908.

The average consumption of match per capita in France during 1909 was 1,146 representing an expenditure of 23.3 cents. The ordinary wooden sulphur matches, which ignite by friction upon any surface, furnished 55.63 per cent. of the quantity delivered to the public; wooden safety matches which ignite upon a special surface 41.16 per cent. and wax matches 3.21 per cent. The reports were valued at only $5,780. The State purchased during the year $357,534 worth of foreign matches to supplement its own production.

Employment was given to 834 men and 1,467 women, distributed among the six State factories. Wages for a nine-hour day averaged $1.35 for men and 65.4 cents for women. The sum of $68,989 was expended for pensions, indemnities, relief, gratuities, baths, hygienic beverages, medical aid and assistance of a similar nature.

Fish and Lemon Sauce.

Take a three-pound fish. Clean, cut and sprinkle with salt. Leave it for three hours; cut fine one good medium-sized onion, let simmer in a tablespoonful of butter, add one pint of boiling water, pinch of ginger, pepper, mustard; put in the fish, boil slow twenty minutes. Sauce—Beat well the yolks of six eggs, juice of three lemons; add the hot gravy from fish to yolks and lemons stirring well so eggs will not curdle; then put back on stove, let come to a boil and place fish in a dish, pour sauce over, put away to cool; garnish with lettuce leaves, add one tablespoonful of chopped parsley to sauce.

GILA MONSTER AND SEVERAL OTHERS

Although there are 2,000 or more reptiles in the lizard class and 1,600 known varieties of snakes, Curator Ditmars and "Billy" Snyder, his assistant, appear to have no fear of them and as a matter of fact seem to enjoy handling and exhibiting the crawling things. Mr. Ditmars lectured under the auspices of the Men's Club of Grace Episcopal church last evening in the parish house and more than one series of shudders crept up and down the spines of the audience.

The climax of the lecture was reached when the speaker compelled a deadly moccasin snake to bury its fangs in a covered tumbler. The result of this showed the half teaspoonfull of poison which would have been enough to kill everybody in the audience and several more besides. A Gila monster claimed the attention of the members immediately after the lecturer was introduced by Dr. H. D. Corbusier. This seemingly docile animal, handled with extreme care by both Mr. Ditmars and Mr. Snyder, is wonderfully beautiful in color but amazingly ugly in form and has twenty pairs of fangs instead of the usual allotment.

Among the reptiles shown were the Australian lizard, a boa constrictor, the Regal snake, a milk snake, which does not drink milk nor rob farmers; the King snake who is proof against the poisons of the most venomous of reptiles and yet has no venomous fangs of his own. The flat headed adder shown by the Curator was the most interesting of the exhibits. This snake was made to lie on its back and play dead while the speaker was telling just how harmless it is.

Several other live reptiles were shown including a rattler whose fangs and poison sacks were ready for business, but which Mr. Ditmars handled with consumate ease using a looped wand and deftly avoiding the darts of the snake's head as it attempted to strike. Mr. Ditmars has a very wholesome respect for the rattler. About nine years ago while transferring a big specimen from one cage to another in Central Park, New York, he was bitten on the hand and had it not been for the prompt action of "Billy" Snyder he would probably died.

The lecturer told of the value of studying reptile life. All snakes and other reptiles have a specific mission in this world. They kill off and eat or otherwise destroy vermin of a more depredating character and as a matter of fact should be treated with great consideration and not with fear. A snake knows instantly when a person fears him and immediately shows his temper. The secret of snake charming lies in letting the snakes have their own way.

Many interesting experiments have been made in attempting to discover antidotes for certain snake poisons, but there are four kinds which are resisting the searchers including the Moccasin exhibited last night.

The story as told by Curator Ditmars was humorous and with the funny handling of the snakes, by Mr. Snyder, the audience was kept in flutters of excitement, occasionally rising to its feet to get better views of the wriggling snakes. There were no dead specimens among those shown last night.

GRAFT IN PERSIA.

Officials Pay For the Privilege of Fleecing the Public.

A LAND WITHOUT LAWYERS.

And Yet That Extraordinary Exemption Does Not Help the Unfortunate Who Gets Into Trouble—Coaxing the Accused to Confess.

It would be difficult for a Persian who has not traveled to understand American excitement over what the newspapers here call "graft." My motherland, Persia, is not yet quite awake to the possibility of a man's serving the public for a certain fixed salary and taking nothing more. In Persia they take it for granted that every officeholder will "gouge" people whenever he gets a chance.

There are no lawyers in Persia, so there are no jokes about lawyers' appetite for gold and silver. If you have ever had a costly lawsuit on your hands you may think that makes matters simpler, but getting into trouble means being squeezed for money, wrung for money, as if you were a piece of wet cloth in a washerwoman's strong grip.

This is how it is managed: First, you see, the governor of a city or of a province never has a definite salary from the state—not at all. On the contrary, he pays the state treasury several thousand dollars more or less for the privilege of being governor and of making what he can out of the enterprise. He is not an elected officer; he is more like a "concessionaire" at one of your big expositions, who offers a large sum for a chance to run a restaurant or to provide ice cream soda or candy.

The governor (or mayor) of a large Persian town may have perhaps 100 to 150 employees under him. Of these only a few house servants (cook, coachman and the like) have fixed wages. The incomes of the others depend upon the amount of money which they can help turn into the great man's hands in the form of fines and taxes. You can guess whether the neighbors are fond of them!

Suppose now you live in Persia. You have leased a piece of ground or you have sold some goods and the other man does not pay. You dun him. Then you threaten him. Then you go to the governor and make a complaint. An officer arrests your debtor and takes him before the governor's secretary for examination. Possibly he can convince that important personage that it is not a just debt. If he cannot do that he would better put all his wits to work to convince the secretary that poverty makes it quite impossible to pay up.

This is where many of the 150 under employees get their chance. A large part of their occupation is hunting up facts about everybody's property, everybody's business, everybody's income. They know an amazing number of things which your debtor supposed were safely secret. They produce information whenever information is wanted.

Your man's pretense that business is bad and that he is all but bankrupt is brushed aside, and he is made to produce an amount of money considerably larger than the original debt. "Made" to produce it? Yes. There are shocking things that can be done to him if he hesitates too long, and he knows it. So, like a child aware that there is an ugly stick waiting in the corner, he usually does not hesitate too long. He saves his skin and hands over the money. You get maybe 80 to 90 per cent to satisfy your claim—that is, the officer of justice practically collects from you something for his own services. The rest goes to the governor and such of the employees as may be considered in the case.

Perhaps you have a shop in the town bazaar or market place and some poor good-for-nothing steals a chicken that was hanging on the wall. If a woman was the thief she is most likely fined—possibly whipped if she has no money to pay a fine. If the culprit is a man they punch a hole through the cartilage of the lower end of his nose, put a cord through the hole and lead him in this painful disgrace all around the bazaar. The officer collects as he goes along a few cents from this shopkeeper and a few cents from that one as an acknowledgment of the officer's service in publicly exposing a thief.

Naturally it often happens that some outrageous robbery occurs or somebody is brutally murdered, and the guilty one is unknown. Then the governor's detective agents set to work. Anybody may be arrested on suspicion and examined either as the probable offender or as a witness. If the suspect has plenty of money he can always prove his innocence or his ignorance by paying cash to the examining officers, though, since there is no regulated tariff in such matters, the proceeding may be quite expensive.

If the suspect is too poor to make things right with the examiners or too stubborn to tell what he knows—and sometimes, I am afraid, if he really does not know anything to tell—they have some "third degree" methods warranted to make a man say something. One such method is what they call the "bastinado." It is whipping the soles of the bare feet with slender rods. Often live coals from a pipe are put on the shaven head of a prisoner to make him confess. Sometimes — But no. Probably you would not care to hear any more along this particular line. Persian inventions in this department of criminology are clever in their way, but not things to describe in full detail.—Lucy Maynard in New York World.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 30, 1911.

Topic.—A missionary journey around the world.—IV. Missions in Hawaii and the Philippines.—Isa. lx, 1-12. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

In the topical reference Isaiah predicts the coming of the gentiles into the kingdom of God and its increased glory as a result of their entrance into it. Included in this prophecy is a special reference to the "sea" and its "isles," which indicated that the inhabitants of islands would turn toward the Messiah and accept Him as their Saviour. "The gentiles shall come to thy light and kings to the brightness of thy rising. * * * The abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee. * * * Surely the isles shall wait for thee." And the "isles" waited long for the Redeemer and gladly accepted Him when at last He was made known unto them. There is no more interesting chapter in the history of missions than that which tells the story of the carrying of the gospel to the islands of the sea.

1. Missions in Hawaii. The history of missions in Hawaii relates one of the most significant triumphs of the gospel. The work was begun as the result of the conversion in 1813 of several Hawaiian boys who had gone to New Haven, Conn. One of these, Henry Obookiah, who had longed to preach the gospel to his countrymen, died in 1817. His consistent Christian life and peaceful death, however, did more for the conversion of his people than ever he could have done. His pathetic story touched many hearts, and two years later missionaries were ready to go to the Hawaiian Islands.

March 31, 1820, the first band of missionaries to Hawaii reached Honolulu. They found the "isles" waiting and longing for the Saviour. Idolatry had been destroyed. The missionaries were gladly received by the king, and his chiefs and the king's mother, Keopuolani, was the first convert. The subsequent history of the work is one of the miracles of modern missions. In 1824 the Sabbath was recognized and the Ten Commandments adopted as the basis of government. The Bible was circulated, chiefs were converted and worked among their people, and great revivals marked the progress of the work. One of these revivals lasted for six years, and during these years 27,000 persons were received into the church. In less than half a century Hawaii was won for Christ. Today it is one of the island possessions of our own country, and Americans should see to it that the banner of the cross as well as that of the stars and stripes is ever kept floating over it.

2. Missions in the Philippine Islands. The Philippine Islands were discovered and conquered by the Spaniards in the sixteenth century, and until the close of the recent Spanish-American war the Catholic church directed the Christian activities of the islands. The Philippines at that time, however, offered a fruitful field of missionary enterprise, and the Protestant churches of our land were quick to take advantage of the opportunities presented to them. The work thus far has been very successful.

Missionary work is carried on among the Filipinos by all modern methods. Evangelistic work is given the first place, and from all missionary stations encouraging reports are received as to the effectiveness of the preaching of the gospel. Educational work is given a prominent place. Schools of various kinds have been organized. Medical missions are emphasized. Hundreds of patients are annually treated in Christian hospitals. Native girls are becoming trained nurses. Thus, as Christ and the apostles advanced His kingdom by preaching, teaching and healing, the missionaries of the cross in the Philippines follow the same methods today and with evident success.

Christian Endeavor has a place in Filipino missions. A recent report of the work on the island of Leyte says, "Christian Endeavor meetings are held weekly in Maasin, Baybay and Macrohon and are well attended and productive of evident good results."

The Evangelical Union of the Philippine Islands is an association embracing all the Protestant denominations at work in the Philippines except the Protestant Episcopal church.

Endeavorers In Japan.

The new president of the Japan Christian Endeavor union, Rev. Tokiyuki Osada, is one of the veteran pastors of Japan, one of the most successful and one of the three pastors that have toiled with unremitting love and consecration for Christian Endeavor from the very beginning of its history in the country.

Mr. Osada was president of the Japan Home Mission society of the Kumiai (Congregational) church, resigning to take the pastorate of the Tema church, Osaka, one of the largest and most influential Congregational churches in Japan.

ENDEAVOR.

Endeavor is a word of power;
Endeavor kills the lazy hour;
Endeavor then forever.
Endeavor is a princely word.
Man's latent forces it has stirred;
Endeavor, then, Endeavor!

25c Flowered Lacet Batiste 12½c

One of the best chances to buy exquisite fine fabrics at the ordinary cost of lawn. The patterns are delightful—roses, rosebuds, wild flowers, pansies and violets, in pink, blue or lavender—all as pretty as though painted on these very fine sheer white goods.

"No, there's no mistake. What we say in the headlines is the exact proposition—25c Flowered Lacet Batiste at 12½c."

The window display of these goods is attracting crowds.

BEST AWNINGS $2.45

THIS UNPRECEDENTED PROPOSITION OPEN TO YOU FOR TWO DAYS MORE

This offer to make awnings at the lowest price ever quoted holds good for the entire week, but we must insist on all orders being rushed to completion, and the awnings erected at once, because later on we will have to ask you considerable more than this special price.

We propose to make to your order awnings for average residence windows, on the very best galvanized frames, non-rustable, fitted with the most up-to-date attachments, enabling you to raise and lower the awnings with the greatest ease, and to attach them to houses with the least trouble and damage, giving you choice of the very best awning stripes in a full range of colors, guaranteeing you the highest-class workmanship thruout, and the price will be only $2.45

Awnings in extra sizes for residences, offices, or stores, ordered this week can be bought at 20 per cent. less than our usual prices, and much less than we will have to ask you in May or June.

TOLSTOY WANTED BLOOD.

His Quarrel With Turgeneff and the Reconciliation That Followed.

Raymond Recouly in the Paris Figaro gives the following account of an early encounter between Tolstoy and Turgeneff, which shows the Russian sage in a different frame of mind from the one in which the world has since come to know him:

It was on the estate of his friend the poet Fet, near Yasnaya Turgeneff was among the invited guests. The hostess inquired after his daughter, who was being reared in France. Turgeneff spoke highly of his English governess. "With a truly British exactitude," he said, "she requested me to fix the sum which my daughter might spend for charity. And now she teaches her pupil to mend the ragged clothes of the poor."

"And you consider that a good thing?" asked Tolstoy.

"Certainly," replied the other. "It brings the benefactor into direct contact with the persons whom he is helping."

"On my part, I think that a well dressed child who handles dirty and ill smelling rags is playing a hypocritical and theatrical farce."

"I must ask you not to speak in this way," exclaimed Turgeneff, with menacing looks.

"Why should I not say what I am convinced is the truth?" remarked Tolstoy.

"You think, then, that I am educating my daughter badly," and, while Fet was interceding, "If you will talk in that way I shall box your ears." Then he left the room, begging his hosts to pardon his abrupt departure.

Tolstoy also went. At the neighboring station he wrote to Turgeneff demanding an apology. He ordered pistols and tried to provoke his rival to a duel. Turgeneff's answer, very dignified, brought the apology demanded by Tolstoy. He closed by saying that he thought it best that two men with such opposite tempers should henceforth break off all relations. Tolstoy, carried away by his anger (it was in 1861), declined to be satisfied with such an answer. He felt that he had been gravely offended. He demanded reparation by arms. He therefore repeated his provocations. His friend Fet, who attempted to pacify him, succeeded only in drawing from him this vigorous reply: "I beg of you henceforth not to write to me any more. I shall return your letters unopened, the same as I do with Turgeneff's." After these occurrences Turgeneff returned to France, where he passed the greater part of his time. Some months later, on reflection, Tolstoy regretted his violence. Seized with remorse, he sent Turgeneff a letter asking his pardon. "I find it exceedingly painful," he wrote, "to think that I have made an enemy of you."

Turgeneff forgave, as one may imagine, but the complete and definitive reconciliation took place much later.

OLD ENGLISH HOUSES.

In the Days of Wooden Huts, Thatched Roofs and Clay Floors.

The habitations of English common people for centuries consisted of a wooden hut of one room, with the fire built in the center. To this hut, if a man increased in family and wealth, a lean-to was added and later another and another. The roofs were of thatch, the beds of loose straw or straw beds with bolsters of the same laid on the floor or perhaps eventually shut in by a shelf and ledge like the berths of a ship or by a small closet.

The Saxon thane or knight built a more pretentious "hall," a large open room like the Roman atrium with a lofty roof thatched or covered with slates or wooden shingles. In the center of the hard clay floor burned great fires of dry wood whose thin acrid smoke escaped from openings in the roof, above the hearth or by the doors, windows and openings under the eaves of the thatch.

By day the "hearthsmen" and visitors when not working or fighting sat on long benches on either side of the fire and, as John Hay puts it, "calmly drinked and jawed" or, gathering at long boards placed on trestles, regaled themselves on some sort of porridge with fish and milk or meat and ale.

At night straw or rushes spread on the floor formed beds for the entire company in the earlier and ruder days, when the "baser sort" were glad to share their straw with the cows.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

The Cabal.

The term "cabal" as applied to secret factions of any kind had its rise in England about 1667, being first applied to the cabinet of Charles II. and formed from the initials of the cabinet members' names—Lord Clifford, Lord Ashley, the Duke of Buckingham, Lord Arlington and the Duke of Lauderdale—C, A, B, A, L. Since that day it has been customary, in all English speaking lands at least, to apply the name to any secret conclave especially in politics.

The Way She Saw It.

"You must not mock people, Hazel. Once upon a time, the Bible says, a crowd of little children mocked a good man named Elisha, and two bears came out of the forest and killed forty-two of them."

"Wasn't that an awful thing for their mothers?"—Newark News.

Useless Telling.

"You can always tell an Englishman," said the Briton proudly.

"Of course you can," retorted the Yankee, "but it doesn't do any good because he thinks he knows it all."—Philadelphia Ledger.

ONE MORE BATTLE

That Was What General Lee Wanted Before Yielding.

HIS TALK WITH LONGSTREET.

Major Ranson's Interesting Account of the Scene In the Confederate Commander's Cheerless Tent the Night Before the Surrender.

An interesting account of the dramatic scene at General Lee's headquarters the night before the surrender, when the Confederate commander was still determined to strike one more blow for the cause for which he was fighting, is given by Major A. R. H. Ranson in Harper's Magazine. Major Ranson writes:

"When I arrived at headquarters General Lee was in a tent, sitting with General Longstreet on some bundles of rye straw, the ground being wet from the rain, at the upper side of the tent, with one candle for a light. I made my report, and the general told me to wait, as he wished to see me. He asked me if I had had anything to eat, and I told him no. He said he was sorry he had nothing to offer me. He gave me a bundle of straw and told me to sit near the door.

"It had been raining all afternoon, and I was quite wet. I was also very tired, so I put my foot through the bridle rein of my mare standing outside and, lying down on the bundle of straw, was soon asleep.

"I was awakened by voices and, looking up, saw the colonel I had left in charge of the troops at the bridge standing in the tent. He reported that the rations had not arrived, and the starving and discouraged troops had all deserted in the darkness, leaving their arms in the trenches.

"General Lee heard him to the end of his account, and then with a wave of his hand dismissed him. Turning to General Longstreet, he said: 'This is very bad. That man is whipped. It is the first time I have seen one of my officers who had been whipped. It is very bad.'

"The conversation between the generals was then resumed in low tones, and I again fell asleep. I must have slept for some length of time when I was awakened by General Lee's voice, speaking in loud tones, louder than I had ever heard from him. He was saying, 'General Longstreet, I will strike that man a blow in the morning.' General Lee sometimes spoke of General Grant as 'that man' and of the Federal army as 'those people.'

"General Longstreet replied in low tones, giving the strength and condition of his command and the strength and position of the enemy, and concluded by saying, 'But you have only to give me the order and the attack will be made in the morning.' Again the conversation was resumed in low tones, and I fell asleep.

"I must have slept for an hour at least when again I was awakened by the loud, almost fierce, tones of General Lee, saying, 'I tell you, General Longstreet, I will strike that man a blow in the morning.' General Longstreet again recounted the difficulties, ending as before, 'General, you know you have only to give the order and the attack will be made, but I must tell you I think it will be a useless waste of brave lives.'

"Thinking I had been present long enough at such an interview, I coughed and got up from the straw and, drawing back the flaps of the tent, looked out into the darkness. General Lee said: 'Captain Ranson, I beg your pardon. I had forgotten you. Go now and get something to eat and some rest. I will see you in the morning.'

"I found my poor mare lying flat on her side in the rain and fast asleep. It was past midnight and very dark, but I reached our camp, though neither I nor my mare got anything to eat that night.

"The morning came, and I listened for the sound of our attack, but all was still. There was no attack. Our fighting days were over."

The Art of Embalming.

The modern embalmers have not recovered the secret of the art as practiced by the old Egyptians and probably never will. Some of the bodies known to us as "mummies" buried 3,000 or 4,000 years ago are still in a state of perfect preservation. Back of the ancient art lay a religious creed. The ancient Egyptian believed that after many thousands of years the soul came back to find its body and that if it was not found the soul wandered forever in misery and wretchedness; hence it was absolutely necessary to preserve the body, and hence, finally, the embalmer's art.—New York American.

It Fitted the Case.

The girl asked the polite salesman if he had good cheese.

"We have some lovely cheese," was the smiling answer.

"You should not say lovely cheese," she corrected.

"Why not? It is," he declared.

"Because"—with a boarding school dignity—"lovely should be used to qualify only something that is alive."

"Well," he retorted, "I'll stick to lovely."

Knew It.

Little Man (threateningly)—I say, Mr. Straightley, did you tell Mr. Walker I was a liar?

Big Man (coolly)—No, sir, I did not. It's my opinion Mr. Walker doesn't want any telling.—London Tit-Bits.

CHAPTER II.

"OPEN!"

I HAVE mentioned poison as my first thought. It was a natural one, the result undoubtedly of having noticed two small cordial glasses standing on a little table over against the fireplace. When I was conscious again of my own fears I crossed to the table and peered into these glasses. They were not club glasses, and they both were empty. However, they had not been so long. In each I found traces of anisette cordial, and, though no bottle stood near, I was very confident that it could readily be found somewhere in the room. What had preceded and followed the drinking of this cordial?

Alas, there was but little more to see! A pair of curling irons lay on the hearth, but I had no sooner lifted them than I dropped them with a shudder of unspeakable loathing, only to start at the noise they made in striking the tiles, for it was the selfsame noise I had heard when listening from below. These tongs, set up against the side of the fireplace, had been jarred down by the forcible shutting of the large front door, and no man other than myself was in the house or had been in the house—only the two women. A stick or two still smoldered on the hearthstone. In the ashes lay some scattered fragments of paper which crumbled at my touch. On the floor in front I espied only a stray hairpin. Everything else was in place throughout the room except the cushions and that horror on the lounge, waiting the second look I had so far refrained from giving it.

That look I could no longer withhold. I must know the depth of the gulf over which I hung. I must not wrong with a thought one who had smiled upon me like an angel of light—a young girl, too, with the dew of innocence on her beauty to every eye but mine and only not to mine within—shall I say ten awful minutes? I would look again and perhaps discover that my own eyes had been at fault; that there were no marks on Adelaide's throat, or, if marks, not just the ones my fancy had painted there.

Turning, I let my glance fall first on the feet. I had not noted them before, and I was startled to see that the arctics in which they were clad were filled all around with snow. She had walked then as the other was walking now—she who detested every effort and was of such delicate make that exertion of unusual kind could not readily be associated with her. Had she come alone or in Carmel's company, and, if in Carmel's company, on what ostensible errand if not that of death? Her dress, which was of dark wool, showed that she had changed her garments for this trip. I had seen her at dinner, and this was not the gown she had worn then—the gown in which she had confronted me during those few intolerable minutes when I could not meet her eyes. Nothing spoke of the dinner party or of her having been dragged here unaware, but all of previous intent and premeditation. Surely hope was getting uppermost. If I had dreamed the marks—

But, no! There they were, unmistakable and damning, just where the breath struggles up. I put my own thumbs on these two dark spots to see if, when— What was it—a lightning stroke or a call of fate which one must answer while sense remains? I felt my head pulled around by some unseen force from behind and met staring into mine through the glass of the window a pair of burning eyes. Or was it fantasy? For in another moment they were gone. But the possibility of a person having seen me in this position before the dead was enough to startle me to my feet, and, though in another instant I became convinced that I had been the victim of hallucination, I nevertheless made haste to cross to the window and take a look through its dismal panes. A gale of blinding snow was sweeping past, making all things indistinguishable, but the absence of balcony outside was reassuring, and I stepped hastily back, asking myself for the first time what I should do and where I should now go to insure myself from being called as a witness to the awful occurrence which had just taken place in this house. Something I must do to save myself the anguish and Carmel the danger of my testimony in this matter. She must never know, the world must never know, that I had seen her here.

I could not be the death of two women. The loss of one weighed heavily enough upon my conscience. I would fly the place—I would leave this ghastly find to tell its own story. The night was stormy, the hour late, the spot a remote one and the road to it but little used. I could easily escape, and when the morrow came— But it was the present I must think of now—this hour, this moment. How came I to stay so long? In feverish haste I began to throw the pillows back over the quiet limbs, the accusing face. Shudderingly I hid those eyes (I understood their strange protuberance now) and recklessly bent on flight, was halfway across the floor when my feet were stayed—I wonder my reason was not unseated—by a sudden and tremendous attack on the great door below, mingled with loud cries to open which ran thundering through the house, calling up innumerable echoes from its dead and hidden corners.

It was the police. The wild night, the biting storm, had been of no avail. An alarm had reached headquarters, and all hope of escape on my part was at an end. Yet, because at such crises instinct rises superior to reason, I blew out the candle and softly made my way into the hall. I had remembered the window opening over a shed at the head of the kitchen staircase. I could reach it from this rear hall by just a turn or two, and once on that shed a short leap would land me on the ground, after which I could easily trust to the storm to conceal my flight across the open golf links. It was worth trying, at least. Anything was better than being found in the house with my murdered betrothed.

I had no reason to think that I was being sought or that my presence in this building was even suspected. It might well be that the police were even ignorant of the tragedy awaiting them across the threshold of the door they seemed intent on battering down. The gleam of a candle burning in this closed up house or even the tale told by the rising smoke may have drawn them from the road to investigate.

With a spring I reached the window by which I hoped to escape and quickly raised it. A torrent of snow swept in, covering my face and breast in a moment. It did something more—it cleared my brain, and I remembered my poor horse standing in this blinding gale under cover of the snow packed pines. Every one knew my horse. I could commit no greater folly than to flee by the rear fields while such a witness to my presence remained in full view in front. With the sensation of a trapped animal I reclosed the window and cast about for a safe corner where I could lie concealed until I learned what had brought these men here and how much I really had to fear from their presence.

I had but little time in which to choose. The door below had just given way, and a party of at least three men were already stamping their feet free from snow in the hall. I did not like the tone of their voices; it was too low and steady to suit me. I had rather have heard drunken cries or a burst of wild hilarity than these stern and purposeful whispers. Men of resolution could have but one errand here. My doom was closing round me. I could only put off the fatal moment. But it was better to do this than to plunge headlong into the unknown fate awaiting me.

I knew of a possible place of concealment. It was in the ballroom not far from where I stood. I remembered the spot well. It was at the top of a little staircase leading to the musicians' gallery. A balustrade guarded this gallery, supported by a boarding wide enough to hide a man lying behind it at his full length. It would offer me the double advantage of concealment and an unobstructed view of what went on in the hall through the main doorway opening directly opposite. I could reach this ballroom and its terminal gallery without going around to this door. A smaller one communicated directly with the corridor in which I was then lurking, and toward this I now made my way with all the precaution suggested by my desperate situation. No man ever moved more lightly. The shoes which I had taken off in the lower hall were yet in my hand. I had caught them up after replacing the cushions on Adelaide's body. Even to my own straining ears I made no perceptible sound. I reached the balcony and had stretched myself out at full length behind the boarding before the men below had left the lower floor.

More quickly than I expected the total darkness in which I lay brightened under an advancing lantern, and I heard the steps of two men coming down the hall. It was a steady if not rapid approach, and I was quite prepared for their presence when they finally reached the doorway opposite and stopped to look in at what must have appeared to them a vast and empty space. When I lifted my head again it was to catch a glimpse of their side faces as they turned to look elsewhere for what they were plainly in search of. An oath, muffled but stern, which was the first word above a whisper that I had heard issue from their lips, told me that they had reached the room and had come upon the horror which lay there.

Maddened by my own intolerable position, drawn by a power I felt it impossible to resist, I crept to my feet and took my staggering way down the half dozen steps of the gallery and thence along by the left hand wall toward the farther doorway and through it to where these men stood weighing the chances in which my life and honor were involved and those of one other of whom I dared not think.

It was dark in the ballroom, and it was only a little less so in the corridor. All the light was in that room. But I still slid along the wall like a thief, with eyes set and ears agape for any chance word which might reach me. Suddenly I heard one. It

Instant Relief for Sore Feet

Sore Feet, Tender Feet and Swollen Feet Cured Every Time. TIZ Makes Sore Feet Well No Matter What Ails Them.

Policemen all over the world use T I Z. Policemen stand on their feet all day and know what sore, tender, sweaty, swollen feet really mean. They use T I Z because T I Z cures their feet right up. It keeps feet in perfect condition. Read what this policeman has to say: "I was surprised and delighted with T I Z for tender feet. I hardly know how to thank you enough for it. It's superior to powders or plasters. I can keep my feet in perfect condition. Believe in my earnest gratitude for T I Z. I am a policeman and keep on my feet all day." —Emzy Harrell, Austin, Texas.

You never tried anything like T I Z before for your feet. It is different from anything ever before sold.

T I Z is not a powder. Powders and other foot remedies clog up the pores. T I Z draws out all poisonous exudations which bring on soreness of the feet, and is the only remedy that does. T I Z cleans out every pore and glorifies the feet—your feet.

You'll never limp again or draw up your face in pain and you'll forget about your corns, bunions and callouses. You'll feel like a new person.

TIZ is for sale at all druggists at 25c per box, or it will be sent you direct if you wish from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

"I FIND HER LYING HERE DEAD."

was this, uttered with a decision which had the strange effect of lifting my head and making a man of me again.

"That settles it. He will find it hard to escape after this."

He! I had been dreading to hear a she. Yet why? Who save myself could know that Carmel had been within these woeful walls tonight? Relieved by the discovery, I drew myself up and stepped quickly forward into the room where the two officials stood. My hands were clean of this murder, and, allowing the surety of this fact to take a foremost place in my mind, I faced these men, and with real feeling, but as little display of it as possible I observed:

"You have come to my aid in a critical moment. This is my betrothed wife—the woman I was to marry—and I find her lying here dead in this closed and lonely house. What does it mean? I know no more than you do."

The two men eyed me quietly; then Policeman Hexford, whom I knew, pointed to my shoeless feet and sternly retorted:

"Permit me to doubt your last assertion. You seem to be in better position than ourselves to explain the circumstances which puzzle you."

They were right. It was for me to talk, not for them. But here emotion seized me, and I almost broke down. I was in a position much more dreadful than any they could imagine or should be allowed to.

Their silence led me to examine their faces. Hexford's mouth had settled into a stiff, straight line, and the other man's wore a cynical smile I did not like. At this presage of the difficulties awaiting me I felt one strand of the rope sustaining me above this yawning gulf of shame and ignominy crack and give way. But the courage which had served me in lesser extremities did not fail me now, and, kneeling down before my dead betrothed, I kissed her cold white hand with sincere compunction before attempting the garbled and probably totally incoherent story with which I endeavored to explain the inexplainable situation.

They listened—I will do them that much justice—but it was with such an air of incredulity that my words fell with less and less continuity and finally lost themselves in a confused stammer as I reached the point where I pulled the cushions from the couch and made my ghastly discovery.

"You see—see for yourselves—what confronted me. My betrothed — a dainty, delicate woman—dead, alone, in this solitary, faraway spot, the victim of what? I asked myself then—I ask myself now. I cannot understand it—or those glasses yonder—or—or those marks!" They were black by this time—unmistakable—not to be ignored by them or by me.

"We understand those marks, and you ought to," came from the second man, the one I did not know.

My head fell forward. My lips refused to speak the words. The vision of the one woman bending over the other was a maddening one. I shook myself free from it by starting to my feet. "It's—it's"— I gasped.

"She has been strangled," quoth Hexford doggedly.

"A dog's death," mumbled the other.

"You had better sit down." Hexford suddenly suggested, pushing a chair my way. "Clarke, look up the telephone and ask for three more men. I am going into this matter thoroughly. Perhaps you will tell us where the telephone is?" he asked, turning my way.

The second man left the room to go to the telephone. As he did so Hexford lit the candle. Idly watching, for nothing now could make me look at the lounge again, I noticed the candlestick. It was of brass and rare in style and workmanship—a candlestick to be remembered, one of a pair, perhaps. I felt my hair stir as I took in the details of its shape and ornamentation. If its mate were in her house—No, no, no! I would not have it so. I could not control my emotion if I let my imagination stray too far. The candlestick must be the property of the club. I had only forgotten. It was bought when? While thinking, planning, I was conscious of Hexford's eyes fixed steadily upon me.

"Did you go into the kitchen in your wanderings below?" he asked.

"No," I began, but seeing that I had made a mistake, I bungled and added weakly, "Yes; after matches."

"And did you get them?"

"Yes."

"In the dark? You must have had trouble in finding them?"

"Not at all. Only safety matches are allowed here, and they are put in a receptacle at the side of each door. I had but to open the kitchen door, feel along the jamb, find the receptacle and pull the box out. I'm well used to all parts of the house."

"Where did you light your first match?"

"Upstairs."

"Not in the kitchen?"

"No, sir."

"That's a pity. I thought you might be able to tell me how so many wine and whisky bottles came to be standing on the kitchen table."

I stared at him, dazed. Then I remembered the two small glasses on the little table across the room and instinctively glanced at them. But no whisky had been drunk out of them. The odor of anisette is unmistakable.

"You carry the key to the wine cellar?" he asked.

I considered a moment. I did not know what to make of bottles on the kitchen table. These women and bottles! They abhorred wine; they had reason to. I remembered the dinner and all that had signalized it and felt my confusion grow.

"The keys were given up by the janitor yesterday," I managed to stammer at last. "But I did not bring them here tonight. They are in my rooms at home."

I finished with a gasp. I had suddenly remembered that these keys were not in my rooms. I had had them with me at Miss Cumberland's, and, being given to fooling with something when embarrassed, I had fooled with them and dropped them while talking with Adelaide and watching Carmel. I had meant to pick them up, but I forgot and—

"You need say nothing more about it," remarked Hexford. "I have no right to question you at all. Let us see what there is in here," stepping into the adjoining small room, into which I had simply peered in my own investigation of the place.

As he did so a keen blast blew in; a window in the adjoining room was open. He cast me a hurried glance and, with the door in his hand, made the following remark:

"Your ladylove, the victim here, could not have come through the snow with no more clothing on her than we see now. She must have worn a hat and coat or furs or something of that nature. Let us look for them."

As I followed him into the closet he pushed the door wide, pulling out an electric torch as he did so. By its light we saw almost at first glance the coat and hat he professed to seek, lying in a corner of the floor, beside an overturned chair.

"Good!" left my companion's lips. "That's all straight. You recognize these garments?" I nodded, speechless.

CHAPTER III.

A SCRAP OF PAPER.

SHORTLY after this a fresh relay of police arrived, and I could hear the whole house being ransacked. I had found my shoes and was sitting in my own private room before a fire which had been lighted for me on the hearth. I was in a state of stupor now.

The storm, which had been exceedingly fierce while it lasted, had quieted down to a steady fall of snow. Had its mission been to serve as a blanket to this crime by wiping out from the old snow all telltale footsteps and such other records as simplify cases of this kind for the detectives it could not have happened more apropos to the event. While this filled me with relief in one way, it added to my care in another, for the storm which could accomplish so much in so short a time was a bitter one for a young girl to meet, and Carmel must have met it at its worst in her lonesome struggle homeward.

The door behind me opened, and I turned to face Dr. Perry, once a practicing physician and my father's intimate friend, now a county official of no ordinary intelligence and, what was better, of no ordinary feeling.

His attachment to my father had not descended to me, and for the moment he treated me like a stranger.

"I am the coroner of this district," said he. "I have left my bed to have a few words with you and learn if your detention here is warranted. They have told me what you had to say in explanation of your presence here where a crime of some nature has taken place. But I should like to hear the story from your own lips. You have been intending to marry Miss Cumberland?"

"Yes." I looked the man directly in the eye. "Our wedding day was set."

"Did you love her? Pardon me. If I am to be of any benefit to you at this crisis I must strike at the root of things. If you do not wish to answer say so, Mr. Ranelagh."

"I do wish." This was a lie, but what was I to do, knowing how dangerous it would be for Carmel to have it publicly known where my affections were really centered? "I am in no position to conceal anything from you. I did love Miss Cumberland. We have been engaged for a year."

"I see, and she returned your love?"

"Sincerely." Was the room light enough to reveal my guilty flush? She had loved me only too well, too jealously, too absorbingly for her happiness or mine.

"And the sister?"

It was gently but gravely put, and instantly I knew that our secret was out, however safe we had considered it. This man was cognizant of it, and if he, why not others? Why not the whole town? I made my reply in these words:

"Her sister is her sister. I hardly think that either of us would be apt to forget that. Have you heard otherwise, sir?"

He was prepared for equivocation, possibly for denial, but not for attack. His manner changed and showed distrust, and I saw that I had lost rather than made by this venturous move.

"Is this your writing?" he suddenly asked, showing me a morsel of paper which he had drawn from his vest pocket.

I looked and felt that I now understood what the pines had been trying to tell me for the last few hours. That compromising scrap of writing had not been destroyed. It existed for her and my undoing. But Carmel was no fool even if she had wild and demoniacal moments. This could not be my note to her—that fatal note which would make all denial of our mutual passion unavailing.

"Is it your writing?" my watchful inquisitor repeated.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Scenery for "The White Sister," in which Viola Allen comes to the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow night, was executed by the firm of Bates & Morange, who have finished the embellishment for the most famous productions of the time. The three scenes revealed during the course of this powerful story faithfully present in turn, the reception hall of the convent hospital near the Porta Portse, Rome; the cloistered garden of the convent, and Capt. Severi's room near the powder magazine.

A treat is in store for theatregoers this season for there are a number of celebrities whose talent warrants them playing important parts, who will be seen with "A Stubborn Cinderella" company at the Plainfield theatre Saturday next matinee and night. Coit Albertson, who plays the leading part, is a comedian in a class by himself; his interpretation of the role of Mac has never been equalled, and as a star in musical comedy he is a hard man to beat. Albertson has a unique wy of his own, as most comedians have. Like all successful actors he started at the bottom of the ladder, but his good stage presence and excellent voice, coupled with hard work and attention to detail, soon placed him on the top rung, where he now seems destined to stay for a good while to come. Being a college boy himself, he is much at home in his part and his acting of it leaves nothing to be desired.

The popularity of the "Smart Set" company should receive an additional test next Wednesday matinee and night at the Plainfield theatre. This noted organization will present a new and original three-act musical comedy entitled "His Honor the Barber" with S. H. Dudley in the principal role. Mr. Dudley's abilities as one of the premier negro funmakers in America need no further introduction here. In the new piece he will have plenty of opportunity to add to his reputation. He assumes the role of Raspberry Snow, a negro, who allows his destines to be shaped out by others with disastrous and laughable results. The part he considers one of the best of his long and successful career.

RUTGERS PREP. NINE DEFEATS P.H.S. TEAM

The Plainfield High School baseball team put up a game fight against the Rutgers Preparatory School nine at Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon, but they were overwhelmed by the splendid twirling of Ziegler, whose slants and curves made rings around the local boys' necks. The score was 9 to 2 in favor of the visitors.

Terry, who was on the mound for P. H. S., was no puzzle to the Rutgers boys, they finding him for a total of thirteen hits. This with a bunch of errors by the locals was too much for them.

Score by innings:

										R.	H.	E.

SEASON'S LAST CHASE OF WATCHUNG HUNT

The Watchung Hunt Club held its last hunt of the season yesterday afternoon and it was also one of the best. The scent was found at Dog Corners, and from that point the hounds, which were going very fast, led the riders a lively chase through Fanwood, back of Westfield to Metuchen and finishing at Dog Tavern. The chase was over a very stiff country, numerous high fences and wide ditches, and it was with difficulty that even the best of the riders kept up with the hounds.

Although the chase was a hard one from the start there were no accidents and the season closed successfully. Those who followed the hounds were Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., Henry W. Rose, J. J. O'Donohue, Fred Alpers, C. F. Wildey, Jr., Stanley Bellows, Schuyler Casey, C. E. S. Bellows and Henry Watkins, huntsman.

MISS MAY'S PUPILS' DELIGHTFUL RECITAL

The pupils of Miss Jeanie Rogers May gave a delightful recital at the Seminary yesterday afternoon. Miss May is well known in Plainfield musical circles and special interest was felt in this event as it is the first musical given by her pupils since her return from Paris, where she studied under Wager Swain.

The following program was given: Ensemble, the Misses Helen Hooley, Louise Booth, Ruth Waldo, Dorothy Burke; Overture "Der Freischutz," Weber; Bessie Jewett, Watchman's Song, National Song, Grieg; Constance Harris, Sonata C Major, Allegro Andante, (second Piano Accompaniment by Grieg,) Mozart; Funeral March of a Marionette, Gounod; Miss Helen Hooley, Miss Louise Booth, Slavonic Dance, for two pianos, Dvorak; Joseph Sattels, Improvisation, Mac Dowell, Barcarolle, Tschaikowsky; Miss Eleanor Hatch, To a Water Lily, Mac Dowell; The Holy Mount, Dvorak; Miss Dorothy Burke, Miss Ruth Waldo, Barcarolle, for two pianos, Schutte; Murmuring Zephyrs, Jensen; Guirlandes, Godard; Miss Louise Booth, Bird as Prophet, Schumann; Arabesque, Debussy; Miss Florence Nicholl, Clair de Lune, Debussy; Aufschwung, Schumann; Miss Rose Berenson, Aeolus, Gernsheim; Ballad, Debussy; Scherzo, B flat Minor, Chopin; Ensemble, Miss Booth, Miss Burke, Miss Hooley, Miss Waldo; Hungarian Dance, Brahms.

A noticeable feature of the program was the introduction of works by the modern composers, Debussy, Grieg and Macdowell. Miss Eleanor Hatch showed well studied and very pleasing work in Macdowell's "Water Lily," and the ensemble of the Misses Helen Hooley, Louise Booth, Ruth Waldo and Dorothy Burke was clear and neat, showing thorough training. Miss Bessie Jewett's playing was remarkable for the rich full tone obtained and Miss Constance Harris was heard to advantage in the Funeral March of a Marionette and also in Mozart's Sonata in C Major, in which she was delightfully accompanied on a second piano by Miss May. Mis Florence Nichols delighted the audience by her fine interpretation of Debussy. Her work was specially noticeable for good musical feeling and fine technique.

A very remarkable performance was that of Miss Rose Berenson, a young Russian girl of Miss May's New York pupils, whose brilliancy of execution and masterly grasp of her subjects aroused the enthusiasm of her audience.

Great credit is due to both Miss May and her pupils for their excellent work and their audience was certainly appreciative. The pianos were specially lent for the occasion by Steinway.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire will lecture this evening in the First M. E. church, East Orange.

Mrs Cornelia B. Spicer, of Central avenue, has sold through Edmund Rushmore and W. deLaR. Anderson, the property at 1007 West Seventh street, to Thomas Kenny, of New York city.

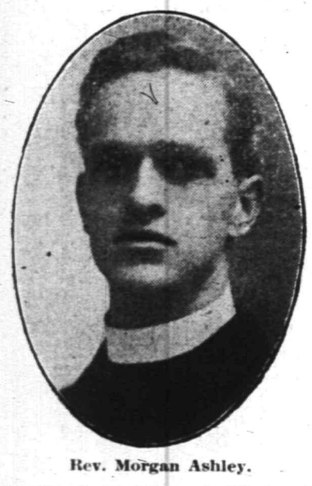
CLERGYMAN WEDS

Rev. Morgan Ashley's Bride Miss Howell Miller, of Sparkill, N. Y.

AT ALL ANGELS' CHURCH, N. Y.

Groom Formerly Rector of St. Stephen's Church Now a Curate of Church Where He Was Wed.

Miss Elsie Howell Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. R. Miller, of Sparkill, New York, was married to the Rev. Morgan Ashley, assistant minister of All Angels' church, New York city, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at All Angels' church, the officiating clergyman being the rector, Rev. Dr. S. Delancey Townsend. The full vested choir of the church was in attendance. The church edifice was beautifully decorated with palms and lilies.



Rev. Morgan Ashley.

The bride was gowned in white satin trimmed with antique cluny lace, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was Miss Alma Miller, sister of the bride. She wore a gown of pale blue satin, covered with chiffon and trimmed with pink roses and gold lace. Her hat was of pink tulle with a brim of pale blue satin edged with gold lace and a wreath of pink roses. She carried a basket filled with pink rambler roses. Two cousins of the bride, the Misses Virginia Rodgers Squier and Carolyn Rodgers Averback, served as flower girls. They wore white mull trimmed with baby Irish and Valenciennes lace over pale blue satin slips, carrying gold baskets filled with pink rambler roses. The best man was Lot M. Hamlin, of Detroit, Mich. The ushers were Rev. George S. A. Moore, and Clement Griscom Randlae and H. Raymond Loder, both of New York; Winfield Newton Burdick, Eugene Magee and Walter Sill, all of East Orange; Francis B. Shepard, of Ridgefield, Conn.; Thomas S. Willetts, of Flushing, L. I.; Henri de Brigard, of Plainfield, and Newell Guernsey, of Philadelphia. Following the ceremony a large wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt on West End avenue. On their return from the wedding trip the newly married couple will make their home at 170 West Seventy-eighth street, New York city.

Rev. Morgan Ashley was for two years rector of St. Stephen's church, of this city. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1903, coming to St. Stephen's church from Butler, N. J., and his work here was noteworthy in many ways.

CHILD'S HAND MANGLED BY EXPLODING TORPEDO.

The finding of a cartridge such as is used by railroad men for signalling trains, proved serious for Elizabeth Buss, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Buss, of South Second street. The little girl placed the dangerous affair on a hard surface and struck it with a stone. The explosion that followed badly mangled her right hand and for a time it looked as though two fingers would have to be amputated.

Dr. T. H. Platt, of Dunellen, was summoned and dressed the injuries. He is making an attempt to save the digits but the outcome is still in doubt.

Refuses Governor's Appointment.

Allen B. Endicott, of Atlantic City, brother of Dr. George W. Endicott, of this city, has refused to accept Governor Wilson's appointment to the Court of Errors and Appeals. He was formerly judge of the Circuit Court. No reasons are given for declining the appointment.

STREET COMMITTEE HAS A BUSY SESSION

The Councilmanic street committee at its meeting, last night, received a delegation of property-owners from the Laramie Park section, who urged the city to give them sewers in that section of the city. The matter was carefully considered and the committee will see what can be done. Owing to the fact that the grade of the land is so low it is exceedingly doubtful whether a sewer can be provided under present conditions. It is said that it would be necessary to either raise the dwellings up or fill in the property at a great expense, to make sewer connections.

The committee also considered some urgent street work and efforts will be made at once to relieve the terrible dust condition throughout the city, which is considered the worst in years. The sprinkling carts have been unusually late in getting on the streets this year, because the necessary repairs were not made in time. There has been a storm of protests from all sections of the city about the dusty condition of the streets and no doubt prompt relief will be given.

Within a short time work will be started macadamizing West Front street from Madison to Grant avenues with a bituminous binder and this will provide an improvement that has been needed for a long time. Other streets throughout the city will also receive attention.

TUBERCULOSIS THEME OF 7TH-DAY BAPTISTS

Complying with the request of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, the service at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow morning will be appropriate to the work of the association. Instead of the regular sermon two addresses will be delivered. One by Dr. Marcus L. Clawson on "The History and Causes of Tuberculosis," and the other by Dr. T. H. Tomlinson on "The Treatment of Tuberculosis." Rev. Edwin Shaw, the pastor, will have charge of the usual devotional services.

The three hundredth anniversary of the English Bible will be observed at the session of the Sabbath-school by the superintendent, W. C. Hubbard. The classes in the primary department in charge of Mrs. Ida Hunting will study the lessons of the International graded course, the rest of the school studying the Book of Jonah from the standpoint of the topic: "God's Pity for the Heathen." Elston E. Shaw will be the leader of the Junior Endeavor Society at 3 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Gardiner will lead the service of the Senior C. E. Society at 4 o'clock.

S.P.C.A SPECIAL AGT. MAKES 2 COMPLAINTS

Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, special agent of the S. P. C. A., had two complaints sworn out this morning, one against Andrew Huff, of Somerset street, and another against John Keleher, a fish pedler who boards with William Goff, another pedler, at 1215 South avenue. The two complaints claim cruelty to a horse driven by Keleher, who was peddling fish in the city this morning, and involve Huff of being the owner of the animal and permitting it to be driven.

Chief Kiely, who caused the detention of Keleher, notified Mrs. VanHoesen of the horse's condition and immediate steps were taken to relieve the animal, which was in apparent agony. Keleher is a veteran of the Civil War and was selling fish, but he declared this morning that he did not know that the horse was suffering. At the same time Chief Kiely suspected Keleher of giving short weight, which was the cause of his appearance at police headquarters. Both men will be arraigned in the city court tomorrow morning.

A Contest for Pupils.

In another column appears an announcement from the Plainfield Ice & Supply Company of a contest in advertisement writing in which any pupil of any school in Plainfield or North Plainfield may compete for a prize of $25 to be paid by that company for the best advertisement for the business of that company which can be properly displayed in the space occupied by the announcement referred to in today's issue.

RE-DISTRICT CITY

Plan Suggested at Republican Committee Meeting to be Considered.

THE COUNCIL TO ACT QUICKLY.

There Will Be Fourteen Districts—One More In First and Third and Two More in Fourth Ward.

The City Republican Executive committee met last evening for the purpose of considering the provisions of the new election law relative to the re-districting of the city. Councilman Frank L. Holt, chairman of the committee on laws and ordinances, was present and listened to the suggestions made by members of the city committee. It will be the duty of Mr. Holt and his committee to draft an ordinance re-districting the city and he took notes of the suggestions made last night.

It is likely that there will be three districts in the First and Third wards and five districts in the Fourth ward, where in each district more than 400 votes were cast at the last general election. There will be no change in the Second ward as neither district polled over the required number of votes.

The suggested changes defines the First district of the First ward as follows: Somerset street to Front street to Park avenue to the railroad, to Church street, Church street to Front street, Front street to brook and the brook to Somerset street. Second district—Church street to railroad, to Richmond street, Richmond street to brook, brook to Elm place to Front street. Third district will be the present Second district, including territory east of the boundary of Second district.

Third ward—First district: Park avenue to Central avenue, Fourth street to city line. Second district: Central avenue to Plainfield avenue, Fourth street to city line. Third district: Plainfield avenue to city line, Fourth street to city line. Fourth street is the dividing line between the Third and Fourth wards.

Fourth ward—First district: Park avenue to Liberty street, brook to Fourth street. Second district: Liberty street to Grant avenue to railroad to Fourth street. Third district: Liberty street to Grant avenue to railroad to brook. Fourth district: Grant avenue to city line, railroad to Fourth street. Fifth district: Grant avenue to city line, brook and railroad.

Mr. Holt will probably have the ordinance drafted in time for Monday night's meeting, but it is said that it will be impossible to pass it before May 15, because it will require three readings and ten days' advertising.

PASTOR AND FAMILY GIVEN A RECEPTION

Rev. and Mrs. Charles S. Kemble and their daughter, Miss Ruth Kemble, were tendered a reception by the Monroe avenue church congregation last night, in honor of his return as pastor for the fourth year. The affair was conducted jointly by the Ladies' Aid Society, the Epworth League and the trustees, committees from each taking active parts. The attendance was very large.

Edwin H. Beekman was in charge of the program, which included vocal solos by Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. C. K Shreve: addresses by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church; Rev. C. C. Caine, of Grace M. E. church, and a response from Mr. Kemble. Refreshments were served in conclusion. The room was very prettily decorated for the occasion with palms, plants and cut flowers.

The committees in charge of the reception were as follows: Reception, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Praed, Mr. and Mrs. N. Mansfield Smith, from the official board; Miss Gertrude Gray and Harry H. Sawyer, from the Epworth League, and Mrs. J. Stephen Higham, from the Ladies' Aid Society; refreshments, Mrs. Ira VanArsdale, chairman; Mrs. John Daub, Mrs. Theodore VanPelt, and Mrs. William Gunzleman; decorating, Mrs. John Lant, chairman; Mrs. William Sawyer, Mrs. Ernest Rowe, and Mrs. John McCormack.

Robert Campbell.

Robert Campbell, the six-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Campbell, died at the parents' home on Watchung avenue, yesterday. The funeral will be held at the house tomorrow morning. The family moved here from Somerville ten days ago.

MISS STIMSON WEDS VAN WYCK BROOKS

Announcement is made of the marriage of VanWyck Brooks, youngest son of Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, of this city, and Miss Eleanor Stimson, daughter of Mrs. John Ward Stimson, formerly of this city, but now of California. The wedding took place on Wednesday last at Carmel, Cal., Rev. A. W. Snyder, of that place, performing the ceremony.

Mr. Brooks, who is a graduate of Harvard, is now teaching in the University of California. He has also won much distinction as an author; also contributing articles to magazines that have attracted much attention. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks will reside in California for the present.

MRS. GRISCOM MEETS 'MISS ARNOLD' AT PIER

When the French Line steamship Chicago, from Havre, arrived yesterday, there was considerable excitement; when it was learned that a "Miss Arnold" was a passenger. Instantly the Dorothy Arnold disappearance came to mind. The excitement was heightened when a Mrs. Griscom arrived on the pier and asked for the passenger.

Finally Mrs. Griscom found "Miss Arnold," who proved to be Mrs. Pauline Arnold. She came from Paris and was escorted away by her friend, Mrs. William Griscom, whom she will visit in her home, 33 Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield.

Another interesting passenger on the Chicago was Miss Ida Sedgwick proper, an American artist, who has been studying abroad for four years. She has works in the Paris Salon and several pictures in the Academy of Fine Arts, in Philadelphia. She will be in New York a week, at the home of Mrs. Allen Dawson, No. 45 West Twelfth street.

SCRIBNER FINED $150 FOR BUYING LEAD PIPE

In the Somerset County Court, this morning, Judge Clarence Case imposed a heavy penalty upon Egbert Scribner, of Duer street, indicted for buying lead pipe from minors. He was arraigned on two counts and was fined $75 on each one, making the amount $150. The defendant was also placed in charge of the probation officer for two years.

Before passing sentence, Judge Case gave Scribner a most scathing lecture. He told him that it was men like him who made criminals of boys as in all probability they would not have stolen the pipe if they had not known they could dispose of it as they did. The court asserted that there was no reasonable excuse for his action as he was fully acquainted with the law and was perfectly cognizant of the fact that he committed a misdemeanor when he purchased lead pipe from boys, even if they had secured it in an honest way. Judge Case also stated that a repetition of the offense at any time in the future would mean the extreme penalty.

Scribner conducts a grocery and junk business on upper Duer street, near Greenbrook road, and bought the pipe from four borough boys who stole it from vacant houses in the Park section.

SWIMMING CONTEST AMONG Y.M.C.A BOYS

Swimming contests were continued at the Y. M. C. A., last night, when a number of young men engaged in the twenty-three yard back stroke event. Manley from scratch, and Lewis, with four seconds handicap, each finished in 20 1-5 seconds. Newmiller, with one second handicap, came in third, his time being 25 2-5 seconds, while Thompson, with two seconds handicap, was last, his time being 26 3-5 seconds.

The total points to date are as follows: Manley, 33; Thompson, 26; Newmiller, 24; Lewis, 11; Sandford, 10; Fritts, 9; Dunham, 9; Adell, 3; Johnson, 3.

The concluding event, a 46-yard breast stroke and a 23-yard egg and spoon race, will be held Thursday, May 4. A feature of these contests is that all existing aquatic records of the local association have been broken.

Mrs. Walter E. Stewart and daughter, Miss Stewart, of West Seventh street, have returned from their five months' sojourn in California and Havana, Cuba.

CLUB CELEBRATES

Monday Afternoon Club Enjoys Program of Music, Monologue and Dancing.

AT HARTRIDGE AUDITORIUM.

Three Hundred Members and Friends Attend the Club's Twenty-third Anniversary—Stage Beautifully Decorated.

If numbers and enthusiastic applause indicate the measure of enjoyment, it is fair to infer that the entertainment given last evening by the Monday Afternoon Club, celebrating its twenty-third anniversary, was a signal success. The Hartridge Auditorium, in which the entertainment was given and which is the meeting place of the club, was tastefully decorated with evergreens and pink shaded lights. The guests, numbering about 300, were received by the president, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, and the vice presidents, Miss Isabel S. Arnold, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich and Mrs. William Griscom.

When the curtain rose, a stage beautiful with its woodland setting and an exquisite arrangement of blooming plants at the front, was revealed. "The Costume Musicale," rendered by the Misses Hoyt, of New York, consisted of a varied program of music, monologue and dancing that gave pleasure with its lightness, its variety and unexpected features. The Misses Hoyt have fine singing voices, and their songs, accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Rugges at the piano, were enthusiastically received. The range of nationalities illustrated was large, including songs from Spain, France, China, Japan and German and Indian sangs. The singing of "A Little Dutch Garden" was accompanied with a change of scene, making the description effective and charming.

The entertainment closed with four numbers in imitation of Yvette Gilbert that brought encores and enthusiastic applause.

A social hour followed the entertainment in which refreshments were served.

Much credit is due the entertainment committee for their successful efforts in providing the pleasing entertainment, set with charming decorations and arranged for comfort and good fellowship. The committee consisted of the following members of the club, Mrs. Frederick W. Yates, Mrs. DeWitt Hubbell, Mrs. William A. Conner, Mrs. Chester B. Lawrence, Jr., and Mrs. Otis E. Hovey, asisted by Mrs. Bruce Stewart Lacklan and Mrs. Frank V. Lawrence.

ELKS' MINSTRELS TO SHOW THINGS UP

When the curtain rises upon the scene to be presented by the local Lodge of Elks on the evening of May 10 in the Plainfield theatre in their annual endeavor to present a minstrel show which rather puts the professionals on the defensive, George O. Stevens will be found in the center chair with a sextet of the best local talent on the ends.

Johnny Campbell, with Jack Todd, Charlie Ward, Harry Blimm, Eddie Bennett and the only original John H. Cose, will be there with something in the way of new songs and an olio which will show why the professionals never have a chance with native talent.

There will be an olio following the first part which has been especially prepared to suit the capacities of those who will take part in it and it goes without saying that it will wake up the natives. Harry Wetton, scng writer and universal minstrel coach, has had the fellows in charge for a month or two and the results can best be observed on either one of the nights of the staged show.

Tickets for the show will be placed on sale at the Plainfield theatre on the morning of May 2 at 9 o'clock.

A program of the best souvenir class will be presented to each seatholder at both performances. There will be another rehearsal which will take place tonight at 8 o'clock.

NO MORE FREE RIDES ON P.S.C. TROLLEYS

The Public Service Corporation has announced through a circular letter that according to the provision of a statute recently passed by the Legislature, known as the Public Utilities Act, which becomes effective May 1, it will be compelled to withdraw all free transportation on its trolley lines, except as provided in the act. It will be unlawful on and after May 1 to give free transportation to policemen and firemen, whether in uniform or not, and to certain other classes of persons not covered by the exceptions contained in the provisions of the act, to whom the courtesy of free transportation has heretofore been extended.

The new law provides that "nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent the issue by any steam railroad, street railway, traction, canal, express, telephone or telegraph companies, or other common carriers, of free passes or franks to their employes, officers, agents, surgeons, physicians, attorneys-at-law and their families and the interchange between said public utilities and common carriers of passes or franks for their employes, officers, agents, surgeons, physicians, attorneys-at-law and their families."

SUFFERING HORSE KICKS TWO MEN

Stung with the point of a cotton hook which penetrated his hip at 10 o'clock this morning at the South avenue freight house of the Central Railroad, a horse belonging to George Gaddis, of Grandview avenue, thrashed out with both heels in the stable of the Plainfield Cab Company on East Second street, making two of the city's best known veterinary surgeons to hunt for cover. Dr. A. F. Carpenter and Dr. H. E. Winter suffered from the impact from the animal's heels, but fortunately neither received a serious injury, although Dr. Carpenter said this afternoon his left leg was beginning to swell.

So far as could be learned, Gaddis' horse was nervous this morning and while the expressman was preparing to remove a load of stuff from the freight depot a passing train started the horse to run away. Before getting clear from the impeding wagons in the freight yards the animal managed to catch the iron point of a hook in his hip, tearing a gash which required the attentions of the vets. The animal will recover and it is the belief of both veterinarians that they will also survive the assault of the horse's hoofs.

Presented With $2,000.

As a mark of esteem and appreciation, the Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, who has been obliged to give up active pastorate for a few months, has received from the church, through the treasurer, Albert B. Beers, a check for $2,000, with which to enjoy his enforced vacation.

HOOK'S DOWNFALL

Evil Associations Led Druggists' Clerk to Steal From His Employers.

HE MAKES CLEAN BREAST OF IT

Confesses to Have Taken $500 From Cadmus Bros.—Says He Spent It On Bad Women and in Gambling.

Confessing to having robbed Cadmus Brothers, druggists, of an amount approximating $500, George Hook, eighteen years old, was remanded this morning until tomorrow by Judge DeMeza in the city court. The complaint against Hook is that of burglary.

According to the proprietors of the store young Hook entered their employ in the latter part of September, 1910. He was able, it seems, through the confidence placed in him by his employers to steal from two to three dollars every day. But this was not enough for his needs, it appears. It has been learned, the police say, that the youth was living a fast life, having among his special friends known gamblers and women of questionable character.

On Wednesday night, it is alleged, that young Hook forced an entrance to the drug store from which he had been discharged on Saturday, April 15, and stealing six dollars from the secret drawer of a compartment in the rear. His entrance was effected with a key which is said to have been made by a local locksmith last December.

When brought before Chief Kiely at police headquarters yesterday afternoon Hook confessed to having been an habitual thief and told the chief of the life he has been leading. Last Wednesday, according to his own story, Hook wanted some money, more than had been provided by his father. It is alleged that he went to Scotch Plains and there gambled away what he had and needing more, returned to this city and with the duplicate key entered the drug store, taking what money he needed from a drawer and returning to join his friends in further gambling.

He has been living with his parents at 14 Steiner place, North Plainfield, and so far as his father knows has never been in trouble. The robbery was discovered by Jasper Cadmus, who returned to the store unexpectedly on Wednesday night. The rear door was found open and after making an examination of the premises the discovery of the money drawer apen and rifled was made.

Among the other things alleged to have been taken by Hook are about one hundred boxes of Turkish cigarettes. Mr. Cadmus claims that his cigarette account indicates a loss of from fifteen to twenty dollars.

It was said this morning that Hook's father had given the boy five dollars on the day of the robbery and besides had allowed him to draw some more from the savings bank. He could not account for his son's wildness and was unaware of the profligate life being led by him. No counsel had been engaged by the father of the boy this afternoon.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR MRS. MARGARET KEENAN.

A birthday surprise planned by her children, was tendered to Mrs. Margaret J. Keenan, of South avenue, at the residence of her son, Thomas Keenan, of 151 Johnston avenue, last night and proved a thorough success, not only by being a complete surprise but by proving an evening full of enjoyment to all present. The features was a comedy monologue "My Personal Experience in Raising a Family" by Fred Cross; piano solos, by Miss Mabel Whitman, Miss Angie Whitman, Miss Margaret Keenan and Mrs. Sadie Banghart; vocal solos by Fred Cross and Joseph Noyes; recitations by Percy Banghart and mandolin selections by Miss Martin. Refreshments were served.

Those present were Robert Keenan and family, Percy Banghart and family, Joseph Waglow and family, Joseph Noyes and family, Fred Cross and family, Mrs. Wood and daughter, Mrs. James Brown and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Drake, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Keenan and daughter, Alfred Keenan, Miss Gertrude Martin, Thomas Leacock, Miss Nina Martin, George Aller, Miss Grace Webster, Miss Mabel Whitman, Miss Angie Whitman and Miss Ella Adams.

BOYNTON FURNACE CO.

It nearly doubles the cooking capacity of the range, as both coal and gas may be used at the same time if desired. Besides, this handy range gives, in compact form, both a winter necessity and a summer convenience. It solves the "cook stove" problem. Ask your dealer to show you this best of all combination ranges—the "Newport."

GOLF.

The Baltimore Country Club will hold an open amateur tournament on June 8, 9 and 10. This is a vastly improved course since Will Smith won the open championship there in 1899. The committee announces fifteen handsome prizes and that everything possible will be done to make it the best tournament ever held in the entire South, which will be going some. The Tuxedo Club has booked June 9 and 10 for an invitation tournament. Communications regarding the Baltimore tourney should be sent to M. Tyson Ellicott at the club. He says that Travis, Travers and others prominent players have promised to participate.

A qualifying round for the May cups and a red card competition, each for classes A, B and C, will open the Dunwoodie Country Club season tomorrow. A special competition is announced for October open to the winners of monthly trophies and red card contests who have taken part in three or more competitions. There will be a medal round under a revised handicap, the first sixteen to meet at handicap match play for the green committee trophy and the defeated eight to keep on for the house committee trophy.

A $10,000 FACE IS WORTH HAVING

Bayonne, April 28.—Saying he liked the looks of his face, a man who called himself "Colonel Watson" presented $170 in cash, a bankbook and $10,000 worth of stock to Arthur J. Mitchell while both were in the Hotel La Salle, in Chicago, last week.

Mr. Mitchell, who is a salesman for the Leo Elastic Company of Bayonne, and who lives at 230 Avenue A, met "Colonel Watson" at the hotel and had a long conversation with him one evening. Next morning when he asked for his mail the clerk handed him an envelope which, besides the property mentioned above, contained a note, which read:

"You have a nice face, so I am leaving this for you. Do not try to find me. The whole world is my home.

"COLONEL WATSON."

Mr. Mitchell left the money and the bankbook at the office of the hotel and asked to have the hotel detective try to find the stranger. The stock he kept until he reached New York, when he found it was negotiable and worth $10,000. It consists of shares of a tobacco company.

"I'm nervous with all that property around Bayonne," said Mr. Mitchell last night. "I want to find this Colonel Watson before my hair turns gray."

PROVIDED FOR BY STATE CASH

The general appropriation bill passed by the Legislature the last night of the session provides for the appropriation of $5,459,617,90 to run the State government from October 31, 1911, to October 31, 1912.

The general bill last year amounted to $5,072,592.77. This means an increase in this year's bill of $387,025.13. The unusual expenses in the bill amount to $556,500.

The amounts set aside for most of the State departments show little change. In a number of cases, however, there are liberal increases in the amounts allowed.

The construction of three new armories is provided for under the head of the National Guard. Battery A of East Orange, the Second Battalion of the Second Regiment at Elizabeth and Battery B at Camden are each to have an armory at the cost of $25,000 each. Other new items in the National Guard are $3,200 for horse allowance to officers required to be mounted at the annual encampment, and $3,900 for horse allowance to mounted organizations providing horses for State service at $50 a horse a year.

The naval reserve appropriation is much the same as in former years except that each of the two battalions is to get $4,800 for its cruises instead of $2,400 as in previous years. The departments of the adjutant-general and the quartermaster-general receive practically the same amounts as last year. Five hundred dollars is set aside as usual for the care of the Monmouth battle monument and a similar sum for the care of the Trenton monument.

The Village for Epileptics receives $112,000 for new work this year, in addition to an increase of $10,000 in its allowance for general expenses. The money for new buildings is to be expended as follows: Erection of custodian building, $40,000; patients' buildings, $30,000; mortuary and laboratory, $4,000; extension of water system, $10,000; erection of piggery, $2,000; repairs and improvements, $5,000; furnishings, $10,000; new barn and milk house, $5,000; trees and shrubbery, $1,000; roads, $5,000.

PASS EVILS AS BESLER THEME.

Speaking before the Board of Trade, at its annual banquet in Rialto Hall, High Bridge, Wednesday night, William G. Besler, vice president and general manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, said his company furnished 233 passes to State officials, "and," he added, "the State is able to pay for the transportation of these officials." Mr. Besler advised the enactment of laws similar to those in New York.—Newark News.

Site of Panama Park.

San Francisco, April 28.—Members of the Federal Fine Arts Commission, who accepted an invitation to pass upon the sites proposed for the Panama Pacific Exposition, have telegraphed their report to the executive board of the exposition. Lake Merced, southwest from this city, ranks first in the opinion of the commissioners, and Golden Gate Park is made second choice. Both sites front the ocean.

Miss Dorothy Cross, of Arlington, has returned home after a visit with friends in this city.

Mrs. John Hodge, of Brooklyn, has returned home after spending several days visiting friends in this city.

Miss Margaret Convery, of Trenton, has returned home after spending several days with friends here.

PIANO RECITAL GIVEN FOR THE ENDEAVORERS.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church, a Technola piano recital was given at the Y. M. C. A., last evening, by The Aeolian Company, of New York. Assisting were Mrs. Viola Waterhouse, soprano, and Christian Kriens, violinist, while W. C. Woods was at the Technola piano. That music of such a high character was not appreciated was shown by the small audience. However, those present enjoyed the excellent program, comprising classical selections. The work of Mrs. Waterhouse, familiar to many lovers of music here, was delightful, while the violin playing by Mr. Kriens was of the highest order. Mr. Woods gave a most satisfactory demonstration of the Technola, showing its great possibilities. The program:

Walz, Op. 34, No. 1, Moszkowski, piano; Romeo and Juliet Walz Song, Gounod, Mrs. Waterhouse; Intermezzo en Octaves, Lescbetizky, piano; Sonata in A. Handel, Mr. Kriens; Meditation, "Thais," Massenet, piano; Murmuring Zephyrs, Jensen, and Lark Now Leaves His Wat'ry Nest, Parker, Mrs. Waterhouse; Rigoletto, Paraphrase de Concert, Verdi-Liszt, piano; Traummerie and Concerto, Op. 64, allegro molto vivace, Mendelssohn, Mr. Kriens.

Finance Committee Meets.

The Councilmanic finance committee met last night and devoted some time to a discussion of city finances. While the general budget has been prepared and introduced in the Council, it cannot be completed until the Board of School Estimate reports the amount it will need for the schools the coming year. This, it is believed, will be $7,000 or $8,000 more than last year. The Board of School Estimate will meet early in May to determine the amount thought to be necessary.

Baseball Club's Dance.

The North Plainfield Baseball Club will hold its fifth annual ball in Saengerbund Hall tonight. Professor Heinemeyer's orchestra will furnish the music. The proceeds will be used to secure uniforms for the team. The committee in charge is comprised of E. O. Driver, president; F. Allen, vice-president; G. Perry, secretary Walter Perry, treasurer; J. Reinman, sergeant-at-arms.

Marie Sparrow at Proctor's.

Marie Sparrow, the Irish cyclone, is clearly the big hit at Proctor's theatre this week in her round of songs and stories and she always gets a big hand. Faust Brothers, musical comedians, are unusually clever; Driscoll, Hall & Co., in a sketch, "Twentieth Century Burglars," are good, as are also the Three LeRoy Sisters, singers and dancers.

Women's Exchange to Move.

The Plainfield Women's Exchange, which has been leasing quarters at Watchung avenue and Fifth street, has about completed arrangements to remove to the vacant store in the Marsh building on Park avenue, adjoining that of A. E. Hoagland, the expressman, where there will be more room to carry on the increasing business of the exchange.

School Boys' Game.

Stillman School boys had a baseball tussle yesterday afternoon on the Cricket field. Class 7b defeated class 7c by a score of 5 to 1. The B team's battery held the C team down to a no hit score until the eighth session when through an excusable error one run came across.

Marine in the Toils.

Howard Bennett, a marine, and former resident of this city, who it is alleged had adandoned his son, who is being taken care of by his grandparents at Fifth and Richmond streets, was arrested in Hoboken last night and will be brought to this city today. The complaint is made by Bennett's wife.

Will Exchange Pulpits.

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will occupy his pulpit Sunday morning, preaching on the topic, "Increase Our Faith," and in the evening he will exchange with Rev. J. Tucker Lansdale at Marconnier chapel.

Rev. Frank Fletcher, of this city, will preach Sunday morning and evening at the Temple Baptist church.

Four Dollar Oxfords of Distinction

There is as much of a knack and just as much cleverness in the making of good shoes as there is in the making of good watches. It's ceaseless attention to the little details that makes for perfection. Many manufacturers tell us that we are supercritical, but we find that material and workmanship have both got to be watched pretty closely if the high standard we insist upon is to be maintained. Every bit of leather that goes into our $4.00 Oxford is carefully inspected and the most skilled labor puts it together. That's our way of building business; style speaks for itself and the merest inspection will prove the up-to-dateness of the designs we offer you this season.

SOCIAL CLUB GIVES A SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR

The Nonpariel Social Club gave a very pleasing entertainment and dance in Saengerbund Hall, last night. It was largely attended and proved one of the most successful affairs the organization has yet conducted.

The entertainment took place in the early evening and was a comedy in three acts, entitled, "Men, Maids and Matchmakers." The cast was a capable one and the various members made distinct hits. Those takpart were Mrs. Irene Robinson, Mrs. J. C. Anderson, Miss B. Chapman and Miss Alice Eve; Messrs. J. W. Manury, William J. Willis, J. Stewart, Robert Stevens.

Dancing was taken up at the close of the performance and was continued until an early hour this morning.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of William J. Willis, chairman; Eugene Johnson, A. Venable, Robert Lee, Erastus Thames, A. J. Carey, Robert Stevens, G. Toomy, Eugene Hill, W. N. Daniels, Dr. J. C. Anderson, J. Hegerman, C. C. Irby, W. Gates, J. W. Maury, W. Carter, J. Miller and Percy Henry. William Mayse and T. B. Dyett had charge of the floor.

Hunt Club Team Wins.

The Watchung Hunt Club team of three entries won the hunt team cup at Durland's Academy this week, defeating the entries from the Meadowbrook and Monmouth Hunts. The local horses were entered by Rufus C. Finch, master of the club, who rode one horse. The others were ridden by J. J. O'Donohue and Marshall Clapp. This is the first time that the local hunt club has won honors of this character.

Plans Bermuda Trip.

Captain James Daley, of fire headquartres, who has been off duty because of illness, will start Saturday for a brief trip to Bermuda for the benefit of his health. He will be away about two weeks in all.

Mrs. James Gray, of Monroe avenue, who has been ill for some time, has been taken to Muhlenberg hospital for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Beebe, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Waring and Dr. G. W. Endicott, of this city, were recent visitors at Atlantic City.

Former Assemblyman Edward R. Finch, of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Finch, of Park avenue, has been elected secretary of the Republican Club of New York.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Hazel Kirke, the prima donna in "A Stubborn Cinderella," the musical play of quality to appear at the Plainfield theatre tomorrow night is the possessor of a remarkable voice. She recently finished a five year course abroad, where she has been studying under the careful direction of eminent professors. She gave up a grand opera career and is following the footsteps of Fritzi Scheff, who forsook grand opera for musical comedy. Miss Kirke has successfully appeared in "Cavalleria Rusticana," singing the role of Suntuzza. Other grand operas in which she has sung are: "Martha," "Il Trovatore," Balfe's "Sleeping Queen," "Aida," "Mignon," "Carmen," "Traviata," and several of the Wagner roles.

S. H. Dudley, one of the best known and withal funniest colored comedians on the stage, will head the famous "Smart Set" Company at the Plainfield theatre Wednesday, matinee and night, May 3, with the customary matinee. The organization will present that laughable three act musical comedy entitled "His Honor the Barber." The offering is said to be the best in which this remarkable troupe has appeared in years. Edwin Hanford wrote the book, Messrs. Brymn, Smith and Burris frunished the music and lyrics. All the songs possess a happy and catchy swing and several of the numbers are certain to be whistled before the engagement is half over. In the cast are S. H. Dudley, Ella Anderson, Lottie Grady, Andrew Tribble and last but not least Aida Overton Walker, who will offer an entirely original specialty.

PERSONAL.

Edward Cline, formerly of this city, but now of Camden, has been visiting local relatives and friends for the past few days.

Miss May Aliene Purmont, a student at Maryland College, Baltimore, Md., is making an extended visit with her aunt, Dr. Nell S. Wilcox, of Crescent avenue.

Gabriel Paoli, of the U. S. S. Mississippi, now stationed at Philadelphia, reported for duty today after a week's visit with his father, Lawrence Paoli, of North avenue.

Mrs. George Glover, of 226 East Ninth street, has gone to Atlantic City, where she is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Maxwell, of New York, at the Marlborough-Blenheim. Today Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell are celebrating the second anniversary of their wedding.

THE WEATHER.

EUCHRE AND DANCE FOR BENEFIT OF CONVENT FUND.

One of the most successful affairs of the season was the euchre and dance given by Miss Margaret Moran at St. Mary's T. A. B. Hall, last night, for the benefit of St. Mary's Convent, at West Sixth and Liberty streets. The hall was thronged with patrons of the affair. There were thirty tables engaged in play, representing a total of 120 players. Many fine prizes were awarded to the winners.

After the play all enjoyed dancing until a late hour, music being furnished by Squire's orchestra. At midnight there was an intermission during which refreshments were served by a committee in charge. A large sum was netted for the convert fund.

Mrs. B. H. Hughes, of Long Branch, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Minton, of East Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. White, of Brooklyn, will spend Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Minton, of East Fifth street.

CLEARING SALE OF FISH.

THIEF UNDER BED OF SOCIETY GIRL.

Pretty Miss Winifred Flaherty, one of Metuchen's society belles, was aroused from her slumbers early yesterday morning by a noise in her bedroom. Thinking it was her mother she called out "That you, mother?" There was no answer, but she saw the rays from a flashlight and quickly realized that there was a burglar under her bed.

She sat up in bed and screamed "police" with all her might. The burglar scrambled out from under the bed and jumped out of a second-story window. Her father and mother came rushing into her room, but Miss Flaherty assured them she was not one bit frightened.

The midnight visitor took with him a gold watch and chain, two diamond rings, a stickpin and lot of bric-a-brac, besides about a dollar and a half in small change which Mr. Flaherty had left in his trousers pocket. Burglars also visited two other places in the immediate neighborhood, the home of John W. Morris and the house of John M. Connor. At the Morris place they took about $20 in cash and a pair of gold cuff buttons. Acting Chief of Police Horan was aroused by hearing cries of "Police! Thieves! Help!" and he arrived on the scene just six minutes after the burglar had left, according to the clocks in the Flaherty house.

Glen Onoko Hotel Burns.

Allentown, Pa., April 28.—The Hotel Wahnetah, at Glen Onoko, built by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company a quarter of a century ago at a cost of $60,000, was destroyed by a mountain fire Wednesday night. The hotel was well known to summer tourists and preparations were under way to reopen for the coming season.

Miss Ethel Ball, of Linden avenue, is detained at home by illness.

85 SATIN and PONGEE COATS
For Women and Misses at ⅓ to ½ Their Worth

Peau de Soie and Pongee Coats! The very mention of them will make women sit up and take notice. A second thought of them will give them their desire to own, and when one contemplates the prices at which we are going to offer these rich black satin and pongee coats the desire to buy will be so great as to be irresistible, therefore we cannot expect these eighty-five coats to last long.

Some of these coats are lined throughout; others with simply the yoke lined. They have shawl and sailor collars and are trimmed with rich braids and handsome embroideries. They are cut in loose and semi-fitting styles and there are all sizes from 16 to 44 in the lot; the regular price would be $19.50 to $29.50; our special prices tomorrow will be $12.50 & $14.50

Women's and Misses' Coats, of blue, black and tan Serge and of finest mixtures, in the most fashionable styles; many of them exclusive with us; offered at $8.98, $12.50, $15 and $16.50.

SHOTS FIRED NEAR KAISER

A dispatch received from Corfu by the Dalziel News Agency says that while the Kaiser's yacht, Hohenzollern, with the Emperor on board, was cruising off that port, three rifle shots were fired at it. The bullets whistled over the imperial cabin, according to this report, and caused excitement among the members of his Majesty's suite. Although the dispatch says the outrage is attributed to disaffected Greeks, diplomats in London are at a loss to understand why Greeks should be displeased with the Kaiser.

Up to the present time, no confirmation of the report has been received from any other source. At the German Embassy it was said that every effort is being made to secure particulars of the outrage. There is a feeling here that the firing may have been part of an anarchistic plot. It is known that the Anarchists, especially the Italian and Spanish branches, have been very active lately.

Because of the belief that they are plotting an attempt at wholesale assassination to mar the coronation of King George the police of England and all of the continental countries have recently been very active. All known anarchistic chiefs are being subjected to the closest espionage. Because of this fact, and because of the intense activity of the Berlin police in searching the haunts of the anarchists it was said the outrage might be due to German anarchists.

The Kaiser planned to remain in the Mediterranean for ten days longer, but whether this reported incident will result in has changing his plans cannot be learned at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. VanMater, of Rockview avenue, will remove next week to Myrtle avenue.

Walter Zimmer, of Manning avenue, who has been visiting at the home of his brother in Brooklyn, has returned.

EXEMPT FIREMEN PRAISE MANNING

Elizabeth, April 28.—William P. Baker, of the Newark Exempt Firemen's Association, boomed James J. Manning, formerly city clerk of this city, for State president of the State Exempt Firemen's Association at the annual meeting of the local association at Miller's Hall last night. Mr. Baker praised Mr. Manning for his services during his past two terms and said that he would be sure to defeat anyone who may oppose him at the meeting of the State association on May 17 and that it was very likely that he would be unopposed. He further offered a motion that a committee be appointed to arrange for the presentation of a gold medal to Mr. Manning for his services. This motion was carried unanimously and Mr. Baker, former Assemblyman Schwartz and ex-Councilman John J. Gardner were appointed on the committee. A special meeting will be held on May 15 for the purpose of presenting the gift.

Mr. Gardner also praised Mr. Manning for his services, and he was unanimously indorsed for the State presidency by the association. Majority Leader John J. Matthews was also praised for his work in behalf of the exempt firemen, especially for the bill put through the Legislature forbidding the removal of city officials who are exempt firemen and who have not been appointed for a definite term. President Ackerman of the Senate was also commended. The exempts passed a resolution calling on the council to give them one of the engine houses which will be vacated in a few months, when new houses will be erected, as a meeting place. It was stated that the present quarters in the City Hall are inadequate.

More than 100 members were present. Refreshments were served after the election of officers and there was music and singing. The following were chosen unanimously: Michael P. Devine, president; James J. MacMaster, vice president; Cornelius F. Reagan, recording secretary; John J. Clancy, corresponding secretary; Frederick Kurtz, treasurer; delegates to the board of relief, John J. Gardner, Charles Chandler and Edward Butler.

GOLF.

The late spring has delayed the opening of the Park Golf Club beyond the usual time, but everything is now ready for play on Saturday. George A. Chapman has consented to take the chairmanship of the green committee, and under his direction, Greenkeeper O'Loughlin has put the course in fine shape, and there is every promise that during the summer to come the grounds will be better than ever before. The recent rains have left part of the course rather soft, so that for a week or two it will be necessary to use temporary greens on the fifth, seventh and ninth holes. Weather conditions have also delayed the work of putting the tennis courts in condition for play. A gang of men are at work on the new court and expect to have that in shape for play a little later in the spring.

The club house is open and is, as usual, under the direction of Steward George Anderson. President C. W. McCutchen has announced the following committees:

Greens—George A. Chapman, chairman; Miss Lydie E. Loizeaux, C. W. McCutchen; golf—Samuel Townsend, chairman; J. B. Betts, W. V. Byard, U. G. Tingley, N. H. Morrison; house—C. B. Morse, chairman; S. St. J. McCutchen, Miss May Shreve, Miss Louise H. Fuller, Miss Antionette Moody, A. M. Morrell; tennis—Dr. H. K. Carroll, chairman; R. U. Carpenter, Miss Helen Moody, Miss Irene Dunham; membership—C. B. Morse, chairman; S. St. John McCutchen, Miss Mildred M. Parker.

The golf committee has arranged to start play for the President's and Golf Club cups on Saturday, May 6, conditions being the same as last year. The schedule for the year will be on the same general lines as last. There will be a change in the method of handicapping, so as to give the new players in the club more of an opportunity. The complete schedule will be announced later.

CLAN MACKENZIE TO HAVE DANCE TONIGHT.

Clan Mackenzie, No. 204, O. S. C., will enjoy its first annual dance this evening in Sebring's auditorium. A program of twenty dances has been arranged by the clan. The committees follow: Floor, William Spalding, Allan Sanderson, Arthur Campbell; reception, C. L. Mackenzie, Robert Murray, William Boyd, William Brown and Donald McInnes; entertainment, Andrew Petrie, James Smith, William Shives, Robert McGregor, Alexander Doig, James Sinclair and John Calder; cloak room, John Donaldson, Andrew Roxburgh and William Birrell.

—The tea, coffee and butter sold by Neuman Bros., grocers, is the best obtainable. A trial order is all we ask.

CONTEST

FOR PLAINFIELD PUPILS

The Plainfield Ice & Supply Co. will give a prize of $25 in cash to the pupil of any school, public or private, in Plainfield or North Plainfield, who shall submit the best written advertisement for the Plainfield Ice & Supply Company's business, to occupy a space equal to the space taken by this announcement.

The judges will be the Editors of the Courier-News and Daily Press. The conditions will be as follows:

The advertisement as written should be sent to the office of the Plainfield Ice & Supply Co., with a separate sheet of paper attached, bearing the writer's name, and name of the school he or she attends. Both sheets thus submitted will be numbered by the Company in the order received, and the sheet bearing the name of the contestant will be held by the Plainfield Ice & Supply Co., and the advertisement with the corresponding number will be sent to the judges, so that the judges will have no knowledge of the name of the writer. The advertisement which is decided to be the best will be so marked, and sent to the Plainfield Ice & Supply Company, who will by reference to the sheets in their possession, determine the name of the sucessful contestant.

The contest will end May 30, all letters received up to midnight of that day being eligible to the competition.

The House of the Whispering Pines

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, by Anna Katharine Rohlfs

I looked again. The scrap was smaller than my note had been when it left my hands. If it were the same then some of the words were gone. Were they the first ones or the last? It would make a difference in the reading or, rather, in the conclusions to be drawn from what remained. If only the mist would clear from before my eyes or he would hold the slip of paper nearer. The room was very dark. The —the—

"Is it your writing?" Coroner Perry asked for the third time.

There was no denying it. My writing was peculiar and quite unmistakable. I should gain nothing by saying no.

"It looks like it," I admitted reluctantly, "but I cannot be sure in this light. May I ask what this bit of paper is and where you found it?"

"Its contents I think you know. As for the last question, I think you can answer that also if you will." Saying which he quietly replaced the scrap of paper in his pocketbook.

I followed the action with my eyes. I caught a fresh glimpse of a darkened edge and realized the cause of the faint odor which I had hitherto experienced without being conscious of it. The scrap had been plucked out of the chimney. She had tried to burn it. I remembered the fire and the smoldering bits of paper which crumbled at my touch. And this one—this, the most important, the only important one of them all—had flown, half scorched, up the chimney and clung there within easy reach.

The whole incident was plain to me, and I could even fix upon the moment when Hexford or Clarke discovered this invaluable bit of evidence. It was just before I burst in upon them from the ballroom, and it was the undoubted occasion of the remark I then overheard:

"This settles it. He cannot escape us now."

During the momentary silence which now ensued I tried to remember the exact words which had composed this note:

"Tonight—10:30 train—we will be married at P. Come, come, my darling, my life. She will forgive when all is done. Hesitation will only undo us. Tonight at 10:30. Do not fail me. I shall never marry any one but you."

Was that all? I had an indistinct remembrance of having added some wild and incoherent words of passionate affection affixed to her name. Her name! But it may be that in the hurry and flurry of the moment these terms of endearment simply passed through my mind and found no expression on paper. I could not be sure any more than I could be positive from the half glimpse I got of these lines which portion had been burned off—the top, in which the word "train" occurred, or the final words, emphasizing a time of meeting and my determination to marry no one but the person addressed. The first gone, the latter might take on any sinister meaning. The latter gone, the first might prove a safeguard, corroborating my statement that an errand had taken me into town.

It would be hard to find an alibi for Carmel if suspicion once turned her way. She had not met me at the train. The unknown but doubtless easily to be found man who had handed me her note could swear to that fact.

Then the note itself! I had destroyed it, it is true, but its phrases were present to my mind. They were these—innocent, if she were innocent, but how suggestive in the light of her probable guilt:

"I cannot. Wait till tomorrow. Then you will see the depth of my love for you—what I owe you, what I owe Adelaide."

I was conscious that not a look or movement of mine had escaped the considerate but watchful eye of the man before me.

"You do not relish my questions," he dryly observed. "Perhaps you would rather tell your story without interruption. If so I beg you to be as explicit as possible. The circumstances are serious enough for perfect candor on your part."

I took a quick resolve. I would appear to throw discretion to the winds, to confide to him what men usually hold sacred, to risk my reputation as a gentleman, rather than incur a suspicion which might involve others more than it did myself.

"I will give you an account of myself," said I. "I did love Adelaide once, or thought so, but my feelings changed. A great temptation came into my life. Carmel returned from school and—you know her beauty, her fascination. A week in her presence and marriage with Adelaide became impossible. But how evade it? I knew only the coward's way to lure this inexperienced young girl, fresh from school into a runaway match. This evening I had set as the limit of my endurance of the intolerable situation. During a minute of solitude preceding the dinner at Miss Cumberland's house on Carhill I wrote a few lines to her sister, urging her to trust me with her fate and meet me at the station in time for the 10:30 train. I meant to carry her at once to P., where I had a friend in the ministry who would at once unite us in marriage. I was very peremptory, for my nerves were giving way under the secret strain to which they had been subjected for so long, and she herself was looking worn with her own silent and uncommunicated conflict.

"To write this note was easy, but to deliver it involved difficulties. Miss Cumberland's eyes seemed to be more upon me than usual. Mine were obliged to respond, and Carmel, seeing this, kept hers on her plate or on the one other person seated at the table, her brother Arthur. But the opportunity came as we all rose and passed together into the drawing room. Carmel fell into place at my side, and I slipped the note into her hand. She had not expected it, and I fear that the action was observed, for when I took my leave of Miss Cumberland shortly after I was struck by her expression. I had never seen such a look on her face before, nor can I conceive of one presenting a more extraordinary contrast to the few and commonplace words with which she bade me good evening.

"I neither knew Adelaide nor did I know the girl whose love I had so overestimated. She failed me, Dr. Perry. I was met at the station not by herself, but by a letter—a few hurried lines given me by an unknown man—in which she stated that I had asked too much of her—that she could not so wrong her sister who had brought her up and done everything for her since her mother died. I have not that letter now or I would show it to you. In my raging disappointment I tore it up on the place where I received it and threw the pieces away. I had staked my whole future on one desperate throw, and I had lost. If I had had a pistol"— I stopped, warned by an easy movement on the part of the man I addressed that I had better not dilate too much upon my feelings. I pulled myself together and proceeded to finish my story with greater directness.

"I did not leave the station till the 10:30 train had gone. It was from sheer preoccupation of mind that I drove this way instead of straight out by Marshall avenue. As I reached the bend in the road where you get your first sight of the buildings I saw a thin streak of smoke rising from one of its chimneys, and, anxious as to its meaning, I drove in"—

"Wait, Mr. Ranelagh, I am sorry to interrupt you, but by which gate did you enter?"

"By the lower one."

"Was it snowing at this time?"

"Not yet. It was just before the clouds rushed upon the moon. I could see everything quite plainly."

My companion nodded, and I went breathlessly on. Any question of his staggered me. I was ignorant of the facts at his command. I was not able to conjecture by what chance or at whose suggestion the police had raided the place and discovered the tragedy which had given point to that raid. I continued, but I omitted all mention of the most serious part of my adventure—said nothing of my vision of Carmel or the terrible conclusions which her presence there had awakened.

"There is no more to say," I concluded. "I know nothing. It is all a phantasmagoria to me—with no more meaning than a nightmare. She is dead—I know that—but beyond that all is doubt—confusion. I can neither understand nor explain."

WAR OF THE WALKS.

Humors of the Right of Way on the Streets of Havana.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon Havana begins to revive from the lull which falls at about 11, for, although this city no longer frankly retires to sleep the siesta as she ought, she does doze dully in the motionless thick heat of midday.

After 3 one sees ladies venturing forth in twos and threes to the streets where the best shops are. This is the hour in which to witness, if one has eyes and humor for it, a whole series of comic occurrences.

Havana's sidewalks are narrow, and their lack of width gives rise to some local customs and a deal of heartburning. One does not keep hard to the right, regardless, in approaching another person traveling along the narrow flagging in the opposite direction. One must take under advisement sex, age, color and present condition of servitude as blazoned forth for all to read in the details of personal attire.

Men usually give women the inside of the walk, stepping down when necessary to let them pass. Serving people, regardless of age and sex, and all others who so humble themselves as to carry packages are expected to yield the walks to their superiors, who then are about everybody they meet.

Frequently, of course, it is difficult to make in the flash of turning a corner all the nice calculations requisite to deciding who shall have the walk and who shall surrender it.

I know of nothing funnier than to watch two fairly well dressed and corpulent Cuban ladies determining, as they stand tottering, face to face on a foot wide flagging, the whole delicate problem of their relative rank. The one arrayed in the giddiest garment seems usually to win.

If there is small choice in color and cost between the pink costume of one and the blue costume of the other the one with the straightest hair stands fast and the other walks round, sometimes with grunts and comments sotto voce.

Or, all details seeming equal, they face each other and glare until the one with least nerve wilts, swerves into an adjacent doorway, and the victorious one sweeps by with uptilted chin and exultant petticoats.—Irene A. Wright's "Cuba."

Warning Before Command.

In bringing up my children I found that at night when they were tired they were spared many tears by being warned before I gave them a strict command. Instead of saying "Now it is time to go to bed. Put away your blocks at once," I would say. "It is nearly time to go to bed. Finish your house first and then put away your blocks." In this way the children were fully prepared to go, and there was consequently no begging and no temptation for me to show my lack of firmness by being persuaded to allow them to build "just one more house."

Imagine a mother in the midst of an absorbing chapter being told by one in higher authority to put down her book at once and go to bed. Would it not save a frown of impatience to be told to finish the chapter first?—Harper's Bazar.

A Curiosity of Sound.

If when riding in a balloon at a height, say, of 2,000 feet a charge of guncotton be fired electrically 100 feet below the car, the report, though really as loud as a cannon, sounds no more than a pistol shot, possibly partly owing to the greater rarity of the air, but chiefly because the sound, having no background to reflect it, simply spends itself in the air. Then, always and under all conditions of atmosphere, there ensues absolute silence until the time for the echo back from earth has fully elapsed, when a deafening outburst of thunder rises from below, rolling on often for more than half a minute.

Impartial.

Professor C. Alphonso Smith once wrote an English grammar. The book was published while Dr. Smith was teaching at the University of North Carolina. One day he received from a farmer a letter containing the following:

"I am glad somebody has written an impartial grammar at last."

Dr. Smith immediately wrote to the farmer asking what he meant by an "impartial grammar." The answer was:

"You give the children this sentence to parse: 'One Confederate killed ten Yankees.'"—New York Post.

Where Honesty Failed.

"You are still having trouble in your search for an honest man?"

"Yes," replied Diogenes. "There are plenty who are scrupulous about business and politics. But I have never yet found a man so honest that he wouldn't try to ring in a portrait taken when he was ten years younger when you ask him for a picture for publication."—Washington Star.

Indispensable.

"That banquet tonight can't get along without me."

"You have a pretty good opinion of yourself. Billed for a speech?"

"Oh, no. I was invited to listen."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Proof.

Kicker—Have you a cook engaged at present? Snicker—I think so; there's a man out in the kitchen every night.—Harper's Bazar.

Politeness is good nature regulated by good sense.—Sydney Smith.

NEW JERSEY'S BEST STORE

BROAD AND CEDAR STREETS, NEWARK, N. J.

This grand old store is the favorite shopping place for New Jersey's best people. Try W. V. SNYDER CO. first, tomorrow or any other day. You will be delighted with the goods, the service and above all the cheerful homelike that is all around the store. We also give S. & H. Green Trading Stamps, for which many handsome needs can be secured. Double stamps before 12 o'clock, single stamps afternoon.

Quick Suburban Deliveries

Out-of-town customers can rejoice in the new innovation set by W. V. SNYDER CO. last fall, when they installed a quick automobile delivery service to all surburban districts. This means quite a saving in time for a customer who lives at a distance and is in a hurry for goods, and is an important fact to remember when in Newark on a shopping tour.

QUEER CAVALRY CHARGE.

Attack Upon a Stranded Gunboat by a Mounted Squad.

After the action at Sabine Crossroads (in April, 1864) the Lexington was leading the fleet on the way down the Red river. A rifle fire was directed upon her decks from the Confederate skirmishers on the shore. At one point the river widened out and the channel meandered through an open stretch of comparatively shallow water. As the Lexington reached this open stretch the man at the wheel, who had been replaced once or twice during the trip, was struck by a well directed shot from the bank. The little vessel turned sidewise to the current and grounded bow and stern across the narrow channel. A squad of Confederate cavalry, led by General Green and ex-Governor Mouton, seized the opportunity for a brilliant coup. They rode out through the shallows, the water being up to the shoulders of their horses, keeping up such a sharp fire that the decks of the gunboat had to be abandoned. The cavalry reached the edge of the channel, and it seemed for a moment as if they would be able to get on board and take possession of the vessel. If their attempt had been successful the vessel would have been sunk where she lay and the channel would have been blocked. The next vessel in the column was still above the point waiting until by the movement of the smoke from the stacks of the Lexington it could be known that the channel was clear. The men on the gunboat finally succeeded in bringing to bear a gun from below, and a volley of shrapnel killed General Green. Discouraged by the death of their leader, the cavalry turned back to the bank. The Yankee gunners again took possession of the deck and the wheelhouse, and, getting out their stilts (long poles fastened by swinging bolts to the side of the vessel), they succeeded, although still under a sharp fire, in pushing the bows of the vessel around and getting her again under way.—American Review of Reviews.

TECUMSEH'S MISSING BUST.

The Reason It Was Taken From Its Niche In the Capitol.

"Where is the bust of Tecumseh that used to be in a niche on the senate side of the capitol?" Richard Livingston, a student of American history, asked recently.

"I know that years ago there was a fine bronze bust of an Indian, and the name Tecumseh was on the pedestal, and as Tecumseh was about the most famous Indian chief of our school history books every American boy took more interest in surveying his features than in looking over the faces of eminent white men in the big building. I walked all over the building and saw Indians enough in paintings and statuary, also some live ones, but no Tecumseh. Then I hunted up my congressman, and he went through a guidebook—no use. Then we questioned the guides. They had not heard of a Tecumseh bust, and most of them asked, 'What state was the senator from?'

"I was about to give it up. Then a somber sort of chap with a silk hat and a red flower in his buttonhole relieved my anxiety. He explained what I had not thought of before, and that was the fact that Tecumseh was killed in battle wearing the uniform of a British general. He died fighting the American flag. Why should he be honored with a bust in the capitol?

"And then I was told that the Tecumseh bust really had been in the capitol for many years until one day a wise senator, familiar with the history of his country, made a protest. That sent the Tecumseh bust to the cellar or to some museum here in town."—Washington Post.

The Bull of Phalaris.

Perillus of Athens is said by the ancient authorities to have invented for Phalaris, tyrant of Agrigentum, B. C. 570, a brazen bull which opened on the side to admit victims who were to be roasted to death by the fire which was built underneath. The dying groans of the sufferers closely resembled the "roaring of a maddened bull;" hence the name that was given to the invention. It is refreshing to know that later on the populace rose against Phalaris and burned the tyrant in the bull that he had made to be the cause of death to so many others.—New York American.

A Roundabout River.

The Kentucky river at Jackson is a freak. It runs for five miles or more to advance sixty feet. The circuit of the water forms what is known as the "panhandle." Standing on the backbone you can flip a stone into the river on the north side and one into the river on the south side, five miles below. You are on the north side of the river and on the south side of the river and going up the river and down the river at the same time.—Winchester News.

HIS DIVORCE HINGES ON DATE OF REMOVAL

The suit of William B. Cragin, of this city, one-time National indoor tennis champion, for a diverce from his wife, Mrs. Maysie Bruce Cragin, is now claimed to hinge on the date of the removal by Mrs. Cragin of her own belongings from the home which she occupied with her husband, in this city. Mr. Cragin, in his petition, fixed the date of removal as October 12, 1908, and the petition was filed on October 13, 1910, the day following the expiration of the statutory period of two years that enables a husband or wife to secure a divorce on the ground of desertion.

Upon conclusion of argument in the Cragin suit before Vice-Chancellor Emery, Wednesday afternoon the Vice-Chancellor stated that it was not clear to his mind from the evidence adduced just when the removal by Mrs. Cragin of her belongings had actually taken place, and hence he would have to give the testimony further consideration.

If the things were taken away from the Plainfield house October 12, 1908, the Vive-Chancellor said then Mr. Cragin would be entitled to a divorce, inasmuch as Mrs. Cragin had not proved against her husband such cruelty as would have made it unsafe for her to live with him. Should the testimony not established this, then Mr. Cragin's petition would have to be dismissed as having been prematurely filed.

On the question of the custody of the 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cragin, who is with the latter, the Vice-Chancellor advised that some agreement be reached between counsel as to the times and place when Mr. Cragin may see the child, her tender age precluding all thought of her being taken from Mrs. Cragin.

Should no agreement be reached, the Vice-Chancellor said, he would himself determine the matter.

S.P.C.A DELEGATIONS TO MEET ON TUESDAY

In the lecture room of Trinity church, Elizabeth, next Tuesday, the State branches of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will convene. Mayor Alfred Stein, of Elizabeth, will open the proceedings with a speech of welcome. The morning session will last from 2 until 4 o'clock.

It is proposed to form a permanent State organization at this meeting. The new organization will probably form one of the strongest in the country and will serve the purpose of bringing together in one strong executive body the real workers for the good of and protection of animals throughout the State.

Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, of Fanwood, will represent the Plainfield branch and several of the local members will attend. Among the speakers will be Probation Officer Major Charles Irwin and Miss Mary Barber, both of whom are active workers in the society.

POLICEMEN AND FIREMEN IN UNIFORMS RIDE FREE.

In response to a letter written by Mayor George W. V. Moy to President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Railway Company, Mr. McCarter quotes the new law and declares that policemen and firemen cannot be carried on the cars of the P. S. C., unless they are in full uniform. There is nothing in the law to prevent the carrying free of city officials which means patrolmen and firemen when they are in full uniform.

Mayor Moy today instructed Chief Kiely that his men should ride free when in uniform.

ARROW COTERIE HOLDS FIRST INFORMAL DANCE.

The first informal dance of the Arrow Coterie was held in Debele's auditorium, last evening, and was an unqualified success. The attendance was large and encores were the rule after every number.

A special feature was the "Moonlight Dance." It was accomplished by electrical effects under the personal direction of James Richardson and Russell Hammond. Refreshments were served at midnight under the supervision of Dudley Welch. Chas. Kregar had charge of the floor.

A Pupil Recital.

Miss Helen George, of Duer street, gave an informal piano recital yesterday afternoon for her pupils, their parents and friends. Among those who played were, the Misses Lillian and Christine Claybrook, Marion Blair, Dorothy Martin, Pauline Fass, Mary Buchanan and Frank Rowley, Jr. Refreshments were served at the conclusion.

SWEET CHARITY

In His Name Circle Gives Songs and Tableaux at the P. H. S. Auditorium.

MISS FISHER THE DIRECTOR.

Miss Vivian Edwards Reads Short Explanatory Sketch — Mrs. Frederic W. Butler in General Charge of Affair.

Under the auspices and for the benefit of In His Name Cirlce of The King's Daughters, an entertainment of familiar songs and well-known ycung people of history and fiction was presented at the Plainfield High School Auditorium, last night, before a good sized audience. The program was illustrated by tableaux, arranged by Miss Elizabeth Fisher, of Swiftwater, Pa., while Miss Vivian Edwards, read short sketches explaining the tableaux; and also sang a number of songs, popular and classical, all of which were greatly enjoyed Mrs. Jessie Wood Sincere was the accompanist.

The young women members of the In His Name Circle, assisted by several young men, took the various parts, and the representations were remarkably good and true to the characters presented. The program follows:

Fiction—Dolly Vardon, Miss Gertrude Butler; Amy and Laurie, Miss Dorothy Tuttle and Thomas Jewett; Lorna Doone, Miss Leile Hedges. Foreign Songs—Jean et Jeanne, Weckerlin, Miss Monica Sharretts and John Zerega; Lorelei, Silcher, Miss Marguerite Arnold, Mattinate, Tosti, Miss Carolyn Slauson. Poetry—Anne Page, Miss Eleanor Hatch; Priscilla and John Alden, Miss Pauline Gates and Robert DeGraff; Elaine, Miss Dorothy Tuttle. Classic songs—Der Asra, Rubstein, Miss Dorothy Lyon and Thomas Leggett; Du Bist wie Blume, Schumann, Miss Gertrude Butler and Walter Harrington; Guten Morgen, Grieg, Miss Gweidolyn Stanton.

History—Pocohontas, Miss Dorothy Leal; Nelly Custis, Miss Marion Wean; Victoria, Miss Eleanor Brown. Songs of the East and West—The Temple Bells, Amy Woodforde Finden, Miss Caroline Ross; If in the Great Bazaars, Amy Woodfords Finden, Miss Edith Ogden and Thomas Jewett; Alone Upon the Housetop, Galloway, Miss Dorothy Leal; From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water, Cadman, Miss Ellen Hovey and Thomas Leggett. History—Jeanne d'Arc, Miss Helen Strong; Giovanni de Medici, Walter Harrington; Lady Jane Grey, Miss Edith Arnold. English Songs—Sally in our Alley, Miss Martine Weeks and John Zerega; Cherry Ripe, Miss Edith Ogden; My True Love Hath My Heart, Miss Leila Hedges; Leezie Lindsay, Miss Dorothy Parvin and Robert DeGraff.

Mrs. Frederic W. Butler is the president of the In His Name Circle, and it was largely due to her untiring efforts that the affair was such a success. The proceeds from the entertainment will be used to pay the circle's pledge to the City Union of The King's Daughters.

TEA, SALE, MUSICAL OF Y.M.C.A AUXILIARY

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. held a successful tea, sale and musical yesterday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. George L. Babcock, on West Eighth street. The affair was very largely attended, the house being thronged with members and friends of the auxiliary. During the afternoon there was a fine program of music, including violin solos by Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston; soprano solos by Mrs. John B. Cottrell and piano selections by Mrs. Harry Johnson. Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard was the accompanist.

In addition there was a sale of candy, aprons and cake. Those in charge included Mrs. A. M. Zabriskie, Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard, Mrs. W. A. McClurg, Mrs. Leslie M. Daniel, Mrs. Phillip Suffren, Mrs. H. C. Krebs, Mrs. Asa F. Randolph, Mrs. Ira N. West, while Mrs. J. E. Kimball, Mrs. H. C. Krebs and Mrs. O. S. Rogers received the guests.

Another feature was the tea. Mrs. Charles P. Titsworth and Mrs. William C. Kinney poured and they were assisted in serving by a number of young women. The patronage of the affair was so liberable that a large sum will be realized for the benefit of the work of the auxiliary.

Y. W. C. A. Exhibit.

The annual exhibition of work by the Y. W. C. A. is being shown today in the windows of Shirley & Johnston and the public is invited to inspect the same. Representatives of the association are present to explain the work.

YOUNG HOOK HELD

Confessed Burglar Released on Bail to Await Grand Jury's Action.

ON EMPLOYER'S COMPLAINT.

Drug Clerk Put Money in His Pocket Instead of in Cash Register—Liked "Sporting Life" Too Well.

The complaint against George Hook, the eighteen-year-old boy, who was accused of burglary on the premises of Cadmus Brothers, the druggists, came before Judge DeMeza, in the city court this morning. The youth was held in $500 bail for the action of the grand jury after pleading guilty to the charge as made by Jasper Cadmus.

Detective Sergeant John Flynn, who worked up the case for the police department has secured the confession from Hook and had the necessary evidence to produce in case Hook pleaded not guilty. Several boxes of cigarettes were found where the boy had concealed them and the five dollars he was accused of stealing is acknowledged.

According to the story confessed to by Hook, he had been in the habit of taking whatever cash he needed by neglecting to ring up the cash register after making a sale and slipping the money into his pocket. When asked what led him to commit the daily thefts he said that he liked the "sporting" life and wanted to see all there was in it.

The complaint as sworn to by Jasper Cadmus says that Hook broke into the drug store and stole five dollars in money and merchandise to the value of two dollars. Charles Hook, the boy's father, secured bail for his son this afternoon.

HORSE SHOW STABLES THREATENED BY FIRE

One of the main stables in the Plainfield Driving Club's show grounds on Randolph road caught fire shortly before noon today. Workmen had been burning off the grass and leaves about the place and flames from one of the piles communicated to the structure. The blaze was first noticed by Edward McCann as he was passing down Randolph road and he telephoned Fire headquarters from the DuFlon residence.

Chief Doane sent out No. 2 hose wagon, the chemical engine, No. 1 truck and the steamer. One side of the building was in flames when the apparatus arrived but a hydrant stream and the chemical engine soon had them in control. The blaze was entirely out in aboutfifteen minutes. The loss is about $150, fully covered by insurance.

The building on fire and those near it are valued at about $4,000. Only the prompt arrival of the department prevented their destruction .It would seriously handicapped the Driving Club as its annual horse show takes place the first week in June.

When the telephone alarm was received Chief Doane sounded five blows on the gong for the call men. There was a slight pause between the second and third tap, leading many to believe that box 23 had been pulled.

CONTRACTS AWARDED FOR 2 LOCAL BRIDGES

Thomas Winans, of Roselle, will receive the contract for the Watchung avenue and Duer street bridges over Greenbrook. Yesterday the bids for building the two bridges were opened by the Freeholders and Mr. Winans' bid was the lowest. He agrees to build them for $717.

Other bids were received from Mobus & Burke, who wanted $941.-80 and Weldon Construction Co., whose offer was $919.10.

Baseball Club Dance.

The North Plainfield Baseball Club's annual dance in Saengerbund Hall, last night, was largely attended. It proved a successful affair, both from a social and financial point of view. The proceeds will be used to secure new uniforms for the club's team.

William Whitehead, of West Third street, is detained at home as the result of a light stroke of paralysis.

ONE DAY IN COURT

Minor Offenders' Trials Before Judge DeMeza in the City Court.

JOSEPH MANHATTAN ACQUITTED

Chauffeur Fined for Speeding—Stone Throwers Lectured—Carpenter Accused of Riding Bike on Sidewalk.

Judge DeMeza had a busy session in the city court this morning, disposing of several cases, some of which had been postponed from previous dates. Joseph W. Manhattan, who was accused of disorderly conduct by Alfred Olsen, a gardner, in the employ of W. H. Foster, of Dunellen avenue, was acquitted by the court. Manhattan was defended by Francis J. Blatz while V. W. Nash, Jr., prosecuted the case for Mr. Olsen.

George Boland and the Vargo brothers and William Ryan, accused of throwing stones at and breaking a signal lamp of the Central Railroad, were lectured by the court, after which they promised to behave better in the future.

Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen appeared to present a cruelty case against Andrew Huff and John Keleher, but at the request of Walter Hetfield, counsel, for Keleher the case was postponed for two weeks.

Charles Johnson, chauffeur, for a local merchant, was fined five dollars for speeding his automobile on Watchung avenue near Fourth street. He was warned that a repetition of the offense would entail a heavier penalty.

Rodney Carpenter, accused by August Kleinicke, of the Netherwood district, of riding his bicycle on the sidewalk on Woodland avenue ,asked the judge to postponed the hearing in the case until next Tuesday, owing to the fact that his accuser was not in court and besides he wanted counsel in the case. Carpenter's detention on the charge was due to a written communication received by Chief Kiely in which the police were accused of negligence.

In the matter of the Overseer-of-the-Poor against Howard E. Bennett, who was arrested yesterday in Hoboken, charged with abandoning his twelve-year-old boy, the case was settled by Bennett promising to take the boy to his home in Hoboken and providing for him in the future. The child has been in the care of his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnson, who live on East Fifth street.

LOCAL MEN BUILDING LONG ISLAND BUNGALOW

Lucius H. Biglow, a former well known resident of this city, now living in Brooklyn, is having built at West Hampton Beach, one of the finest bungalows on Long Island. When completed is will represent Plainfield workmanship throughout as the plans were drawn by Architect A. L. C. Marsh. Alexander Milne has the contract and local carpenters and masons are employed on the job.

The bungalow is to be 110 feet long by thirty-five feet in width. It will have fifteen rooms in all and all accommodations found in an up-to-date residence. The living room will be forty by thirty-five feet and two stories in height. Everything has been designed with a view to securing light, air and comfort and Mr. Biglow will have an ideal summer place. It is to be completed by August 1.

Contractor Milne has taken his own men to do the job and they will remain at the place until the bungalow is ready for occupancy. They have erected a temporary bunk house on the beach and will live like nabobs while the work progresses. William Bodine is in charge of the carpenters and William F. Day, of Liberty street, is boss mason. Those who are acquainted with Mr. Day's culinary abilities know that the diners will get the best of everything and plenty of it. Besides Bodine and Day, the Plainfielders on the job are John Brown, Edward Brown, Mark Schmeyer, John Bodine and Joseph Schenck..

West Hampton Beach is on the Long Island railroad, seventy-five miles from Brooklyn, and is one of the most popular summer residential places on the island.

CIDER CASE JURY COULD NOT AGREE

It was an easy matter for a janitor in the employ of James P. W. Taylor and Mrs. Mary E. Taylor, of this city to determine what to do with a quantity of hard cider which the former found in the cellar of their building when he was doing housecleaning some time ago, but it has proved a much harder time for an Elizabeth District Court Jury to determine who owned the cider and who should be paid the cost of the same. The cider question kept a jury, drawn by Judge Clark McK. Whittemore, locked up for nearly four hours, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon the jurymen, tiring of talking about hard cider, informed Judge Whittemore that it would be useless to keep them locked up longer, as there was no agreement in sight. They were discharged.

Some time ago, Joseph Phillips claims, he rented the cellar under the grocery store formerly conducted by Fred Dunn, in North avenue, this city. Phillips bought a quantity of cider, which he contemplated turning into vinegar. He stored the cider in the cellar. Some time later Fred Dunn failed in business. The Taylors owned the building, and when the grocer had cleared out what was left of his stock the owners of the house ordered their janitor to apply the fine-tooth comb thereto. And he did.

He discovered the cidar in the cellar. Of course, the janitor was not to know to whom the tart-tasting stuff belonged. So what did he do but tell an Italian about the discovery. The Italian looked into the cellar, then into the cider barrels, took a good expert sniff thereof, and offered to give the janitor $1 a barrel. This looked good to the janitor, so the cider was sold.

ALL BIDDERS SHARE IN FURNISHING SUPPLIES

Inasmuch as the Consumers' Coal Company, the lowest bidder on all supplies for the city fire department, declined to sign the contract, it was practically decided at the Councilmanic Fire committee meeting last night to distribute the award for the supplies among the other bidders. This matter had been held up because, it is said, Mayor Moy found that the lowest bid was not strictly according to the provisions of the contract.

Mayor Moy explained the situation last night and it was then practically agreed to give the other bidders a chance to furnish some of the hay, oats, straw and coal, instead of attempting to place it all with one concern.

There was no further discussion about fire horses or what arrangements had been made to settle with Fiss, Doerr & Carroll, for the team secured from that concern, one of which died after being brought to this city. It is understood, however, that a compromise will be effected.

Presented With Suit Case.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F., at its meeting last night, received three applications and two candidates were initiated. The entertainment committee reported that a banquet will be held on May 12. Under the good of the order, a smoker and entertainment was enjoyed. A feature was the presentation of a fine leather suit case to Henry Hansen, who left today for Toronto, Canada, as one of the representatives form New Jersey to the world triennial session of the Supreme Court of the order, which meets on May 2. The presentation was made by Chief Ranger Edward J. McCue.

Plainfield Co. Incorporates.

The Suburban Company with offices at 138 North avenue, this city, was incorporated in Elizabeth on Tuesday, the articles having been field in County Clerk Calvert's office. The company starts with a capitalization of $10,000, but expect to increase it to $125,000. The objects of the new corporation are to purchase and sell shares of capital stock, bonds or other securities of any other corporation in this or any other State. The incorporators are Frank Somers, Carmela D. Sovereign and George E. Sovereign.

Land of the Midnight Sun.

There are still two vacancies for the tour of June 22 to Great Britain and the Land of the Midnight Sun. Applicants known to the manager, or with good recommendations, should apply at once. Honeyman's Private Tours, 181 North avenue. ***

PERJURY CHARGED

Mrs. de Festetics is Arrested on Complaint Made by Her Husband.

A CHRISTIAN SCIENCE HEALER.

Trouble Began When It is Alleged She Refused to Call Physician for a Sick Son—Father "Kidnapped" Him.

All yesterday afternoon a grocery boy tried to deliver a package of groceries marked "rush" to the apartment of Mrs. Elsie H. de Festetics, at 241 West Eighty-second street, New York city, wife of Gyula de Festetics, of East Seventh street, this city, but no one answered the bell. In vain he appealed to the janitress who could only venture the conviction that something must be wrong, because she never knew both Mrs. de Festetics and her 23-year-old daughter Elsie to be out of the house at the same time.

It was not until night, however, that the janitress and the curious neighbors found out that the elder woman had been quietly whisked away by detectives, and that the daughter had accompanied her to police headquarters. Then questions of information were hurled from every window and doorway.

"Did they arrest her for practicing Christian Science?" most of them wanted to know. "Was it about that kidnapped son of her's who died last year " asked others.

The arrest happened about noon. Detectives Frank Bennett of Jersey City and Frank Allen of the New York Detective Bureau were admitted to the apartment of the Christian Science practitioner, representing themselves as agents of a title guarantee company. According to Allen Mrs. de Festetics was giving treatment to a woman patient for eye trouble at the time. Bennett had a warrant, issued on April 25 by Judge Robert Carey of the Court of Sessions, Jersey City, charging Mrs. de Festetics with perjury. She telephoned to her attorney, John H. Tillson of 1 Madison avenue, who is also active in the Christian Science church, and who persuaded her to accompany the detective to police headquarters.

The prisoner was arraigned in the Tombs Court, New York, and held without bail as a fugitive from justice. From there she was taken before Justice Davis in the Supreme Court, who fixed bail at $2,500 to await the arrival of extradition papers from the Governor of New Jersey. Late in the afternoon bail was furnished.

The martail troubles of the de Festetics began when the son was six years old. He became very ill about that time, and the mother, according to the charges of the father, would not call physicians, but practiced Christian Science for the boy's cure instead. He took his child away to Kingston, N. Y., and later to Perth Amboy. The court ordered the return of the child, but the father refused to comply, and since that time has not set foot in New York State. He is at present engaged in the manufacture of art objects in this city. He is a cousin of the Count Rudolphe Festetics de Tolne of Austria, and is sometimes called Count himself, but only through Mrs. de Festetics, who seems to love a title. Some time ago when Mr. de Festetics was asked whether he was a count he replied as follows: "I have been an American citizen since the year 1867, and could not be that and a Count too. If Count's titles could be bought for a pint of peanuts, I would prefer the fun of feeding the peanuts to the monkeys."

Eugene Coxe, of New York, of the Committee on Publication, when asked concerning Mrs. de Festetics, said that her name did not appear in the list of authorized Christian Science practitioners published in The Christian Science Journal.

In her affidavits in Chancery of New Jersey, Mrs. de Festetics states that Mr. de Festetics obtained the Emperor's medal for minature painting at Vienna in 1894 and also that he took seven medals at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893 for his matchless art works in enameled silver and gold.

DO IT NOW.

Plainfield People Should Not Wait Until It is Too Late.

The appalling death-rate from kidney disease is dut in most cases to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they becomeserious. The slight symptoms give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer goes gradually into the grasp of dropsy, Bright's disease, gravel or some other serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headaches, dizzy spells; i f the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders—they act where others fail. Over one hundred thousans people have recommended them Here's a case at home:

Mrs. C. B. Coriell, 60 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I can recommend Doan's iKdney Pills for they helped me after every other remedy had failed. I suffered from kidney disorders for years and the principal one was a severe backache. Since I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I have taken them off and on and they have always acted like magic, giving me prompt relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Rupert Hughes' Pullman carnival "Excuse Me," enters upon its second month at the joyous Gaiety theatre with no diminution in its record breaking box-office pace. The Hughes farce attracts men and women, youngsters and grown-ups alike; for the clean fun of Willis Sweatman and his colleagues in Mr. Savage's company keep the theatre full of side-splitting laughter from the rise to the fall of the curtain. In the long and remarkable cast of players are Ann Murdock, Lottie Alter, Rita Stanwood, Grace Fisher, Margherita Sargent, Isabel Richards, John Westley, Scott Cooper, John Findlay, Harry Kendall, Thomas H. Walsh, James Lackaye and others who deserve the highest praise for clever acting. "Excuse Me" has become a Broadway catch phrase.

Another surprise success has been sprung in the appearanse of the clever song writers and Broadway favorites, Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth at Charles Dillingham's Globe theatre, in their laughing play "Little Miss Fix-It." Managers Werba and Luescher, who already have to their credit the operetta success of the year in "The Spring Maid," at the Liberty theatre, are also the lucky managers of the new production. Bayes and Norworth have a dozen song hits in "Little Miss Fix-It," and before the end of the week every hotel orchestra in town was playing "Turn Off Your Light, Mr. Moon-man" or some other "catchy" ballad which the stars have written and are singing to a dozen encores each night at the Globe. Two more popular entertainers have not appeared on Broadway this season and the Globe is said to have a success that will keep it packed to the doors far into the hot weather period. The success of Bayes and Norworth is all the more remarkable as they are attracting crowds even in the face of "professional" reports that New York would not care for "Little Miss Fix-It."

TUBERCULOSIS DAY IN ALL CHURCHES.

April 30th has been set aside this year as "Tuberculosis Day," and will be observed in 200,000 churches in the country in a manner similar to that of "Tuberculosis Sunday" in 1910, when over 40,000 sermons were preached on the prevention of consumption. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis hopes to enlist all of the 33,000,000 church members in the country in this movement.

In respect Tuberculosis Day will differ from Tuberculosis Sunday of 1910. Instead of requesting the churches to give to the tuberculosis cause a special Sunday service, the plan is, to ask this year that meetings, at which the subject of tuberculosis and its prevention can be discussed, be held on Sunday, April 30th, or on any other day near that date, either in the week preceding or the week following. What is desired is that the subject of tuberculosis be discussed in all of the 200,000 churches of the United States at as nearly the same time as possible. This does not demand that a stated service be given over to this work, although that might be desirable, but that any minister, or other authority, whom he may invite, may present the problem to his congregation before or after his regular service, or on any day within the week preceding or following April 30th.

The National Association is planning to gather statistics from thousands of ministers, showing how serious a problem tuberculosis is to every church. These figures will indicate among other things the number of deaths last year from tuberculosis in church congregations, and the extent to which clergymen are called upon to minister to sufferers from this disease. It is planned also to issue millions of circulars and pamphlets on the prevention of tuberculosis, both from the national office and from the headquarters of the 450 anti-tuberculosis associations who will co-operate in this movement.

Charles Ludgate, of Clinton avenue, who has been employed at the safe works for several years, has gone to Providence, R. I., to take a position in a large machine works.

Alexander Russell, organist of the Crescent Avenue church, whose year expires on Sunday, may be able to play at the morning service. He has been quite ill at his home in Brooklyn. Charles Gulick, of Brooklyn, will succeed him next week.

GOLF.

In the first week of May the Garden City Golf Club will hold the annual spring tournament and an especially large entry is expected, for voyagers from Atlantic City and the South will drop in on the homeward way to the New England links, and as the M. G. A. championship is at Garden City later in May many will go there seeking tryouts for the title tourney.

The tournament has been won by Walter J. Travis seven of the eight times it has been played. At the inaugural in 1902 he beat John Moller, Jr., but Frank O. Reinhart won in 1903 and defeated Travis and his progress. Travers once carried Travis to the thirty eighth hole, but the latter has held supreme except in Reinhart's year. Albert Seckel was runnerup in 1909 and last spring Travis gained the score medal in '77 and put out successively W. W. Taylor, 3 and 1; Thomas W. Sherman, 4 and 3, and Jerome D. Travers 2 up, to win the cup. The final is always of two rounds.

Travers had beaten Frederick Hereshoff in the semi-final by 3 and 2. The program will probably be the same as ever—two sixteen, two beaten set cups and an eighteen hole handicap. There was no Garden City tournament in 1904, when Travis was at Sandwich, a Long Island championship being substituted in which Travers beat Robert C. Watson in the final.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Vice-President John Mitchell, of the Federation of Labor, has been secured as the orator for Municipal Day of the Millville Old Home Week, in July.

Her body unclaimed, the unidentified woman who was killed by a trolley car at Gloucester City, Sunday morning last, was buried in potter's field, at Camden Thursday.

Jesse Murray, who has been fishing in the Delaware Bay since the shad season started, was taken to his home in Paulsboro Thursday, suffering with a bad case of blood poisoning, the result of a shad finning him.

Inmates of the Lambertville almshouse procured liquor Wednesday, and as a result, started such a lively fracas with the keeper and the peaceable ones about the place that officers from Lambertville were called upon to restore order.

As a result of injuries sustained three years ago, Peter Carminade, fifty years old, died in Trenton, Thursday. He was a painter and was working on a scaffold in 1908, when the structure became unfastened and hurled him to the ground.

A massmeeting in the interest of the proposed bond issue of $75,000 for a storm water drainage system and improved gutter will be held in Champion's Hall, Ocean City, Saturday evening, May 6. The people will vote on this question at an election to be held May 9.

In recognition of his services to Paterson labor organizations, Judge Walter C. Cabell, of Paterson, was presented with a diamond-studded Elks' emblem by union men Thursday night. Judge Cabell coached the unions in their efforts to aid the enactment of an employers' liability law, and refused to accept any fee for his services.

Michael Visidi, twenty-one years old, and Alice Goertz, sixteen years old, were jailed at Atlantic City, Thursday night. Visidi is charged with abduction. The girl's father is said to be a prominent citizen of Somerset, Pa. Visidi and the girl, it is said, eloped from Somerset. Several clergymen refused to marry them because of the girl's youth. The pair were arrested at an apartment at 1910 Atlantic avenue. The girl became hysterical when led to the city hall.

The Pastors' Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church held its monthly meeting at the church yesterday to plan for the season.

The women of the First Presbyterian church held a sewing meeting at the home of Mrs. A. E. Hoagland, of West Front street, on Wednesday.

INTER-CLASS CONTESTS AT LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL

One record was broken and another equalled yesterday afternoon at the interclass athletic meet of the Plainfield High School, which was won by the sophomores against a large field of entries from the other classes. Although James Nash made the greatest number of points and thereby wins a medal. Franklin Newell was the boy to break the running broad jump record which has stood for some years. The old record went by the board when Newell made a leap of 19 feet 8 inches which is likely to stand for some time to come.

Nash as point winner made a remarkable showing. He won a place in every event in which he was entered. He was first in the 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, discus throw, and shot put. The sophomores won the meet making a total of fifty-six points. The freshmen were second with thirty-five, the juniors were third and the seniors last.

One of the sensational events of the day was the mile run which was won by John Uhler, with only a couple of feet to spare after a heart-breaking sprint through the stretch. Alfred Manley pressed Uhler hard all the way, but could not gain an inch when the final struggle came.

The summary follows: 100 yard dash, seniors, won by James Nash, with H. Rosenson, second and Arthur VanZandt third, time 10¼ seconds; 100 yard dash, junior, won by Meade Holstein, Craig Blair, second and V. Goldsmith, third, time 10 4-5 seconds; 220 yard dash, won by Nash, with Rosenson second and A. Brynarsky, third, time 23 2-3 seconds; half mile class relay, won by sophomores, Hanrahan, Grisley, Carty and Rosenson, time 1m 46 seconds, the juniors were second and the seniors last in this event. Running high jump, won by Franklin Newell, with a jump of 5 feet 4 inches, John Uhler was second and Albert Brynarsky third; 12-pound shot put, was 31 feet 3 inches; running broad jump, won by Franklin Newell, with the record breaking leap of 19 feet 8 inches. Edward Hanrahan was second and James Nash third, discus throw, won by Nash, with a throw of 109 feet 9 inches, second William Coyle, third, Edward Hanrahan; 440 yard dash won by H. Rosenson with James Nash second and Albert Brynarsky third, time 1m 6 3-5 seconds. Hop, skip and jump, won by Franklin Newell, James Nash second and William Coyle third. Newell's distance was 36 feet 8½ inches.

The pole vault was won by Newell with 8 feet 2 inches, Coyle was second and A VanZandt third; mile run was won by John Uhler, with Alfred Manley second and Sidney Karr third, time 5:32.

The timer was Henry Hubbard, judges Lindsay Best and James Lindsay; starters Butler, and manager of the games, Edward Jenkins. The games took place on the grounds of the Riding and Driving Club.

Miss Viola Allen Superb.

F. Marion Crawford's "The White Sister" was presented at the Plainfield theatre last night, Miss Viola Allen appearing in the title role. Supported by James O'Neill and a splendid company including Mina Gale and Henry Stanford, this truly remarkable actress gave a performance which from a dramatic standpoint has never been excelled and seldom equalled at the Plainfield playhouse. "The White Sister" was by far the best performance of the many good ones for the local season which closes within a fortnight.

DRY CLEANING TALK

Number 4

The Pressers and Finishers

Those who have read our Dry Cleaning Talks are aware by this time that there is something to Dry Cleaning.

After the garments have been properly dusted and passed through their proper bath, properly dried, spotted, etc., they reach the Finishing Department.

It is the duty of this Department to prepare the work for return, also largely to inspect, proving the previous work.

Our Finishing Department is our pride and we know it is efficient. Our ever increasing trade confirms this fact. Send your next work to us.

Announcement!
ALBERTO BUCCINI
347 Fifth Ave., New York City
Respectfully announces that he is now ready to offer to the Plainfield public his new artistic ideas and the execution of work for the interior decorations of residences. He has just completed the decorations of Mr. R. A. Meeker's residence, at Belvidere avenue, Plainfield, to the full satisfaction of the owner. Mr. Buccini had also decorated many high class residences in New York City and New Jersey and is ready to submit references and credentials on request. Any resident contemplating to make his home more beautiful will do well to communicate or call at Buccini's Studios to inspect the kind of work that he produces. He would appreciate the privilege of estimating on any work that may be desired.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

From a music selling standpoint the most wonderful song hit of the past decade, in fact, since Charles K. Harris wrote "After the Ball," is the song "When You First Kiss the Last Girl You Love," introduced as the finale of "A Stubborn Cinderella" at the Plainfield theatre today matinee and night, the phenomenal musical comedy which is still packing to the very walls the pretty little Princess theatre in Chicago. This remarkable record seems likely to continue indefinitely. It is freely admitted that the players who will be seen here will give fully as delightful a performance as those who created the original parts. Prices 50 cents to $1.50.

Next Wedneday's attraction at the Plainfield theatre will be the "Smart Set" Company, that mirthful and side-splitting three act musical comedy headed by S. H. Dudley, the popular and versatile negro comedian. The production which is under the direction of Messrs. Barton & Wiswell, is by Edward Haniford who has revived plenty of novelties, situations and surprises that are not out of the ordinary. There are fifteen original song hits and musical numbers furnished by Brim, Smith and Burris. The music is of the jingling, tuneful variety certain to please the most exacting lover of light and catchy melodies. Mr. Dudley has a part that is sure to set off his well-known capabilities as a funmaker to excellent advantage.

Grace George, who will positively present her new play, "Sauce for the Goose," at the Plainfield theatre, Saturday, May 6, matinee and night, is not only a comedienne of rare talents and training, but she also has the happy faculty, so greatly admired both by man and woman, of being able to wear charming gowns in a charming manner. For this reason, pictures of Miss George in her latest garments, are always in demand by the fashion periodicals.

In Miss George's support are a number of well-known players, including Herbert Percy, Keith Wakeman, E. D. Cromwell, Carolyn Kenyon and others, the same production and cast that recently opened Mr. Brady's new theatre, the Playhouse. An attractive scenic production has been provided for the play.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The warm weather of the past week has made the New Market people realize more than ever the loss of the lake and the boat service. There are still no signs of any move on the part of the water company to rebuild the dam and what was once a pretty sheet of water bids fair to become an ugly mud-hole to say nothing of the possible endangering of health.

Defender Fire Company held an important meeting at headquarters Thursday night. Final arrangements were made for the company's dance next month and reports showed that tickets are selling rapidly.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—New 9-room bungalow; terms to suit. 1430 East Second street. 4 22 1mo

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 193 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

FOR SALE—Dry goods, millinery and fancy goods, the only one in a beautiful suburban town, about one hour out, large brick building, located on one of the best streets in this same town, large store occupying two floors, beautifully fitted up with every convenience. Yearly rent $600; long lease. To one who proves his ability to buy will inventory and sell for cost, efficient clerks make it unnecessary that buyer be experienced. Stock would amount to about $16,000, yearly business about $30,000. Good terms, or will exchange this business for nice residence in Plainfield. The owner has made money enough from this same business to retire. Isaac E. Giles, 35 Grove street, Plainfield.

FOR SALE—Only $4,700, 75 acres near Flemington, 2 sets of buildings, 2 apple orchards, 4 cows, 2 horses, poultry; all machinery, wagons, etc.; farmer afraid Senate will pass reciprocity bill; your opportunity. ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

The official Government tests show Royal Baking Powder to be an absolutely pure and healthful grape cream of tartar baking powder, and care should be taken to prevent the substitution of any other brand in its place.

With no other agent can biscuit, cake and hot-breads be made so pure, healthful and delicious.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price per pound, and is cheaper and better at its price than any other baking powder in the world. It makes pure, clean, healthful food.

OFFICIAL MINUTES OF THE BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union was held at the Courthouse, Thursday, April 6, 1911, at 2:30 o'clock.

The clerk, Mr. Davies, being absent, Benjamin King was on motion of Freeholder Krouse, appointed as clerk pro tem.

Roll call showed all members present.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur the minutes of the meeing of March 2, 1911, were approved as per printed copies on members' desks after they were, by request of Freeholder Teller, corrected to make the amount the committee were authorized to expend on the Oak street bridge in Garwood, a sum not to exceed $850 instead of $250, as stated in the minutes.

COMMUNICATIONS.

March 9, 1911.

Hon. John N. Cady, Summit, N. J.,

Dear Sir—I regret to state that on account of poor health I am compelled to herewith tender my resignation as clerk of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county, to take effect April 1, 1911.

Thanking you and the other members of the board for your kindness and courtesies I beg to remain,

Respectfully yours,

FRANK B. DAVIES.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur the resignation was accepted.

On motion by Freeholder Meisel the board proceeded to the election of a clerk. Freeholder Meisel nominated for the position of clerk of the board for the unexpired term of Mr. Davies, J. Edward Rowe, of Summit, N. J., said nomination being seconded by Freeholder Krouse. Freeholder Acken nominated Geo. B. Cladek, of Rahway, said nomination being seconded by Freeholder Pierson. On motion by Freeholder Krouse the nominations were closed. The Director appointed as tellers Freeholders Swain and Doane. The tellers announced the result of the ballot as follows: Dr. Rowe, thirteen votes; Mr. Cladek, seven votes. The Director thereupon declared Dr. Rowe duly elected clerk of the board for the unexpired term of Mr. Davies, ending December 31, 1913.

The newly elected clerk having taken the oath of office, assumed the duties of his position.

A communication from Clerk J. F. Ostrender, of the Borough of Roselle, forwarding a certified copy of a resolution adopted by the Council of said borough requesting permission to lay a sewer along First avenue, in the said borough of Roselle, from Chandler avenue easterly to the Elizabeth city line, was presented, and on motion by Freeholder Krouse was received and referred to the County Road Committtee with power.

A communication from the New York Suburban Land Company protesting against a bill rendered by Collector N. R. Leavitt for $76.51 for work performed upon their property near Fanwood, N. J., and further requesting a hearing so that they may present facts of the case to the board was presented and on motion by Freeholder Meisel the communication was received and referred to the County Road Committee and the County Attorney.

A communication from the Weldon Contracting Company concerning the roads which were built for the county during the year 1909, stating that last November there was applied to these amieste roads by the Amies Road Company an emulsion of pure aspalt which has smoothed them over and compacted them, and further agreeing that should the said roads require further application of the emulsion during the year 1911 that they will furnish the labor and do the applying of same provided the material is furnished without charge by said company, was presented and on motion by Freeholder Wilbur was received and ordered referred to the County Road Committee.

From the town of Westfield:

Whereas, the County Road Committee of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county has, upon the request of the Council of the town of Westfield, agreed to recommend to said board that upon the town agreeing to assume the future maintenance of the county road known as North avenue, from Westfield avenue to Lenox avenue said county shall surrender all rights in said avenue to the town and furnish $500 worth of material for the improvement of said section of North avenue; be it

Resolved, That upon the ratification of the above recommendation by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county the town of Westfield will assume the future control and maintenance of North avenue, from Westfield avenue to Lenox avenue, subject to the above conditions.

On motion by Freeholder Wilbur it was received and ordered placed on file.

On motion by Freeholder Smith this report was received and ordered placed on file.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen — The undersigned County Road Committee, to whom was referred the communication of the Township of Cranford, under date of November 2, 1910, beg to report that we have taken up and considered said application requesting this board to take over Walnut avenue, Union avenue and Springfield avenue, under the State Road Act, and after due consideration, we would respectfully recommend that, in our judgment, owing to the large amount of work taken up by this board for the coming season, it would not be wise or advisable to take over and attempt to improve said road at this time.

HENRY KROUSE,
S. P. T. WILBUR,
CHARLES A. SMITH,
PETER H. MEISEL.

April 6, 1911.

On motion by Freeholder Krouse the report was received and the recommendations adopted and the clerk directed to forward a copy of said report to the Township of Cranford.

Report of committee on new culvert across Walnut avenue at northerly gutter line of South avenue, Cranford, N. J.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed on the above described work would report that the site of the proposed work has been examined. There is at present a stone covered culvert, which is too low for the grade and is small, and somewhat out of repair. It is so situated that it is generally partly filled up, and it is our opinion that it should be reconstructed.

We would therefore recommend that a new concrete culvert, with cast-iron cover plates be constructed across Walnut avenue, at this place, with suitable entrance for water, the cost of the work not to exceed the sum of $400.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE G. TELLER,
BURTON P. HALL,
DENNIS F. HENNESSEY,

April 6, 1911.

On motion by Freeholder Meisel said report was on roll call received and the recommendations adopted unanimously.

Report of Freeholder Teller, on request of Garwood Borough for cast iron water pipe.

April 6, 1911.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—The undersigned was appointed a committee of one to examine into the above described matter.

The request has been looked into, and it is my opinion that there are some street crossings at Garwood that should have iron pipe or other suitable water carriers placed therein by the county.

It is the custom of the county to construct these culverts at certain definite locations as they may be needed.

I therefore would introduce the following resolution:

"Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to examine the street crossings at Garwood where culverts are asked for, and to report to this board at a subsequent meeting as to the advisability of doing the work and the extent and approximate cost of the same."

Very respectfully,

GEORGE T. TELLER,

On motion by Freeholder Gruener the report was received and the recommendation adopted. The Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Teller, Smith and Fay.

April 6, 1911.

Report of committee on two bridges at Westfield, N. J.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—Your committee on two bridges on Lincoln road, Westfield, would report that they have made an examination of the site, and find that the property is being developed, the streets being graded and sewers, sidewalks and curbs laid.

Your committee would therefore respectfully recommend that the two bridges be built, one about seventy-five feet long and the other about eighty-eight feet long of concrete and steel, of suitable size, the cost of both bridges to be not more than $1,800.

Respectfully submitted,

JOSEPH PERRY,
ELSTON DARBY,
M. H. ACKEN.

On motion by Freeholder Jones on roll call the report was received and the recommendation was adopted unanimously.

Report of committee on Woodbridge road bridge over Rahway River, Rahway, New Jersey.

Elizabeth, April 6, 1911.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—Your committee on movable bridge over the Rahway River, at Woodbridge road, Rahway, N. J., would report that they have made an examination of the site of the proposed bridge.

Your committee is of the opinion that a new bridge is necessary at the place named. The new bridge and roadway would be located about three-quarters of a mile below the present Milton avenue drawbridge, and would join together sections of Rahway that are now widely separated. It also would provide direct communication to the Rahway Reformatory and to Woodbridge.

Your committee would recommend that a new swing bridge be construction of heavy design, crossing the Rahway River at Woodbridge avenue. We recommend that plans and specifications be authorized to be secured by the committee for such a bridge.

Your committee would also recommend that before any construction work is done the city of Rahway shall first make a substantial embankment for the roadway, of about forty feet width to a proper grade, for approaches to both sides of the bridge. We recommend that an agreement be entered into between this board and the city of Rahway providing for the construction of the approaches within four months from this date, and maintenance of the roadways approaching the bridge.

Respectfully submitted,

ADOLPH H. GREUNER,
W. H. RANDOLPH,
W. H. SWAIN,
HENRY KROUSE,
W. A. BOURDON.

On motion by Freeholder Jones on roll call the report was received and recommendations adopted by nineteen ayes and one nay.

Report of committee on Broad street bridge, Fanwood.

Your committee would respectfully report that bids have been received for the extension of this bridge and the contract awarded to Charles H. French, at the sum of $569, the bridge to be extended twelve feet from the old work.

Signed,

BURTON P. HALL,
CHARLES S. SMITH,
BRADFORD JONES,
Committee.

On motion by Freeholder Smith the report was received and ordered placed on file.

By Freeholder Doane.

Resolved, That the County Collector be and he is hereby authorized to draw a duplicate check to the order of George W. Cole for $60; check for $60 having been issued in December, 1910, and lost.

On motion by Freeholder Gruener on roll call this resolution was adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Krouse.

Resolved, That the salary of the custodian be and it is hereby fixed at fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500) per year, to be paid monthly by the County Collector.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur on roll call this resolution was adopted unanimously.

On motion by Freeholder Wilbur William H. Hulskamper was unanimously appointed as custodian for the term of three years.

By Freeholder Fay.

Whereas, Frank B. Davies has deemed it necessary to tender his resignation as clerk of this board on account of ill health.

Resolved, That this board regrets the causes which impel Mr. Davies to resign and thank him for his services while clerk of this board and hope that he may speedily recover his health.

This resolution was on motion by Freeholder Swain adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Hall.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to examine the present stone culvert under Union street, Scotch Plains, in the Township of Fanwood, with a view to determining the advisability of constructing a new culvert in place of the existing one.

This resolution was on motion by Freeholder Gruener adopted unanimously, and the Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Hall, Darby and Hennessy.

By Freeholder Doane.

Whereas, this board has purchased a property known as the Fullerton property in the Township of New Providence, and

Whereas, there are numerous buildings on said property of considerable value, which have heretofore been insured by the former owners, and which policies are partially expired, and

Whereas, the former owners have offered to transfer their interest in said policies to this board for the sum of $31.33, said amount being the present unexpired value of said policies; therefore be it

Resolved, That the County Collector be and is hereby authorized to pay to Bessie B. Fullerton the sum of $31.33, and that said policies be procured and properly endorsed making loss, if any, payable to the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, as owners.

On motion by Freeholder Wilbur this resolution was on roll call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Meisel.

Whereas, the properties purchased by the county of Union of Mary E. Ryan and Louisa W. Ball were purchased subject to the taxes for the year 1910, and

Whereas the taxes against said two properties for the year 1910 amount to the sum of $125.55; therefore be it

Resolved, That the County Collector be and is hereby authorized to pay the same.

On motion by Freeholder Wilbur this resolution was on roll call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Jones.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed with power to replace the present bridge over Green Brook on road leading to Glenside Park with a T bearer concrete arch bridge, the same being a line bridge between Fanwood Township and New Providence Township. The cost not to exceed the sum of $600.

This resolution was on motion by Freeholder Gruener adopted on roll call, nineteen ayes and one nay.

The Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Jones, Greuner and Teller.

By Freeholder Crane.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to investigate the condition of the culvert crossing Cherry street at Morris avenue, in the Township of Union.

The committee to report at the next meeting of this board as to the advisability of repairing the old culvert or building a new culvert, with the probable cost of the work.

This resolution was on motion of Freeholder Krouse on roll call adopted unanimously. The Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Crane, Krouse and Pierson.

By Freeholder Randolph.

Whereas, the drawbridge over Rahway River, at Milton avenue, is in need of repairs to the floor, floor beams and other woodwork.

Resolved, That such repairs be authorized to be made at a cost not to exceed the sum of $400.

ADOLPH H. GRUENER,
W. H. RANDOLPH,
THOMAS J. PIERSON.

This resolution was on motion by Freeholder Krouse on roll call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Smith.

Whereas, The Town of Westfield has made application to this board to relinquish control over North avenue in the Town of Westfield, between Westfield and Lenox avenues, and to furnish material for the improvement of the same; therefore be it

Resolved, That this board relinquish control over North avenue in the Town of Westfield, lying between Westfield and Lenox avenues, and that material to the extent of $500 in value be furnished for the improvement of the same, that the road map be changed accordingly and that a copy of this resolution, certified by the clerk of this board, be filed with the County Clerk.

Resolution by committee on Summer street bridge, Elizabeth.

Resolved, That the above named committee be authorized to secure plans and specifications for rebuilding the steel work of this bridge and to procure bids for the same.

The committee to report at a subsequent meeting of this board.

HENRY KROUSE,
S. P. T. WILBUR.

This resolution was on motion by Freeholder Darby adopted unanimously.

Freeholder Pierson was added to said committee.

Samuel Koestler, chairman of the committee of the Unitarian Club; S. T. Jones and a representative of the El Mora Suburban Association, were at the request of Freeholder Krouse, given an opportunity at this time to address the board upon conditions as they exist on Westfield avenue and as to the ownership of same,, and requested the board to take immediate action to place same in proper repair.

Freeholder Krouse, chairman of County Road Committee, announced that they had taken up the question of repairing this road, and that from El Mora to the Cranford line would be prepared for oil during the coming summer. County Attorney Coddington, upon request, gave his opinion as to the ownership of a portion of said Westfield avenue.

Freeholder Krouse moved that the entire matter be referred to the County Road Committee and the County Attorney.

After further remarks by Freeholders Crane and Meisel the motion was unanimously adopted.

Story of a Crime.

One of the later crimes to be treated in The North American's series of "Pennsylvania's Greatest Criminal Mysteries" is the murder of Christian Ranck, of Paradise township, Lancaster county. Ranck was shot by some person hidden in the cellar of his home. Some small tracks which might have been those of a woman, were found in the snow the next morning. Many arrests were made, but no evidence could be found against those persons who were taken into custody, and all of them, they being mostly tramps, were released. One romantic feature of this crime mystery is that the murder was committed on Christmas eve and that all the surroundings of a happy holiday scene accompanied the frightful tragedy. The North American is printing one of these Pennsylvania mysteries every Sunday. All of them appear to be interesting to general readers, as well as criminal lawyers, and are certainly worthy of preservation as chapters of criminal history of the State. This story will appear in the Sunday North American, April 30, 1911.

A Sherlock Holmes Thriller.

The Adventure of the Solitary Cyclist is the title of a New Sherlock Holmes Detective story by Sir A. Conan Doyle, which will be given free in booklet form with next Sunday's New York World. These are the stories entitled "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," which recently set all Europe agog. No one since Gaboriau and Poe, has equalled Conan Doyle. These are great stories. A new one each Sunday.

CHAPTER IV.

COMMENTS AND REFLECTIONS.

"YOU say you were not blind to surrounding objects, even if they conveyed but little meaning to you," said Coroner Perry. "You must have seen, then, that the room where Miss Cumberland lay contained two small cordial glasses, both still moist with some liqueur."

"I noticed that, yes."

"Some one must have drunk with her?"

"I cannot contradict you."

"Was Miss Cumberland fond of that sort of thing?"

"She detested liquor of all kinds. She never drank. I never saw a woman so averse to wine." I spoke before I thought. I might better have been less emphatic, but the mystery of those glasses had affected me from the first.

"There was a third glass. We found it in the adjoining closet. It had not been used. That third glass has a meaning if only we could find it out. And a small flask of cordial. The latter seems pure enough."

"ONE OF OUR MEN SAW YOU WITH YOUR FINGERS ON HER THROAT."

"I cannot understand it." The phrase had become stereotyped. No other suggested itself to me.

"The problem would be simple enough if it were not for those marks on her neck. You saw those, too, I take it?"

"Yes. Who made them? Who was the man? Do you know, Dr. Perry?"

"There were three glasses in those rooms. Only two were drunk from," he answered steadily. "Tomorrow I may be in a position to answer your question. I am not tonight."

Why did I take heart Not a change, not the flicker of one, had passed over his countenance at my utterance of the word "man." Either his official habit had stood him in wonderful stead or the police had failed so far to see any connection between this murder and the young girl whose footprints for all I knew still lingered on the stairs. Would the morrow reveal the fact that Adelaide's young sister had been with her in the hour of death or would the fates propitiously aid her in preserving this secret?

Thus the hours between 2 and 7 passed, when I fell into a fitful sleep, from which I was rudely awakened by a loud rattle at my door, followed by the entrance of the officer who had walked up and down the corridor all night.

"The wagon is here," said he. "Breakfast will be given you at the station."

To which Hexford, looking over his shoulder, added, "I'm sorry to say that we have here the warrant for your arrest. Can I do anything for you?"

"Warrant!" I burst out. "What do you want of a warrant? It is as a witness you seek to detain me, I presume?"

"No," was his brusque reply. "The charge upon which you are arrested is one of murder. You will have to appear before a magistrate."

"But I am innocent, absolutely innocent," I protested, the perspiration starting from every pore as the full meaning of the charge burst upon me What I have told you was correct. I myself found her dead"—

Hexford gave me a look.

"Don't talk," he kindly suggested "Leave that to the lawyers." Then, as the other man turned aside for a moment, he whispered in my ear: "It's no go. One of our men saw you with your fingers on her throat. He had clambered into a pine tree, and the shade of the window was up. You had better come quietly. Not a soul believes you innocent."

This, then, was what had doomed me from the start—this and that partly burned letter. I understood now why the kind hearted coroner who loved my father, had urged me to tell my tale, hoping that I would explain this act and give him some opportunity to indulge in a doubt. And I had failed to respond to the hint he had given me. I had been seen fingering my dead betrothed's throat, and nothing I could now say or do would ever convince people that she was dead before my hands touched her, strangled by another's clutch. One person only in the whole world would know and feel how false this accusation was. And yesterday that one's trust in my guiltlessness would have thrown a ray of light upon the deepest infamy which could befall me. But today there had settled over that once innocent spirit a cloud of too impenetrable a nature for any light to struggle to and fro between us.

I could not contemplate that cloud. I could not dwell upon her misery or upon the revulsion of feeling which follows such impetuous acts. And it had been an impetuous act, the result of one of her rages. I had been told of these rages. I had even seen her in one. When they passed she was her lovable self once more and very penitent and very downcast. If all I feared were true she was suffering acutely now.

Turning to the officer next to me, I put the question which had been burning in my mind for hours:

"Tell me how you came to know there was trouble here. What brought you to this house? There can be nothing wrong in telling me that."

"Well, if you don't know"— he began.

"I do not," I broke in.

"I guess you'd better wait till the chief has had a word with you."

Where was Carmel, and how was she enduring these awful hours? Had repentance come and with it a desire to own her guilt? Did she think of me and the effect this unlooked for death would have upon my feelings? That I should suffer arrest for her crime could not have entered her mind. I had seen her, but she had not seen me in the dark hall. No intimation of my dubious position or its inevitable consequences had reached her yet. When it did what would she do? I did not know her well enough to tell. The attraction she had felt for me had not been strong enough to lead her to accommodate herself to my wishes and marry me offhand, but it had been strong enough to nerve her arm in whatever altercation she may have had with her jealous minded sister. It was the temper and not the strength of the love which would tell in a strait like this. Would it prove of a generous kind? Should I have to combat her desire to take upon herself the full blame of her deed, with all its shames and penalties, or should I have the still deeper misery of finding her callous to my position and welcoming any chance which diverted suspicion from herself? All communication between us, in spite of our ardent and ungovernable passion, had been so casual and so slight. Looks, a whispered word or so, one furtive clasp in which our hands seemed to grow together, were all I had to go upon as tests of her feeling toward me. Her character I had judged from her face, which was lovely.

What would relieve my doubts? As Hexford drew near me again on our way to the head of the staircase I summoned up courage to ask:

"Have you heard anything from the hill? Has the news of this tragedy been communicated to Miss Cumberland's family, and, if so, how are they bearing this affliction?"

His lip curled, and for a minute he hesitated; then something in my aspect or the straightforward look I gave him softened him, and he answered frankly, if coldly:

"Word has gone there, of course, but only the servants are affected by it so far. Miss Cumberland, the younger, is very ill, and the boy—I don't know his name—has not shown up since last evening. He's very dissipated, they say, and may be in any one of the joints in the lower part of the town."

I stopped in dismay, clutching wildly at the railing of the stairs we were descending. I had hardly heard the latter words. All my mind was on what he had said first.

"Miss Carmel Cumberland ill," I stammered, "too ill to be told?"

I was sufficiently master of myself to put it this way.

"Yes," he rejoined kindly as he urged me down the very stairs I had seen her descend in such a state of mind a few hours before. "A servant who had been out late heard the fall of some heavy body as she was passing Miss Cumberland's rooms and, rushing in, found Miss Carmel, as she called her, lying on the floor near the open fire. Her face had struck the bars of the grate in falling, and she was badly burned. But that was not all. She was delirious with fever, brought on, they think, by anxiety about her sister, whose name she was constantly repeating. They had a doctor for her, and the whole house was up before ever the word came of what had happened here."

AWAY FROM THE DEATH HAUNTED SPOT.

I thanked him with a look. I had no opportunity for more. Half a dozen officers were standing about the front door, and in another moment I was bustled into the conveyance provided and was being driven away from the death haunted spot.

As the day advanced and I began to realize that I, Elwood Cranleigh, easy going man of the world, but with traditions of respectable living on both sides of my house and a list of friends of whom any man might be proud, was in a place of detention on the awful charge of murder I found that my keenest torment arose from the fact that I was shut off from the instant knowledge of what was going on in the house where all my thoughts, my fears and—shall I say it?—latent hopes were centered. To know Carmel ill and not to know how ill; to feel the threatening arm of the law hovering constantly over her head and neither to know the instant of its fall nor be given the least opportunity to divert it!

My examination before the magistrate held one element of comfort. Nothing in its whole tenor went to show that as yet she was in the least suspected of any participation in my so called crime. But the knowledge which came later of how the police first learned of trouble at the clubhouse did not add to this sense of relief, whatever satisfaction it gave my curiosity. A cry of distress had come to them over the telephone, a wild cry in a woman's choked and tremulous voice: "Help at the Whispering Pines! Help!" That was all, or all they revealed to me. In their endeavor to find out whether or not I was present when this call was made I learned the nature of their own suspicions. They believed that Adelaide in some moment of prevision had managed to reach the telephone and send out this message.

It was in a condition of mingled dread and expectation that I opened the paper which was brought me the next morning. Arthur, the good-for-nothing brother, had returned from his wild carouse and had taken affairs in charge with something like spirit and a decent show of repentance for his own shortcomings and the mad taste for liquor which had led him away from home that night. Carmel was still ill and likely to be so for many days to come. Her case was diagnosed as one of brain fever and of a most dangerous type. Doctors and nurses were busy at her bedside, and little hope was held out of her being able to tell soon, if ever, what she knew of her sister's departure from the house on that fatal evening. That her testimony on this point would be invaluable was self evident, for proofs were plenty of her having haunted her sister's rooms all the evening in a condition of more or less delirium. She was alone in the house, and this may have added to her anxieties, all of the servants having gone to the policemen's ball. It was on their return in the early morning hours that she had been discovered lying ill and injured before her sister's fireplace.

One fact was mentioned which set me thinking. The keys of the clubhouse had been found lying on a table in the side hall of the Cumberland mansion—the keys which I have already mentioned as missing from my pocket—an alarming discovery which might have acted as a clew to the suspicious I feared if their presence there had not been explained by the waitress who had cleared the table after dinner. Coming upon these keys lying on the floor beside one of the chairs, she had carried them out into the hall and laid them where they would be more readily seen. She had not recognized the keys, but had taken it for granted that they belonged to Mr. Ranelagh, who had dined at the house that night.

They were my keys, and I have already related how I came to drop them on the floor. Had they but stayed there! Adelaide, or was it Carmel, might not have seen them and been led by some strange if not tragic purpose, incomprehensible to us now and possibly never to find full explanation, to enter the secret and forsaken spot where I later found them, the one dead, the other fleeing in frenzy, but not in such a thoughtless frenzy as to forget these keys or to fail to lock the clubhouse door behind her. That she on her return home should have had sufficient presence of mind to toss these keys down in the same place from which she or her sister had taken them argued well for her clear headedness up to that moment. The fever must have come on later.

The next paragraph detailed a fact startling enough to rouse my deepest interest. Zadok Brown, the Cumberlands' coachman, declared that Arthur's cutter and what he called the gray mare had been out that night. They were both in place when he returned to the stable toward early morning, but the signs were unmistakable that both had been out in the snow since he left the stable at about 9. He had locked the stable door at that time, but the key always hung in the kitchen where any one could get it. This was on account of Arthur, who, if he wanted to go out late, sometimes harnessed a horse himself. Zadok judged that he had done so this night, though how the horse happened to be back and in her stall and no Mr. Arthur in the house it would take wiser heads than his to explain.

There was some comment made on this because Arthur had denied using his cutter that night. He declared instead that he had gone out on foot and designated the coachman's tale as all bosh.

As for myself, I felt inclined to believe that the mare had been out, that one or both of the women had harnessed her and that it was by these means they had reached the Whispering Pines. Adelaide was far from strong and never addicted to walking under the most favorable conditions. I could understand now how Carmel had succeeded in returning in safety to her home. She had ridden both ways—a theory which likewise explained how she came to wear a man's derby and possibly a man's overcoat With her skirts covered by a bearskin she would present a very fair figure of a man to any one who chanced to pass her.

These were my deductions drawn from my own knowledge. Would others who had not my knowledge be in anywise influenced to draw the same? Yet, if they let this point slip, where should I be? Human nature is human all the way through, and I could not help having moments when I asked myself if this young girl were worth the sacrifice I contemplated making for her. She was lovely to look at, amiable and of womanly promise save at those rare and poignant moments when passion would seize her in a gust which drove everything before it. That she had had provocation I did not doubt. Adelaide, for all her virtues, was not an easy person to deal with. Upright and perfectly sincere herself, she had no sympathy with or commiseration for any lack of principle or any display of selfishness in others. She was a little cold, a little reserved, a little lacking in spontaneity, though always correct and always generous in her gifts and often in her acts.

CHAPTER V.

"I AM AN INNOCENT MAN."

I STRUGGLED with my dilemma for hours. I had relatives and I had friends, some of whom had come to see me and gone away deeply grieved at my reticence. I was swayed, too, by another consideration. I had deeply loved my mother. She was dead, but I had her honor to think of. Should it be said she had a murderer for her son? In the height of my inner conflict I had almost cried aloud the fierce denial which would arise at this thought. But ere the word could leave my lips such a vision rose before me of a bewildering young face with wonderful eyes and a smile too innocent for guile and too loving for hypocrisy that I forgot my late antagonistic feelings, forgot the claims of my dear, dead mother and even those of my own future. Such passion and such devotion merited consideration from the man who had called them forth. I would not slight the claims of my dead mother, but I would give this young girl a chance for her life. Let others ferret out the fact that she had visited the clubhouse with her sister; I would not proclaim it. It was enough for me to proclaim my innocence.

"I WILL TAKE YOUR CASE."

I was in this frame of mind when Charles Clifton called and was allowed to see me. I had sent for him in one of my discouraged moods. He was my friend, but he was also my legal adviser, and it was as such I had summoned him, and it was as such he had now come. Cordial as our relations had been, I noted no instinctive outstretching of his hand and so did not reach out mine. I was the first to speak

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The statute recently passed by the Legislature, known as the Public Utilities Act, being chapter 195 of the laws of 1911, which become effective on May 1st next, contains the following provisions:

"Section 18. No public utility as herein defined shall

"(d) Make or give, directly or indirectly, any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any person, or corporation, or to any locality, or to any particular description of traffic in any respect whatsoever. • • •

"(g) Hereafter give, grant or bestow upon any local, municipal or county official any discrimination, gratuity or free service whatsoever, but nothing herein contained shall prevent the entry into any public conveyance, or in or upon the property of any such public utility as herein defined, of any such official in the pursuit of his public duties in connection with the particular conveyance or property so entered by him upon exhibiting his authority so to do.

"Section 41. Nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent the issue by any steam railroad, street railway, traction, canal, express, telephone or telegraph companies, or other common carriers, of free passes or franks to their employees, officers, agents, surgeons, physicians, attorneys at law and their families, and the interchange between said public utilities and common carriers of passes or franks for their employees, officers, agents, surgeons, physicians, attorneys at law and their families."

This Company is advised by counsel that in pursuance of the foregoing provisions, on and after May 1st it will be unlawful and in contravention of the provisions of this statute to give free transportation to policemen and firemen, whether in uniform or not, and to certain other classes of persons not covered by the exceptions in the foregoing provisions, to whom the courtesy of free transportation has heretofore been extended.

Sections 34, 35 and 36 of said act make any disobedience of its provisions a criminal offense, rendering the Corporation violating the same liable to indictment, and its officers, directors and agents liable to indictment and imprisonment therefor.

Under these circumstances this Company announces that all such free transportation will be withdrawn on May 1st.

Members present—Director Cady and Freeholders Acken, Bourdon, Crane, Darby, Doane, Fay, Gruener, Hennessy, Jones, Krouse, Meisel, Perry, Pierson, Smith, Teller and Wilbur.

Absent—Freeholders Hall, Randolph and Swain.

Freeholder Perry, chairman of the Committee on the Elizabeth Drawbridge, reported as to the conditions met with in repairing this bridge, and called on County Engineer Bauer who explained to the board as to the making temporary repairs to this bridge, and upon examination discovering that parts of the girders have rusted through and that they were unable to proceed with the original plans outlined unless the same could be made a stationary bridge, but if it is still to remain a drawbridge it would have to be replaced with an entirely new structure.

County Attorney Codington gave his opinion as to said bridge, having been a drawbridge for some years, and that it could not be changed to a stationary bridge without the consent of the abutting property-owners, and this would undoubtedly be difficult to obtain, but he could see no objections to the same being closed during repairs, which would probably take about two or three months.

On motion of Freeholder Fay, the members of the board were requested to make a personal inspection of the bridge and return to the meeting room and take such action as may be deemed advisable.

On returning from the inspection, Freeholder Perry introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Elizabeth Drawbridge, with the County Engineer, report at the next regular meeting the cost of repairing the Bridge street bridge and the cost of replacing the present bridge with a new bridge, and in the meantime the repairs on said bridge be discontinued.

This resolution was, on motion by Freeholder Perry, adopted unanimously.

On motion by Freeholder Jones, the board adjourned.

J. EDW. ROWE, Clerk.

Fresh Poultry and Fresh Eggs.
We still have FRESH KILLED POULTRY; the same as usual. All dry picked and nicely cleaned. Our NEW LAID EGGS cannot be surpassed, either in FRESHNESS or FLAVOR, because no eggs are over three days old when delivered, and because our HENS are kept in a sanitary manner and DO NOT RUN AT LARGE. We deliver Tuesdays and Fridays. A trial is solicited. Drop us a card to call.

Save Money Easily and Safely.

The man who carries a life insurance policy is saving money in one of the safest and easiest way possible. At age 30, for instance, The Prudential will issue to any insurable man a $1,000 policy for only $19.08 payable yearly. This amounts to about 37 cents a week--a sum that almost anyone could easily save.

THE PLAINFIELD TRUST COMPANY

Organized 1902.

An individual executor may never have had any previous experience in the duties he is called upon to perform, or he may be expert in one, or possibly two, branches of his trust.

This Company is a "professional" executor, and its knowledge is the result of many years of experience in managing estates, while the fees charged are no greater than those allowed by law to an individual.

Acts as Administrator, Executor, Guardian or Trustee

The Chief, Officers and Members of the B. and E. Company, No. 1.

Chief Charles Meyer, of the Scotch Plains Bucket and Engine Company, has taken possession of his new living quarters at the company's house. "I took this step," he says, "to be right on the job day and night and to see that our boys get to the fires first."

Scotch Plains is proud of Bucket and Engine Company, a membership in which is considered a big honor in that village. These are its officers: Chief, Charles Meyer; first assistant chief, William Jamison; second assistant chief, Richard Hart; secretary, William Guest; treasurer, Henry Meyer, Jr., foreman, Frank Weldon; assistant foreman, Harry Pangborn; second assistant foreman, Will Spicer. Elmer E. Ripley, of West Fifth street, was given a surprise party by twenty-five friends at his home, last night. The evening was spent in playing cards and an informal program of music. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

ORDERS ISSUED FOR 'CAMP WILSON' DETAILS

The Second Infantry of Trenton and the Third Infantry of Camden, are to have the distinction of being the first commands in the State to occupy Camp Wilson, which will be pitched at Sea Girt, Monday, July 24. Orders designating the name of the camp and the dates when each command will go to Sea Girt are contained in general orders issued from Jersey City, by Major-General P. Farmer Wanser, division commander.

The second week at camp, from July 31 to August 5, inclusive, will be devoted to the First and Fifth Infantry. The third week, from August 5, inclusive, will be devoted to the First and Second troops of cavalry and Batteries A and B, of field artillery.

Other details regarding the encampment are outlined in General Wanser's orders, in part as follows:

"The minimum strength of each organization attending anual camps should be not less that four full sets of fours, (32 men, i e., 28 privates and 4 corporals), and the appropriate number of sergeants, 6 No company will be considered as warranting the expenditure of federal and State funds for transportation, subsistence and pay that has a strength less than that indicated above.

"No enlisted man will be taken to encampment unless enlis ed prior to the thirty-first day of March of this year, or servd at least six months in the Army, Marine Corps, National Guard or militia of this or any other State, or received equivalent military instruction in an educational institution.

"The several organizations may enter camp on Saturday prior to the date designated for their tour of duty, provided it is understood that the troops so ordered will receive no pay for the additional two days.

The Signal Corps Company, having been excused from attendance at the encampment by the Governor and commander-in-chief, is authorized to participate in a six days' practice march on dates to be designated by its commanding officer."

THE NATIONAL POST OUT NEXT WEDNESDAY

The first number of The National Post will be on sale next Wednesday, May 3, and its appearance is awaited with eager interest by the many local friends of Samuel Merwin, formerly of this city, who, as already announced in these columns is its editor-in-chief.

This latest arrival in the field of periodical literature begins life with no less an ambition than to attain the leadership of progressive thought in America. It will appear every other Wednesday, and its unique feature will be its editoril review of current events, conducted by its board of eminent contributing editors, each a specialist in his own field and each at liberty in the columns of The National Post to express his views fearlessly, free from any constraint of corporate or financial influence.

These conrtibuting editors are: Judson C. Welliver, covering political and social progress in the United States. Mr. Welliver has recently made several addresses in New Jersey on municipal government by commission, and has been said to know more about National politics than any other living journalist; Frederick C. Howe, covering political and social progress abroad; Samuel Hopkins Adams, who conducted the Collier's Weekly campaign against the patent medicine band, covering progress in science, medicine and the public health; Walter Pritchard Eaton, the well known dramatic critic, covering literature and the drama; Will Irwin, who has been considered by some the best all-around reporter in the United States, covering aeronautics, sports and the news in general; and Charles Edward Russell, the well known writer, covering anything he pleases.

Besides powerful special articles on important problems and personalities of the moment, The National Post will contain splendid short stories by such writers as John Luther Long, Mary Heaton Vorse, James Oppenheim, Owen Johnson, Inez Haynes Gilmore, Jesse Lynch Williams, Charles Battell Loomis, Ellis Parker Butler and many others, and items of wit and humor gathered from every corner of the country.

The business management of the National Post is under the supervision of Elisha Ely Garrison, president of The National Post Company, the author of "Accounting Every Business Man Should Know," and who has been recently retained to serve the United States Government, on behalf of the Tariff Commission, as an expert on manufacturing costs in the United States.

The plans of the founders of The National Post have met with the most hearty encouragement throughout the United States, and it is safe to predict that the new magazine will be of great and general interest. It is expected that copies will be on sale by several of the local newsdealers.

Clan Mackenzie Ball.

About seventy-five couples attended the first annual ball of Clan Mackenzie last night, in Sebring's auditorium. The grand march was led by Malcolm Morrison, a piper, who knew how to play Scottish airs and enliven his followers. The ball was inaugurated by Chief Robert Murray, who made a speech of welcome to the guests.

CONTEST

FOR PLAINFIELD PUPILS

The Plainfield Ice & Supply Co. will give a prize of $25 in cash to the pupil of any school, public or private, in Plainfield or North Plainfield, who shall submit the best written advertisement for the Plainfield Ice & Supply Company's business, to occupy a space equal to the space taken by this announcement.

The judges will be the Editors of the Courier-News and Daily Press. The conditions will be as follows:

The advertisement as written should be sent to the office of the Plainfield Ice & Supply Co., with a separate sheet of paper attached, bearing the writer's name, and name of the school he or she attends. Both sheets thus submitted will be numbered by the Company in the order received, and the sheet bearing the name of the contestant will be held by the Plainfield Ice & Supply Co., and the advertisement with the corresponding number will be sent to the judges, so that the judges will have no knowledge of the name of the writer. The advertisement which is decided to be the best will be so marked, and sent to the Plainfield Ice & Supply Company, who will by reference to the sheets in their possession, determine the name of the successful contestant.

The contest will end May 30, all letters received up to midnight of that day being eligible to the competition.
